2nd Place Spikers Aim For Big 8 Title At Sacto Saturday

Finishing the season with a second place 5-2 record, the college tracksters will participate in the Big Eight championship relays Saturday at Sacramento.

In the league meet competition, the Rams will aim high in order to finish first as it did last year.

Last year in the conference meet, powerhouse Alex Darnes copped a first place in the discus competition with a heave of 153-1½. He will be a strong choice to break the meet record of 154-2¼ set by former Ram discus thrower Jack Egan in 1955.

Darnes, who will also compete in the shot-put event in the meet, has already thrown the discus 173-3 this year to set a new national two-year college mark.

Strong Ram challengers in their particular events will be Claude Shipp in the 100-yard dash, Bill Miles in the pole vault, Pete Downing in the shot put, Bob Coleman in the high hurdles, Roger Ritchey in the mile and two mile, and Harb Briscoe, Lon Brantley and George Holland in the broad jump.

Miles has had a poor season this year considering his strong capabilities in the pole vault event, but it is hoped he will come through with a top mark. He had a seasonal high of 13-6½ last year which exceeds his high of this year.

In its last Big Eight meet of the season on April 12, the Ram team defeated Modesto 70 to 51.

Darnes won the discus event which gives him a whole league season without a loss. His throw of 158-11 along with the broad jump of 22-1¼ by Brantley and the 12-6-pole vault of Miles were all first place marks.

Ram Nine Face Panthers May 5 In Capital City

Struggling to stay out of the cellar in the Big Eight Conference, the local horsehiders travel to the Capital City this Saturday to take on last year's league champions, the Sacramento Panthers.

With but four games remaining in the league schedule, the locals have a two-win eight-loss record.

The last three losses have come at the hands of the Oakland Thunderbirds and the Contra Costa Comets.

In the first game played against the T-Birds, the diamondmen were thumped solidly, 8-1. Knuckle ball pitcher Don Kunkle suffered a disastrous four-run sixth inning and took his third loss of the season.

In the second Oakland contest, the Rams were trounced 10-3. The only high spot for the locals was a home run hit by Kunkle in the sixth inning.

Contra Costa invaded Balboa Field and handed the squad a 7-3 loss. John Pearce was the losing pitcher, but it was errors that cost the game. With the score tied 2-2 in the seventh inning, Lou Bevilacqua and Kunkle each contributed a two-out error.

Utility man Don Meroff, who batted .355 last season, has dropped to .134. This year Meroff has hit the ball well but it hasn't fallen in.

George Taufer, first baseman and relief pitcher, has been the most consistent player on the squad as he has stymied the opposition in relief while contributing clutch hits.

Jim Carroll, stocky catcher for the diamondmen, has surprised everyone this season by batting a strong .318. Known for his defensive ability primarily, Carroll has hit this steady pace to lead the team. This mark is a vast improvement over his average of .200 last year.

Swordsmen Compete For Trophy At San Jose

Striving to bring home another trophy, the college fencing team will compete in the final Intercollegiate Interscholastic Fencing Association competition this Saturday at San Jose State College.

Electrically wired weapons will be used by team members Stuart Funke, Harry Jorgensen, Bob Lawrence and Bill Lindo.

On April 14 at the Amateur Fencer's League of America competition, the fencing team, which tied with San Francisco State College, qualified for the national competition.

COO In Tie As IFC Mural Contests End

Two teams in the Council of Organizations are tied for league leadership, and the Inter-Fraternity Council League goes into its final round of play tonight in the Associated Men Student sponsored intramural basketball tournament

In the IFC league, four teams will clash tonight as Alpha Sigma Delta meets Beta Tau, while Zeta Phi Sigma goes against Gamma Phi Ypsilon.

In the COO league the two teams tied for first are the Divine Ones and the Collegiate Five holding 4-0 marks.

In second spot, the Campus Police and the CC's are tied with 1-1 marks, while the Hotel and Restaurant team, the Filipino Islanders and the Newman Club share the cellar with no win, four loss records.

In the IFC league, Zeta Phi Epsilon holds the lead at 2-0, along with Gamma Phi Ypsilon, who stands at 1-0. In second, with a score of 1-1 is Alpha Phi Sigma, followed in third by Beta Tau, at 0-1, and Alpha Kappa Rho at 0-2.

Last Tuesday in the men's gymnasium, the Collegiate Five beat the Filipino Club, 66-42. The second game was forfeited to the Hotel and Restaurant by the CC's.

In the women's gymnasium, the Devine Ones kept up their unbeaten pace winning a forfeit from the Campus Police 2-0.

There are two more rounds to go in the COO league, with the last games to be played on May 16.

Last Wednesday night in the second to last round of the IFC league competition, Zeta Phi Sigma slipped by Alpha Kappa Rho, 28-25, despite consistent high scoring by Alpha Kappa Rho's Tom London and Don Tarantino.

In the second game, Gamma Phi Ypsilon trounced Beta Tau, 39-24.

The winners in each league will have their playoff on May 25 at the men's gymnasium, highlighting the AMS Smoker.

Standings as of April 25 are as follows:

CLUB LEAGUE	W	L
Collegiate Five	4	0
Divine Ones	4	0
Campus Police	1	1
CC's	1	1
Hotel and Restaurant	0	4
Filipino Club	0	4
Newman Club	0	4
IFC LEAGUE	W	L
Zeta Phi Epsilon	2	0
Gamma Phi Ypsilon	1	0
Alpha Phi Sigma	1	1
Beta Tau	0	1
Alpha Kappa Rho	0	2

RAMBLINGS Silence Echoes Where Applause Should Be

By Jerry Littrell

SPORTS FANS, no matter who they are, are always stereotyped by the city they are in and the team they are watching.

For instance, the baseball fans in Philadelphia, a city often referred to as one of Brotherly Love, are known far and wide for their eternal hostility toward the visiting and home team alike.

The basketball citizens from the champion city, Boston, are known for their consistent spirit and support of their team at every contest.

In San Francisco the fans (short for fanatics) are regarded as minor league spectators watching a major league (in name only) team. They wave handkerchiefs at the opposing pitcher when he is in trouble and carry on in a manner similar to one that they used when the Seals roamed around at 16th and Bryant.

There is one more type of fan that must be mentioned. That is the enthusiastic, faithful sports spectator attending City College of San Francisco.

This fan is a queer bird. He will half-heartedly support a winning team but will completely deny the existence of a team caught in the middle of a losing streak.

An example of this appears in the comparison of the basketball squad and the baseball team. At the beginning of the cage season, the Rams were picked only for a possible fourth-place finish.

Naturally the first game saw approximately no fans in the stands. The only people there were a few of the players' girl friends, two custodians and an elderly gentleman who started too late that night to see the Saints play.

However, after winning the first game a few students actually came the next night to the following game. But Contra Costa also brought fans along, and when the final count was in, the visitor's rooting section outmanned the locals four-to-one.

As the Rams approached the conference title, more students turned out for the games, but the attendance was never what it should have been.

The baseball squad wasn't picked for a very high finish in the league either, and so far they have lived up to expectations. However, the total number of fans who have attended the league games through the season have not even equaled the few who attended the first cage contest.

Players are born actors. There is nothing that a player likes better than a robust round of applause from a stand full of people. Unfortunately, the only thing a Ram sportsman will hear is the hollow echo of an empty gymnasium or field.

Freshman's Leap Near Record As Rams Place 4th At Fresno

By Dave Kleinberg

Freshman Lon Brantley came within seven inches of breaking the City College broad jump record by leaping 24-1 last Friday in the Northern California Relays at Fresno.

The ex-Mission High prep, whose best previous jump this year was almost two feet less at 22-7, and Alex Darnes, who won the discus with a "poor" 162-11, paced the Rams to a 20-point fourth place finish.

College of Sequoias won the overall meet.

Brantley's jump, which fell short of Mack Burton's 24-7¾ mark set in 1958, came on his last leap, and gave him a victory over teammate George Holland, who jumped 22-11 for second.

Coach Lou Vasquez indicated there are better jumping pits than Fresno's, and that they had known Brantley was capable of doing more than 22-7.

Darnes, who set a national record of 173-3 two weeks ago and hasn't suffered a defeat this year, edged Reedley College's Frank Parks, credited with the States' second best discus throw. Parks threw 157-2, but the heavy winds probaby held all throws down.

The college's two-mile relay squad composed of Jose Valle, Tony Ferringo, Andy Loebsey and Tom Power, grabbed a third.

The spikers finished the season 5-2 in second place behind San Mateo, but hope to make up for it in the Big Eight Conference championships this Saturday at Sacramento.

Rain Defers Netters' Championship March

The tennis squad's drive toward the Big Eight championship was slightly deferred last Friday when rain canceled the Golden Gate Park match with Sacramento.

The Rams, needing the one victory to finish the season undefeated and to clinch the title, have won six straight and can finish no worse than a tie for first.

They'll be heavily favored to capture the Big Eight meet in Golden Gate Park this Friday and Saturday. Oakland's Tom Edlefsen and Modesto's Ryder Getz could give the Rams trouble.

The Rams' number one man, Bob Siska, 19-year-old ex-Junior Davis Cupper, lost his only league match to the promising Edelfsen, 6-2, 6-4.

Over the vacation, the Rams deadlocked California's Frosh, 4½-4½, with the contest called because of darkness on April 10. In a league match on April 13 they blanked lowly Santa Rosa, 7-0, and in a practice contest on April 16 dumped Santa Clara, 9-0.

Mermen Almost Drown

For a while it looked as if the Ram swimmers would come home from last Friday's and Saturday's Northern California championships at Foothill College without scoring.

The possibility of finishing last in Northern California was canceled when the 440 relay team took a fifth in the second day of action.

Powerful Foothill College scored 161 points to sweep the meet.

The Rams' Bill Love, backstroke, John Holm, breast stroke, Mark Haskell, butterfly, and Eli Silver, freestyle, combined for a 4:07.3 to grab the fifth place and score the college's four points.

Holm, who last year set a Big Eight mark with 1:07.5 in the 100 breast stroke, was the key in the victory, swimming his leg in 1:06.5.

Golfers Edged, 15½-14½

Despite Dennis Drucker's and Art Berliner's 77s, the Ram golfers were edged by the wind, the rain and the Oakland Thunderbirds, 15½-14½, in match play Friday at Harding Park.

The loss, the second against four wins, dropped the Rams into third place behind Oakland and San Mateo.

The Rams' John Steddin, a consistent 70 shoooter, fired an 81, while Bruce Hubley and Paul Egan carded 80s in the rough weather that orbited everyone's score.

The Rams will compete in Modesto next Tuesday in the Big Eight Conference championships.

Mermen Vie For Titles At State Meet Tomorrow

With participation based on individual placement in the Big Eight Conference and Northern California championship meets, the college swimming team will send representatives to the State Conference championships tomorrow through Saturday at El Camino.

In the state two-year college championship competition, the college mermen will be joined with 24 other colleges representing areas from Bakersfield to the Oregon border.

In the recent Big Eight Conference championships held April 13 and 14, seven of the 10 Ram splashers who competed placed in the finals and gained eligibility for the Northern California meet.

Also contending in the Northern California meet were the relay teams made up of free style members Eli Silver, Jeff Higman, John Holm and Bill Love; the medley team was composed of Love, Holm, Mark Haskell and Silver.

Herm Fruchenicht and Holm, breast stroke; Love, backstroke; Silver, free style; Higman, 50-yard free style; Haskell, butterfly man; and Chuck Greninger, mile and 440-free style, were the men who gained admittance to the Northern Califognia meet on the basis of their showing in the Big Eight meet.

Greninger broke two college records in the competition and proved to be the outstanding man in the meet for the locals.

Oakland came out on top in the Big Eight meet, followed by Stockton, San Mateo, Sacramento and San Francisco in the triangle division.

Coach Roy Burkhead was pleased with the showing of his men in the meet. "The men I brought up to the Big Eight meet really showed well," Burkhead stated.

Holm, who set a record last year in the 100-yard free style, saw it fall to a Stockton swimmer who turned in a 1:07 timing.

Sports And Dancing Highlight RA Slate

Master lessons in folk and modern dance will begin at 2:30 p.m. this afternoon in the women's gymnasium.

From 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. modern dance participants will be instructed by master teacher Frances Bloland. Students are requested to wear leotards or shorts and be bare footed.

From 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. folk dancing students will be given lessons by master teacher Madelynne Greene. Students must wear full skirts and soft-soled shoes.

After the lessons, dancers and participants will be invited to attend a reception including refreshments.

All parochial and public school students have been invited to attend the lessons.

The Recreation Association's six sports teams will leave for Monterey Peninsula College to attend the Sports Day there this Saturday.

The archery, badminton, bowling, golf, tennis and volleyball teams will depart at 6 a.m.

At Monterey the teams will participate in a three-hour sports period, a one-hour recreational period and a lunch awards reception.

As a climax to a busy spring schedule, the RA will hold its semiannual awards social Tuesday, May 15.

Presentation of awards to outstanding members of the association and the installation of officers for the fall semester will be highlights of the event.

Sal Vance's Band Plays As Pledges Are Introduced

By Francine Dubonnet

Spring Cotillion, the Inter-Sorority Council ball, will be held from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight Friday, in the Starlight Room of the Hilton Inn at the San Francisco International Airport, Jeri Sciutto, ISC president, declared yesterday.

Music will be provided by Sal Vance and his band at this semi-formal affair. Cocktail dresses will be worn by the women and men will wear dark suits and ties.

Bids totaling 150 are being sold at $2 per couple in Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150, or in S-117 near the silver pole.

"This will be the first time in three years that Presents will not be held in Smith Hall but in a hotel," Miss Sciutto said.

During intermission each pledge will be presented and introduced by her sorority president.

Pledges, who will be wearing long white gloves, will be presented a rose "to signify the end of pledging and the beginning of sorority life," Miss Sciutto explained.

A photographer will be at the ball to take pictures.

Guests will have a view from the oval blue and white Starlight Room of the multi-lit airport," Miss Sciutto affirmed.

Sorority presidents who have worked along with Phi Beta Rho's Miss Sciutto for the Spring Cotillion are Bev Hammer, Delta Psi; Nettie Cook, Delta Sigma Tau; Jan Doudiet, Gamma Kappa Beta; Judy Stern, Kappa Phi, and Marilyn Butler, Theta Tau.

Valley Concert In College Hour Prelude To Festival Tuesday

By Herman Kligerman

A performance by the San Bernardino Valley College concert band during College Hour Friday in the theater will be a prelude to the visit of four two-year college groups here next Tuesday afternoon for an instrumental festival, Meyer Cahn, music director, disclosed today.

The San Bernardino group, composed of 47 sudent musicians under the direction of Paul Oxley, is nearing the conclusion of a successful week-long California college tour.

Repertoire of the company includes 17th century music, symphony offerings, marches and selections from West Side Story.

Beginning at 10 a.m., the performance will be transmitted into the choral room, A-133, via closed-circuit television, Cahn added.

Next Tuesday, May 8, four college bands will join the San Francisco orchestra in a special musical festival between 1 and 5 p.m. in the theater. College of San Mateo, Diablo Valley, Shasta and Oakland City Colleges are to participate.

The plan for the afternoon is that each group plays for 30 minutes. Following the concert presentation of each division, a combined band performance with a total of 75 musicians is scheduled.

Shasta will begin the program on the stage to be followed by San Francisco in the orchestra pit under Cahn's direction. Performances by Diablo, Oakland and San Mateo will follow.

The varied entertainment will end with a performance by the combined string orchestra conducted by Allan Schell of Diablo.

An invitation to attend has been extended by Cahn to all students. He feels that "the show will further the college's attempt to offer a full musical picture featuring both professional artists and works of other colleges."

The fifth in the spring concert series will be held in the Mills Chamber Trio in a recital Friday, May 11.

On Friday, May 18, the concert band and orchestra of the college will perform to be followed on June 1 by a choral concert now in preparation by Galen Marshall, choir director.

Maxwell Anderson's Jeanne d'Arc Climaxes College Drama Schedule

Joan of Lorraine, a play by Maxwell Anderson, is to be the next and final theater production of the season, Michael Griffin, drama director, said today.

The show concerns an actress who is rehearsing the Joan of Arc story and becomes troubled because the playwright makes Joan compromise with the forces of evil while fulfilling her God-given mission.

Joan of Lorraine is scheduled to open on Friday, May 25 and will bring the drama season to a close for this semester. The last play, Time Limit, played to an estimated 700, the best turn-out recently accorded a City College drama production.

Try-outs for the play were held in the choral room of the arts building, through Friday, when, according to Griffin, "most of the principal characters were cast."

Forum Dedicates 1962 Issue To Dorothy Mercer

Dedication of this year's issue of Forum to the memory of Dorothy Mercer, founder of the magazine, who died last March, and selection of the editorial staff of the magazine were announced today by Catherine Connolly, Forum's faculty adviser.

This is the 26th year of Forum's publication, and Miss Mercer, pioneer English instructor here, nursed the magazine during much of her teaching career at the college.

Her colleagues remember Miss Mercer as an extraordinary woman who inspired and encouraged many neophyte writers in a most demanding craft, Miss Connolly stated, adding that this year's publication will be a symbolic tribute to the fire and excellence typical of Miss Mercer.

The new Forum staff is headed by Bryan Gould, editor; Rena Kiteh, associate editor, and Howard Courney, advertising manager.

Contributions of essays, short stories, verse, plays and art work were solicited from the general student body in an effort to collect the most representative writing throughout the academic year.

All manuscripts are now being read and analyzed by members of the Forum staff and club, Miss Connolly added.

Forum magazine will be released early next month and will consist of two and a half pages of advertising, eight pages devoted to music and art contributions and 15 and a half pages of literary work, Editor Gould said.

It will be available in the Rampodium bookstore free of charge to holders of Associated Student cards, he added, while a charge of 50 cents will be made to others.

Ex-Guardsmen Write For Spartan Daily

Five former Guardsman staff members who have transferred to San Jose State College are now getting frequent bylines on that college's newspaper, the Spartan Daily.

Lester On, former Guardsman reporter, is now the Feature Editor at San Jose, while Bob Pacini, Guardsman editor-in-chief for two semesters in 1960-61, is currently a reporter on the Daily.

Paul Plansky, last semester's editor-in-chief, Tom Kennedy, formerly sports editor on The Guardsman, and John Henry, sports reporter here in 1958, contribute regularly as Spartan Daily reporters.

Guardsman News Editor Wins $500 Press Scholarship

Robert Hacker, news editor of The Guardsman and copy boy of The San Francisco Chronicle, was recently awarded a $500 scholarship by the members of Press and Union League Club's Late Watch, a group of newsmen who reported the 1906 earthquake and fire, and news veterans with more than 25 years experience.

The scholarship is presented in memory of Edmond D. Coblentz, the late Examiner editor and publisher.

It is presented to young reporters showing promise in the field of journalism. Funds for the award come from private individuals and businesses interested in seeing young reporters expand their education.

Hacker intends to go to San Jose or San Francisco State College.

Petitions To Run For Offices Due Monday

Nominations for next semester's 20 Associated Student elective offices will be up for grabs as AS President Dan Collins presides over the newly conceived open nominating convention at 7:30 p.m. today in Smith Hall.

The nominating convention which is open to all students, coincides with the recent revamping in voting procedure—this semester non-AS card holders are free to vote—with the idea, Collins explained, of "having more active participation in student government."

More than two weeks of campaigning will follow the convention tonight, with student elections later in the month, May 23 and 24, according to Rick Aguilar, Election Commissioner.

Two candidate deadlines fall on the same day. Along with his petition to run for office, each candidate must turn in one five-by-seven and three two-by-three inch pictures of himself no later than 1:10 p.m. next Monday, to Aguilar in S-134.

Campaign posters and the location of the posters will be approved by Aguilar through Friday, May 11.

Sponsorship Key Point

A major point in the new system is that in order to be nominated a student must either be sponsored by an on-campus organization or personally inform Aguilar of his intention to run for office.

Aguilar urged any student expecting difficulty in obtaining an organization's backing to consult with him or Collins in the AS Office, S-134, today or at the convention tonight.

Students must receive a nomination tonight in order to run for an office.

Collins is anticipating a big turnout tonight since, he emphasized, during this semester's orientation some 350 entering students voiced an interest in student government and each one was sent a postcard last week notifying him of the convention tonight and inviting him to attend

Party Organization Follows

No political parties may be formed before the convention tonight, Aguilar stated, but nominees are free to unite after tonight as long as they do not use names or initials of previously existing parties.

To aid candidates, petitions can be obtained from any of three sources: Dean Ralph Hillman in S-149, Dean Mary Golding in S-150 or Aguilar in S-134.

All petitions must have the signatures of the candidate's counselor, the student bank to verify a $1.00 earnings cleanup fee, the registrar, the dean of men or women and the Election Commissioner.

Furthermore, each petition must have the signatures of 15 AS members.

Stunts Need Approval

Other rules governing campaigning state that all publicity stunts must be approved by both Dean Hillsman and Aguilar.

Ballot boxes will be placed at the silver pole and in the basement of Science Hall near the vending machines, in Smith Hall, at the entrance to the library and at the entrance to the first floor of the arts building.

Voters must have a current registration card proving that they are enrolled here this semester.

Requirements Listed

Specific requirements for each office as provided in the AS constitution are as follows:

"President and Vice President shall have completed at least 42 units and not more than 60 with an over-all grade point average of 2.3 prior to taking his term of office.

"AMS and AWS Presidents must have completed at least 30 but not more than 60 units with an over-all grade point average of 2.2 prior to his term of office.

"Sophomore Class President must have completed at least 28 and not more than 60 units prior to his term of office.

"Freshman Class President must have completed at least 14 but not more than 27.5 units prior to taking office."

Council Composition Explained

Composition of Student Council, as stated in the constitution provides that "... 14 members shall be members-at-large of the Associated Students.

"Seven of these shall have completed at least 12 and not more than 27.5 units of work at the time of taking office and shall be representative of the Freshman Class.

"Seven of these shall have completed at least 28 and no more than 60 units of work at the time of taking office and shall be representative of the Sophomore Class." —By J.M.

Confab Proposal: Photostat Machine To Reopen Stacks

By John Silva

Topping the agenda at the Council of Organizations problems convention held last Wednesday in Smith Hall was a possible solution to the library stacks problem, the use of Smith Hall as a study area and a beginning-of-the-semester announcement date for final examinations.

Regarding the closing of the stacks, Miriam Lorenzen, COO secretary, said, "I suggest that to solve this problem, the library initiate a system of inspection whereby each student entering the stacks should leave his books outside, as is done at the bookstore."

Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator of educational management, stated, "We tried this, but we found that books were still missing, and also that students were tearing pages out of books."

Then a student suggested that perhaps a photostat machine, which could duplicate pages from a book, could be used to solve this problem.

"This is a very good idea; the cost would be relatively inexpensive," Anderson said.

Fraternity Offers Aid

At this time, Roger Labataille from the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity said, "Our fraternity has a Verifax machine which could be used for such a purpose. We would be glad to operate the machine for the college's students."

The main purpose of the photostat machine would be for the benefit of students wishing to use pages from books for study, explained Labataille.

"Up to Students"—Anderson

Concerning the use of the fountain section of Smith Hall for study between 9 and 11 a.m., Anderson said, "If students agree to keep the noise down to a minimum there and agree to keep the campus free from litter, we might be able to provide this area for study.

"And," Anderson continued, "if students agree to take more afternoon classes, we may also be able to provide the use of a few rooms in the arts building for a study area."

Early Finals Posting Asked

Ed Pawlus, COO president, raised the question of the administration posting the dates of final examination early in the semester.

"Currently, students just do not know when the finals will be given," Pawlus exclaimed.

"I agree," Anderson replied. "We have waited too long to announce the dates of these final examinations. We are going to publish the schedule of finals next week.

"Next semester the dates of final examinations will be released way ahead of time," Anderson declared.

Dean Gives Keynote Address

The convention was called to order by Associated Students President Dan Collins at 7:50 p.m. when Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, presented his keynote address.

Guest speakers at the event were Lee Dolson, political science instructor; Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator of instruction, and Fred Cherniss, Associated Men Student president.

More than 95 students were in attendance at the event according to an estimate made by John Homms, chairman of the problems committee.

2nd Place Spikers Aim For Big 8 Title At Sacto Saturday

Finishing the season with a second place 5-2 record, the college tracksters will participate in the Big Eight championship relays Saturday at Sacramento.

In the league meet competition, the Rams will aim high in order to finish first as it did last year.

Last year in the conference meet, powerhouse Alex Darnes copped a first place in the discus competition with a heave of 153-1½. He will be a strong choice to break the meet record of 154-2¼ set by former Ram discus thrower Jack Egan in 1955.

Darnes, who will also compete in the shot-put event in the meet, has already thrown the discus 173-3 this year to set a new national two-year college mark.

Strong Ram challengers in their particular events will be Claude Shipp in the 100-yard dash, Bill Miles in the pole vault, Pete Downing in the shot put, Bob Coleman in the high hurdles, Roger Ritchey in the mile and two mile, and Harb Briscoe, Don Brantley and George Holland in the broad jump.

Miles has had a poor season this year considering his strong capabilities in the pole vault event, but it is hoped he will come through with a top mark. He had a seasonal high of 13-6½ last year which exceeds his high of this year.

In its last Big Eight meet of the season on April 12, the Ram team defeated Modesto 70 to 51.

Darnes won the discus event which gives him a whole league season without a loss. His throw of 158-11 along with the broad jump of 22-1¼ by Brantley and the 12-6 pole vault of Miles were all first place marks.

Ram Nine Face Panthers May 5 In Capital City

Struggling to stay out of the cellar in the Big Eight Conference, the local horseriders travel to the Capital City this Saturday to take on last year's league champions, the Sacramento Panthers.

With but four games remaining in the league schedule, the locals have a two-win eight-loss record.

The last three losses have come at the hands of the Oakland Thunderbirds and the Contra Costa Comets.

In the first game played against the T-Birds, the diamondmen were thumped solidly, 8-1. Knuckle ball pitcher Don Kunkle suffered a disastrous four-run sixth inning and took his third loss of the season.

In the second Oakland contest, the Rams were trounced 10-3. The only high spot for the locals was a home run hit by Kunkle in the sixth inning.

Contra Costa invaded Balboa Field and handed the squad a 7-3 loss. John Pearce was the losing pitcher, but it was errors that cost the game. With the score tied 2-2 in the seventh inning, Lou Bevilacqua and Kunkle each contributed a two-out error.

Utility man Don Meroff, who batted .355 last season, has dropped to .134. This year Meroff has hit the ball well but it hasn't fallen in.

George Taufer, first baseman and relief pitcher, has been the most consistent player on the squad as he has stymied the opposition in relief while contributing clutch hits.

Jim Carroll, stocky catcher for the diamondmen, has surprised everyone this season by batting a strong .318 Known for his defensive ability primarily, Carroll has hit this steady pace to lead the team. This mark is a vast improvement over his average of .200 last year.

Swordsmen Compete For Trophy At San Jose

Striving to bring home another trophy, the college fencing team will compete in the final Intercollegiate Interscholastic Fencing Association competition this Saturday at San Jose State College.

Electrically wired weapons will be used by team members Stuart Funke, Harry Jorgensen, Bob Lawrence and Bill Lindo.

On April 14 at the Amateur Fencer's League of America competition, the fencing team, which tied with San Francisco State College, qualified for the national competition.

COO In Tie As IFC Mural Contests End

Two teams in the Council of Organizations are tied for league leadership, and the Inter-Fraternity Council League goes into its final round of play tonight in the Associated Men Student sponsored intramural basketball tournament

In the IFC league, four teams will clash tonight as Alpha Sigma Delta meets Beta Tau, while Zeta Phi Sigma goes against Gamma Phi Ypsilon.

In the COO league the two teams tied for first are the Divine Ones and the Collegiate Five holding 4-0 marks.

In second spot, the Campus Police and the CC's are tied with 1-1 marks, while the Hotel and Restaurant team, the Filipino Islanders and the Newman Club share the cellar with no win, four loss records.

In the IFC league, Zeta Phi Epsilon holds the lead at 2-0, along with Gamma Phi Ypsilon, who stands at 1-0. In second, with a score of 1-1 is Alpha Phi Sigma, followed in third by Beta Tau, at 0-1, and Alpha Kappa Rho at 0-2.

Last Tuesday in the men's gymnasium, the Collegiate Five beat the Filipino Club, 66-42. The second game, was forfeited to the Hotel and Restaurant by the CC's.

In the women's gymnasium, the Devine Ones kept up their unbeaten pace winning a forfeit from the Campus Police 2-0.

There are two more rounds to go in the COO league, with the last games to be played on May 16.

Last Wednesday night in the second to last round of the IFC league competition. Zeta Phi Sigma slipped by Alpha Kappa Rho, 28-25, despite consistent high scoring by Alpha Kappa Rho's Tom London and Don Tarantino.

In the second game, Gamma Phi Ypsilon trounced Beta Tau, 39-24.

The winners in each league will have their playoff on May 25 at the men's gymnasium, highlighting the AMS Smoker.

Standings as of April 25 are as follows:

CLUB LEAGUE	W	L
Collegiate Five	4	0
Divine Ones	4	0
Campus Police	1	1
CC's	1	1
Hotel and Restaurant	0	2
Filipino Club	0	4
Newman Club	0	4
IFC LEAGUE	W	L
Zeta Phi Epsilon	2	0
Gamma Phi Ypsilon	1	0
Alpha Phi Sigma	1	1
Beta Tau	0	1
Alpha Kappa Rho	0	2

RAMBLINGS

Silence Echoes Where Applause Should Be

By Jerry Littrell

SPORTS FANS, no matter who they are, are always stereotyped by the city they are in and the team they are watching.

For instance, the baseball fans in Philadelphia, a city often referred to as one of Brotherly Love, are known far and wide for their eternal hostility toward the visiting and home team alike.

The basketball citizens from the champion city, Boston, are known for their consistent spirit and support of their team at every contest.

In San Francisco the fans (short for fanatics) are regarded as minor league spectators watching a major league (in name only) team. They wave handkerchiefs at the opposing pitcher when he is in trouble and carry on in a manner similar to one that they used when the Seals roamed around at 16th and Bryant.

There is one more type of fan that must be mentioned. That is the enthusiastic, faithful sports spectator attending City College of San Francisco

This fan is a queer bird. He will half-heartedly support a winning team but will completely deny the existence of a team caught in the middle of a losing streak.

An example of this appears in the comparison of the basketball squad and the baseball team. At the beginning of the cage season, the Rams were picked only for a possible fourth-place finish.

Naturally the first game saw approximately no fans in the stands. The only people there were a few of the players' girl friends, two custodians and an elderly gentleman who started too late that night to see the Saints play.

However, after winning the first game a few students actually came the next night to the following game. But Contra Costa also brought fans along, and when the final count was in, the visitor's rooting section outmanned the locals four-to-one.

As the Rams approached the conference title, more students turned out for the games, but the attendance was never what it should have been.

The baseball squad wasn't picked for a very high finish in the league either, and so far they have lived up to expectations. However, the total number of fans who have attended the league games through the season have not even equaled the few who attended the first cage contest.

Players are born actors. There is nothing that a player likes better than a robust round of applause from a stand full of people. Unfortunately, the only thing a Ram sportsman will hear is the hollow echo of an empty gymnasium or field.

Freshman's Leap Near Record As Rams Place 4th At Fresno

By Dave Kleinberg

Freshman Lon Brantley came within seven inches of breaking the City College broad jump record by leaping 24-1 last Friday in the Northern California Relays at Fresno.

The ex-Mission High prep, whose best previous jump this year was almost two feet less at 22-7, and Alex Darnes, who won the discus with a "poor" 162-11, paced the Rams to a 20-point fourth place finish.

College of Sequoias won the overall meet.

Brantley's jump, which fell short of Mack Burton's 24-7¾ mark set in 1958, came on his last leap, and gave him a victory over teammate George Holland, who jumped 22-11 for second.

Coach Lou Vasquez indicated there are better jumping pits than Fresno's, and that they had known Brantley was capable of doing more than 22-7.

Darnes, who set a national record of 173-3 two weeks ago and hasn't suffered a defeat this year, edged Reedley College's Frank Parks, credited with the States' second best discus throw. Parks threw 157-2, but the heavy winds probaby held all throws down.

The college's two-mile relay squad composed of Jose Valle, Tony Ferringo, Andy Loobey and Tom Power, grabbed a third.

The spikers finished the season 5-2 in second place behind San Mateo, but hope to make up for it in the Big Eight Conference championships this Saturday at Sacramento.

Rain Defers Netters' Championship March

The tennis squad's drive toward the Big Eight championship was slightly deferred last Friday when rain canceled the Golden Gate Park match with Sacramento.

The Rams, needing the one victory to finish the season undefeated and to clinch the title, have won six straight and can finish no worse than a tie for first.

They'll be heavily favored to capture the Big Eight meet in Golden Gate Park this Friday and Saturday. Oakland's Tom Edlefsen and Modesto's Ryder Getz could give the Rams trouble.

The Rams' number one man, Bob Siska, 19-year-old ex-Junior Davis Cupper, lost his only league match to the promising Edelfsen, 6-2, 6-4.

Over the vacation, the Rams deadlocked California's Frosh, 4½-4½, with the contest called because of darkness on April 10. In a league match on April 13 they blanked lowly Santa Rosa, 7-0, and in a practice contest on April 16 dumped Santa Clara, 9-0.

Mermen Almost Drown

For a while it looked as if the Ram swimmers would come home from last Friday's and Saturday's Northern California championships at Foothill College without scoring.

The possibility of finishing last in Northern California was canceled when the 440 relay team took a fifth in the second day of action.

Powerful Foothill College scored 161 points to sweep the meet.

The Rams' Bill Love, backstroke, John Holm, breast stroke, Mark Haskell, butterfly, and Eli Silver, freestyle, combined for a 4:07.3 to grab the fifth place and score the college's four points.

Holm, who last year set a Big Eight mark with 1:07.5 in the 100 breast stroke, was the key in the victory, swimming his leg in 1:06.5.

Golfers Edged, 15½-14½

Despite Dennis Drucker's and Art Berliner's 77s, the Ram golfers were edged by the wind, the rain and the Oakland Thunderbirds, 15½-14½, in match play Friday at Harding Park.

The loss, the second against four wins, dropped the Rams into third place behind Oakland and San Mateo.

The Rams' John Steddin, a consistent 70 shooter, fired an 81, while Bruce Hubley and Paul Egan carded 80s in the rough weather that orbited everyone's score.

The Rams will compete in Modesto next Tuesday in the Big Eight Conference championships.

Mermen Vie For Titles At State Meet Tomorrow

With participation based on individual placement in the Big Eight Conference and Northern California championship meets, the college swimming team will send representatives to the State Conference championships tomorrow through Saturday at El Camino.

In the recent Big Eight Conference championships held April 13 and 14, seven of the 10 Ram splashers who competed placed in the finals and gained eligibility for the Northern California meet.

Also contending in the Northern California meet were the relay teams made up of free style members Eli Silver, Jeff Higman, John Holm and Bill Love; the medley team was composed of Love, Holm, Mark Haskell and Silver.

Herm Fruchenicht and Holm, breast stroke; Love, backstroke; Silver, free style; Higman, 50-yard free style; Haskell, butterfly, and Chuck Greninger, mile and 440-free style, were the men who gained admittance to the Northern California meet on the basis of their showing in the Big Eight meet.

Greninger broke two college records in the competition and proved to be the outstanding man in the meet for the locals.

Oakland came out on top in the Big Eight meet, followed by Stockton, San Mateo, Sacramento and San Francisco in the triangle division.

Coach Roy Burkhead was pleased with the showing of his men in the meet. "The men I brought up to the Big Eight meet really showed well," Burkhead stated.

Holm, who set a record last year in the 100-yard free style, saw it fall to a Stockton swimmer who turned in a 1:07 timing.

Sports And Dancing Highlight RA Slate

Master lessons in folk and modern dance will begin at 2:30 p.m. this afternoon in the women's gymnasium.

From 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. modern dance participants will be instructed by master teacher Frances Bloland. Students are requested to wear leotards or shorts and be bare footed.

From 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. folk dancing students will be given lessons by master teacher Madelynne Greene. Students must wear full skirts and soft soled shoes.

After the lessons, dancers and participants will be invited to attend a reception including refreshments.

All parochial and public school students have been invited to attend the lessons.

The Recreation Association's six sports teams will leave for Monterey Peninsula College to attend the Sports Day there this Saturday.

The archery, badminton, bowling, golf, tennis and volleyball teams will depart at 6 a.m.

At Monterey the teams will participate in a three-hour sports period, a one-hour recreational period and a lunch awards reception.

As a climax to a busy spring schedule, the RA will hold its semiannual awards social Tuesday, May 15.

Presentation of awards to outstanding members of the association and the installation of officers for the fall semester will be highlights of the event.

Mills Trio To Play In Artist Concert Finale

Noted Soloists Appear As Group In Chamber Recital In Theater Friday

Appearing as the final event of the artist concert series this semester, the Mills Chamber Trio will perform in the theater during College Hour this Friday.

The Mills Chamber Trio is part of the Mills Chamber Players who are connected with the faculty of Mills College.

One of the trio is Nathan Rubin, who has gained a reputation as a fine violinist. Rubin has appeared as soloist with the San Francisco Symphony, under the direction of Dmitri Mitropolus, and has made recordings for Epic, Contemporary and Fantasy.

Another, Morton Subotnick, who plays the clarinet, has received both the Copely Award and the Forum Prize for his composition and was one of 23 composers who were invited to attend the recent Princeton seminar in advanced musical studies.

Appearing with Rubin and Subotnick, will be Naomi Sparrow, who is renowned as a pianist. Miss Sparrow was one of three finalists in the international Debussy contest, held recently. She has also appeared as guest soloist at the University of California campuses at Davis, Los Angeles and Berkeley, as well as Mills College and radio station KPFA.

The program for Friday's concert is made up of the Trio in F major by Vivaldi, a Suite by Milhaud, and Contrasts by Bartok.

An invitation to attend the concert has been extended by Meyer Cahn series sponsor, to all students. He feels that the "show will further the college's attempt to offer a full musical picture featuring professionals and their works of art."

This recital will bring to a close the season's artist concert series. On Friday, May 18, the concert band of the college will perform, to be followed on June 1 by a choral concert.

Commencement To Be Held In College Stadium

City College stadium will be the site for the 27th annual commencement ceremonies Thursday, June 7, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, division of instruction, revealed today.

The stadium was initially opened in fall, 1960, and after two years of deliberation by college administration was finally approved as the site for commencement.

Two honor students, Harry Cordellos and Diane Westman, have been selected as this year's student speakers.

Ceremonies are scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. with the traditional academic procession. President Louis G. Conlan will deliver the opening address and confer certificates of recognition to 800 graduates.

Invitations will be available to all graduates beginning tomorrow at the information booth in Science Hall. With the presentation of an Associated Student card, each person will be able to secure up to 10 bids.

45 Nominations For 20 Elective Positions Ends SRP Dynasty

May, Otey Chosen Presidential Candidates At Open Convention

By John Muller

A whopping total of 45 candidates was nominated for the 20 elective offices last Wednesday night in Smith Hall as Associated Student President Dan Collins presided over the college's first open nominating convention which officially ended the political grip of the Students' Representative Party as evidenced by the past four elections.

Candidates nominated for AS President are Bill May and Dave Otey, and for Vice President, Rosalie Weiner, Gail Margolin and Laura Thurwell.

Bob Righetti and Jim Fuller were nominated for Associated Men Student President, and Susan Fitzpatrick and Imogene Walker for Associated Women Student President.

Nominees for Sophomore Class President are Vince Contreras, Larry Maibaum, Jim Horan and Phil Robbins. The three candidates for Freshman Class President are Nick Zafranovich, Ben Rodriguez and Rich Thomas.

16 Run for Frosh Seats

When nominations for freshman seats on council were closed, only the following candidates were selected: Walter Rice, Pete Montonen, Kendall Perkins, Alan Poletti, Ann Gay, Jim Davis, Art Dassow, Bill Grisby and Tony Reyes.

However, the motion to close the nominations was reconsidered, the delegates decided to reopen the nominations, and Diane Baffico, Lernito Prudencio, Stan Contura, Katie Dwyer, Les Brandin, Jan Wisnia and Ernest Gash were selected making a total of 16 candidates for the 7 freshman seats on council.

The three-hour convention began with Collins taking a roll-call of campus organizations which were present. Among Collins' opening remarks was the statement that this convention "would eliminate one powerful party's (SRP) dynasty."

Last semester when the SRP was in power approximately 27 students ran for office. Collins expressed great pleasure when the switch to an open convention resulted in having 18 more candidates run for offices this semester.

Elworthy Keynote Speaker

Guest speaker at the convention was Sherman Elworthy, student government adviser, who spoke on "How to Lose Your Way," urged active participation of all students in campus government and offered his condolences to the non-participants.

Elworthy also stated that students "have a right, not a privilege to criticize student leaders and government and should use it to the best advantage."

Nominations were opened after Rick Aguilar, election commissioner read the qualifications for offices.

To speed the proceedings, nominating speeches were limited to one-and-a-half minutes and seconding speeches, for executive offices only, were limited to one minute.

Before last week's convention Collins expressed concern that nominations might possibly run wild with possibly 60 or more nominations being made for council seats.

His fears proved to be groundless, however, as the final tally showed a respectable number of 29 students vying for the 14 council seats

"This year I feel that we have given the voters a good selection of candidates," Collins stated; "I am especially pleased with the qualifications of the candidates for the executive offices."

Voting May 23, 24

Two weeks of campaigning remain before the elections on May 23 and 24.

No AS cards will be required for voting this semester; the only requirement is that voters must have a current registration card proving that they are enrolled here this semester.

Donation Of Photo Machine May Open Library Stacks

For the purpose of duplicating pages from books for students here, a photostat machine will be placed in the library during the latter part of this month, Roger Labataille, president of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity, disclosed last week.

Members of the fraternity have withdrawn from their bank account funds to purchase a used Verifax photostat machine which they have donated to the college, Labataille said.

"And we would be glad to operate this machine for the college's students," he added.

"However, this semester it will be run more or less on an experimental basis," he continued. "Next semester we hope to have it running permanently."

Regarding this machine, Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator of educational management, said, "This is a fine idea," as the machine could probably be set up in or near the library.

"However," Anderson explained, "there is a copyright problem involved here, so a student would not be able to have too many pages duplicated."

Students wishing to have photostatic duplicates of book pages could bring their library books with a note, stating which pages they wanted, to a librarian who could, in turn, give the books to those operating the machine, Anderson stated.

There will be a possible fee of ten cents charged for this service, he said.

Concerning the reopening of the library stacks, Anderson said that if students begin to discipline themselve by keeping the library quiet, the cafeteria orderly and the campus clean, "then the stacks might be reopened."

Deadline Friday For Submission Of AS Card Designs

By Edy Grant

Competition for next fall's Associated Student card design will continue until this Friday's deadline has been reached, according to Bill Reichert, AS card sales chairman.

Since art students are more familiar with the card's form, the contest is open to them, Reichert emphasized.

A transistor radio will be awarded to the winner, who will be chosen after all the entries have been submitted.

Designs should be two or more times larger than the Associated Student card itself, which is 3⅜ inches by 2½ inches, he explained.

Besides providing space for the signature of the cardholder, Associated Student president, and controller, the contestants, he explained, should place the name, City College of San Francisco, somewhere on the design using small letters.

It would be helpful for those students planning to enter the contest to look at this semester's card for ideas Reichert commented,

Further information is available in the Associated Student office, S-134, where entries should be submitted.

Wendy Dickson, an Associated Women Student member, won a transistor radio for placing first in this semester's card sales contest. By selling more than 200 cards, she sold approximately 32 more cards than the runner-up.

During the fall semester, sales usually hit the 3000 mark. Last spring the goal was set at 2300, but the sales fell several hundred short, which is common at that time, Reichert said.

Saving the student up to $47.50, the AS card offers its holders free admission and reduced rates to dances, social affairs, and home athletic games sponsored by the college, and merchandise discounts.

Four Grads Win UC Scholastic Honors

Honors for scholastic achievement were recently accorded to four graduates of the college now attending the University of California.

Vicky Aumann, feature and news editor of The Guardsman in 1959-60, was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honor society.

Miss Aumann, who received her A.B. degree last February, is presently a graduate student in the political science department. She was elected with only 112 others from a total enrollment of over 20,000.

In order to win such an award, a student must be in the top six per cent of his class. Miss Aumann has been accepted for graduate study by both Stanford and Harvard. However, she has not made a final decision.

Don Serrati, Guardsman editor-in-chief for the spring semester of 1959, was awarded a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship for a year's graduate study. Serrati, a history major, intends to study at the University of Michigan. His present plans include further study for his Ph.D. degree.

In addition undergraduate recognition was extended by the University's business administration department to James Hughes and Donald Hill.

They were cited for making the Dean's Honor list. For Hughes it was the second time he had won this distinction.

Story Of Oakland Center For Blind Shown May 18

Special guests at the Oakland Orientation Center for the Blind last week for a preview of Doorway to Opportunity, which will be presented here Friday, May 18, by Alpha Gamma Sigma were Dean Ralph Hillman, counselor Howard Schoon and AGS President Ron Hennessey.

The slide and tape-recorded story of the center has been in the planning stages for three years, and will be presented during College Hour in S-100. It was shown last Wednesday to faculty members and students of the center.

The orientation center which is the only school of its kind in the western United States, practices a philosophy that startles many persons because it is so different from what one normally would expect.

While visiting the center, the guests from City College not only saw the story unfold on the screen, but they also saw it in action.

Hillisman, Schoon and Hennessey looked in on classes of blind students in home economics and also visited the shop where the students were using standard power tools.

In addition, Hillsman got a more accurate idea of what it is like to function as a blind person. Wearing a pair of training goggles and using a 54-inch fiberglass cane, he traveled from the home economics department out to the sidewalk and down to the shop. Operating without sight, Hillsman had the same experience felt by most new students of the orientation center on their first day of travel training:

"The sounds of the traffic seem awfully close."

Polio Shot Card A 'Must' For Fall Registration

The importance of filing a Poliomyelitis immunization card as soon as possible was stressed last week to students who plan to return to the college next fall by Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

"Students without cards on file will not be perimtted to go through the registration line," she said.

According to Miss Learnard, a state law was passed in the latter part of 1961 which requires all applicants for admission to the college to present evidence of having been immunized against polio.

She stated that each student will receive a polio card when he consults his counselor for next semester's programming. This card is to be filled out and returned to the nurse's office, S-150.

"We want the students to turn in their cards as soon as possible," she said. "If they wait until the last minute, it will cause quite a bit of confusion."

She emphasized the fact that any student who does not wish to be immunized for whatever reason need not be, but he must still fill out and turn in his polio card.

About 250 cards are being issued daily, she said, but only 200 or so are being returned each month.

A Study In Frustration

Spring 1962 Roster Lists 13 Kings, 1 Queen

By Bob O'Lear

This is a study in frustration.

It all began recently when an enterprising Feature Editor assigned this reporter the student directory.

"Find a story here," he demanded, as Feature Editors are prone to do.

(For the uninitiated, this type of assignment is as close to banishment to Siberia as newspapers can come.

(It's been done time and again. And rarely, if ever, can anything novel come of it.

(But with a shrug of the shoulders and the old "ours is not to reason why, etc." attitude, we set about the chore.)

The distinction of having her name listed first goes to Vera Aaro. What an advantage having a name beginning with two A's would be in the interminable lines found while serving in the armed forces!

However, there would be a definite handicap in always being last in line as, undoubtedly, Sharon Zwisslg (last name on the list) would.

With the obvious over, we turned to looking for famous names. Here was encountered nothing but frustration.

Some of our near-misses: Castro (not Fidel nor Raoul); Chevalier (not Maurice); Churchill (Alice, not Winston); Crockett (Marvin instead of old Davy); Gunn (Pete? Nope); Caruso (Connie, however there is an Enrico, but the first name is Tina).

And so it went. There were endless well-known last names. But their parents hadn't cooperated to make this story easier.

Ah! Finally a ray of light in this darkest of all assignments. At last a J. Kennedy. And if that weren't enough, a Richard Nixon. But look again.

Unfortunately, it's not John Kennedy. And Richard is James R. Nixon's middle name. Oh, well, try again.

How about this? Three students are tied for the longest last name. They are Effie Apostolopoulus, Rhoda Gianfranceschi and Robin Van Catteuburch. There are seven last names listed with only two letters.

What's the most common name? And how many Smiths and Joneses are there? First of all, neither Smith nor Jones is the most common name at the college.

By an overwhelming margin, Lee, with 79, surprisingly heads the list. Next comes Smith with 56. Then another surprise. There are 35 Johnsons enrolled as opposed to only 32 Joneses.

Now, with the mechanics exhausted, came desperation. There's a Day and Knight. Even though it's not the proper Night, it's sufficient for a desperate writer.

The search for other vital statistics turned up 13 Kings but only one Queen, and a total of 123 Mc's, beginning with McAdams and ending with McWhorter, were found.

Baltimore, Berlin, Danzing, Hiroshima, London, Milano, Rome and Zurich are represented.

Any number of colors is shown, such as: Black, Brown, Gray, White, Green (in two shades, yet, as Greene was listed); and Blanco (Spanish for white).

Do you still wonder "what's in a name?"

To be specific almost 12 inches of grudging newspaper copy.

Commencement Exercises In Athletic Stadium . . . At Last!

AFTER BEING POSTPONED twice in the past two years for various reasons, plans for holding commencement exercises in the college stadium have at last been approved.

These ceremonies had customarily been held in the auditorium at Riordan High School when, in 1960, The Guardsman first voiced the idea of having commencement held in the then uncompleted stadium.

As the athletic field was not finished by the end of the 1960 college year, hopes were high that the formalities could be observed there for the Class of 1961.

The year '61 came and went. The stadium was opened in the fall with the homecoming football game but, although the proposal to schedule the program at that site was brought up by Student Council, the plan never materialized.

This year, though, the plans are laid for a more typical daytime exercise as is customary in most other colleges.

It is far more fitting and proper that students who have spent four, or sometimes more, semesters at the college should be graduated at a program held on this campus.

Arrangements for a ceremony inside at the men's gymnasium have been made for the possible event of inclement weather, but since the event is scheduled for June 7, the chances of rain are at a minimum.

The only drawback of this year's commencement program will be the fact that it will be held while classes are still in session. Thus, only those students who have a free period at that time will be in the audience.

We hope that in the future it will be possible to schedule these exercises at a time convenient to all.

Cultural Activities Flourish This Spring

By Anna Papagni

SPRINGTIME in San Francisco compensates for its lack of sun with many cultural activities both on campus and off. Those who would rather have the former may as well resign themselves gracefully to the latter.

Joan of Lorraine by Maxwell Anderson is now in rehearsal under the direction of Michael Griffin. Student actors and their director have only half as much time to prepare this final show as they had for Time Limit. It's all work or no play on opening night, May 25.

Pixy-haired Jo Janofsky made a surprise appearance on the last day of tryouts and walked away with the coveted role of Jeanne D'Arc.

Randolph Jones has the second major role. Jones is probably the most versatile performer in the department. He has played everything from a drunk to a general, and this time he appears as a drama director.

During the same week that Joan of Lorraine opens, the college choral groups will give an evening concert in the theater on May 22. One faculty member said of his colleague, Gale Marshall, who directs the Men's Glee Club and the A Cappella Choir, "That man could get music out of rocks."

This is not to say that there is any similarity between his singers and stones. The comment simply illustrates that Marshall's groups are well worth attention. The Treble Cleff, a recently renewed women's group under the direction of of Richard Fenner, will also sing for the concert.

The audience will hear Bach along with folk songs during the program.

While rehearsing one of these folk songs with the Men's Glee, Marshall clapped his hands twice to stop the singing and addressed two men in the front row.

"Remember, no ham, no corn, no nothing—very seriously step quickly in front of the mike for your duet." And so they did, except for a slight grin.

Mannon by Massenet opened the San Francisco Spring Opera season last night conducted by Victor Alessandro of the San Antonio Symphony. Six operas will be given during the season which closes May 26, and all are offered at a "popular price" level with a $3.95 top for orchestra seats.

Students who find any price unpopular may go free by checking in at Dean Mary Golding's office for an ushering job.

"In order to maintain popular prices, Spring Opera must operate at a deficit. Full houses pay only part of the bill. It is our hope that schools will avail themselves of the opportunity to buy choice blocks of seats for the repeat performances," William Kent, III, chairman of Spring Opera, stated.

Carnival opened the Civic Light Opera on April 23 and performances of Song of Norway, Kismet and the British hit, Oliver, will follow.

Also from England comes the famous Old Vic company which will be at the Geary until May 19 with Bernard Shaw's Saint Joan, Romeo and Juliet, and finally Macbeth.

Entertainmentwise, it's a busy time, especially for students anticipating finals, but any of these activities will certainly complement the classrooms.

U.S. Justified To Resume Atmospheric Testing?

By R. D. Hacker

(Editor's note: Campus Panorama embarks from its normal procedure this week. In the course of interviewing, a debate arose, and The Guardsman is running the story. Nancy Irlan states the United States was just, while Lisa Bachelis claims the diametric opposite.)

Freshman Nancy Irlan feels that the United States was justified in resuming nuclear testing.

Miss Irlan voiced this opinion: "We have found through experience that we can't be a so-called friendly or neutral nation because Russia's leaders won't accept it. They just want us to give up and succumb to their desires.

"If we sit back and let Russia or any other country boss us around, we stand a good chance of losing the respect of the many countries that now look to us for leadership."

She further commented, "The United States must take a stand; if we are going to fight this Cold War against the Communists, we have to fight it all the way or not at all."

Miss Irlan reasoned that since the Russians broke their agreement and continued the testing of their nuclear weapons, it is now the right of the United States to continue.

"It is up to us to make sure we stay ahead of them in this field as well as others," she said.

She believes that testing is basic to science and that since its beginning, most progress has been through experiment and testing.

When asked if there were to be a war who would start it, she said, "I don't know if there will be a war, but if there is we won't be the first to drop the bomb.

"We can't let Russia take over," she said. "We have to back up our country and continue testing if we are to save what we believe in. The United States has already lost ground to the Communists in Berlin and Cuba and now we must stand firm!"

Freshman Lisa Bachelis believes that the United States was unjustified in resuming nuclear testing. "I can see our point. We must keep up with the Russians, but I think we can do it without testing."

She is a strong believer in universal peace and thinks that everyone should become a conscientious objector. "When Russia starts testing, we shouldn't do anything. We should sit back and be a friendly nation.

"They won't do anything with their bombs," she commented; "right now we are as powerful as they are." She doubts that the Russians will become any more powerful with testing. "The bombs have gotten about as big as they can get, so testing won't prove anything."

She stated that she herself is not a conscientious objector but that she has worked with the American Friends Committee—a Quaker organization. "I have had some of the meetings held at my home, and I know what they stand for—peace.

"There is a saying nowadays that in order to have peace, you must fight for it; but fighting for peace is ruining this country."

She continued the after-effects of the testing and what it was doing to the health of the world. "The soil is being bombarded with radiation and it contaminates the food we eat. We may not be harming ourselves, but we are harming the future generations.

"Man must conquer his self-destructive desires, and the United States can start by eliminating the testing of nuclear bombs. We must help the world recognize peace so it may survive."

Shots At RAMdom

By Dave Kleinberg

IT TOOK a while, but the truth leaked out.

The English 1B nut who thought Henry IV part one was "a golf story," Hamlet "trite" and all of Shakespeare's work slightly "pornographic," has been seeing a psychiatrist for some time.

The nut has his problems. Going to college and reading lots of Shakespeare leaves him no time for employment. The head shrinkers are also money shrinkers.

The psychiatrist issued the final warning last week.

"If you don't pay your bill, I'm going to let you stay crazy."

RISKING a low grade but at the same time advertising and complimenting an instructor for his insight to American history, we reveal a few of history's unknowns as exposed by Russell Posner.

At the battle of the Alamo, where about 150 Americans died, a man uttered these famous words as he rode away, "Remember the Alamo."

From that day on, Americans have remembered the Alamo, mostly in jest. But it wasn't an American's words. It was the victorious Mexican General Santa Ana, who, in anger, told Americans to remember that what happened at the Alamo could happen again.

In the War of 1812, Francis Scott Key scribbled the Star Spangled Banner. It wasn't adopted as the official National Anthem until (and here's one for Ripley) 1930.

In the Mexican War of 1846, American troops hit the eastern coast and drove inland to capture Mexico City. En route another famous song, the Marine Hymn, was written.

What about the verse, "We will fight our country's battles in the AIR, on land and sea?"

The air was added in World War One.

BACK TO ENGLISH. The student is usually asked to find a definition of the word epic, and we've found an additional one. Of course, it can only be found in Webster's 40-dollar, 40-pound manuscript.

EPIC, as branded by Upton St. Clair, means Employ People in California. Honest.

Drama Department Takes Turn For Better

When the theater was "on the hill" in the basement of Science Hall, its meager supply of equipment might easily have been found in the tool corner of a suburban garage.

To build sets and costumes was a tedious task and instructional purposes were not always carried out since the necessary equipment was not available. The fortunes of the drama department have taken a decided turn for the better in its new surroundings in the arts building.

Michael Griffin, who makes the department go, looks appreciatively at a dashing blue and white radial saw with a number of attachments that cut anything, and his years in the old theater seem like a bad dream.

The saw gallops to the speed of five horse power and is used largely in industry; safety devices protect the user, and the machine can last indefinitely.

In the near future, Griffin expects a 21-inch band saw for detailed work and a uni saw where the material is moved in cutting instead of the blade as is the case with a radial.

Drama students can now build their large sets with ease through this type of professional industrial equipment.

During the Easter recess, a cyclorama was installed on stage. This, too, comes under the general heading of theater equipment. The cyclorama is a heavy, seamless muslin that stretches across a frame, 28 by 76 feet.

The cloth wall helps to solve the problem of sound projection into the large auditorium but is used primarily as a backdrop for outdoor sets.

Also for the stage, Griffin received an aluminum scaffold with wheels which can be used for mounting and adjusting lights up to 18 feet. The network of bars can be disassembled for other purposes, such as use as part of a set.

In addition, there are two conventional ladders that stand 35 feet on a stage that measures 50 feet to the grid and 10 more to the ceiling.

With new curtains, increasing light equipment and a sound system that is currently in the bidding phase, director Griffin looks around at his theater and pronounces, "It is good."

Ugly Man On Campus Drive Success Despite Egg 'Riot'

APO Contest Nets $200 For Scholarships

John Piro, member of Alpha Kappa Rho, was elected Ugly Man On Campus, Roger Labataille, president of the contest's sponsor, Alpha Phi Omega, disclosed yesterday.

Second place went to Jim Ruggles, co-sponsored by Beta Tau fraternity and Theta Tau sorority. This marked the first year that a sorority was allowed to enter a candidate.

Bringing in more than $200, the contest was termed a success by Labataille. As a result, two $100 scholarships will be available to qualified students, the fraternity president added.

The two top winners were responsible for 90 per cent of the voting receipts. A difference of five dollars separated the two.

Runners-up in the contest were Ed Cecil, Theta Phi Sigma; Bill Reichert, Alpha Gamma Sigma, and Clarence Scanlan, Hawaiian Club.

IFC Offers Full Restitution For Any Damages

By John Silva

Splattered by a barrage of raw eggs in front of Smith Hall April 27, two campus policemen apprehended two students here pitching eggs down the hill toward the Redwood Ram.

According to witness Jim Fuller of Beta Tau fraternity, "The hill was just crowded with people throwing eggs. It really got out of hand; I'd say there were at least 12 dozen eggs thrown in three minutes."

Fuller explained that the incident occurred at Alpha Phi Omega's Ugly Man On Campus rally staged at the Redwood Ram during College Hour.

"It began when all the ugly man candidates stood beside the stage at the rally," Fuller said, "and sponsors of these men began selling eggs; one of these sponsors then sold eggs to students sitting on the hill across from the rally."

At this time a few students on top of the hill threw eggs at those on the bottom of the hill, and students there threw eggs back at the students on the hilltop," Fuller reported.

"Then eggs began flying from all directions," he said, "splattering all over the place; it was a real mess. Two campus policemen came over to stop it, and they too were splattered."

At last week's Inter-Fraternity Council meeting, Pete Montonen, IFC vice president, said that the eggs were sold to be thrown just at the ugly man candidates, not at anyone else.

"But unfortunately it got way out of hand," Montouen stated, "and I am sorry it happened."

Montonen's sentiments were echoed by all the fraternity men at the IFC meeting.

"We feel that we have insulted the campus police," he continued "and we apologize to them." He said that the fraternities were willing to make full restitution for any damages to the policemen's uniforms.

Lewis Pollack, campus police chief, said, "We don't take this as a personal insult; it was just an unfortunate incident that should not have occurred. There was a lack of planning among faculty, fraternities and police.

"If we had known about this rally ahead of time we could have had our men out there. This way we were caught completely off guard."

Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of men, requested that the names of the two students apprehended for egg throwing be withheld, but he said, "They are under consideration for expulsion."

COO Sets May 18 Spring Festival

Twenty-one clubs will participate in the Council of Organizations-sponsored Spring Festival scheduled from 7:30 p.m. to 12 midnight Friday, May 18, in Smith Hall, COO President Ed Pawlus said yesterday.

The festival is a fun night where students get together and come to support the campus clubs which will set up booths that consist of skill games and food. There will be no "chance" booths this year, Pawlus said.

Prizes will be awarded to skillful players by each booth sponsor. Cakes and teddy bears are just a few of the gifts that can be won at this social event.

A registration card along with a slight admission fee will be the only requirement for entrance, Pawlus explained, and there will be no money passed within the booths. Two ticket booths will be set up for the convenience of purchasing tickets to play any of the games.

A dunking booth may be set up by the Inter-Fraternity Council during College Hour to encourage participation and to publicize the evening event. If this is done, it will be placed in the parking lot near Smith Hall.

Profit from this function will be divided among the organizations according to the number of tickets the respective booth receives by the end of the evening.

Campus Choral Groups Visit Prison For Second Musical Treat

Audiences have ranged from civic groups in downtown hotels to inmates in prisons for the surprisingly active campus choral groups.

These affairs allow students to experience listener-reaction not acquired in class, Galen Marshall, director of the Men's Glee and the A Cappella Choir, said. Such field trips also raise student morale, he added.

Their last engagement was at Vacaville federal prison which played host for its third choral festival, and the second one in which the college participated.

Seventy music students left the campus at 4 p.m. on a Friday in two chartered buses and arrived at the high security prison where, upon entering the building, their right hands were stamped. They were then divided into groups of 15 to pass through three locked iron gates.

Other than the gates, the institution might have been an ultra modern school and hospital combination. The atmosphere was pleasantly clean, bright and warm and had none of the severity generally associated with prisons.

The program was held in a huge gymnasium on a colorful, portable stage designed by inmates so that it could be assembled or disassembled within two hours.

The audience of more than 300 men also heard the San Francisco State Glee Club and Choir, Travis Air Force Base Choir, Vallejo Choral Society and the Keaten Memorial Choir of Oakland as well as the prison California Medical Facility Glee during a three-hour program that began at 7:30 p.m.

The prison Glee along with the photography and fencing clubs, the Mariners and Toastmasters, an artists' and group and chess club are all part of the institution's psychiatric rehabilitation program for its 1300 inmates, Curtis Mouton, prison glee director, explained.

Dr. William Keating, Jr., prison supervisor for the last 18 months, is establishing a world-wide reputation for Vacaville because of his approach toward rehabilitation of society's criminal element.

Prisoners affectionately call him "Big Daddy."

At the end of the show, all participants gathered in an attractive cafeteria for refreshments and to comment on their musical endeavors. The college glee and choir then left in the buses that had brought them and arrived back in San Francisco at 1 a.m.

Raymond Der's Cover Design Selected For Current Issue Of Forum Literary Magazine

Raymond Der's cover design was selected for the current issue of Forum to be distributed June 1, Bryan Gould, editor, announced last week.

"The cover is a departure from the usual abstract designs of the past," William J. Eckert, advertising arts instructor, reported.

"This year's design is a drawing of an old-fashioned printing press done in a very modern manner," Eckert further stated.

Der won out over entries submitted by Roy Omi and Haley Yee.

Several of the features of the forthcoming issue were pointed out by Gould.

For the first time, Forum will highlight photography. There will be 14 photographs of art work, ceramics, sculpture and painting, covering the full range of visual arts.

This issue is dedicated to the late Dr. Dorothy Mercer, the first sponsor of Forum, and a pioneer member of the college's faculty.

Leaves of Grass, a painting by Eleanor Hjelvik, will further enhance the tribute to Dr. Mercer.

Rounding out the arts will be an original 12-tone composition for piano by John Wodarcyk to represent music.

Kenneth Kitch, a former student of Dr. Mercer's, has composed a sonnet for the magazine.

Forum magazine will be issued free of charge to all AS card holders. For non-card holders, there will be a 50 cent fee.

4 Groups Sing At Choral Concert In Theater May 22

As a climax to spring musical activities here, four choral groups, under the direction of music instructor Galen Marshall and Richard Fenner, will present a concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday, May 22, in the theater.

The program will be open to the public and no admission will be charged, Marshall said.

Participating groups are the A Cappella Choir, Men's Glee, the Chamber Choir and Treble Clef.

PHOTO DISPLAY

Visitors to the photography gallery in Cloud Hall this week will notice that the previously announced one-man show featuring Fred Matthes, now also features the work of Richard Weymouth Brooks.

Gallery director Emmett Smith last week decided upon the double display in order to add to the college's exhibits for Public School Week, which has just been concluded.

Brooks, whose work represents the second half of the photo display is, like Matthes, an ex-student of the college and attended classes here in 1955-56. During this time, he also served as a photographer for The Guardsman.

During the 1960 International Film Festival in San Francisco, Brooks was assigned as official photographer. He has also been retained as photographer for Bay Area rapid transit.

The current Cloud Hall photo display for Brooks is his second. When the gallery opened as a photography exhibit area in 1956, Brooks was one of the first to be featured.

As a result of the addition of the Brooks photos to the gallery, Smith has extended the show through this Friday with an indication that it may continue into next week.

BUSINESS RECRUITMENT

Representatives of 60 Bay Area employers will participate in the seventh annual engineering and business graduate recruitment day on next Wednesday, May 16, in Cloud Hall, Placement Director Joseph A. Amori announced today.

Unlike previous years, the engineering and business graduates will be combined into one unified recruitment program. This experiment in comprehensive recruitment will encompass approximately 100 business program graduates and 75 engineering department graduates.

In addition, the program will include 15 graduates from the advertising and commercial art courses, 10 from photography, 8 from graphic arts and some graduates from liberal arts courses.

June graduates will be interviewed by employers from such fields as Finance, Retail Merchandising, Insurance and Government.

The Good Ol' Daze—

Is Coat Rack Solution To Office Ills?

By Dave Grieve

LEAFING through this writer's private files which contain the truths or, perhaps, habits which pervaded the Good Ol' Daze, he abruptly stopped, realizing that the virtue of orderliness has escaped this modern day and age.

Gazing back inside the cob-webbed drawer, eyes skimming over the scattered papers complicated by documents stuffed into the wrong folders, a feeling motivated the writer to crane his neck and inspect The Guardsman office.

A deluge of gloom.

The answer was not shocking. It was expected. Not by any stretch of the imagination was it only to criticize journalists, but just for the record, to expose publicly "their" problem and possibly save face by submitting a remedy.

Not to repeat, but journalists are not the only lily whites (Dr. Jekyll type) who change into slobs (Mister Hyde type) when entering an office, especially, their own office.

Amazing as it may seem, and mind you, this is not facetious, when a journalist enters the room, a divine spirit seems to warm his body while obstructing his thought processs. In the earthly form of coffee through the mouth, a delayed but inevitable reaction materializes in the shape of discarding the top coat or outer garment with the ease and technique of a "balloon dancer" gracefully floating it to the floor.

There are various types and classifications of these uncouth "undressers," the latter title used for lack of one better, of which limited space does not permit examination of all cases.

Probably the most notorious combatant of order, or advocate of disorder, is the "clothes hanger," a person driven by neurotic tendencies, (naturally caused by an unpleasant childhood experience) to hang his sweater, water-logged raincoat, gravy-stained muffler, on his chair, desk, books, papers, typewriter, or just on the heater behind his desk, where the heat works as a catalyst on the gravy, causing a noticeable stench throughout the room.

The "clothes hanger" brings forth the childish desire within his fellows to place their fingers around the slob's Adam's apple.

Ashtrays upended, layers of papers hiding the faces of desks, bulletins dangling from the remaining tack in the wall, awards and pictures hanging askew in their frames—these minor points can be shelved in the search for order.

But who can excuse the careless behavior of the "clothes hanger" and his followers? Only special treatment, applied in the proper manner, can help.

With all the facts in mind, the writer, aided by his special file cabinet, spent hours of research. At last grasping the key, he scurried from the office down into the depths beneath the college, facing a maze of rooms and hallways resembling the catacombs. From one enclosure to another . . . and then, at last

Fantastic. The answer was there—a six-foot stake of wood, supported by several legs, and, waving four dowels at the top, ending all problems of clothes cluttering, solving the psychological problems of the "clothes hanger"—and representative of a past era.

A coat rack!

Letters to the Editor

Ram's Horn

(Editor's Note: Letters to the Ram's Horn may be left with the telephone operator in Science Hall or in The Guardsman office, Room 304, Science Hall. Deadlines are 10 a.m. each Wednesday. It so desired the author's name will be withheld, but the identity of the author must be known to the editor.)

● The 'O' Was Right?

Editor, The Guardsman:

Fully realizing that this college is referred to as CCSF (Mr. Nelson, please note) and that the correct abbreviation of the Associated Students of this pillar of learning is ASCCSF (Typographer, please note), may I respectfully request that "Letters to the Editor" also be correctly quoted.

The entire point of my particular letter which appeared in the last issue of The Guardsman was to clear up the "burning issue" of my age (which, as we all realize, is of far greater importance to SFCC—oops!—than any "fault," "misspelling," or "midterms").

Unfortunately, instead of accurately reprinting my letter (a copy of which has been sent to the Library of Congress) as "Chronologically, I'm only 30," the quote appeared as "over 30."

Therefore, from this moment on, my "stock" answer will be: "I will be 40 . . ." which is the safest reply, because all of us students can make this statement. (KHRUSHCHEV, PLEASE NOTE!!)

Ramporium Urges Early Book Resale

Students wishing to sell books back to the Ramporium are advised by Dick Main, store manager, to do so at the end of the spring semester, and not wait until the beginning of next.

The Ramporium orders all books needed for the coming semester at the end of each previous session. Hence, when students try to sell books back at the start of the semester there is no need for them.

No book will be repurchased that is very badly underlined or is in extremely poor condition, Main said.

Books that have been dropped from use are at times bought by the Ramporium if it is possible to resell them.

Siska Upsets Edlefsen To Lead Netters To Big 8 Championship

Ram Ace Plays 'Best Game' To Whip T-Bird, 6-3, 6-4

By David Kleinberg

Bob Siska topped a near perfect season by upsetting previously undefeated Oaklander Tom Edlefsen, 6-3, 6-4, to win the singles title and lead the Rams to an easy Big Eight Conference tennis championship Friday and Saturday at Golden Gate Park.

The 19-year-old Siska, who suffered his only league loss to Edlefsen, 6-0, 6-0, earlier this year, teamed with Ed Jilka to down Edlefsen and Mike Lee, 6-2, 8-6, to capture the doubles crown.

TENNIS COACH, Roy Diederichsen, again exercised his coaching genius by leading his charges to another conference championship.

The netters, who finished the season undefeated by trouncing Sacramento, 7-0, last Wednesday, scored 14 points to runner-up Oakland's 6. The other scores were Modesto 5, San Mateo 3, Stockton 1, Santa Rosa 1.

A jubilant coach Roy Diederichsen, who earlier had felt Siska was one of his best players ever, said after the match, "He's the best we've ever had. After this, how can you say differently. He proved himself today.

"I was very surprised. It's the best I've ever seen him play. He caught Edlefsen by surprise in the first set, and Edlefsen couldn't come back. Bob's volleys were terrific. I suspected we would win the doubles."

"This was the most satisfying win of the year," the impeccable Siska offered. "I was never sure I was going to win. You can never be sure until the last point. There's always the possibility, and Edlefsen's tough."

Most observers felt it was Siska's aggressive net play that threw Edlefsen off balance. "He moved in and so did I. I guess I just moved in a little better," the ex-Junior Davis Cupper said.

The doubles win was also an upset. Siska and Jilka had defeated the Oakland pair in league play, but the Thunderbirds' Lee did not play with Edlefsen in that match.

In the semifinal match, Modesto's tough veteran Ryder Getz pressed Siska to a third set before falling, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

The Rams' other doubles team of Jack Kern and Rich Anderson got to the semifinals before bowing to the Edlefsen-Lee combo, 6-3, 6-4.

Big Eight Circuit Ends Next Month

In approximately four weeks the Big Eight Conference will be disbanded and in its place will appear a new and athletically tougher one, the Golden Gate Conference.

Following an agreement released last fall by Karl Drexel of the State Junior College Athletic Association, four Bay Area colleges, City College of San Francisco, Oakland City College, College of San Mateo and Contra Costa City College, will retain conference competition when the Big Eight exits in June.

These four will be joined by Diablo Valley College, San Jose City College, Foothill College and newly established Chabot City College to form the new Golden Gate Conference.

Expansion and revision of the league is expected to cut down on long road trips for the sports squads as they will not have to make the road trips to Sacramento or Stockton.

This one league revision is just part of a state-wide movement to align various colleges according to size, distance and enrollment.

A general consensus of the coaching staff here reveals that especially with the addition of Foothill College and San Jose City College over-all competition will be tougher and the league more balanced.

Windell To Speak At Block SF Banquet

Paul Windell, basketball coach at San Francisco State College, is scheduled to speak at the semi-annual Block SF Society awards banquet Monday, June 4, in Smith Hall, according to Louis Vasquez, society sponsor.

Although it was announced earlier that Howie Dallmar, Stanford basketball coach, would speak at the banquet, previous commitments foreed him to cancel this engagement.

The banquet will honor spring semester sports participants in soccer, basketball, swimming, golf, baseball, tennis and track. Trophies, medals and special awards will be made.

Because they are the state champions, the basketball team will be presented with team jackets and individual awards.

There is also a probability that the undefeated soccer team will receive special recognition, along with the tennis team which has also gone undefeated.

Last year's speaker was Bob St. Clair, star San Francisco 49er tackle.

Eleven Athletes Nominated For Hall Of Fame

Three football, three track, two baseball, two basketball players and one swimmer have been nominated for the City College sports Hall of Fame. Two of the 11 will be voted in this week.

In football three linemen, George Pedrin, Jerry James and Dick Stanfel, were nominated.

Pedrin, guard in 1935, was, according to athletic director Jack Gaddy, "Probably the best guard who ever played here."

James, a 250-pounder who was an All-Conference guard in 1954 and would probably have repeated in '55 except for an injury, was nominated along with Dick Stanfel, who went on to play professional football with the Washington Redskins and the Detroit Lions.

Bob Bandettini, centerfielder and relief pitcher, won or saved eight contests while leading the Rams to the State baseball championships in 1956. Counselor Bill Fischer, then Bandettini's coach, feels Bandettini's nomination is based on the opinion that he was the best all-around ball player Fischer ever coached. "The team would never have gone to the championship without his efforts."

The other baseball nominee, Stan Johnson, played centerfield in 1953, batted .365 and had such a strong arm that he was frequently used in relief.

Mike Lewis, state two-year college shot put champion; Wilfred Gasper, second in pole vault and high jump in the State Meet, and Paul Patton, holder of the college mile, two-mile and cross country records, are all nominees from the 1958 track squad.

Cleo Cofield, All-Big Eight cager and the Rams' leading scorer for two straight seasons, and Bob Tealer, who set a single-game scoring record with 46 points in the 1957 State Tournament, were the hoopsters nominated.

Rod Ludquist, the college's first All-American swimmer, who swam the 220 and 440 freestyle in 1952, was nominated by swimming coach Roy Burkhead.

To be eligible for the award, the highest possible one an athlete can receive here, a player must have participated in his sport for at least one semester and must have been graduated for at least a year.

A mentor must have coached here for five years and must presently be retired.

Nominations will be given to judges Dean Ralph Hillsman, Fischer, Tom Wilson and Gaddy.

Of the 24 already named to the Hall of Fame, probably the most outstanding has been the fabulous Ollie Matson who led the Rams to a title and bowl victory in 1947.

Last year's winners were Jim Watson, tennis, and boxer Frank Sueuga.

Rams, Cubs Tangle In Season's Finale

With everything to gain and nothing to lose, the Ram baseball squad travels to Santa Rosa Friday to take on the Bear Cubs in its final Big Eight game of the season.

This will be the final game between the two teams as Santa Rosa is one of the four teams departing from the Big Eight Conference at the end of this season when the new Golden Gate League will start.

Coach Lee Eisan's charges have experienced a below-par season as they have a 3-9 win-loss record. Weak hitting and a shallow pitching staff have contributed to the poor record.

Defense, thought to be the main forte, collapsed as the locals have averaged three costly errors per game.

Jim Carroll and Bill Hynes are currently leading the team in batting with averages of .303 and .300 respectively. These are the only two regulars batting above .300.

Trackmen Lose First Big 8 Title In 4 Years

College of San Mateo terminated City College's four-year reign on the Big Eight track throne by concentrating on the distant runs to roll up 108 points and win the conference meet Saturday at Sacramento.

The Rams, once again led by the heroic efforts of Alex Darnes and Lon Brantley, scored 102.

The unbeaten Darnes, who has yet to throw past 165 feet since his national record-breaking 173-3 last month, tossed 159-11; not good for him, but good enough to win and break the old Big Eight mark of 154-2¼.

Brantley, who came within seven inches of breaking the college broad jump record in his last outing at Fresno, settled for 23-8 and a first.

George Holland backed him with a second at 22-8, and Herb Briscoe added another two points by placing fourth at 22-0¼ as the Rams scored nine points in their strongest event.

The Rams, with Rich Byers grabbing a second and Steve Jackson a surprising third, scored seven points in the two-mile.

The spikers will compete Saturday in the West Coast Relays at Fresno.

Baseballers Split Two

John Pearce went the distance surrendering four hits to pitch the Rams to a 3-2 win in the nightcap of a double-header after the college dropped the opener, 7-6, Saturday at Sacramento. The baseballers' record is 3-9. Earlier in the week, Contra Costa trounced the college, 21-5.

Golfers End Year, 6-2

With John Steddin firing a two-under-par 70, his best round of the year, the golfers edged Sacramento to close the season with a 6-2 record Friday at Bing Maione Club in Sacramento

IFC League Teams To Vie For AMS Smoker Playoff Berth In Intra Play Tonight

Because of the Associated Student open nomination convention last Wednesday night, the final Inter-Fraternity Council league intramural basketball games were postponed and will be played tonight.

Alpha Sigma Delta will clash with Beta Tau in the 7:15 game in the men's gymnasium, while in the 8:15 game Zeta Phi Sigma will go against Gamma Phi Ypsilon. This last round will determine the top team in the IFC league. The winner will go against the Inter-Club league winner at the May 25 Associated Men Student Smoker.

Featured on the same card with the championship intramural game will be the traditional boxing matches put on by boxing coach Roy Diederichsen.

The IFC league, as a whole, looks better than last year's league, being generally stronger in all departments than the Club league, Jack Gaddy, faculty intramural sports coordinator, commented.

However, Gaddy noted that the top team in either league looks to be the highly touted Collegiate Five, who are so far tied with the hard charging Divine Ones for first place in Club standings.

Action in the Inter-Club League on May 1 was limited to one game, as the CC's and the H&R team forfeited to the Newman Club and the Campus Police, respectively.

The only game played that night, in the fifth round of club competition, was that of the Divine Ones against the Filipino Club.

The fast-breaking Divine Ones charged through the Islander's ragged defense to rack up an impressive 88-31 victory.

Final Foil Meet Set For Saturday

In the fourth and final Intercollegiate Fencing Association tournament this Saturday, the college's fencing teams will compete with teams from 13 other colleges in the men's gymnasium.

Fencing for San Francisco on the men's team will be Captain Harry Jorgensen, co-captain Bill Lindo, Bob Lawrence and Stuart Funke, while Captain Carolyn Diaz and Jennifer Renauld will fence on the women's team.

In the three previous IFA competitions, fencing team members Jorgensen, Lindo, Lawrence and Funke have taken one first place finish and two second place spots.

Next Wednesday, May 16, Jessie Willis, David Hoffman and two other fencers will compete against five local high school teams and one from Clayton Valley High School of Concord. Site of the competition is the men's gymnasium.

Netters Send Four To State Tourney Friday, Saturday

Because of a Big Eight Conference rule, Coach Roy Diederichsen will only be able to bring his top four men to participate in the individual Northern California two-year college tennis championships this Friday and Saturday at Monterey.

Bob Siska, former Junior Davis Cupper will lead the championship Rams as one of the top contenders for individual laurels in the highly competitive elimination matches.

Other racqueteers who will give the Rams good balance in the collective team scoring are Jack Kern, Ed Jilka and Rich Anderson.

Four leagues will be represented in the championship. The Golden Valley, Coast Conference, Central Valley and the Big Eight will be testing abilities and skills.

Boasting a 7-0 record and a championship in the Big Eight Conference, the college team will be a tough match for anyone in the two-day championship.

According to Diederichsen, top individuals in the matches in order of ability will be Tom Edlefson of Oakland City College, Siska, Ron Priesman of Menlo, Ryder Getz of Modesto, Leon Muyberg of Menlo and Rich Perez of Hartnell.

In the doubles matches, the locals have Siska and Jilka in number one and Anderson and Kern in number two.

The Rams have already proved their strength against such tough opponents as Oakland and the University of California frosh.

The vastly improved Jilka possesses one of the best overhand strokes in the area, while Anderson, who has only been playing tennis for 19 months is known for his all-around play.

Rounding out the traveling squad for the championship matches will be Kern. "He is a fast-improving and rising player," Diederichsen said.

Diederichsen, who has a genius for producing championship squads, was also the coach of the first-place soccer team in the fall.

RAMBLINGS

Pachyderm Ramble To Be Tons Of Fun

By Jerry Littrell

CITY COLLEGE of San Francisco is usually under constant attack from various persons about an apparent lack of college spirit. It is a problem not native to this college, however.

Orange Coast State College recently had a similar problem but found quite an unusual method for solving it. The solution involved an attempt to organize an Elephant Race.

In a nutshell this is the answer to our problem of apathy. Let us agree that students here are tired of the same old routine sports of football and soccer and that the time has come for a change.

A committee could be formed to investigate possibilities for success of such a venture. The first point that might be considered is, "Who would compete in these races?" Mahouts could come from all over the world.

Invitations might be sent to universities throughout the world. A minimum of 10 colleges might be invited to this campus FIRST.

Elephants could be rented from perhaps a local source or, if the participants wanted to, they could ship their own mounts. The cost of renting these animals could be deducted from the gate receipts.

Probably the biggest problem would be where the race would be held. Three times around Smith Hall would provide a fairly centralized location but would not afford the distance needed to attain top speed.

The starting line could be the court flagpole. From there the line of march (race) would be down the hill, around the arts building, down Phelan Avenue, across the practice football field, twice around the Ingleside Police Station, ending at the men's gymnasium.

The publicity alone would be well worth the effort of putting on this race. Dignitaries and officials from all over the world would come to our own City College of San Francisco to witness this FIRST. Where else in the world could anyone see something to equal this.

Even Ben Hur's famed chariot race scene would be trivial in magnitude.

Undoubtedly there would be problems. Think of the anguished look of the gardners as they watched 40 tons of runaway meat trampling over the campus greens.

Of the feeling an Anthropology 10 student would have when he awoke from a slight slumber during a lecture on prehistoric animals to see a mammoth bulk trotting past the classroom window.

The two-mile Tusk Trot or the marathon four-mile Pachyderm Ramble would enliven student spirit of an otherwise apathetic student body.

Well, has anything else worked?

Employers Screen Recruits Today; Peace Corps Reaps Fest Fund Share

Businessmen Hear Packard Before Talent Search Starts

Forty-five industry and government teams, representing some of the leading employer groups in Northern California, visit the campus today to participate in the college's seventh annual Recruitment Day.

Led by David Packard, president of Hewlett-Packard Company of Palo Alto, who will address the employer and college staff at 8:30 a.m. in Smith Hall, the recruitment teams bring the largest group of talent searchers in the history of the college. Sixty-five individual personal interviewers and specialists will interview graduates from the 35 training programs.

In the past, two separate recruitment days have been held, one for the business program and a second for engineering and other related technical areas. The present Recruitment Day combines all of the training programs into one unified project.

At this meeting, employers will be given the opportunity of interviewing in all occupational areas to meet their many personal needs.

The decision to stage the program in this way, Joseph A. Amori, placement director, said, was based on the returns of a business, industry and government survey, which showed that greater returns would result from a combined recruitment day.

Preliminary surveys of business, industry and government indicate severe personal shortages in many fields. Unlike last year when many engineering-technician students had great difficulty in obtaining jobs, this year's qualified graduates from the engineering fields will have many good job offerings in a wide range of industries.

Commenting on today's program, Amori said, "The electronics technician is still the man of the hour, while the woman of the hour is the executive secretary."

The recruitment program begins at 8 a.m. in the faculty dining room, where breakfast will be prepared and served by the hotel and restaurant management majors.

The participants, guests and college staff members will be welcomed by Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, and Dr. Harold Spears, superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools.

Packard represents the employer groups and will make his ten-minute speech on behalf of the recruitment teams.

Amori will serve as Recruitment Day chairman and will outline the procedures that will be followed by all recruiters in the conducting of interviews.

George Steward, business department representative; Mike Aggeler, engineering department representative; Louis G. Batmale, dean of instruction, and the special field advisers worked jointly with the placement center in the planning of today's recruitment program.

DAVID PACKARD, cofoundar and president of Hewlett-Packard Company, speaks in Smith Hall for Business Recruitment Day today. He is a graduate of Stanford University and has served on the Board of Trustees since 1954. Packard also holds four patents and has several pending in the field of electronics and measurements.

Contract Signed For Statler Fund

Contracts, which mark acceptance of $100,000 for the college's hotel and restaurant department, have been signed with the Statler Foundation, Dean Louis Batmale announced recently.

The gift was contingent on the H&R and allied industries raising an additional fund of $50,000.

Of this amount, alumni raised $7500 and H&R students together with their families have given approximately $3200, "Something of which we are extremely proud," Batmale emphasized.

Plans are now in the process of being drawn for the annex to Smith Hall, which will open in early 1964, he added.

The annex will have an upstairs study hall which will accommodate a large number of the general student body. The hall will have tables, chairs and other facilities for students to eat lunch.

Downstairs will be a library and lecture demonstration hall.

Colombian Unit To Benefit From COO Event Friday

By John Silva

Council of Organizations' most colorful event of the year, the Spring Festival, will be held in Smith Hall from 7 to 11 p.m. Friday, Ed Pawlus, COO president, disclosed last week.

Establishing a two-year college precedent, COO will donate portions of the Spring Festival profits to the Peace Corps, Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, said.

He stated that COO agreed to use the Peace Corps as the Spring Festival theme and that funds from festival activities will be donated to the Peace Corps in Colombia, South America.

"This project, urging that junior colleges consider supporting the Peace Corps, was voiced at the California Junior College Student Government state conference held at Los Angeles last month," Hillsman added.

Regarding the Peace Corps proposal, Pawlus said, "This is a very good idea. A committee will be appointed to look into this."

All students are invited to bring their parents to the festival, Pawlus stated, adding that an admission of 10 cents will be charged with the possession of a registration card.

The COO president emphasized that students should accompany their guests at the admission area.

"All festival games played will be games of skill and not of chance," he said. No money will be exchanged at the booths; instead, tickets will be sold for 10 cents each to persons who may then in turn present them to individuals managing booths."

Twenty - one COO organizations, Pawlus said, are expected to manage 21 eight-foot booths in which games will be played and prizes awarded.

He added that cafeteria manager John W. Dunn is scheduled to direct a dance band at the event, comprised of students here.

Decorations for the hall include colorful streamers, balloons and posters which will embellish the booths set up along the walls in the fountain area of Smith Hall, Pawlus reported.

He said that dress for the occasion is casual sports' attire.

ED PAWLUS, COO president, announces the new procedure of turning a percentage of Spring Festival profits over to the Peace Corps.

Presidential Candidates Stage TV Debate At Noon

Two closed circuit television sets in Cloud Circle will carry a debate between Bill May and Dave Otey, Associated Student presidential candidates, at 12 noon today, AS President Dan Collins stated.

Each will begin with a five to eight-minute statement, then each will be given time to refute the other. A panel of five will question the two candidates on their views.

Collins reminded students that non-AS cardholders are free to vote on May 23 and 24.

Choral Groups Ready For Annual Recital Tuesday

Choral classes have been preparing all semester for their annual Spring Concert to be held at 8 p.m. next Tuesday in the theater, according to Galen Marshall, director of the A Cappella Choir and the Men's Glee.

Highlight of the evening will be the entire Mozart Coronation Mass. The 30-minute piece will feature four soloists, Charlotte Smith, Sandra Martin, Tom Brocker and Wayne Redus, soprano, alto, tenor and bass, respectively.

The contemporary composer, B. Martino, will be represented by his three Czech madrigals. The choir also offers three Songs of Morning by Bach.

Bach, Thompson and Schubert will be the Men's Glee offering as well as two spirited folk songs, Good Fellows Be Merry and Bonnie Eloise.

The third group to participate in the concert is the Treble Clef, under the direction of Richard Fenner. The women's group was re-established last semester after several years' abscnee.

Programming is aimed toward variety for academic purposes and to maintain audience interest. This accounts for the presentation of selections as formal as the Mozart Mass and as informal as a folk song, Marshall said.

This concert will be taped just as other musical events have been in the past, he said. The tapes contribute to a growing music library which can be used for instruction or entertainment by other campus groups.

Part of the program was performed at Vacaville prison, which recently had its own spring choral performance. It was the prison's third concert and the second one in which the college participated.

The groups are clubs as well as classes and consequently perform in off-campus programs such as the prison festival.

After Tuesday night's show, parts of the performance will again be repeated in a College Hour concert June 1. The Friday series of musical presentations will culminate this semester with the choral offerings.

Slides, Tapes To Tell Story Of Center For Blind Friday In C-Hour

Standing room only may be the case in S-100 this Friday during College Hour when Alpha Gamma Sigma presents Doorway To Opportunity, according to AGS President Ron Hennessey.

By slides and taped narration, the audience will be taken on a tour through the Oakland Orientation Center for the Blind, which in years has returned more than 400 blind persons to normal and productive lives.

The center, which is the only school of its kind in the western United States, teaches skills of travel training, using only a long cane with no assistance from the sighted while crossing streets; and also training in the use of standard power tools which include no special safety devices.

The blind students get their first indication of the confidence and success within their reach when they discover that the administrator of the center is totally blind himself. In addition, three of the instructors on the staff of seven are also blind.

This success story of the Oakland Orientation Center was filmed and narrated by Harry Cordellos, a student here and an alumnus of this training center.

"The slide and tape program," Cordellos said, "is just one way of saying thank you to the outstanding staff of the center for a job well done."

Following the recent preview of the slides held at the Oakland Center and after earlier announcements of the program, AGS President Hennessey stated that there will probably be a capacity crowd in S-100 this Friday.

Since there is a full program planned, it will be necessary to begin promptly at 10 a.m., he added, inviting all students to attend.

Orchestra, Band Present Annual Spring Concert

Performing during College Hour this Friday in the theater, the college's chamber orchestra and concert band will present their ninth annual spring concert, Meyer Cahn, instrumental music director, announced today.

The repertoire will consist of 18th, 19th and 20th century works from Rumania, the Slavic areas and Spain, in addition to the United States, Cahn added.

Theme of the program is works derived from folk material.

This is the first time that the orchestra outnumbers the band. According to Cahn, the ratio is about 28 to 25.

On the program will be a Rumanian Rhapsody based on old folk songs and dances, in addition to selected materials from the other countries.

Keith Wagner, in his fourth semester with the college's orchestra, will perform a clarinet solo. Jan Rhodes is the concert mistress and soloist of the orchestra. She will also take part in this Friday's program.

To accommodate anticipated crowds, the show will be transmitted into the choral room, A-133, via closed-circuit television.

The college's combined orchestra and band is also scheduled to play at commencement ceremonies in the stadium on Thursday, June 7.

The program this Friday will be similar to the one presented May 8 when four other two-year colleges participated in a special instrumental festival here.

Cahn remarked that he is pleased with the response given the College Hour concerts, and he hopes the same will continue through the rest of this semester and into next fall, when a new concert series will be scheduled.

Past concerts have played repeatedly to packed theaters, making it often necessary to turn away hundreds of students.

Don Constine To Speak At Prep Day Tomorrow

Donald B. Constine, City College graduate and now San Francisco's United States Commissioner, will return to the college tomorrow as the keynote speaker at Prep Day, Associated Student Vice President Suzanne Murphy confirmed today.

When he took over the new post on January 2, 1961, he became one of six full-time United States Commissioners in the nation today.

Following his education at City College, he entered the Hastings School of Law.

While an assistant U. S. attorney, Constine is believed to have handled more bank robbery cases than any other man in that position in the nation.

Under the editorship of Constine, the Spring 1945 volume of The Guardsman was judged All-American by the Associated Collegiate Press.

Five students from each of the seven San Francisco public high schools, Lowell, Washington, Lincoln, Galileo, Mission, Balboa and Polytechnic, are expected to attend Prep Day this year. Principals of each school have also been invited, Miss Murphy added.

Unlike previous years, invitations were sent to the schools requesting that students attend this Prep Day who have shown a definite interest in enrolling here next fall. In past semesters, this procedure was not followed.

The assembly will be greeted at 9 a.m. in Smith Hall by AS officers and members of the administration here. A guided tour of the campus will follow with guests divided into several groups.

Major departments around the campus will be visited.

At noon, a luncheon will be served in the faculty dining room to the guests. At this time, Constine will deliver his address.

Purpose of the day is to help promote goodwill between high school students and the faculty and students of City College, according to Miss Murphy, who is aided in this project by cochairman Pat Nelder.

Pledges Better Know George Washington's Relatives

By Edy Grant

Only seven out of 69 two-year colleges in California offer sororities. After seeing what a pledge must go through to enter, it's easy to see why.

A major feature of pledge—or "torture week"—is the demerit system. Demerits are issued for smoking, neatness, singing, kinging, cockiness and memory.

One sorority pledge's natural response, when a fraternity man asked her if she wanted some coffee, was, "No, thank you," which earned her five demerits for kinging, the process of talking to a man without permission.

On receiving demerits for kinging, Jean Shirley, a Phi Beta Rho pledge, remarked, "One of the most maddening and absolutely frustrating things about pledge week was not being able to talk back to those cocky fraternity men."

Memory demerits are given to pledges for forgetting to address the sisters as Miss, for not pronouncing or spelling a sister's name correctly, for not knowing the Greek alphabet by heart, or for not having memorized their spiels.

In other words, if you don't know George Washington's third sister's son-in-law's middle name, you'd better watch out.

Confusing pledges is a common practice of the sisters. Purposely, she might ask a pledge if she would like a demerit. If she answers yes, then the sister is happy to oblige. But if she answers no, the sister grants her demerits for being cocky.

Most pledges agree that demerits should mean more than they actually do since they all have to do the same amount of work to remove them. They feel that they are given out right and left without any real significance behind them.

In most cases they are right, but occasionally they are levied for real offenses.

As Claudette Stickles, another Phi Beta Rho pledge, stated, "Demerits sometimes are not given out for real offenses, but once 2000 were given out for 'kidnapping' a sister."

Pledge week finds the pledges singing at 7:30 each morning in Smith Hall. Proposing to the fraternity brothers, who just love to hear the pledges' qualifications, is one of the stunts they must perform.

To annoy the pledges, one sorority staged a kidnap. The kidnapped pledges were taken to Fisherman's Wharf and were forced to sell tissue paper covered with peanut butter and salmon eggs for a penny per cut.

Only after selling 10 cuts each were they allowed to retire.

Pledges are not sorry for the hectic times they go through, because they realize that the sisters are only trying to gain respect.

Arlene Di Fiore, who pledged Delta Psi, said, "It was a lot to go through, and I am happy it is over, but it was worth it, because I have made many new friends with similar interests."

Another pledge commented, "It was one big mad rush, but now that I will soon be an official member, I am glad to have the opportunity to socially get to know the people at the college better."

A pledge needs the majority vote of active members to obtain membership. To qualify the pledge must carry 12½ units with at least a two-point grade average.

Approximately 180 women out of 2000 here are in sororities. Each woman applicant will definitely be accepted, but not necessarily by the sorority of her first choice.

During interrogation, which begins pledge week, sorority sisters emphasize the point that pledges should not only be interested in social activities.

Sororities also exist for the purpose of developing college spirit by rendering service to the campus.

Could John Glenn withstand such rigors and still keep smiling?

Exchange Of Ideas With Others Broadens Student Understanding

STUDENTS who come to college, attend their classes, and return to their homes miss a most important part of their education.

That is, a broadening of one's understanding of various social, political, philosophical, esthetic or other concepts, theories or beliefs held by other individuals.

In short, it is finding out what other people think.

For many, college will be the last social melting pot into which they will be mixed.

This is particularly true of females who, not necessarily but all too often, get married either before or shortly after finishing their college education, and their world promptly shrinks to extend not much farther than the corner supermarket.

But men and women who stay single are not definitely destined to be worldly-wise and sophisticated, for in many jobs a person rarely has the opportunity to be in personal contact with people whose interests differ much from his own.

Men, however, have a "second chance," for most of them will serve in the armed forces at some time, where they will be thrown together with other men with complete disrgard to origin or interest.

But one who spends two, four or more years gaining his higher education only to discover a complete incomprehension of what is meant by "right" or "left wing," or a blanket dislike for art which is not done in a photographic style, might well assume that, because of his studies in his major, he was not able to "fool" with the courses dealing with those other subjects.

The fact is that these subjects don't appear on the schedule, although they can be learned at the college.

The students here have come from all walks of life. There are veterans, both military and civilian. That is, many have spent a number of years working for their living before returning to complete their education.

They can explain, for instance, what is needed to get along with an employer or what kind of irritations may be encountered in any occupation. And, in the form of a "sea story" (first-hand experience), it can be very interesting listening.

A student might learn from one of the many foreign students here an opinion on just why his country reacted a certain way to a United States policy.

Whether one is compatible with them or not there is something to be learned from the egotist, the beatnik, the athlete, the introvert and anyone else.

For people are life, and life is people.

'Hi, Cuz'
Motor Scooter Caper Brings Kin Together

The Campus Police department recently encountered one of its strangest capers in the arts building parking lots.

It began when Thomas Cain, campus policeman, sauntered over to a brand new motor scooter parked illegally.

To his dismay, Cain saw that the scooter also had no license plate, no registration card and no parking permit.

So he promptly wheeled it over to the Campus Police station and told Police Chief Lewis Pollack of the apparently abandoned motor scooter.

Pollack telephoned officers at Ingleside police station, and they sent a man over with a tow truck to take the scooter away and impound it.

Later that day when the owner of the scooter, Mike Cooper, was found, he explained to campus policemen that the wind must have blown the paper license plate off the side of his new scooter.

The policemen then escorted him to Pollack's office where he looked at Pollack and said, "Hi."

"Hi," said Pollack.

"Who's he?" asked one of the policemen.

"He's my cousin," replied Pollack.

Dogs and Cats 'Kick Bucket' In Top Style

When dogs and cats pass away, the pitiful little creatures pass away in style—thanks to a student here.

Joseph A. Amori, placement director, said that last week a student here applied for a job calling for two main qualifications:

1. That the applicant love animals;
2. That the applicant be mechanically inclined.

"Now," said Amori, "he builds caskets for dogs and cats at Colma."

One can almost picture those little pathetic pets, lying in their little velvet-lined caskets with their little paws crossed and their little toenails trimmed neatly.

This student earns $2.50 an hour for his "dogged" labors, and "he is doing just fine," said Amori.

What Excuse Do You Give When Refusing A Date?

By R. D. Hacker and Harry Cordellos

Normally, if I don't like a fellow he will usually know it, but if I do have to make up an excuse, I say that I have to baby-sit or that I am going out with my parents to dinner. Sometimes I just say that I'm very sorry but I have another date.

Sharon Funke, freshman:

It depends on the circumstance. I don't say that I am sick, because if I do decide to go out it would be very embarrassing to meet the boy whom I had refused. Sometimes I will say that I am going out with my parents to the country for the weekend.

Terry Lively, freshman:

If someone I don't want to go out with calls, I say that I have another date. If he is persistent enough, I might go out with him to see what he is like. I wouldn't break a date with one fellow to go out with another, and I never say that I am sick, unless I really am.

Pat Hassman, freshman:

"I have something else planned" is the usual answer I give to someone I don't want to go out with. I just don't feel like going out, or I am too tired to go out are other answers that I give. I try to be as nice as I can when I tell a boy no.

PAT BENNETT

"If I need an excuse, I say that I have to baby-sit or that I am going out with my parents."

Barbara Reiss, freshman:

Saying that I have too much homework is a good excuse. I never tell a boy that I just don't want to go out with him—it would hurt his feelings. Most of the time I will say that I have another date or that I have made other plans.

According to Emily Post a girl is supposed to say that she has made other plans, but sometimes I just say that I have another date. I don't say that I am sick, and if the boy is too persistent, and keeps calling, I just tell him that I don't want to go out with him.

Lila Diamond, freshman:

I might say that I am sick, but if I do, I wouldn't go out if I were asked later. There might be a chance that I would meet the boy to whom I had said no. I usually stick to the old saying that I have made other plans, or that I'm just busy.

Mary Jane Flynn, sophomore:

The best excuse that I can give is that I'm engaged—because I am. Before I became engaged, I used to say I had another date or that I was going out with my parents. Sometimes I would just say I had other plans, or that I was busy with homework.

Amos Ant Too Old To Compete With Andy

By Dave Kleinberg

AS TWO ANTS galloped across the top of a cereal box, the first, Amos Ant, hollered for the second to slow down.

Panting and out of breath, Amos Ant continued, "You know I can't keep up with that pace. I'm not as young as I used to be. What are you going so fast for?"

"I'm just following instructions," retorted Andy Ant. "It says, 'Tear on dotted line.'"

WOMEN who are watching their weight (and which women aren't) have a new slogan to replace the old "Battle of the Bulge" and "36-22-36 or fight."

The new campaign march is "Think Thin."

It comes in handy. Men, next time you take your steady to dinner, give her a malevolent look and utter, "Think Thin."

It saves money.

• • •

THERE ONCE was a connoisseur who saved money. Being a wine taster, of course, it wasn't think thin. (It was, probably, think gin.)

His tasters were so delicate, that he could not only tell you what year wine he had sipped, but the names of the people who stomped on its grapes.

SCRIBBLED on a sign at the northeast end of the campus were the words, "Ban the Bomb."

A few days later the ban was erased and substituted was the word, "Drop." "Drop the Bomb" and "Ban the Bomb" are two thoughts directly opposite from each other—and on what kind of sign were the two thoughts?

One Way.

AS A STUDENT walked up from the parking lot, he shook his head and complained about the many tickets he had received for driving the wrong way on one-way streets.

He says it's not his fault. "I've been at City College so long that my car window is completely cluttered with college parking permits and I can't see out the window."

The Spectator
Jepson Writes, And S.F. Burns

Anna Papagni

THOSE who attend the spring choral concert next Tuesday evening in the campus theater will notice a red-haired young man, who accompanies the singers, seated at a piano.

Warner Jepson looks very much like a musician. His face is sensitive, with eyes that glance nervously but vacantly from behind dark-rimmed glasses. He is tall and not quite too thin and usually wears a tweed jacket and tennis shoes.

He was graduated from the Conservatory of Music at Oberlin College in Ohio and is presently employed here to play for the choral and dance classes, but Jepson insists quietly that he is not really a musician.

He is anything that he happens to be doing at the moment, and that might be painting, sculptoring, or working in photography. Be that as it may, it is in music that he has distinguished himself, namely by writing the songs for a ballad opera, San Francisco's Burning.

The musical is an original little theater production which involves a group of colorful people from the two extremes of San Francisco society in a 1906 background—Barbary Coast ruffians and the Nob Hill social set.

The show opened at the Playhouse on December 15 of last year and was greeted enthusiastically by critics and audiences. It is now part of the Playhouse's tenth anniversary festival along with three other productions.

More than 40 songs are in the show, compared with an average of 15 that make up other musicals, Director Kermit Sheets explained. Jepson wrote the score off-and-on for a year, "... whenever I felt like it," he said.

He had written several songs for a previous Playhouse production, and in accepting the challenge to compose for San Francisco's Burning, Jepson drew upon resources he probably did not know he had, Sheets said, since it was his first major venture in the field.

KPFA will record the music, and meanwhile, Jepson and his colleagues are trying to sell the show to a New York producer. Other than this, he has no plans for the future. If he does, he's not telling.

He gives one-word answers to questions about himself and even then hesitates over the word. Soft-spoken Warner Jepson will talk at great length on Dostoyevsky, electronic music or the people with whom he works but is at a loss when the conversation turns to him.

His self-expression takes the form of a song, a painting, a picture or a form.

Voters Meet Candidates At Rally Friday

Bill May's Statement:

"Next semester the calendar of events in Student Council will be changed because the budgets for next fall are being passed now, and this will give the president for next semester a good chance to initiate new projects.

"This is one of the main reasons you will need a president who has experience and drive.

"I feel I am qualified because I have experience from being student body president at South San Francisco, president of the Engineering Society, a member of sophomore council, and chairman of the student-faculty relations committee, and I also have the drive. So vote for Bill May for AS president."

Nominees For Top AS Posts Issue Election Statements

Thirty-five candidates will be introduced to students at the College Hour election rally at the Ram Friday, as campaigning for the 20 elective Associated Student offices shifts into high gear with only one week remaining before the voters rush the polls on May 23 and 24.

Dan Collins, AS president, will introduce the candidates. Entertainment includes a group from the Men's Glee Club featuring Tony Boyadsis, Ray Paul, Stan Pappas and Al Davidson.

Candidates for the six executive offices will each give a one-minute speech. Because of time, candidates for council seats will only be introduced.

Election Commissioner Rick Aguilar made it clear that no political parties were to be formed before the convention, but following the convention, candidates are free to unite as long as they do not use names or initials of previously existing parties.

ASSOCIATED STUDENT PRESIDENT:

Bill May and Dave Otey, whose statements appear separately, are campaigning for the office of AS President.

VICE PRESIDENT:

Gail Margolin states, "It is the responsibility of the Vice President to help plan activities which will be of interest to the students and which will encourage their participation.

"I have been active in student government for three semesters and feel I have the necessary experience, interest and enthusiasm to fulfill the responsibilities required for the office of Vice President."

Laura Thurwell comments, "I am qualified for the office of Vice President because I have been active in every area of student government.

"If I am elected I will institute the following: 1) Better communications between the students and the Student Council through a Vice President bulletin. 2) Survey the opinions of the students on such things as the distribution sites of The Guardsman, and the placement of College Hour blackboards, etc. 3) In social committees, I will institute policies to keep the cost down on dances which are paid for by the Associated Students."

Rosalie Weiner hopes, if elected, "To carry out and set up a full social calendar for the fall semester. Other than this, I would have to wait to see who is elected to the presidency and to see if I am elected before it would be proper for me to state all that I hope to do.

"But most important of all I urge all students to vote this semester. Remember, no AS card is needed."

AMS PRESIDENT:

Jim Fuller brought forward the idea that "the increase of new students will necessitate experience in AMS and student government so that the AMS President can start immediately with the new students and Student Council in organizing a more effective AMS program.

"As an officer in the AMS this semester I have observed, first hand, the procedures and methods of effectively co-ordinating the AMS program."

Bob Righetti emphasized, "The road to hell is paved with good intentions. I will make no promises that I cannot keep. If I am elected I will bring the student body into student government. I will attempt to get the ideas of the majority and not just a minority.

"I know that all of the people cannot be pleased all of the time, yet I intend to try to please all of the people most of the time."

AWS PRESIDENT:

Susan Fitzpatrick is the only candidate for the AWS Presidency, so she is automatically elected. "Aside from the regular AWS activities planned for the fall semester will be an auction sponsored by the AWS.

"Highlighting my plans will be a Women's Day at the college. This will be a day when the women students take over all the administrative posts on campus."

FRESHMAN CLASS PRESIDENT:

Candidates for this office are Ben Rodriguez, Rich Thomas and Nick Zafranovich.

SOPHOMORE COUNCIL SEATS:

Twelve candidates are campaigning for the seven Sophomore seats on council: Sam Andrews, Mike Calderwood, Ed Cecil, Marcia Devlin, Rich Gray, John Hommes, Jane Kayser, Bill Miles, Harvey Samuels, Austin Thompson, Peggy thom-Wohrden and Paulette Walti.

FRESHMAN COUNCIL SEATS:

Only nine of the 16 nominees for Freshman seats on council have become candidates: Art Dassow, Katie Dwyer, Ernest Gash, Pete Montonen, Alan Poletti, Lernito Prudenciado, Tony Reyes and Walter Rice.

Dave Otey's Statement:

"Selecting officers is one of the most important responsibilities of the individual student in college. These officers will represent you throughout Fall '62. They are your voice to the faculty, administration and community.

"This semester, as a member of Student Council, I have found one factor in student government of paramount importance. The executive officer must exert leadership—a forward drive to meet problems that confront the student body.

"This leadership should be exerted in an effective, responsible manner. In short, the essential criterion is, responsible leadership.

"If elected as your Associated Student president for the fall semester, I will at all times strive to serve conscientiously, and to the best of my ability."

Oakland Center:—The Sightless Find Doorway To Independence

By Harry Cordellos

Celebrating its 10th anniversary this year, the Oakland Orientation Center for the Blind has been a doorway to opportunity for more than 400 blind persons.

Success has been the story of the Oakland Orientation Center for the Blind since its very beginning. When its doors opened in 1952, its first student, Johnny Clapper, was waiting on the steps.

Totally blind and in need of confidence and experience, Clapper made use of his time at the center. Today he operates two machine lathes simultaneously.

The Orientation Center has grown a great deal since it began with one student and two instructors. The current staff includes eight, four of whom are totally blind. One of these is the center administrator, Allen Jenkins.

Before the center was taken over by the state in 1951, it was a home for the aged blind. The present atmosphere and philosophy practiced there are the extreme opposite to what one would find at a rest home for the blind.

Confidence and enthusiasm replace the feelings of depression and defeatism. The students and faculty work as a team toward the solutions to the problems of blindness, rather than depending upon the sighted.

Students of the center find out that there is a great difference between wanting others to understand blindness and wanting them to sympathize with it, and also that there is a difference between accepting help, and demanding or expecting it.

The first problem that these people must face is accepting the fact that they are blind. In order that every student will learn on an equal basis, those with partial vision must wear black goggles or sleep shades during training. In this way, they will depend completely on the blind methods they learn.

The philosophy of the center, which has proven its value in numerous cases, is that there is no training as a blind person as long as one can see.

Many persons with partial vision have lost their sight completely after receiving their training as a blind person, and as a result of their experiences with the dark goggles have had no readjustments to make.

Onvia Tiger, a third grade teacher in San Lorenzo and a guest speaker here last fall, began teaching with partial vision after training at the Oakland Center. Although now totally blind, she is still teaching.

Her only interruption was to have an eye operation. Numerous other students have had similar experiences.

The conquering of fear at the Oakland Orientation Center is probably the most important factor. The skills develop as a result of the practice that is done by each individual.

Almost every student recalls the startling experiences in travel training, especially during the first few sessions. Cars seem to be coming straight at you and sidewalks seem anything but straight.

Gradually the fear of walking with a white cane and being seen with it disappear as each student realizes that he can travel safely and know that his cane will be a helpful tool.

Also unforgettable in the minds of most every student is the squealing of the radial arm saw and the other power tools in the shop. After a few times being around the tools and after learning to use them safely, though they have no special safety devices added to them, the fear of the noise is replaced by confidence which is the most important tool in the shop.

Many students who claim that they will never be able to travel with a cane, read Braille, operate power tools and so on, find themselves in a matter of a few weeks telling other new students how easy it is to learn and how interesting they have found it.

The confidence gained at the Oakland Orientation Center for the Blind is shown in the recreation enjoyed by these people. Socials are planned and put on by the students themselves. Though sighted people are welcome, they are not asked to help out with the serving of refreshments.

Confidence - building experiences such as these and others have meant successful employment in normal occupations for more than 40 per cent of the Orientation Center's alumni. Many others have gone on to college to further their education. Certainly, there are many women students who now perform all their normal duties as housewives.

The Oakland Orientation Center for the Blind will soon close out this chapter in its story of success, as a new highway will be taking over part of the property. Yet, a new chapter will soon begin as plans are going ahead for the relocation of the center.

LEONARD HAUZER gains skill and confidence in the use of standard power tools he cannot see.

'Dedication' Drives Council Into Unprecedented Sunday Session

It's called dedication!

Because of the cancellation of two meetings for Business and Prep Days, Associated Student President Dan Collins will call his Student Council to order in a special meeting at 7:30 p.m. this Sunday.

This action is necessitated because of limited time on which to act on next semester's budgets.

With budget action already begun, the council has processed the budgets for drama, dean of women, dean of men, executive expenses and the Freshman Class.

In addition, nominations were opened for the Freshman seats on council vacated by Terry Foulkes and Charles Miller. Those nominated were Ernest Gash, Imogene Walker and Richard Gray.

An emergency $200 was allocated to allow the golf team to attend the state championships next Monday.

The constitution underwent scrutiny after a report by Judy Gerstle, chairman of the constitutional revisions committee.

The council passed an amendment to give them the power to pass next semester's budget. The amendment will be voted on by the Associated Students at the next election.

An attempt was made to strengthen the Council of Organizations by insisting that the vice president or president be required to attend the meetings. This motion failed.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Collins noted that members of council seemed hesitant to assist candidates in the coming election.

Campus 'Coppers' Cop First In Pistol Match

Campus Police pistol squad won five first place plaques by defeating top Army, Navy and Marine marksmen at the Oakland Pistol Club matches at Knowland Park, Oakland, last week.

Fred Fitzgerald, gunnery coach here, said that the college's expert shooting team displayed superior marksmanship by defeating U. S. Coast Guard, S. F. Police, U. S. Navy and four other top ranking gunnery clubs.

Displaying similar shooting ability, he explained, was the college's marksman squad who also won first place plaques at the Oakland matches.

Campus policemen winning individual championship medals were Gerald De Geroiana, David Sheehan, Steven Thatcher and William Wilson.

Last month the pistol team competed at the California Rifle and Pistol Association's state championship matches at Fort Ord, California, where they defeated top statewide gunnery champions.

'Sentimental Spring' Theme For Soph Ball

Sentimental Spring is the theme, and the St. Francis Hotel is the setting for the semiannual Soph Ball Friday, June 1, Bob Anderson, Sophomore president, announced this week.

Walt Tolleson and his orchestra will provide the music for the 9 p.m. to midnight affair.

During the week of May 28, the King and Queen contest and the issuance of bids will take place.

The traditional penny-a-vote method of casting votes will be used to determine the winning candidates.

Bids for Sentimental Spring will be distributed at the silver pole.

Sponsors of the Soph Ball are Dorothy Hill and Lance Rogers.

Patrons of the ball are Sherm Elworthy, Mr. and Mrs. William Funke, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Hurd, Dean Mary Golding, Dean and Mrs. Ralph Hillsman.

The Good Ol' Daze—
Hi-Fi Addicts Spread 'Bug' ... Gesundheit

By Dave Grieve

KEEPING IN TUNE with the modern technical era are the not-to-be-outdone amateur hi-fidelity enthusiasts. As a hobby it is perhaps one of the more costly; as a character study it is undoubtedly one of the oddest and far-out cults.

Dedication is the symbol of these "bugs," searching relentlessly for new hootchamajiggers and whatchamacallets to transfer the harshness of the "naked" record to the human eardrum.

The enthusiast's humble domain resembles the den of some chaotic animal. We marvel aghast at the scarcity of furniture but abundance of wires, amplifiers, tuners, woofers, tweeters and turntables seemingly scattered but in reality strategically placed throughout the room.

This columnist imagines that Igorsky, our fictitious enthusiast, spends more time searching for perfection in sound quality than enjoying his inexhaustible record supply.

But nevertheless, Igorsky travels the windy road to financial doom by insuring a Cadillac and mansion for the owner of the local hi-fi shop.

With an assenting nod by his fellows, Igorsky places the diamond needle on his stereophonic recording of Brahms Fourth Symphony.

Some 60 minutes later a critical and heated discussion erupts, not about the symphony—but alas—about the dexterity of the sound reproducing apparatus.

It is not quite like the proud family setting of some years ago when the emphasis was placed on the record itself and not the equipment.

Remember the scene painted by RCA with the ideal family mystified by the victrola, and the corporation's canine mascot somewhere in the picture?

Termed by outsiders as a "wildfire" disease, the bug can spread from several sources.

For instance, a friend read an article in the enthusiast's monthly (achoo), absent-mindedly tuned KPEN on FM radio (gesundheit), and visited an in-law who, unnoticed, became a hi-fi addict (unnoticed in view of few and far between visits)—thank you.

Even good old Igorsky can remember the beginning, once a happily married man with only the sound of little feet pattering throughout his house.

Overnight it seems that he purchased his first hi-fi set. True, it was insignificant at first. He kept reminding himself of the thorough enjoyment of sedate music upon returning from work.

Stage darkens. New scene appears.

Igorsky always paid attention to minute detail. Yes—that's what his wife told him. "But this has gone too far." Yes—those also were her words.

Igorsky didn't touch reality again—poor lad. Perhaps his wife and family could stand the rigors of moving lock, stock and barrel into the garage.

But to add insult upon injury, when her unguided and sick-sick-sick husband turned the remainder of the house into a gigantic stereophonic ensemble with AM-FM radio including multiplex, she decided to leave the pieces on the floor and go.

Where are the good ol' daze?

Siska Again -- Netters Roll To NC Crown!

Championship Netters Enter State Title Meet

By John McShane

Based on their showing in the North Sectional championship, certain members of the Ram Big Eight title-holding tennis team will participate in the State Junior College championships Friday and Saturday at Long Beach.

Ram star Bob Siska could possibly be the top contender in the state-wide matches from the northern sector.

In the May 4-5 Big Eight Conference championships, Siska upset top-seeded Tom Edlefsen, 6-3, 6-4, to cop individual honors. Jim Moffat, Davis Cup selection committee man, remarked, "It was the best singles match I have seen Siska play in many years."

Edlefsen from Oakland City College will not particlpate in the state matches because of non-participation in the North Sectional championship. He eliminated himself in order to compete in the California State Tennis championships.

In the southern sector, such individual standbys as L. T. Brown of Santa Monica, Ron Carriedo of San Diego, semifinalist in the state championships last year who was defeated by Ryder Getz of Modesto, Wayne Collet of Santa Monica and Joe Suastaqui of Los Angeles Valley College will be tough opponents.

Collet played in the finals of the doubles team competition two years ago, losing to now nationally ranked Chris Crawford and Yoshi Minigeshi, number one man at Stanford this year.

According to Coach Roy Diederichsen's predictions, the locals will place first or second in the North Sectional and in the top four in the state. He posted Santa Monica as the logical favorite in the state competitions.

In a postseason match held May 7, the team continued its winning streak by bouncing the visiting University of British Columbia 8-1 on the Olympic Club courts.

Jack Kern, number two man on the Ram squad, lost to Canadian Dave Whitman, ranked number six on the Canadian two-year college level, 6-3, 6-4.

In summing up the season, Diederichsen pointed out that it is the best team he has ever coached.

The team—Siska, Kern, Ed Jilka, Rich Anderson, Rich Murray, Tom Strauss and Brian Harty—deserve a lot of credit for a job well done, Diederichsen added.

Diederichsen expects the full team to return next year with the addition of Gordon Miller of Washington High School, second best high school player in the city.

Final league standings:

	Won	Lost
1. San Francisco	7	0
2. Oakland	6	1
3. Stockton	5	2
4. San Mateo	4	3
5. Modesto	3	4
6. Santa Rosa	2	5
7. Contra Costa	1	6
8. Sacramento	0	7

Rams Grab Singles, Doubles Titles At Monterey Peninsula

By David Kleinberg

In a near repeat of last week's performance, tenacious Bob Siska won the single's title then came back with teammate Ed Jilka to capture the double's crown to lead the college to the Northern California Sectional tennis championship.

The Rams scored 10 to runnerup Menlo's six and Modesto's five last Friday and Saturday at Monterey Peninsula College.

The fabulous 19-year-old Siska, improving consistently with each match, knocked over Fresno's Bill Carroll, 6-1, 6-3, in the semifinals and then committed near holocaust on Modesto's Ryder Getz, 6-1, 6-1, to win the title.

It was the third straight time this year the ex-Junior Davis Cupper had downed Getz.

Because Jack Kern and the doubles team of Kern and Anderson reached the quarterfinals before falling, the Rams will send two doubles squads and two singles to the State Tournament this weekend at Cerritos College in Norwalk.

Siska and Jilka easily disposed of Hartnell's Dave Schmickrath and Hank Perez in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1, in the semifinals, but had some difficulty against recalcitrant Ron Priceman and Leon Mayberg of Menlo before prevailing, 6-4, 6-4.

After breaking Priceman's service in the second set they glided in with little trouble.

Elated Coach Roy Diederichsen, whose squad went through the Big Eight season without a defeat and captured the conference championship last week, said, "This is a tremendous victory for Siska. He really played great. Getz went to the state finals last year.

"Bobby just clobbered him. He did everything necessary to beat Getz. He crowded the net well, he volleyed good, and hit hard to Getz' backhand. His serve is much stronger now than in early season. He looks a good bet to gain the finals and win the state meet.

"Definitely, without a doubt, he's the best player I've ever coached."

In the quarterfinals Kern lost to Getz, 6-1, 6-3, and the doubles combo of Anderson and Kern fell to Priceman and Mayberg, 6-4, 6-1.

Because he competed in the state tournament, third-seeded Tom Edlefsen, upset by Siska last week, did not enter for Oakland City College.

DISCUS THROW artist Alex Darnes uncorks a mighty heave in a recent tuneup for the upcoming Northern California Junior College meet this weekend at Modesto.

Al Darnes Wins Discus With 169-6 In West Coast Relays At Fresno

Although broad jumpers Lon Brantley and George Holland failed to place, Alex Darnes got off his second best discus throw of the year, 169-6, to take first place in the West Coast Relays last Saturday at Fresno.

In fact, if Darnes didn't place the college would have been blanked. The 5-10, 220-pounder's first gave the Rams five points and an 18th place finish.

Brantley, who has leaped 24-1 this year, managed only 22-2 Saturday, and Compton's Lester Pollar won the event with 23-6. Holland jumped 22-5.

Darnes, who has a pending national mark of 173-3, downed second place John Parks of Reedley by nine feet.

Darnes, Holland, Brantley, Andy Loobey, Claude Shipp and Elbert Robinson will make the trip to Modesto this weekend for the Northern California championships.

Shipp has been clocked around 10 flat for the 100; Robinson has thrown about 142 feet in the discus and Loobey is around 4:30 in the mile.

Baseballers Finish Last

Santa Rosa pounded pitchers John Pearce and George Taufer for five runs in the sixth inning, then went on to hand the Rams their 11th defeat of the year, 8-1, in the season closer last Friday at Santa Rosa.

The five-run outbreak gave the Bear Cubs a 7-1 lead and thereafter were never threatened.

Pearce shut out Santa Rosa for the first four innings, then was touched for two runs in the fifth and then the explosion. The Rams won three.

Trackmen Invade Modesto Nor Cal Meet Saturday

Local trackmen, sparked by the trio of Alex Darnes, Lon Brantley and George Holland, will invade Modesto Saturday to compete in the Northern California College championships.

Darnes, an ex-Polytechnic High track star, was the best discus thrower in Northern California last year, with a mark of 154-9¼, and is unbeaten so far this season.

Other members who qualified in the Big Eight meet are Claude Shipp, 100 and 220-yard dash; Elbert Robinson, discus; Brantley, Holland and Herb Briscoe, broad jump, and Andy Loobey, mile.

Tim Power, 440 and mile; Rich Byer and Steve Jackson, two-mile, will also attempt to stack up points for the Rams in the meet.

In a May 15 sprint and 440 trials, the relay team, along with Shipp and Power, participated to qualify in the Northern California meet.

Best times for individuals competing are Darnes' 173-3 in the discus, Brantley's 24-1 in the broad jump, Shipp's 9.9 in the 100-yard dash and 22.1 in the 220-yard dash, Robinson's 140 in the discus and Holland's 23-8 in the broad jump.

Briscoe, broad jump (22-8); Power, 440 (0:50); Loobey, mile (4:28); Byer, two-mile (9:49), and Jackson, two-mile (9:59), will also participate.

Last year in the Northern California meet the trackmen were edged by one-fifth of a point out of first place by Fresno. Ray Hearne took a second in the high jump, Darnes took a first place in the discus with a heave of 154-9¼, Elvin Bridges and Othello Carr took first and third positions in the broad jump.

The mile relay team and Frank James, two-miler, also placed within the top four.

Final standings:

College of San Mateo
City College of San Francisco
Oakland City College
Sacramento City College
Modesto Junior College
Stockton City College
Contra Costa City College

Paul Rundell To Speak At Block SF Dinner June 4 Honoring Lettermen

Final confirmation that Paul Rundell, San Francisco State College basketball coach, will be guest speaker for the Block SF Society's awards banquet, slated for Monday, June 4, was made last week by society sponsor, Louis Vasquez.

Special awards, trophies and an award honoring the most valuable player in each sport will highlight the dinner which will be given in Smith Hall, Vasquez stated.

Team jackets will be awarded to the soccer, tennis and basketball teams by virtue of winning their respective sports championships.

The main event of the banquet will be the presentation of block letters to spring athletes, Vasquez added.

Persons receiving blocks two years in a row will be awarded team jackets.

Approximately 70 athletes are expected to attend the semiannual affair, to receive their respective awards.

Originally scheduled to speak at the banquet was Howie Dallmar, Stanford basketball coach, but he had to withdraw because of a previous engagement.

Egan Tops San Mateo Golfer For 6th Place At Big 8 Tournament

Dave Egan defeated San Mateo's Tom Calligan in a sudden-death playoff to take a sixth place, highlighting college participation in the Big Eight Conference golf tournament last Tuesday at Modesto.

College of San Mateo took first place and first five individual spots while San Francisco took third.

The Pirates went undefeated in match play this season and copped the Big Eight championship. Oakland City College tied for second place.

By virtue of their 16-14 season-ending victory against the Sacramento Panthers, the Rams finished the season in third place with a four-win, two-loss league record.

San Mateo's 25-4 trouncing and Oakland's narrow 15½-14½ wins were the only league defeats the Rams suffered.

Because of the third place at Modesto, the Rams' entire squad qualified for the State Championships at Bakersfield this Monday.

The Rams' most valuable player will receive special recognition at the semiannual awards banquet on June 3.

RAMBLINGS — Bring Back The Good Old Softball Daze

By Jerry Littrell

MANY PERSONS reminisce about how things were in the Good Ol' Daze. (Example on Page 3.) Changes are noted in areas ranging from the automobile to coat racks.

Another change has taken place right here at the college in areas of recreation. In past years as time for commencement drew near, the sophomores and faculty would get together for their own personal "day of reckoning."

Each semester they would challenge each other to a softball or basketball game (depending on the season), usually held on the practice football field or in the men's gymnasium. These games were taken quite seriously—with tongue in cheek, that is.

The Professors, brimming with confidence and hope for any upcoming game, held "secret training camps" and secret "workouts" before the "crucial series."

The Sophs, brimming with overconfidence, usually came into the game cold but nevertheless lost most of the contests.

These series produced such names as Louis "Slugger" Batmale, Lee "Charger" Elsan and O. E. "Andy" Anderson, just to name a few still active participants.

Students were tabbed with nicknames ranging from "Fireball" to "The Twister."

Then for some unknown reason (Students claimed the Profs lost interest; Profs claimed vice versa) these games were cancelled.

Response to the Elephant Races has not been entirely favorable, so resumption of the Prof-Soph games might possibly be the answer to instilling a shot of spirit into an otherwise becalmed college student body.

The faculty is loaded with talent. Physical education instructors could finally get the chance to display the theories they have been teaching, while the students could have their last chance to display the "youth-over-experience" theory.

We doubt that any major league scouts would be interested in the outcome, but they could provide two of the most laugh-packed hours of the year. The talent is there: Where is the Spirit?

ZPS To Battle Collegiate 5 In AMS Smoker

An all-important playoff round in both leagues of the Associated Men Student - sponsored intramural competition took place last Wednesday night in the woman's gymnasium to decide the league winners for both the Inter-Club league and the Inter-Fraternity league.

The two top club teams, the Collegiate Five and the Divine Ones, provided a fast moving, top notch game in which the consistent scoring of the Divine Ones' John Giles failed to stop the unrelenting attacks of the fast-breaking Collegiate Fives, who eventually won, 60-51.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon and Zeta Phi Sigma provided action in the IFC league, the Zetes squeezing through at the finish to top Gamma Phi Ypsilon 17-16 in the lowest scoring game of the season.

In the men's gymnasium, the Newman Club trounced the Campus Police team, 52-36.

The AMS Smoker Friday, May 25, will feature the two top teams, the Collegiate Five and Zeta Phi Sigma, in an inter-league championship tilt.

The smoker will also feature an intramural boxing show, put on by boxing coach Roy Diederichsen, and the intramural volleyball playoffs.

Details concerning the smoker can be obtained from AMS President Fred Cherniss in the Associated Student office, S-134.

Admission to the smoker will be free of charge to all AS cardholders, Cherniss said.

Swimmers Dunk Sacto To Finish Fourth In Season

Copping a fourth place in the Big Eight Conference with a 2-3 record, the swimming team showed vast improvement all year with a great majority of the representative members attaining their best seasonal times in the Northern California championship.

In winning their two meets, the Rams knocked over Sacramento and gained victory against Santa Rosa when the latter dropped out of league competition.

Best times of individual team members were Chuck Greninger's 440 and 1500 meter free style, who broke two records with a 5:09.4 and 20:41.5 respective clocking in these events.

The 440-free style record was set in the Big Eight championship meet while the 1500-meter free style mark was broken in the Big Eight meet, with a 21:03.0, and then bettered in the Northern California meet, 20:41.5.

Herm Fruchtenicht, 100-yard breast stroke, 1:09.9; Bill Love, 100-yard backstroke, 1:01.2; Eli Silver, 100-yard free style, 54.8, and John Holm, 100-yard breast stroke, 1:09.9, had their best efforts against competitors in the Northern California meet.

The medley relay team, comprised of Love, Holm, Mark Haskell and Silver, had its best clocking in the Northern California meet with a 4:07.3.

Diver Rollin Randall had his best day against Oakland when he racked up 118.5 points for the locals.

The free style relay, made up of Haskell, Love, Silver and Holm, had its best day in the dual meet against Stockton with a 4:00.2 timing.

Against the Bulldogs of San Mateo, John Vida had his top performance in the 220-yard individual medley with a 2:49.4.

Coach Roy Burkhead looks to Greninger, Fruchtenicht, Love, Randall, Haskell, Webster and Bill Watson as a top carry-over team for the Rams next year.

Final standings:

	Won	Lost
1. Oakland	5	0
2. Stockton	4	1
3. San Mateo	3	2
4. San Francisco	2	3
5. Sacramento	1	4

Bogas Captivates College

Educational Gain Made; Pianist Views Own Concert

Another educational advance was made at the college last Friday when Roy Bogas' concert was captured on video tape.

Pianist Bogas, who attracted international attention earlier this year as a performer in the Tchaikovsky competition, opened the college's concert series during College Hour.

What made the event even more memorable was the television capturing of the concert on the college's new Ampex VR-8000 tape recorder. This enabled Bogas to observe and discuss his concert one hour after the performance.

The tape recorder was made possible by a gift of capital stock presented last year for use on television teaching purposes by W. W. Eitel, president of Eitel-McCullough Inc.

Meyer Cahn, faculty director of the concert series, was particularly pleased since "we had already contracted Mr. Bogas for this performance before his success in Moscow."

Bogas played in the theater, then appeared before invited guests and interested students and faculty members in the choral room. It was here he saw his concert, which included works by Bartok, Chopin and Debussy, and presented his evaluation.

Cahn announced the rest of the college's concert series which will resume October 19 with Ralph Sutton's jazz duo. In keeping with the program's purpose of presenting to students a variety of musical experiences, Cahn listed the remaining concerts.

Guitarist Fred Stockton will give a recital November 16. Then the California Wind Quintet will perform December 7. The current series will conclude with tenor Carl Zytowski January 11. All concerts are paid for by Associated Student funds and will be offered only during College Hours.

In addition to the series, Cahn noted there will also be two concerts by students of the college. The first will be an all-vocal offering December 4. This will be followed by the annual Christmas program December 14.

WORLD-FAMED pianist Roy Bogas performed here last Friday.

AS Sales Nearing Record; Poletti Top Card Seller

With a sale thus far of 2400 Associated Student cards, a new record is about to top last year's of 2950 and is expected to exceed the goal of 3000 by the end of this semester, Dave Otey, AS card sales chairman, revealed today.

The sales campaign got underway September 4 and ended last Friday, and had a daily average of 190 sales in 13 days of selling. The three top salesmen, Alan Poletti, highest with 320, Richard Gray and Sam Andrews, received prizes valued at a total of $40.

The awards, which Otey described as "unusual and different," will probably consist of tickets to a downtown theater, certificates for a free dinner for two and the like.

The AS card, costing only $5, enables students to save up to $48 in the form of a free subscription to the college newspaper, free admission to home athletic events and dances, discounts on merchandise in certain stores and admission to all drama productions.

In addition, AS cardholders received the Sabin oral vaccine free of charge and are also entitled to free parking and discounts on health insurance.

At $5 per card, 2400 cards will reap profits totaling $12,000. This sum will support The Guardsman, the college radio station KCSF, student handbooks and the maintenance of the vending machines in Smith and Science Halls

The athletic department will receive the biggest share for uniforms, sports equipment and transportation expenses.

With only the advertising department as a source of publicizing the AS card sale drive itself, Otey hopes to utilize the facilities of KCSF to advertise the campaign in coming semesters.

The cards may be bought throughout the semester at the information booth near the silver pole in Science Hall and the finance office in Smith Hall.

A contest to design next semester's AS card is expected to take place at the end of this semester.

Conlan Names Two As Assistant Deans

Promoted to high-ranking college administrative positions this semester were James Billwiller, chairman of the English department, and John Gerstung, chairman of the social science department, Louis G. Conlan, college president, announced last week.

Billwiller was appointed to the position of assistant dean of instruction. Gerstung to the position of acting assistant dean of instruction.

Conlan explained that Billwiller is temporarily replacing Edward E. Sandys as dean of instruction until Sandys returns from a sabbatical leave of absence.

Gerstung is temporarily replacing Billwiller as assistant dean of instruction.

Special Student Tickets On Sale For Symphonies

Beginning at noon today, students may purchase special rate tickets, offered by the Symphony Forum, to performances of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, Meyer M. Cahn, music instructor, announced last week.

Discount tickets may be secured from the Smith Hall finance office. Remembering that last semester the college completely sold out its supply of ducats early, Cahn urged interested students here not to delay.

Prices, at substantial savings over regular admission costs, are $21.85 and $27.75 for the entire series of 19 Wednesday night concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra at the War Memorial Opera House.

Enrique Jorda will conduct the programs.

The Symphony Forum is a group of Northern California colleges which has arranged this reduced price policy through the San Francisco Symphony Association.

The series starts on November 28 with guest artist Malcolm Frager, pianist, who has recently returned from a successful European tour.

Before closing on May 22, the forum concerts will present violinist Christian Ferras, pianist Geza Anda, a performance of Handel's Messiah which will commemorate the Christmas season, guest conductor Howard Mitchell of the National Symphony Orchestra and pianist Alexander Brailowsky.

Violinist Tessy Spivakovsky, guitarist Andres Segovia, guest conductor Hans Schmidt-Isserstedt of the Hamburg Radio Orchestra and Josef Krips, Vienna-born conductor, will also appear during the six-month series.

Cahn added that students desiring only half-season tickets should consult him in his office, A-135, as soon as possible.

Gary May is student chairman of Symphony Forum here.

Prereg Deadline Set For October 1

The deadline for submitting preregistration open-hour forms is next Monday, Walter E. McCloud of the counseling department announced last week.

McCloud emphasized that students not meeting the deadline will not be eligible for preregistration.

Counselors will arrange students' spring semester programs during the latter part of October and will continue through November and December, McCloud reported.

He added that open-hour forms are available in the counseling offices, S-160, and that postcards, stating date and time of appointment, will be sent to students.

IFC Entertains At Smoker In Smith Hall Tonight

The college's campus fraternities will display their best tonight when they entertain prospective pledges during the semiannual Inter-Fraternity Council smoker tonight in Smith Hall, Le Roi Cann, IFC president, announced Friday.

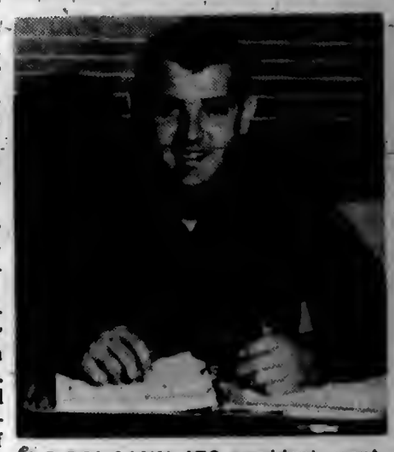
Beginning at 8 p.m., the smoker is designed to give prospective pledges an opportunity to learn more about the individual fraternities.

Each fraternity will set up a table on which will be displayed "the treasures the fraternities have collected."

These "treasures" include trophies, mugs, scrapbooks and information concerning the activities of the group.

"We want to get the men interested in the fraternities and their activities," Cann stated.

Most of the members of the fraternities will be present tonight to answer any questions interested students may have, he added.



Pledges will meet fraternity members and talk with the officers. They will then decide for themselves which organization offers the best program.

Cann noted that entertainment will be provided by the fraternities. Although he was not sure of the type of entertainment, he stated that last semester activities such as singing and comic acts prevailed.

Refreshments will also be provided by the fraternities. "The only thing we want interested pledges to bring," Cann said, "is themselves."

Interested students are allowed to sign up with as many fraternities as they wish without being obligated in any way. Cann stated that the final decision is up to the prospective pledge.

There are seven active on-campus fraternities this semester, Beta Tau, Alpha Kappa Rho, Phi Beta Delta, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Alpha Sigma Delta and Zeta Phi Sigma.

LE ROI CANN, IFC president, went over some last-minute plans in preparation for tonight's smoker in Smith Hall.

AMS To Consider Suggestions Put In 'Wisdom' Boxes

Through two suggestion boxes, sponsored by the Associated Men Students and marked "Words of Wisdom," situated on campus, many suggestions have been put into effect and others are under consideration.

The suggestion boxes are located near the silver pole in Science Hall, and in the shack, Jim Fuller, AMS president, announced.

Fuller remarked that any and every worthwhile and constructive suggestion is welcome.

In addition, Fuller noted that each suggestion is thoroughly looked in to. "We want students to know that the suggestions submitted are not read for our own amusement, but that we are fully aware of all valid advice contained in these suggestions."

Last semester a suggestion that the bell in the library be toned down is in effect. Vending machines in Science Hall have been improved, as at one time there was coin loss through breakdowns.

Among the suggestions this semester has been one requesting a coin-changing machine. This suggestion was turned down because the college does not carry insurance coverage protecting such an installation.

The agenda for AMS this semester includes a volleyball league. Petitions to join this league are available at the AS office, S-134. The scheduled basketball league will begin its season in November.

Kingston Vocalist Tops October 5 C-Hour Events

An added bonus for the College Hour Friday, October 5, will be the appearance of John Stewart, member of the Kingston Trio.

Owners of a gold record, denoting one million records sold of their recording of Tom Dooley, the trio is one of the most successful folk singing groups in recent recorded history.

"Because of the uncertainties of the weather, we will probably hold the concert in the men's gymnasium," Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, reported.

Dean Hillsman further advised students to arrive early as "we expect a huge turnout" for the Capitol record singing star.

Rushees Attend ISC Firesides

With the six campus sororities holding their firesides this week, Rose Diggins, Inter-Sorority Council president, reminded all rushees that they must attend at least four of the six affairs.

By attending the firesides, rushees will be able to meet the women in the sororities to help them decide which sorority to pledge.

Organized into two groups, the rushees will either attend the first or second hour of each sorority's function.

Tomorrow, the second evening of the firesides, Phi Beta Rho will entertain from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., and Delta Sigma Tau will present their fireside from 8 to 10 p.m.

The concluding firesides will be given on Sunday by Kappa Phi from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., and by Delta Psi from 8 to 10 p.m.

Last Sunday, the major event of rushing, the ISC tea, was held from 2 to 5 p.m. The tea was the first opportunity for the rushees to acquaint themselves with the six sororities and the women who compose the membership.

Enrollment Hits All-Time High

A record-breaking influx of about 300 students over last fall's record shot the day enrollment into the 6900's, Mary Jean Learnard, college registrar, estimated today.

Although more exact figures are still in the process of being tabulated, Miss Learnard calculated that about 2900 new registrants coupled with roughly 4000 returning students are responsible for the record 6900 crush.

This figure, added to the approximately 1500 night students, kicked the over-all enrollment to a new all-time high, 8400 students, jamming corridors, classrooms, reservoir parking and the cafeteria to capacity for the second year.

The previous record, set in the Fall 1961 semester, hit 8285, with a 6528 day enrollment and a 1657 night.

The surprise crush of students in 1961 was attributed to the largest per cent increase of returnees in the college's history, counting an unexpected load of fifth semester students.

Miss Learnard, however, estimated that this semester's record enrollment is due to the huge influx of new students.

One figure is not available, although in recent semesters the ratio of men to women has stood at three to one, respectively. Apparently, it has changed.

Complete figures on the number of students here from each of the local high schools are also being calculated.

To Buy AS Cards Or Not To Buy Should Be Individual's Choice

ALTHOUGH it would be admirable for college "spirit and unity," compulsory Associated Student card sale, as advocated by several in the college's student government, is unnecessary and obviously undemocratic.

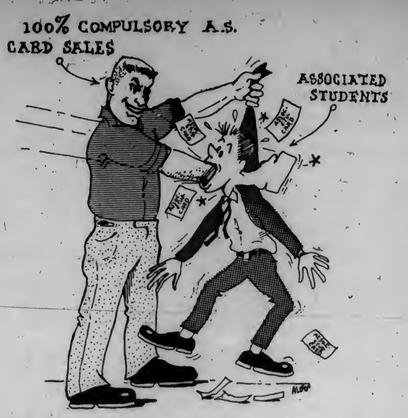
Their arguments, like those of their predecessors, carry little weight, and in the end usually indicate their own cupidity.

Invariably, the benefits both on and off campus of the AS card are attractive enough to sell themselves. In an age when you seem to get less and less for your dollar, the AS card remains as one of the last of the big bargains. It can be used as a ticket to six months of social activity. It can be used as a ducat to six months worth of athletic events. It can be used for six months' parking. It can be used for all those and more.

Off campus, students can get discounts from 22 establishments, most of which supply needs of the average college student. Discounts cover cleaning, music, restaurant, photos, men's wear, skating, bowling, auto parts, tires and more to come.

On the domestic side, privileges encompass admission and reduced rates to dances, theaters, drama productions, rallies, home athletic contests and voting rights, plus added benefits.

An example of an added benefit included the appearance of world-famed, Bay Area-reared pianist Roy Bogas at the college's theater last Friday.



And yet, this is still no reason to force a student to purchase an AS card.

The very nature of a two-year college supplies the answer as to why some students do not wish to purchase "The Bargain." Most students here, and the records will back this conclusively, are combining college and work. Under this system, many will not participate in college activities because of lack of free time. There are some who don't especially enjoy an athletic event; there are some who don't attend the dances, some who don't care about voting or participating in college government.

And that's their privilege.

The provision of a free education is one of the functions of the two-year college. If you're going to make AS card sales mandatory, you might as well call it an entrance fee. That's all it would really be.

Some have advocated that mandatory AS card sale would lower the price of the AS card. We don't believe the five dollar charge is retarding many sales. It's just a matter of having a free choice, and there is no reason it should be taken away because of a self-thinking few.

WELCOME to City College; here's your AS card.

Shots At RAMdom

By Bob O'Lear

IT MAY have already been mentioned in the news columns of this publication, but further notice is justified. Administrators Dr. Anderson, Dean Hillsman and Sherm Elworthy all three deserve thanks for what amounts to real foresight on their part.

Those students who attended the college last semester were aware that a completed polio vaccination card was a prerequisite for registration this semester.

However, anticipating (and quite correctly as it turned out) that many students would show for enrollment ill-prepared, the aforementioned gentlemen were allocated $350 by Associated Student officers for the Sabin oral vaccine.

An indication of the merit of their idea and AS co-operation is the fact that approximately 1500 students were vaccinated here. This not only protected them from polio but also saved them from a prolonged delay in their registration.

It might also be noted that this is a good example of AS funds at work. This is especially important for those who feel that most of the money is for the exclusive use of athletic squads shuttling up and down the coast.

IN THE GOOD 'ol tradition of the party not in power, the Republicans have turned a full assault on the efforts of President Kennedy and his Democratic congress. While some of the criticism is just a type of "bum-rapping" necessary for the existence of the two-party system, some of it has taken form in several really clever bumper strips.

Two of these seen recently are as follows:

1. "I Miss Ike. Hell, I even miss Harry." (This, of course, is funny only if you still remember Ike.)

2. "Kennedy for King. Goldwater for President." (How about Kennedy for King, Goldwater for Court-jester?)

STRANGE THINGS HAPPEN — In Eugene Mead's Sociology 1 class (9-10 MWF), all sorts of sociological experiments are being undertaken.

One example was a recent early lunch of fried grasshoppers (ugh!!). They were imported from Japan. The way Mead hears it, the Japanese workers are told they are to be sent to America with the following remark by the Japanese foreman, "You know the Americans, they'll eat anything."

Although it probably comes as no news to married couples, Mead also felt compelled to explain the REAL meaning of wedding rings. In olden days, a ring was the symbol of slavery. Hence, the recent upsurge of the wife's insistence on a double-ring ceremony?

AMERICA AT HOME — Upon seeing the following, one begins to understand the confused attitude toward Americans that persists abroad. "Buy American" slogan on the rear bumper of a Volkswagen . . . the V. C. Morris gift shop on Maiden Lane (designed by the late Frank Lloyd Wright), Mission Dolores, Fort Point, the Jack Tar Hotel (!?!); all indicative of San Francisco's and America's varying cultural eras.

What Is Your Impression Of Registration Procedures?

By R. D. Hacker

Julie Barillas, freshman:
Although I was warned about the ordeals of registration, I was confused by the mass of people. I found that some of the classes I wanted were closed, and I had to revise my schedule. I had a good schedule before registration; now I don't get home until 4 or 5 o'clock.

James Bell, freshman:
I didn't expect to see so many new people, but I guess there are quite a few new students. A number of classes were closed and I was a little confused. Mainly it just took too long to register. But now that I know the routine, it should go a little faster next semester.

Joyce Davenport, freshman:
I got lost and didn't know where to go. At the high school I went to, everything was handled in one room which made it simple. Here, registration took me all day, and then I had to drop a class because it was closed. It should be better next semester.

Richard Matsubayashi, freshman:
This is my first semester here and I found that orientation helped me quite a bit. It made it easier to find my way around. I didn't get all of the classes I wanted at the time I wanted them, but I thought that registration was very well organized.

Pam West, freshman:
It took a lot less time for me to register this semester than it did last semester. Last time it took three and a half hours; this time I was out in a half-hour. The signs helped, but maybe it was because I am only taking three classes this semester.

George Lee, sophomore:
I had no trouble at all during registration. Some of my friends have told me that they had some bad luck with closed classes and having to get in line, but I got everything I wanted. Registration wasn't as much of a jolt for me; I went to Lowell where it's almost the same.

Carol Winternitz, sophomore:
I am a returning student, so the registration procedures didn't bother me at all. I found that the organization has improved over when I was here before, and I got all of the classes I wanted. Things seem to be handled in a better manner this semester.

Richard Skaff, freshman:
Before I registered, I talked to some people and they warned me about it. Even so, I still became a little confused. It was a mess—an organized mess. There were too many students and the lines were too long. I just couldn't get any classes.

REGGIE STRATION.

"Me confused or lost? Why no, I'm very happy here at State."

Graduate Returns In Paperback

Herb Levy's 'Five Short Stories' Hits Stands At College Bookstore

"I'm a writer." Many pseudo artists exist for years with nothing more to show for their supposedly creative endeavors than the above statement.

This is the story about one student who not only wanted to write for publication, but has.

Veteran Bay Area newspaperman Herb Levy, a former student here, has had a volume published, entitled Five Short Stories, now available at the Rampordium.

He attended the college in 1942 and then returned in 1946 after World War II. While a student here, Levy was on The Guardsman staff in the capacities of News Editor, Managing Editor, Editor-In-Chief, successively.

HERB LEVY.

In addition, he was a member of Samuel Duff's original creative writing class. Duff remembers him as a "mature and talented writer."

"His writing at that time was already indicative of a good deal of ability," Duff recalled.

In the 1947 issue of the college's literary magazine, The Forum, Levy contributed two poems, Moving On To Rome and Spree Fever. The latter was a lampoon on John Masefield's Sea Fever, coauthored with George Lajeunesse, also a returning South Seas veteran and Guardsman editor.

"The ability to crystallize thoughts was helped through these creative writing classes," Levy stated. "That kind of writing, coupled with the training in news writing offered by The Guardsman, gave to journalism students a real opportunity to learn many facets of writing while at the college."

Levy transfered to the University of California where he obtained his Bachelor and Master of Arts degrees.

Since then he has worked on newspapers in San Francisco, Alameda and Marin County. For the past six years, he has been employed on the Vallejo Times-Herald as Sunday Editor and an editorial writer.

The publication of his volume of short stories represents his first important accomplishment in the field of creative writing. The stories are Escape, A Trip To Fresno, Knockout, Picnic At The Beach and Going Home.

"I think there definitely should be more emphasis placed on short stories," he said. "Actually, the short story as such is probably America's leading contribution to the art of letters, and yet we find nowadays that fewer and fewer authors are using this art form."

Local Student Drives Handicapped To Sunshine School

His Bus Needs No Sticker

The yellow bus parked in the campus reservoir sticks out like a sore thumb, but that sore thumb is helping to administer rehabilitation and education for 15 youngsters each and every day.

When the San Francisco cab companies some months ago refused to carry the handicapped children to Sunshine School, arrangements were made with the M & M Charter Bus Line to transport the handicapped, and Tom Fraley, a 23-year-old second semester student here, was one of the 45 selected for the job.

In fact, he is one of five males and the only college student doing the work.

Each weekday Fraley delivers the children to Sunshine at 8 a.m., drives directly here for his 10 to 2 p.m. classes and returns to pick them up at 2:55.

Because of seating arrangements, only 15 passengers are transported instead of the buses' capacity of 24.

These students may have physical handicaps, but many of them compensate in other ways.

"It's almost like going to college in the twilight zone," Fraley admits. "You should never underestimate these kids. They're really sharp. They have very keen minds.

"Their memories are fantastic. If something goes wrong, if somebody forgets a book or something, they're right on top of it.

"I have a couple of special cases with me. One boy has no muscle control, and he has to be strapped in all over but he has a very sharp mind.

"The other day he dropped a pencil on the floor. He wouldn't move until we found it. We looked and found nothing, but he still wouldn't budge. We found it a little farther back."

Fraley had done clerical work for the Sunshine School and received the job after getting a tip from a friend.

The school holds 200 plus, performs orthopedic work and teaches regular classes. It is located between 24th and 25th streets on Bryant.

Does Fraley like the idea of driving the bulky bus to college every day?

"At least people can tell when I come," he laughed. "I know the bus sticks out in the reservoir. I talked with Dr. Anderson and got the okay to park the bus there this semester. I don't need a sticker."

Is Fraley authorized to use the bus other than the pickup hours?

"Theoretically, I can't use it without an okay, but sometimes I'm almost tempted to take it shopping. If I want to get a haircut after class, then I have to take it with me. Sometimes I drop my wife off at work."

Vacancies Plague Council

Football Team Gets Additional Phoenix Money

With three vacant freshman seats, Student Council opened this semester on a comparatively quiet note.

Two organizations have approached council for additions to their budget this semester.

The football team requested $466.50 more in order to charter a nonstop plane to Phoenix, Arizona, for a practice game this Friday. The allocation, which was approved, will also allow members of the Rally Committee and pep band to attend.

Since costs have increased over last year, The Guardsman requested and received an additional $84 to publish 12 issues this semester.

Prompting an impending election for three freshman seats on council, Pete Montenen, Ernest Gash and Katie Dwyer did not return to accept their positions this year.

Associated Student President Bill May said the field is wide open to freshmen who have a 2.0 average and have completed between 12 and 27½ units. So far, Phyllis Webb and Ben Rodriguez have been nominated.

If elected, Rodriguez will relinquish his position as the Alumni Liaison officer.

An innovation by May this semester is a practice parliamentary law session that immediately follows each regular business session of Student Council, time permitting.

Guardsman Lists Publication Dates

Publication dates for The Guardsman for this semester were released today by Dave Kleinberg, editor-in-chief.

Remaining publication dates are Wednesdays, October 3, 10, 17, 24, 31; November 7, 14, 21; December 5 and 12, and the last issue, January 16.

The Guardsman will be distributed at the following locations on campus: the silver pole in Science Hall, the entrances to the library and Smith Hall, and the ramp entrance to the arts building.

Kleinberg reminded students that material to be posted must be approved by him as chairman of the Publications Board. Posters are restricted in size to 11 by 14 inches, the only exception being campaign posters for student elections.

Publication Board members for this semester are Bill May, Associated Student president; Rosalie Weiner, Associated Student vice president; John Theilan, finance chairman; Herman Kligerman, publicity chairman, and Edy Grant, Guardsman editorial assistant.

AS President May Makes 16 Cabinet Appointments

Appointment of 16 presidential cabinet members was made last week by Associated Student President Bill May.

Still to be named, though, is a recording secretary. In the interim, Laurie Thurlwell is transcribing the minutes of Student Council meetings. A Men's Athletic Commissioner is also still to be named. May added that a Parliamentarian would not be appointed this semester.

Appointed cabinet officials are Finance Chairman John Theilan, Corresponding Secretary Sue Baer, State Information Chairman Ed Pawlus, Alumni Liaison Officer Ben Rodrigues, AS Card Sales Chairman Dave Otey, Campus Affairs Co-ordinator Carolyn Montevalda and Election Commissioner Larry Maibaum.

Recording Secretary and Men's Athletic Commissioner also fall into the above category.

Those considered honorary appointees are Bill Silver, Council of Organizations president; Otto van Duyn, rally commissioner; Le Roi Cann, Inter-Fraternity Council president; Rose Diggins, Inter-Sorority Council president, and Dave Kleinberg, Publications Board chairman.

Others include Herman Kligerman, Publicity Committee chairman; Bob Mulhall, Campus Police chief, and Ruth Wimmer, Recreation Association president.

Silver, originally elected IFC president, yielded that position to become COO president when John Hommes was forced to resign the post for personal reasons. A special election brought Cann into the IFC presidency.

May also appointed Rich Gray as chairman of the Student-Faculty Relations Committee for the fall semester.

Stanford Professor Speaks During C-Hour

Dr. Robert North of Stanford University will open the college's College Hour lecture series this Friday, Irving Witt, director of the series, announced today.

Dr. North is a professor in Stanford's political science department, and will speak on A Social Science Approach To War And Peace.

He is currently in charge of the Navy's project of peaceful solutions to conflict.

Witt, of the college's sociology department, is the director of the lecture series again this year.

Commenting on the series, Witt said, "The basic objectives of the series is to bring to the campus persons with academic backgrounds and with something current or interesting to say."

Four Sites Listed As Lost And Found Centers

Four sites are centers for lost and found articles — S-149, C-303, A-201 and the finance office in Smith Hall.

The office of educational management also reported that cards will be sent to the owners of lost books if the names and addresses are written inside.

John O'Brien Joins Art Department

Pictures and comic strips that were on display in Science Hall recently were just a fraction of the work of the latest addition to the art department faculty, John O'Brien.

O'Brien has been pursuing his art career for 12 years with much success. Working as a free-lance artist, his illustrations have appeared in 12 leading magazines across the nation, including Colliers, Family Digest, Reader's Digest and Home.

Besides the magazines, O'Brien, working out of his studio in South San Francisco, maintains several syndicated comic strips. These strips appear in newspapers around the world, from New Zealand to South Africa.

A local man, O'Brien graduated from USF majoring in philosophy, English and history, and then went on to the College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland.

When asked why he decided to go into teaching, O'Brien replied, "The art business is booming, and I would like to pass on some of my knowledge of art to the students trying to break into the field."

He also commented that this college has some very talented artists and that there exists here as much, if not more, potential than at many leading art schools.

Police Chief Warns — Tagging Starts Monday

Contrary to popular demand, free student parking will end with the enforcement of parking regulations beginning next Monday.

Campus Police Chief Bob Mulhall announced this week that traffic and parking regulations will be enforced by the issuance of warnings or citations.

Campus Police citations are the same as those issued by the city police and are payable only at the Hall of Justice.

Students may obtain permits in C-119 between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. daily on presentation of a driver's license, automobile registration, and Associated Student cards.

No Bobbypins At Ramporium

Student Store Vast Gold Mine Of Useful Merchandise For All

Bobby pins are not sold at the Ramporium. But lots of other things are: combs for windy hair; kleenex for noses that don't know when to stop; scalpels for premed students, and bookcovers for laymen showing the elements of self-taught brain surgery: all this and even books for classes, too.

This compact little store, located next to Smith Hall, is out to make a profit, a profit for the students.

The Ramporium stock is selected and bought by Manager Dick Main, who sells every bit of merchandise at the fixed price set by the publisher or manufacturer.

The proceeds, minus overhead, are turned in to the Associated Students. The AS uses this money for college activities, to finance dances and the band for example.

The bookstore will buy back at full price any book which is unmarred up to two weeks after the beginning of the semester. This offer is for students who drop a class.

The same offer is extended to those who leave college at a later date with a leave of absence.

Used books will be bought back at the end of the semester at half price if not badly damaged.

Money is only part of the aid the Ramporium gives, as a turn around the store will show.

A student browsing around before an 8 o'clock class might find The Sun Also Rises, by Ernest Hemingway, quite consoling.

A student writing for the hour of his exam might stumble on For Whom The Bell Tolis and start reading and never hear the bell toll at all.

Study aids, like the story of Antony and Cleopatra, told in one page, or the principles of French grammar, one page, are abundant. World history, however, is synopsized in two parts—two pages are needed.

A student looking for a shortcut to calculus will find it there. A girl looking for a bobby pin, though, will have to go some place else.

The Ramporium is open from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

H&R Wins National Honors

A TEAM of student chefs from the college's hotel and restaurant department won top honors at the National Restaurant Convention and Exposition, held recently at Civic Center.

By preparing a 100-man luncheon, the seven-man team scored 352 points out of a possible 400, nosing out Edison Technical School of Seattle, Washington, which had 347 points, and Stewards Union Training Center of Santa Rosa, which had 340 points.

The winning meal consisted of roast filet of beef Richelieu, breast of capon Mareno, new potatoes in cream, Lyonnaise potatoes, green peas and water chestnuts and broccoli Italienne.

Besides capturing first place with their gourmet's treat, they also received a silver platter for their efforts.

More than 1200 students received the Sabin oral vaccine during registration this semester, according to figures released by Oscar E. Anderson, co-ordinator of education.

The vaccine, which is being used in a nation wide effort to stamp out polio as a fatal disease, was paid for by Associated Student funds, so that returning students who failed to file polio cards could register.

State law requires students to have a polio card on file in the health office, Anderson emphasized. It is not necessary for a student to receive either the Sabin vaccine or the Salk shots, but a card must be on file in the nurse's office.

Those students who received the vaccine at registration should not neglect to take the remaining two inoculations, Anderson warned.

Considering the time element involved, and the fact that this new vaccine has been proved a deterrent to the polio virus and a preventative to those who may be carrying the disease, Anderson stressed that it would be advantageous for all students to take part in this series of innoculations.

If it is possible, the vaccine will be made available to the entire student body, but only if there is a sufficient quantity remaining from other innoculation programs.

"We have the means and the opportunity of wiping out polio in San Francisco, but the full co-operation of everyone is needed," Anderson said.

AWS Groups To Discuss Major Issues Saturday At Santa Rosa Confab

Opening its doors to approximately 20 representatives from the Associated Women Students here, a conference of Northern California AWS groups will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at Santa Rosa, Susan Fitzpatrick, AWS president, confirmed today.

By assembling the delegates of the Northern California junior colleges, the conference will give women students the opportunity to discuss the problems connected with college life, the community and the world.

In order to accomplish this objective, five workshops have been organized to deal with the topics.

Miss Fitzpatrick will preside as chairman of the campus workshop whose topic is social and educational opportunities offered by a two-year college.

271 Students Eligible For AGS Membership

Alpha Gamma Sigma Honor Society, at their first meeting last Friday, released the names of 271 students eligible for membership in the society this semester.

Interested students may leave their names with sponsor William Richardson in S-140; membership dues are $1 per semester. Those eligible are:

The MIGHTY Bear

California Soccer Team Refuses To Play Rams

By Dave Kleinberg

The University of California, an institution of higher learning and fair play for 93 years, has refused to play the City College soccer team because "soccer is a major sport at California. It may jeopardize the program to continue playing a two-year institution."

The contest, scheduled for this Saturday at California, has been cancelled. The Golden Bears forfeit the game and take the loss in the league standings.

"We knew about this last spring," said soccer coach Roy Diederichsen. "We had a meeting yesterday to try to change their minds, but got nowhere."

City College is the only two-year college in the Northern California Intercollegiate Conference and has won or tied for the title for the last three years.

With center-forward Al Korbus scoring four times, the Rams dumped California last year, 5-2, and went on to complete a six-game undefeated season and win the crown.

To California's claim, Diederichsen says, "They consider swimming a major sport at Cal. Yet, they swim against Foothill College, a two-year college."

It appears on the surface that California just doesn't like being defeated by a two-year institution, and it is obvious they would like to see the Rams out of the league.

As one coach put it, "They never said anything when they were beating us."

"The majority of the other colleges felt that California should play out its schedule. There was some sentiment, but not enough to cancel us out," Diederichsen acknowledged.

California Coach Bob DiGraza, known as a hard loser, denies having a part of it, claiming the decision comes from the athletic department, but the feeling runs high in other quarters that this may not be the whole story.

It's a strange paradox. It was DiGrazia, who, after last year's loss, tabbed the Rams as "undoubtedly the best two-year college in the country."

The league's other clubs, as far as national competition is concerned, have little to worry about over the Rams.

Under the NCAA's archaic system, only four-year colleges can compete in the nationals.

With two returning All-Americans and the California "victory" safely tucked away, a fourth championship for the Rams is not completely out of question. The only thing is: could it drive City College out of the league?

The Rams will sneak into San Quentin on the vacated weekend date and battle the San Quentin Penitentiary team at 11 a.m. Sunday.

Korbus, who led the league with a fantastic 20 goals, has departed and will compete at San Jose State. The Rams also lost ex-Washingtonite Dave Fromer to San Francisco State.

But all is not grim. All-American goalie Gary DeLong and All-American center-halfback Caesar Pina join left wing Ivan Bermudez, right wing Tom Winn, fullback Lee Wurtenburg and fullback Zamit Sherwood.

Highly rated rookies are inside right Waldon Hom, All-City Mission High fullback Jose Flores, Balboa fullback Andres Nabong and Galileo inside right Joe Simon.

Cross Country Men Eye Second Championship

Returning lettermen and a new league will play a key role in Coach Lou Vasquez's cross-country hopes this year. The local runners have experience but, as usual, help is needed from the first-year members to bring the college its second straight championship.

Lettermen Steve Jackson, Roger Richie, George Varmuza and last season's star two-miler Jose Valle will be, in Coach Vasquez's words, "The nucleus of our team, but we still need one or two men from the new crop."

Vasquez was hesitant to describe his prospects because of the new league.

"If it is a weak league, a weak team could take it, but I suspect it will be a strong league," Vasquez said.

New players vying for a berth are Ozzie Norkus, Bene Blokinand, Phil Danseli, all of Balboa High School, and Hoy Anderson, highly rated from Washington.

"The team is still in the shaping up stage," Vasquez reported. "I have no practice running times as of yet, but our opener against Modesto should give us a good indication of our position."

Commenting on this year's schedule, Vasquez said, "It's a flexible schedule in the sense that it was made up last spring and the meet days occur on a Thursday, Friday or Saturday. It will all depend on final verification from the opposing coaches."

AMS Intra Loop To Accept Signups

Men students of the college are reminded of the upcoming basketball intramural league sponsored by the Associated Men Students, Jim Fuller, AMS president, said today.

Sponsors of the semiannual program, which gives the men students a chance to show their athletic prowess, will be accepting petition for entry in the near future.

The sole requirement for acceptance of petitions is mandatory Associated Student membership by all participants.

Varsity basketball lettermen are not eligible to play.

The league will have two divisions, the independent teams and the club and fraternity teams. Games will be played on two week nights in the men's gymnasium.

Last semester the league met with huge success. It was culminated by a championship playoff between the kingpins of the two divisions. The Collegiate Five, the independent division winner, and Zeta Phi Sigma, fraternity and club champions, met, with the Collegiate Five winning, 55-20.

Block SF Elects Fall '62 Officers

Results of the Block SF elections and the organization's tentative schedule were announced last week by the adviser, Lou Vasquez. The Block Society, one of the college's oldest organizations, is presently planning for another year of activities.

Elected as this year's officers were John Jacobsen, president; Jack Bugett, vice president, and George Benkie, secretary-treasurer. Jacobsen was elected president last year, but he vacated the post because of his military reserve callup.

Highlighting the semester's projects, the semiannual awards banquet will honor all fall sports participants by awarding block letters and team jackets.

Membership in the club is open to all students who have received a block letter and own an Associated Student card.

Rams Explode, 22-6

Footballers Test Strength Friday Against Phoenix

Minus the guts of last year's nearly impeccable offensive line, the City College Rams battle Phoenix Junior College Friday night at Phoenix, Arizona, in a tune-up for the following week's league opener.

The rebuilding job belongs to new head coach, Art "Dutch" Elston, the ex-49er center-linebacker.

Only center George Benkie, hero of last year's one-point upset over Stockton, and tackle Jack Burgett remain from last year's seven up-fronters, four of which were named All-Conference.

All-Conference guard Dave Urrea, who is now at the foreign camp of the California Bears; Alex Darnes, the National Junior College discus record-holder; end Terry Fischer, and All-American tackle Jim Baffico are gone, along with the other starting end, Ray Greggains.

But the white towel won't fly in this early. Guard Dennis Drucker, the Northern California prep lineman of the year in '60, returns after seeing a good deal of action last year along with Joe Almirol, 5-5, 180 pounds.

Burgett has one of the tackle posts nailed, and the other one could go to 310-pound Charles O'Brien. "For a man that big, he moves very well," says Elston.

For the past two seasons, the Rams' passing game has suffered from the lack of an adequate passer, and once again the position is a question mark.

Quarterback Craig Schwartz had a bad day in the opener but appears ahead of Balboa's George Taufer.

The running game, even with the loss of Back-of-the-Year Tom Piggee, shouldn't suffer too much. Ron Coleman, another ex-Eagle and one of the league's best defensive backs last year despite his 5-8, 170 size, should join newcomer Walt Williams, the strong, husky 5-6 ex-Galileo all-around athlete, to scare the opposition.

Other strong possibilities include Ron Williams, 5-8, 180; Ben Brown, 5-9, 172 from Texas; veteran Claude Shipp, the 9.9 sprinter from Washington, and John Daigle, a returnee from Galileo.

Of the above group, Ron Williams, at 180, is the heaviest. And once again a light and fast Ram backfield looms as a strong possibility.

But the light back employment last year was good enough to produce a 5-2 conference record, second place in the Big Eight and a victory in the postseason Lettuce Bowl game.

Terry Mesa has been working in the FB slot. Mesa's 5-11, big enough at 200, but is not extremely fast, and could get a real battle from Bernard Wiley, a 5-11, 200-pounder from Sacred Heart who has been working at linebacker. Bill Sterling, 5-11, 185, switched from halfback and could break into the group.

The dark horse candidate who could change this team IF, is Mel Tom, a powerfully built 6-4, 225-pound Hawaiian and a member of the state champion basketball team.

Despite Fischer's and Greggains' departure, Elston is sure to find a good pair of ends out of the contingent of Neal Shea, Ernie Oliver, Howard Oliver and Phil Singer.

Veterans Shea, 6-1, 210; Ernie Oliver, 6-1, 205, and Singer caught a grand total of two passes between them last year, but E. Oliver suffered a broken finger early in the season which shelved him for the campaign. His younger brother, Howard, 6-2, 175, a first year man from Poly, has a chance to break in there.

Other good line projects are center Carl Conner, returnee tackles Bill Holman and Lincoln's Cal Rothman, guard Phil Aissa and ex-Lincolnite Joe Farber.

Through the first club, Elston feels the team is strong. "Although we lack the line depth we'd like to have, our first team is encouraging."

The Rams don't come home again until the October 12 Oakland contest.

Coleman, Williams Spark Second-Half Rally Over LA

Ron Coleman and Walt Williams, a pair of small, speedy backs, led a 22-point second-half rally to give the Rams a 22-6 victory over Los Angeles Valley Friday in the opener for new coach Arj "Dutch" Elston.

Coleman, the ex-Washington All-City halfback, set up the first score in the third quarter with a 30-yard dash to the Los Angeles five and went over from the four two plays later before a crowd of 300 in the college stadium. Mel Tom ran the conversion over to give the Rams a 8-6 lead.

The 5-8, 170-pound Coleman, who gained 138 yards in 22 carries, offset a 15-yard penalty in the fourth quarter by bursting up the middle for 21 yards and left to rest to Williams.

Walter, the ex-Galileo phenom, is a little bit smaller than Coleman but just as fast and rugged.

The 5-8, 170-pounder circled left end, got a great block from fullback Tom on the 48, cut in at the 25 and outraced the Monarch's Monwell Fuller into the end zone for 14-6.

On the extra point attempt, Williams took a bad snap and, thinking quickly, tossed to Ernest Oliver, alone in the end zone, for 16-6 and the Monarchs were dead.

The lack of timing in this the first game for both teams, manifested in the numerous offsides and backfields in motion, resulted in 21 penalties, 12 against the winners, nine against the losers.

The first half was something different. The Rams gained only 82 of their 243 running yardage in the first half and threatened only once when they drove 53 yards to the L. A. seven before E. Oliver dropped a perfect Craig Schwartz pass in the end zone on a crucial fourth down.

In the second quarter, Los Angeles, nine time losers in 1961, drove 79 yards in 14 plays with fullback Howard Briles pounding the middle for the last 21 yards for a 6-0 lead.

Led by veteran Dennis Drucker, the bulky guard from St. Ignatius, the Ram front line held the losers to 117 yards rushing, while the secondary did its share by picking off three passes, one resulting in the last touchdown.

With less than a minute to play and the Monarchs dazed and desperate, Ram halfback Ben Brown intercepted Jim Knapp's pass on the L. A. 21 and scored.—By D.K.

Ram 11 Goes 'Dutch' With New GG Confab

By Dave Kleinberg

THE reporter's annual duty at the start of each football season is to interview the coach and get data on the new players.

It's a little different this year. The coach is new — "Dutch" Elston from Mission High School. The league is new — The Golden Gate Conference. And the schedule is slightly new—an exhibition game in Phoenix, Arizona.

"Dutch" first made his name in the Bay Area as a member of the original 1946 San Francisco 49er squad.

After graduating from University of South Carolina, Elston joined the San Franciscans as a center and linebacker and started until 1948 despite his comparatively diminutive size of 5-10, 190 pounds.

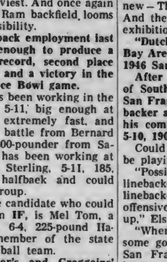
Could a lineman the size of Elston be playing pro ball today?

"Possibly make it as a defensive linebacker, but not as a center. The linebacker goes about 220, but your offensive centers start at 240 and go up," Elston offered.

"When I played, we played before some good crowds—20,000 average in San Francisco. But the reason the league died (All-American Conference) was because the other cities couldn't support it."

Does he think there have been many changes since he played 14 years ago?

"Basically, the pro offense hasn't changed a lot. There's still the home run play, and that's what the people want to see. That's the appealing feature of pro football—the explosiveness of the game."



The sagacious Elston started in the coaching field as an assistant for George Poppin's Treasure Island Navy football team in 1950.

After serving as Mission High's head coach for many years, Dutch was appointed here when Grover Klemmer relinquished his grid duties after 16 campaigns. Klemmer, who guided a small backfield and big line to second place in the Big Eight last year and a victory in the postseason Lettuce Bowl game, will continue coaching golf.

Will Elston find a difference between college and high school coaching?

"There's a difference, all right. College ball is a little more refined. Not a great amount. The maturity of the boys is different. You're dealing with boys from 18 to 19 years old.

"In high school you're working with kids at a vulnerable age. You have to work on the fundamentals, the stances and so on. By the time they reach this level, they should know them."

ART "DUTCH" ELSTON, the Rams' new grid coach, as he appeared as a member of the original 1946 49er squad.

Elston has his work cut out for him. The Big Eight Conference was disbanned last year and the Golden Gate Conference was formed with eight clubs circling the bay to make up a compact league.

Perennial powerhouse Stockton has left the league, but San Mateo, last year's conference winners and the No. 4 rated two-year club in the country, is loaded with veterans.

Diablo Valley, Contra Costa, Foothill, Chabot, San Jose and Oakland are the other six contenders.

The traditional exhibition trip to Los Angeles was cancelled this year when the college had difficulties in scheduling Los Angeles City College.

The money was allocated for the Phoenix trip, and just last week the Student Council added an additional $400 plus for a nonstop flight. Were the extra four bills needed? Apparently so. The plane was scheduled to stop in Las Vegas. They evidently decided it would be cheaper in the long run.

Representative Of Peace Corps Here Tomorrow

Leon A. Schertler, senior training officer for the Peace Corps, will appear on campus tomorrow in an effort to familiarize interested students with the organization's objectives, according to Joseph Jacobsen, counselor, who arranged the visit.

The special program will begin at 1 p.m. with the showing of a motion picture in C-246 concerning the corps. Schertler will speak to the student assembly immediately after the film.

A question and answer period will be held following his speech, and Jacobsen has urged all Peace Corps-minded students to attend the lecture. This will be Schertler's only visit to the campus since he has a tight schedule of public appearances ahead of him.

Schertler is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and served as a United States naval officer in Pacific theater during World War II. He has also been associated with the state department and foreign service.

In 1955 he received the Secretary of the Navy's outstanding award for his work in establishing international programs in more than 48 countries throughout the world.

Schertler has also been honored by being a special consultant to the president of an electronic teaching laboratory and as director of its international and government programs.

Another feature of his career was his work as assistant to the president of the People to People Health Foundation, founders and sponsors of Project Hope, the hospital ship sent to Asia and Latin America.

He has been affiliated with the Peace Corps since its beginning.

Louis Batmale Heads Technical Education Program

Promotion of Louis F. Batmale, formerly dean of instruction, to the position of coordinator of technical-terminal education went into effect at the beginning of the academic year 1961-62.

Batmale coordinates and supervises the semiprofessional fields of art, business, criminology, dental assisting services, engineering technology, hotel and restaurant operation, ornamental horticulture, photography, graphic arts and the new medical assisting services.

LOUIS F. BATMALE, formerly dean of instruction, was promoted recently to coordinator of technical-terminal education.

The office of technical-terminal education was initiated this year because of the new emphasis in these fields, administrative authorities said.

Concurrently, when the new Golden Gate Conference went into effect this semester Batmale became its first commissioner. His duties include scheduling of games, assigning of officials for league games, adopting league policies and designation of awards.

The new commissioner's experience in athletics has been both as a coach and official in basketball. Under a provision of the new league constitution, the commissioner is expected to serve for a one-year term.

Realignment of the conference was made on the basis of enrollment and location.

Batmale came to the college shortly after World War II as a veterans' counselor.

In the fall of 1949 he became assistant dean of student activities, and in the fall of 1955 he was appointed dean of semiprofessional courses, which title was later changed to dean of instruction.

Rally Head Asks Student Aid For Homecoming

Full student participation and a display of college spirit are prerequisites to assure a successful week of homecoming activities this year, Otto Van Duyn, rally commissioner, emphasized last week.

The array of events is set to begin Monday, November 5, and be climaxed with a football game between the Rams and Diablo Valley Vikings on Friday afternoon, November 9, in the college's stadium.

Still pending, according to Van Duyn, are the plans for a homecoming dance.

He added that the traditional queen contest, car parade and rally would highlight the week's activities. "I am working on preliminary arrangements now and should have more definite information within the week," Van Duyn remarked.

According to Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman, homecoming is the final day the Ram eleven comes "home" prior to the end of the regular Golden Gate Conference season. There is no basis other than conference scheduling for determining the opposing team, Hillsman added.

The Rams, who boast a strong running attack but have rather ineffective passing, face Foothill College for their final league game on Saturday night, November 17.

As Van Duyn reminisced, last year's homecoming wasn't too successful because of many other activities and diversions. The result was that the homecoming dance was cancelled although the local footballers won over their foe, Stockton, 7-6.

One of the main problems facing these festivities is student participation in general, and college spirit in particular. Unfortunately, Van Duyn commented, the college is located in the middle of a city where students can find a variety of other things to occupy their time.

He did concede that another factor last year was heavy rain on homecoming day. "We all have our fingers crossed this year," he added.

"A mere 150 fans attended the first home game of the season on September 21, but we'll continue to offer interesting rallies prior to each game, and if the Rams get on a winning streak, attendance should increase considerably," Van Duyn declared.

If this happens, college spirit is automatically aroused.

Iranian Victims Receive Help From COO Drive

Under the sponsorship of the Council of Organizations, Iranian Relief Day was observed last Friday in accordance with the program set by Mayor George Christopher.

The campus organizations placed 52 jars and baskets on the campus for contributions, Bill Silver, COO president, said.

Under sponsorship of Joseph Jacobsen, the International Relations Club coordinated this project along with the COO.

The campaign was established by the mayor and approved by the State Board of Education, in which public and parochial schools, universities and colleges were asked to provide means whereby students could show their sympathy by making contributions.

The emphasis of this program was on the spirit of the contribution rather than the amount. "Even a few pennies would be in keeping with the spirit of San Francisco's sympathy," Mayor Christopher said.

The contributions were strictly on a voluntary basis and no one was placed in the position of feeling obligated to give money. Opportunity to give was the individual wish.

Instructors and members of the faculty also contributed to this San Francisco project.

The Iranian Consul in San Francisco will use these funds for the restoration of educational activities or the replacement of educational materials in the Iranian earthquake zone.

Official: Card Sales Set Mark —3000 Expected

Energetic student selling and enthusiastic support have resulted in a record number of Associated Student card sales this semester, Dave Otey, card sales chairman, declared today.

The fall campaign boasts a total of 2650 sales at last report, leaving the relatively minor figure of 350 to reach this semester's quota.

An eventual goal of 3000 cards for the fall semester represents an increase of 50 per cent over the past semester, an appreciable difference above an average of 1800 attained during the past few years.

Individual leading salesmen received appropriate awards for their efforts, while Alan Poletti was cited at the September 27 Student Council meeting for his accomplishment of selling 300 cards.

AS cards can be obtained at S-134, the AS office, at an expense of $5. One of its primary benefits is the use of student parking areas throughout the campus. There is no cost for this privilege and a student may acquire his permit at Campus Police headquarters in C-120.

AS cardholders receive free or fractional admission charges to home athletic contests, dances and other college social functions. They are also eligible for various discounts at Peninsula area firms on everything from laundry and clothing to automobile service and accessories.

Counselors Urge Students To File Preprogram Card

Students who failed to file their preprogram cards on the appointed date of October 1 are expected to do so as soon as possible, according to Walter E. McCloud of the counseling department.

Students who did not meet the deadline will receive a late registration number on presentation of their forms, he warned, and further delay will result in an even lower registration number.

Programming for next semester will begin in mid-October, and counselors will continue their appointments until December. If a student does not receive his appointment card by the first of January he is to notify his counselor at once, McCloud emphasized.

Frosh Ball Theme Set — 'The Way You Look At Him'

With a flourish of music, the semiannual Frosh Ball will be presented from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight Friday, October 19, in the Colonial and Mural rooms of the St. Francis Hotel, Rich Thomas, Freshman Class president, announced today.

The Way You Look At Him is the theme of the affair, and Dick Crest and his 10-piece orchestra will supplement it with music appropriate to that theme.

Admission is free with an Associated Student card, Thomas said, but it will cost other students $1.50 to attend.

Bids will be distributed during the week preceding October 19 at the silver pole in Science Hall. Since only 400 bids will be available, students will receive them on a first-come first-serve basis.

To further the ball's tradition, the Cutest Couple contest will be the feature attraction of the evening. Twenty-five couples will enter the contest, the winners of which will be selected for first, second and third places by the process of elimination, Thomas explained.

Prizes will include tickets to festivities such as a dinner at Sabella's and a performance of Oliver at the Curran theater.

Proper attire for the ball is semi-formal and it is strictly a couples affair.

Assisting Thomas with the plans are Rich Hess, class vice president; Douglas Dorr, activities coordinator; Phyllis Webb, service coordinator; Kathy O'Leary, corresponding secretary, and Stella Cook, secretary-treasurer.

No Classes Friday

Students will receive a three-day weekend beginning Friday when Columbus Day is observed throughout San Francisco.

Classes will not meet Friday but will resume as usual next Monday, at which time the college will begin its time of midterm examinations. This is just the second "break" of the college semester.

The next one is due Monday, November 12, Veterans Day.

Leads For Dear Brutus

Three-Act Comedy Begins 2-Week Run October 19

Dear Brutus, a comedy in three acts, will open here on Friday, October 19, and will play for four performances, ending October 27, Michael Griffin, director of the production, said today.

The play, which was written by J. M. Barrie, who also wrote Peter Pan and The Little Minister, will star Karl Gillespie and Mary Atkinson in the major roles.

Gillespie is a second semester drama student who has appeared in previous productions here. Most recently he appeared with the Interplayers in Eugene O'Neil's The Hairy Ape, and in Thornton Wilder's Skin Of Our Teeth.

Miss Atkinson is a first semester student and is a graduate of Lincoln High School. This will be her first appearance in a dramatic role.

Dear Brutus was written and first performed in September, 1917, and deals with the problem of whether people would behave differently if they had their lives to live again. The play takes its title from another—more famous playwright—William Shakespeare and his play Julius Caesar.

To the student of Shakespearean literature, the lines from that play that summarize the plot of Dear Brutus are, "The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves, that we are underlings."

Many distinguished actors have portrayed the leading role in this comedy. The first was William Gillette in 1918. The play, with Gillette in the lead, played for 366 performances. More recently, John Geigud starred in this part.

The play has been the stepping stone for many an aspiring actress also, for it introduced to the public a virtual unknown. Starring in the role of Margaret, Helen Hayes made her debut in the American theater.

A sidelight to the production here is in the fact that the makeup and costume design is being executed by one person and a novice to the theater. Angelo Braghieri, who also has a part in the play, has designed the costumes for all 11 actors, and has also designed their makeup.

The play, with its novice cast, will play on Fridays and Saturdays starting October 19. Admission will be free to Associated Student cardholders, while general admission will be $1.

Dinners Highlight End Of ISC Rushing

Highlighting the end of sorority rushing, a series of dinners will be held this week, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

At the dinners, which will be held in the social hall of the women's gymnasium, each sorority will follow a theme. Some of the themes are of Gay 90's, Chinese, Italian and Hawaiian Luau influence.

Depending on their records during the semester, rushees will have received either one or two invitations to the dinners.

Following midterm examinations next week, the Coffee Preference hour will be held Tuesday, October 23, Dean Golding said.

At that time, rushees who have obtained a "C" or higher grade point average will be allowed to express preference for sororities.

October 22 and 23 are the dates officially set for late rushee registration.

First and second pledging days will be October 29 and 31.

ISC will present its semiannual plaque at the fashion show and tea on November 8 to the freshman woman who obtains the highest grade point average in the coming midterm examinations.

"This is to encourage good scholarship," Dean Golding added.

LA Valley Please Note: We Are Not The Only College In Area

A RECENT Los Angeles Valley College paper previewed the City College-Los Angeles Valley football game by stating, "As usual San Francisco City College will have a powerful team since they have such a wide area to draw from. San Francisco is the only junior college in the bay area."

This may have been true in the past, but it certainly is not now. College of San Mateo, Contra Costa, Oakland, Diablo Valley, Foothill, San Jose, Chabot, College of Marin and Santa Rosa can all be considered in the Bay Area. The number of two-year institutions has increased yearly, and there is no reason why it should not continue.

Chabot College, for example, opened classes in September of 1961 in the South County Junior College District in San Leandro. It serves approximately 250,000 persons. Its first semester enrollment was 1166, 1350 for Spring 1962 and upwards of 2000 this semester.

Lassen College, College of the Desert, Barstow, Whittier and Crossmont are other two-year colleges started recently.

The question is WHY? Why the steady increase in two-year colleges around the area, the state and the nation? What has the public found that brings about continued construction? What does the two-year college offer to keep the attendance records pushing higher?

This is the age of education. Compared to the population figures 50 years ago, the population has already exploded. In most cases, students with high grade average in high school enter four-year universities after completion of high school. But there's the other group. The precocious student, after average high school work, suddenly realizes the value of additional education. Obviously, the average student's education possibilities after high school in the past were limited. With two-year colleges, they are not limited.

As pointed out before, a majority of students in a two-year college are combining education and work. It is a great combination. It's a healthy combination. It's a combination where the mind and the pocket progress. The two-year institution requires no tuition. It has long been the American goal to provide free education for all, and it has been achieved to some extent by the excellent high school system. But it hasn't stopped there. Two-year colleges provide the chance to continue education.

Two-year colleges are not "junior" or "glorified high schools." They are just as much a heart of the country's education system as major universities and high schools.

We Welcome Student Letters

AFTER AN EDITORIAL in the first issue of the semester denounced those seeking mandatory Associated Student card sales, The Guardsman was nearly castigated by a high cabinet official in Student Council.

The policy both of the administration and student government here has always been for free choice concerning the purchase of AS cards, and The Guardsman hopes it will stay that way. A few individuals, however, have advocated compulsory card sales.

A cabinet appointee was quoted as saying, "It (the editorial) is a direct blow to our card sale program. Because it stood out so, the cartoon was even worse."

A member of Student Council, in a direct plea, questioned The Guardsman's taste in running the editorial in the middle of student card sales.

We don't mind criticism. If criticism is coming, we want to hear it. But we have yet to see or hear anything directly.

The Guardsman prints letters to the editor. We have a special column for it. We welcome letters. If something is to be said, we want it said to the whole student body.

Letters may be left with the telephone operator in Science Hall or The Guardsman office, room 304, Science Hall. Deadlines are 10 a.m. each Wednesday. If so desired the author's name will be withheld, but the identity of the author must be known to the editor.

The Guardsman does reserve the right to selection of material in the interest of brevity and good taste.

Man-Woman Enrollment Now 2-1

Women are rapidly becoming equal in number to men here at the college.

Several years ago men outnumbered women here by almost three to one.

This semester, though, according to the latest tabulations made by Thomas Nesbitt of the college's testing department, the ratio of men to women has lowered considerably to just two to one.

The gap becomes even more narrow when the statistics for new students are examined. In this case, the ratio of men to women is lowered once again to one-and-a-half men to one woman.

In simple terminology, there are two men to every woman at the college this fall. The figures haven't changed against last fall's tabulations, Nesbitt noted, although this semester there are approximately 700 more day students in attendance.

During the fall of 1961, 6228 were enrolled in day classes. This year the number has increased to just over 6900 students.

When asked to give reasons for the growing influx of women, Nesbitt could only submit educated guesses.

One thing that he definitely did notice was that a much larger group of women has come here from three San Francisco girls' high schools—namely Mercy, Notre Dame and Presentation.

"Most women are attracted to the college because of its expanded technical programs," Nesbitt offered, citing the nursing program, dental assisting and the new medical assisting program.

"We must remember that there is always that select group of women who attend college to receive their Mrs. degree," Nesbitt added.

Reservists Do Summer Hitch At Waikiki

Three Naval Air Reservists from the college have a "hard luck" story to tell about their recent annual two-week summer training.

It developed that it was their "misfortune" to be flown to Hawaii for their active training this year where they thoroughly enjoyed themselves at Waikiki.

To put it in their own words, "Man, was that beach beautiful!"

The three "hard-luck" reservists, Ron Cabral, George Hartmann, sophomores, and Dave Pallavicini, a freshman, served their two weeks of active duty at Waikiki, which is fairly close to the naval air station at Barber's Point on the main island of Oahu in the Hawaiian group.

Actually it was the other way around; they were stationed at the naval air station on Oahu but on their days off they trotted down to Waikiki to enjoy the hot tropical weather.

Besides their duties at Waikiki, Hartmann and Pallavicini refueled planes at the base, and Cabral spent his off-the-beach time in the traffic-control tower.

Although scheduled for two weeks of "rigorous" active duty, Cabral managed to get five days off.

Hartmann was less fortunate.

He got only one full day off, but every other day he finished his duties at noon, just in time to head for the beach.

Cabral is a petty officer third class, Hartmann a petty officer second class and Pallavicini an air crewman.

All three have been in the naval air reserve for four to five years and in between their jaunts to Hawaii they spend one weekend a month in active duty tinkering with the 100-odd planes manned by reservists at the Alameda Naval Air Station.

As Cabral put it, "I man a Neptune bomber.

"You know, one of those things that crash every now and then."

Should U.S. Act Against Ross Barnett Of Mississippi?

By R. D. Hacker

Barbara Vickerson, sophomore:

I don't think the United States will be able to prosecute him, so the people of Mississippi should throw Barnett out of office. James Meredith should also be taken out of the university before he gets hurt. The troops won't be able to protect him forever.

I think the same action should be taken against Barnett as would be taken against any U. S. citizen. The present action the U.S. is taking is most appropriate, and he should be made to pay the fine that is currently being imposed upon him.

Marguerite Mattson, freshman:

Although the United States is currently thinking of fining him, I don't think the present charges will stick. There is too much public opinion in Mississippi and most of the people there seem to be backing him. Jailing him would only cause trouble.

George K. Woo, sophomore:

I think the United States should indict him and take action accordingly. Jail would be a nice place for him. I don't think he will be made to pay the fine that has been levied upon him, but I think that they should make an example out of him.

Carol Izuno, sophomore:

The people at Mississippi should elect a new governor, but I doubt if they want one. The whole thing is a little beyond me, but I don't think that any governor should be biased. I don't think that the charges that are filed against him will hold up.

Clarence Scanlan, sophomore:

I think they should send him to some kind of a mental institution. I really think he is crazy and should be put in jail for going against the laws of the United States. He is a criminal and should be treated as one even if he is the governor.

Altha Young, sophomore:)

The United States should take some action. This has not been a fight to keep out Meredith, but a fight against the government. I do believe, however, that if they attempt to put Barnett in jail, it will only cause another riot. He should pay the fine though.

I think that the United States should act against Barnett in the same manner that it would act against anyone who would violate a federal law. I don't think the people of Mississippi will re-elect him, and eventually he will have to pay the fine.

BARBARA VICKERSON

"The people of Mississippi should throw Barnett out of office."

• Ole Miss Protest

Editor, The Guardsman:

Why don't we get a huge long list of signatures on a protest, and send it to "Ole Miss" from the students of City College protesting their persecution of James Meredith and other Negroes (and other non-Protestant non-white people who have the misfortune to live there).

Also, how can you say the N. Y. Times is a good paper, but dull? It is not dull! Did you ever read it? Monday's edition, for instance, I found fascinating (description of the town of Oxford, Miss., text of JFK's speech, maps of integration; none of which are in any S. F. paper).

'Self-Taught Barking And Caesar Salads' Wrap Student Dreams

Many students here have been wrapping their dreams in bookcovers and studying their troubles away for years. Recently, some have been covering their books with laughs.

Students have perennially bought bookcovers from the Ramporium that signified their dreams. Interest has been shown in the covers of Stanford, Michigan State, Georgia Tech, Dartmouth, Notre Dame. When these students begin studying, their goal is right in front of them.

Like Mark Twain, however, some students' goals are laughs. And some are now putting their goals immediately before them. The bookstore has a cover for almost every book and study occasion.

Listed below are some of the titles:

- I flunked Roman History — I thought Caesar was a salad.
- Recipes for Crumbs, Betty Crocker, with an example of Southern fried crumbs in the basket.
- Stamp out bacteriology—sneeze in your hankie.
- Your best friend won't tell you but you need Psycholanalysis by Buddy.
- Twenty years exploring the Grand Canyon on a pogo stick, by I. M. Maimed.
- Barking Self Taught by A. Wyldog.

Other students, however, have been reserving their humor for lighter, more inconsequential subjects. Thus, they have been saving the cartoon bookcovers for their Mad comic books.

Most students have been buying the regular college bookcovers and have been studying with their pride all over their work.

The giraffe's immense heart is one of nature's most powerful pumps.

Rare Brady Civil War Photos Draw Crowds

The exhibit of Civil War photography currently being shown in the gallery of Cloud Hall will continue here through the month of October, Madison Devlin of the audio-visual aids department said today.

Students in record numbers have already seen the exhibit and many more are expected before the exhibit is over. According to Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, "Students were looking over our shoulders while we were putting up the exhibit."

The exhibit is sponsored by Ansco Company, which has one of the largest collections of Civil War photos in the nation.

The pictures, most of which were taken by Matthew Brady, are not new. In many cases they have appeared in history texts or in historical films.

In 1957 a complete collection of these pictures was assembled on film and won the Academy Award for the Best Documentary of the Year. Under the title of The True Story Of The Civil War, these photos and others were incorporated into a text which has been hailed by educators as the "best collection of Civil War photography ever assembled."

The photographs have all been marked and labeled by Ansco, explaining the picture and in some cases giving a history of the event. The pictures have been set up in order of naval, land and cavalry battles, with a minor category including "famed celebrities."

Into this category fall General Robert E. Lee, shown several months after his surrender at Appomator; General George Armstrong Custer and Prince Arthur of England.

Few persons are aware of the technicalities that arose in the taking of these photos. In many cases the inability of the cameras of that day to operate at the peak of action was a definite drawback. To compensate for this, Brady and others made wide use of symbollsm.

The method used was simple enough. After a battle had been fought and the enemy had retreated, the photographers would "shoot" the battle scene, using such exposures as necessary to suggest the action of pitched battle.

Of all the battles that were fought during the Civil War years, there is only one photograph of a real battle. Believed to be taken by Brady, this picture shows the retreating army in the distance, while heavy artillery hits at the front lines.

It is pictures like these that make this not only a study of the Civil War, but of great and talented journalistic photography.

At one point in the war, Brady was photographing a battle scene when a musket ball hit his camera, demolishing it completely.

For the following three weeks, until he was able to secure another camera, Brady took many of his most memorable photos with a camera he had improvised from two cigar boxes.

Later on in the month there is a possibility that this exhibit will be opened to the public. But, according to Dr. Lloyd Luckmann, "This is a small possibility indeed."

Women Eligible For Two $150 Denman Grants

Two $150 scholarships will be awarded again this fall to outstanding women students who are graduates of San Francisco public high schools, Mary Golding, dean of women, said yesterday.

The scholarships are in memory of James Denman, a former San Francisco superintendent of schools and Board of Education president.

Applications for the award must be filed in the dean's office by November 22. The awards were started by Denman's son, the late Judge William Denman, and his sister, Mary Denman Cheatham, and was first presented as a medal to a promising girl in the eighth grade.

Students may begin to apply for the award November 1. Recommendations, usually written by the deans of men and women, are needed.

Two other awards, the Lesser scholarship of $1500 and the two Scottish Rite ones of $250 each, will be presented in the near future, the dean said.

These and other scholarships, Miss Golding explained, are offered to assist students here who need financial aid. They are awarded by the Committee on Scholarships, composed of Deans Golding and Ralph Hillsman and faculty members Verrel Weber, Fred Foultz, Mary Perry and Roy Burkhead.

Faculty members familiar with special subject scholarships also help in making the awards.

Four $50 scholarships, two given by the Chinese Students' Club and two by the International Relations Club, are among the awards to be presented this fall.

Eighteen scholarships were awarded last Wednesday to students in the hotel and restaurant department of the college, H&R placement director Lawrence B. Wong said.

The following students received awards: Kay Sera, $500; George F. Campbell, $500; Brennan Polley, $500; Wayne Gillette, $500; Wolfgang Rood, $500; Roy Piccinini, $500, and Goro Fukumitsu, $300.

Patrick Flaherty, $250; Charles F. Swanson, $250; Michael J. Stack, $250; Glenn H. Nance, $250; David Bartlett, $150; John D. Burch, $125, and Sandra Toganelli, $125.

Owen McClurg, $200, who is planning to transfer later to the University of Denver, and Bruce Linda, $200, who is planning to transfer to Michigan State.

College Sends 19 Delegates To Northern Regional Conference

Nineteen student representatives from the college and two faculty sponsors will travel to the annual Northern Region Junior College Student Government Association convention Saturday, October 20, at Hartnell College, Bill May, Associated Student president, confirmed today.

Mary Golding, dean of women, and Sherm Elworthy, Student Government adviser, will lead the student group to the Hartnell convention.

Freshmen council members Tony Reyes, Walter Rice and Alan Poletti, along with Sophomore council members Marcia Devlin, Peggy thom-Wohrden, Paulette Walti, Rich Gray, Sam Andrews and Jane Kayser will participate.

Cabinet officers John Theilen, finance chairman; Susan Fitzpatrick, Associated Women Student president; Rich Thomas, Freshman Class president, and Jim Fuller, Associated Men Student president, will also attend.

AS President May and Vice President Rosalie Weiner, along with Laurie Thurlwell, interim recording secretary; Dave Otey, card sales chairman; Bill Silver, Inter-Fraternity Council president, and Ed Pawlus, State Information chairman, complete the list of delegates.

Two-year colleges from as far south as Fresno and as far north as Shasta will assemble at the conference under a planned agenda of six workshops.

Spirit, campus organizations, finance, student government, athletics, and activities will be the topics of discussion in the workshops.

Reason for the mass two-year college meeting is to incorporate ideas for organizing activities to aid the student as much as possible, May commented.

The seal of the United States of America was approved by Congress on June 20, 1782.

Webb, Rodriguez Fill Two Of Four Council Vacancies

By Herman Kligerman

Two of the four vacant freshman seats on Student Council were filled at last Thursday's meeting.

Phyllis Webb, service coordinator for the Freshman Class, and Ben Rodriguez, formerly the appointed alumni liaison officer, were unanimously elected to the vacant posts. They were immediately sworn in by Associated Student President Bill May and then took their respective seats.

"Other nominations will be taken care of individually as they may arise," May stated. Aspirants can consult Rich Thomas, Freshman Class president; Larry Maibaum, election commissioner, or President May for more information.

Peter Monténen, Katie Dwyer, Ernest Gash and Art Dassow did not return to accept their election positions as freshman members of council this semester.

In other business associated with freshmen, Thomas revealed plans for a fresh "stag" night dance on campus sometime in the near future. He also mentioned that the orientation program should be overhauled before the new semester starts in February.

Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser, announced to council that College of Marin is seeking students to participate in discussion groups at the impending state California Junior College Student Government Association conference at Asilomar.

Applications are available in his office, S-147. Photos of the candidates should accompany each one.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity will sponsor a book drive for the Asian student foundation on campus all next week. Their goal is 1000 pieces of literature. Containers will be placed near the silver pole in Science Hall.

Top Pistol Team In Competition

The number one pistol team in California, the Campus Police squad coached by Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor and gunnery coach of the crack team, meets Oakland and Fort Ord teams next month.

The squad won the California and Bay Area championships by defeating top state and Bay Area champions from Navy, Army, Coast Guard, Marine and police pistol squads at Fort Ord last April.

While gaining national recognition as top marksmen, the team won three gold embellished plaques and individual medals.

Heading the pistol squad is Captain James Olson, assisted by Robert Mulhall, chief of Campus Police, and six policemen, David Sheehan, Ralph Brown, William Wilson, Jerry Shirinian, Howard Moody and Michael McKay.

The Sabre, Foil And Epee-Three Modern Weapons Of Fencing

(Editor's Note: The writer of the following article was a member of the college's fencing team last March when it upset the Air Force Academy to take the Western Intercollegiate Fencing Conference Championship.)

By William Linde

To the average college student, talk of fencing is a new experience and therefore might be referred to as unimportant or even "sissy" in relation to football or basketball.

But after becoming acquainted with the sport, one soon realizes why it is one of the most popular minor sports in the world.

The fundamentals of swordsmanship, whether for sport or deadly combat, have been practiced for centuries. The sport of fencing, as it is today, is subject to an ever-growing code of rules but differs little in basic technique from its more martial counterpart of other days.

Subsequently, the secret of championship fencing is not the development of new and unusual methods of offense and defense, but rather of a high degree of technical mastery of movements which have been developed through centuries of experience, plus perfect coordination, an almost automatic sense of timing and superior tactics.

The premium of modern fencing is placed on speed and coordination especially. There is little if any advantage given to sheer strength.

There are three different weapons used in modern fencing—the foil, the sabre and the epee.

While their basic principles are similar, it is important to have some knowledge of their structural differences and of their varying conventions of play in order to understand the differing techniques of each weapon.

The foil is a light weapon with a flexible, tapered quadrangular blade theoretically capable of inflicting a puncture wound only. Touches are therefore scored with the point of the weapon only and must land on a limited target.

In men's events the valid target includes the trunk of the body from the collar to the groin in the front and, in the back, to the top of the hip-bone line. A touch which lands on any other portion of the body is called "foul."

A foul carries no penalty, but it does halt the bout and nullifies any subsequent action by either fencer until play is ordered resumed by the director. Also, in men's foil, the first contestant to score five valid touches against his opponent is declared the winner.

The sabre, another weapon, has a large guard that curves around the hand to protect the knuckles, whereas the foil only has a small bell guard which covers the fingers.

Its blade is triangular and flexible. In addition to its point, it has theoretical cutting edges along the entire front and one-third of the back of the blade so that cuts as well as thrusts may be scored.

The sabre target includes all portions of the body above a horizontal line drawn through the highest points of intersection of the thighs and trunk of the fencer when in the "on guard" position.

To be valid, however, a cut must land cleanly on the target and must not whip over a parry when the fencer who is attacked defends himself by deflecting his opponent's blade sufficiently to break its force.

The effect of a "foul" is the same as in foil. Also, as in men's foil, the contestant who first scores five valid touches against his opponent is the winner.

The foil and the sabre are conventional weapons; that is, when both fencers are touched at more or less the same time the touch is frequently awarded against one or the other contestant by the application of the principles of the "right of way."

The one who initiates the offense (attacker) has the right of way. The fencer who is attacked must defend himself (parry) before assuming the offensive (riposte or counter-attack); having parried, he in turn gains the right of way, and so on.

The epee is the heaviest of the three weapons. It has a large bell guard and a rather rigid, heavy triangular blade. Touches are scored with the point only, but the valid target includes every portion of the body. There are no "foul" touches.

Furthermore, there are no conventions of right of way, and touches are scored solely on a time basis, that is, against the one touched first. If the fencers are hit simultaneously a touch is scored against both.

As in foil and sabre, five touches are required for victory. If, as a result of simultaneous touches, the score becomes five-five, the bout is continued until a decisive touch is scored.

In fencing there is a director, similar to the head linesman in football, and either two or four judges. The function of the judges is to spot touches and call them to the attention of the director.

The director is in complete charge of the bout; he alone gives the commands which start and interrupt the fencing; he may establish that a touch has landed and in this respect may overrule one but never both of the judges who are watching the same contestant.

He alone determines the right of way in foil and sabre and the judges have no vote in such matters. He analyzes the play of the contestants before rendering his decision as to who gets the touch.

The difficulty of judging foil and epee has resulted in the development of electric scoring devices. The epee machine is in general use; the foil machine is a recent innovation, and the 1955 world championships marked its first use in major international championship.

The epee or foil is wired and has a "button" at the tip which is depressed when a touch is made and records the touch by means of a light and buzzer on a central machine. Thus human error is eliminated.

From this brief resume of the fundamentals of fencing the reader may now understand why the sport of fencing has held its place in the imagination of men for at least 20 centuries.

Ram Late Rally Edges Chabot, 12-7

T-Birds Test College Defense Here Friday

Unhampered by the intellectual demands of the classroom, the Ram football squad will spend its Columbus Day holiday Friday on the turf of the college stadium battling the Oakland College Thunderbirds.

This Golden Gate Conference contest will pit one team that doesn't pass too well against one that does.

Although Oakland blew its opener against Fresno, 13-8, Calvin Huey, filling in for first string quarterback Bill Raabe, completed 13 of 28 attempts for 184 yards.

"We should have won," John Anastasia, Oakland's football mentor, declared. "The kids played well enough to win but penalties hampered us all afternoon."

Indeed they did. The East Bay eleven was assessed 140 yards for infractions as opposed to 40 against Fresno.

In all, the Oakland club outgained the valley team by 110 yards. But a key interception, a crucial injury and the aforementioned penalties all combined to thwart any further scoring.

The only Thunderbird score was a thing of beauty. It was a first-half drive that started on Oakland's six. Highlighted by a 42-yard pass from Huey to end Ken Grasso, the drive was capped by a 40-yard scoring screen pass from Huey to speedster Carl Evans.

Evans only stands 5-4, weighing 135, but he moves this frame at a 9.8 clip and was the Birds' outstanding rusher. He is complemented by 190-pound fullback Grady Harris.

Oakland abilities will be tested by a new-found passing attack coming from the arm of Ram halfback Walt Williams. In the college's losing effort against Phoenix, Williams completed two passes from the option play.

In last Saturday's league opener, he threw a 15-yard touchdown pass to Claude Shipp.

Passing isn't altogether new for Williams. While a senior at Galileo he was pressed into action as a tailback in the shotgun offense.

However, the big question mark will be Ron Coleman, the team's leading rusher. Coleman was sidelined in the Phoenix contest when he suffered a head injury. There was no concussion.

A resume of the Phoenix game can be characterized by two words—punt returns. Playing on fairly even terms the Rams were destroyed in the second half by three Arizona punt returns for a total of 157 yards.

These runs resulted either directly or indirectly in a total of 19 points. This turned a respectable 13-0 ball game into a 32-0 rout.

Coleman Tally Wins League Opener

Ron Coleman, a 170-pound halfback, smacked the Chabot line 28 times and scored the winning touchdown with 2:58 left in the game to give the Rams a 12-7 come-from-behind victory over the Gladiators Saturday in the Golden Gate Conference opener at Castro Valley High.

The 5-6 ex-Washington All-City back went over right guard from four yards out to culminate the 44-yard, game-winning drive.

Coleman, who received a severe head injury in last week's Phoenix contest and whose playing status wasn't determined until last Thursday, gained 140 yards for the day in his 28 carries.

Chabot (it rhymes with schmo) held the Rams, 1-1 in exhibition play, scoreless through the first three quarters, thanks to three fumble recoveries and two pass interceptions, but the Rams came alive when the losers were forced to punt from their own five.

Ben Brown returned a poor punt 15 yards to the San Francisco 17. After three plays gained only two yards, Coach Dutch Elston sent in halfback Walt Williams for his first action of the day.

The play was obvious. If anyone had seen City College play previously, he would have known what was about to happen. Chabot had not.

Williams took the handoff from quarterback Craig Schwartz, took two steps to his left, stopped and fired toward the sideline where halfback Claude Shipp pulled it in on the two and squirmed over. Williams missed on the extra point attempt and the Rams were down, 7-6, and still much of the fourth quarter left.

A bad center over punter Jerry Cooper's head in the first quarter set up the Chabot score. After recovering on the SF 24, the Gladiators were over on eight plays, making long yardage twice on fourth down plays.

Gerry Fisher, an All-Hayward quarterback, hit end Gary Woznick on a fourth and eight for ten yards and the touchdown.

A stubborn Ram defense, led by Dennis Drucker, George Benkie and Coleman, held the losers to 58 yards rushing and without a first down in the second half.

Twice the Rams threatened in the second half but couldn't put it over. Brown rambled 50 yards to the Chabot 30, but a fumble on the following play terminated the drive.

After Ernest Oliver led a three-man rush to block a Chabot punt on the Chabot 18, the college advanced to the one-yard line, but the Gladiators held on fourth down.—By David Kleinberg.

Ram Spikers Face Vikings; Lauden Out For Season

The Ram cross-country squad faces its first tough test of the year when it meets the Diablo Valley Vikings in a Columbus Day meet Friday in Golden Gate Park.

Bob Lauden, a freshman here from Polytechnic High School, will not be able to compete because of a badly sprained ankle, Coach Lou Vasquez said. The soft-spoken cross-country coach fears that Lauden, a great high school runner, may be lost for the season, and this could be costly.

With Lauden out and Roger Ritchey sidelined with an injury, the team's chances depend on Jose Valle, Steve Jackson, George Varmuza, all returning lettermen, and frosh Phil Dancel, Eugene Plotkin, Ozzie Norris and Hoy Henderson.

The league looks strong, with Foothill College and College of San Mateo looking formidable. Foothill's Bert Stringer, considered by Coach Vasquez as one of the best runners in the state, is not competing this year though.

San Mateo looked tough after solidly beating San Francisco two weeks ago. The Mateans took five out of the first seven places with Jim Huff leading the way with a 18:10.5 on the 3.2-mile Lake Merced course.

Waldon Hom's Three Goals Lead Booters Past Stanford, 4-1

By Fred Wales

With the one-two punch of rookie Waldon Hom, on offense, and Gary DeLong, last year's All-American, on defense, the City College soccer team kayoed the highly rated Stanford Indians, 4-1, at Balboa Stadium last Saturday.

Hom scored three times, and DeLong was the big defensive stopper.

City's first score came late in the first quarter when center forward Henry Lopez faked his man out of position and booted a perfect pass into Hom from the right side of the field 20 yards out.

Hom dribbled between two defenders, pivoted and smashed a hard drive past the goalie from 10 yards out.

Starting the second quarter the Rams scored the first time they were in possession. Charles Pina, center half, belted a 40-yard boot that ricocheted off the corner of the goal post.

Henry Lopez placed a perfect rebound shot through from 10 yards out for a 2-0 lead.

Two minutes later Hom scored his second goal. Faking one Indian completely off of his feet and dribbling through two more defenders, Hom rooted one past the goalie from 20 yards out.

Toward the end of the second quarter Stanford was given a penalty shot from 12 yards out on a highly disputed call, and Nigerian star Albert Nomli had no trouble putting it for the Indians' only score.

At halftime the Rams led, 3-1.

Defense, led by goalie DeLong, dominated the third quarter.

DeLong pulled down eight Stanford kicks and repeatedly thwarted the Indian drives. Left half Gordon Miller was also a defensive standout in his first varsity start.

The final Ram score came in the fourth quarter. Hom, one of the greatest Indian fighters since Davy Crockett, took a well-placed pass from Olaf Stohmeir and scored his third goal of the day, this one from 10 yards out.

The win left City with a 2-0 league record and a 4-0 overall mark.

The Rams take the road next Saturday to put their undefeated record up against the Cal Aggies at Davis.

A 'Dirty' Tale About The Home Run King

By Dave Kleinberg

THERE is a story about Mr. Willie Mays. It's a dirty tale. It displays the off-times ignorance and lack of faith in the San Francisco sports fan.

It's the sordid rap that Willie Mays, the greatest baseball machine of the era, can not hit in the clutch.

As with anyone high in the public eye, there are those who in their own feeble nescience try to destroy or distort the image. Willie has been the subject of the onslaught.

These people expect Willie to homer in every time at bat, and actually boo if he does not. They work and twist the statistics every way possible in attempts to show Mays' ineffective clutch hitting.

Willie, since arriving at the Giant camp in 1951, has always been a dependable ballplayer—in and out of the clutch. He proved it conclusively last week, when he propelled the Giants into the playoff with a home run in the final game of the season, beat the Dodgers and sent the town crazy with its first World Series.

Mays makes $90,000 per year. This has been questioned repeatedly. Is Willie worth it? Looking at it objectively, you must admit: No. No baseball player should make 90 G's if the President of the country only acquires $125,000.

But if you compare Willie and his worth with his contemporaries, there is no doubt. He's worth 90 G's or may be more.

From the time Willie sent the Giants into the playoffs with the Dodgers until the culmination of the World Series, Willie's blow that started the chain has been adding $150,000 to $400,000 per game to the players and the Giant organization in just paid attendance. The television and other rights run into astronomical figures.

Willie didn't choke. He did the opposite. But wait until next year. There will be those fans. They will continue to boo Willie. They will continue to expect a homer in every time at bat. They will continue to say he can not hit in the clutch.

Willie will disprove them again.

* * *

IF ANYBODY choked, it was the Los Angeles Dodgers. It's so strange to see a San Francisco team in the world championship. It looked as though it would never come. The 49ers came close so many times, and the Giants followed suit immediately.

In Panicville (Los Angeles), the "cinch-to-win" Dodgers dropped five of the last six, then two out of three to the Giants in the playoffs. How could a solid ball club like Los Angeles score but one run in 35 innings and fall apart to such a great degree? That question will be asked all winter.

While the Dodgers were folding, the Giants were molding. Four back, three back, two back, one back, Willie Mays, Gene Oliver—a few minutes apart and a San Francisco miracle.

SPORT JARGON has always been a little different from the normal, daily language, but nowadays you can't tell a sport story from the page one copy.

This was an official release from the San Francisco Seals ice hockey team. It appeared in the daily papers. Just insert Harry Bridges and Dr. Fred Schwarz in the proper places and:

"Manager-Coach Norman 'Bud' Poile announced yesterday that the San Francisco Seals have traded left winger Bob Salinger to the Los Angeles Blades for right winger Danny Belisle, even up."

Siska Tours London

By John McShane

Bob Siska, star of the college's tennis team which took the state championship last season, went on tour this summer, competing in the Wimbledon championship in London and in the Eastern Grass-court Circuit.

Leaving the United States following his final examinations, the self-sponsored Siska headed for Merry London Town to compete in the Queen's Club championship in preparation for Wimbledon.

"The main purpose of the Queen's Club championship is to let the players representing countries all around the world get used to the grass court before the big showdown," the former Lincoln graduate said.

The 20-year-old Ram star, the best singles player in the Big Eight Conference and the second best in the state last season, lost in four sets of the first round at Wimbledon to Mexican Davis Cupper Mario Llamas, 10-8, 6-4, 4-6 and 9-7.

Back to the states, Siska went East and played in seven tournaments in the Eastern Grasscourt Circuit. He played in various cities including Boston, Baltimore, Newport and Southampton.

He teamed with Ed Turnville Jr. at the National Doubles Tournament in Boston's Long Cricket Club and was one of the final 16 teams out of a field of 128. Siska and his partner lasted three rounds in the national competition.

Doubles victories are not new to Siska. He along with Ram Ed Jilka took the Big Eight Conference, the Northern California and the state championships.

"I learned a lot this summer," Siska noted. "I played and watched some of the finest players in the world and gained experience in doing so."

The left-handed Siska will return to lead the Rams next season.

BOB SISKA, who led the Rams to their first state tennis championship, spent his summer competing in major tourneys.

Entry Deadline For AMS Basketball Set

Deadline for intramural basketball petitions is next Tuesday, according to Jim Fuller, Associated Men Student president. Petitions are available in the AS office, S-134.

Two leagues are scheduled again this semester, one to be sponsored by the Council of Organizations, the other to be composed of Intra-Fraternity Council teams.

Each league is slated to field seven or eight teams with play to begin Tuesday, October 23. After a season of round robin play, the championship playoff will be held on the AMS sponsored Sports Night, scheduled for January 11.

A trophy will be awarded to the winners, along with medals for all participating players, Fuller said, with the outstanding player also awarded a trophy.

Frosh Dance At St. Francis; Curtain Rises On 'Brutus'

Three-Act Play Opens College Drama Season

Dear Brutus, a three-act mystery-comedy, will begin its engagement with a Midsummer Night's Dream atmosphere at 8 p.m. Friday in the college theater, where the curtain rises on the first of four performances.

The play, written by J. M. Barrie, will be presented on successive weekends, with the closing date Saturday, October 27.

Admission will be free to Associated Student members; general admission will be $1.

The setting of the play is an old, medieval type mansion of Elizabethan England. As the play opens, nine persons have been invited to spend a week as guests of Lob, played by Caesar Villaviecenclo, a veteran college production performer.

Lob, a mischievous looking fellow who reminds the audience of an ageless and quaint pixie, is plotting an unusual experience for his guests.

Aware that they do not know why they have been asked to visit Lob, the ladies come to realize that they have nothing in common.

Suspecting that the butler "knows something," they "blackmail" him by threatening to send a false telegram to the police accusing him of stealing their jewelry.

The butler tells them that soon an enchanted woods will appear and they must not venture into it.

Out of curiosity they, along with the male guests, decide to discover the wood's secret. The plot then takes them into a dream world, from which they eventually emerge.

Starring in the role of Margaret is Mary Atkinson, in her first dramatic performance. Helen Hayes made her debut in the American theater in this particular part.

The first actor to portray the leading male role in the comedy was William Gillette in 1918.

Karl Gillespie will take this role in the college production. A second semester drama student, he has recently appeared with the Interplayers in Eugene O'Neill's The Hairy Ape and in Thornton Wilder's Skin Of Our Teeth.

Other members of the cast include Sharon Richardson, Toni Mendelson, Diane Albino, Susan Henson, Claudette-suzanne Good, Fred Fiseher, Francesco Braghieri and Jerry Jump.

Dance Bids Available For 'The Way You Look Tonight'

By Edy Grant

Appropriate music for the theme, The Way You Look Tonight, will enliven the semiannual Frosh Ball set for 9 p.m. to 12 midnight this Friday at the Colonial and Mural rooms of the St. Francis Hotel, according to Rich Thomas, Freshman Class president.

Setting a precedent for the traditional Cutest Couple contest, the Freshman Class has turned selective in the procedure of choosing contestants.

Twenty couples will be chosen at the college prior to the ball on the basis of their appearance in interviews held by the Cutest Couple committee.

Along with five other couples selected at the ball, the 20 couples will compete for first, second and third places. Judges of the contest will be the class sponsors, Mary Perry and Edward Rogers, and Associated Student President Bill May.

Continuing to initiate original attractions, the Freshman Class will award first place winners with dinner tickets to the Garden Court of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel.

Second prize will include a dinner at the Four Seas restaurant and tickets to Oliver, playing at the Curran.

For the third place winners, a dinner at A. Sabella will be provided.

Students can get bids at the silver pole in Science Hall during the remainder of this week. Thomas urged freshmen, since they have first priority, to obtain their bids early because only 400 will be available on a first-come, first-serve basis.

An Associated Student card assures free admission provided it is accompanied by a bid, Thomas announced, but the cost for other students is $1.50.

Providing the music for the affair will be Dick Crest and his 10-piece orchestra. Additional entertainment has also been planned for the evening.

Cocktail dresses and dark suits will be the proper attire for the semiformal function, Thomas added.

'King Of Kings' Due For C-Hour

A film-strip version of King Of Kings, a Hollywood spectacular that portrays the life of Christ, will be shown during College Hour Friday in C-245, Laurie Thurlwell, president of the Roger Williams Fellowship, said today.

The film-strip version, compiled by the original producers, MGM, consists of still shots of some of the most significant scenes from the full-length original that was shown as an exclusive engagement in San Francisco.

The film was obtained through the assistance of the pastor of the West Portal Baptist Church.

It will last 30 minutes, and a discussion concerning the film's controversial issues will follow, Miss Thurlwell said. Several denominations have banned the movie. The showing will be accompanied by narrative.

Jeffrey Hunter and Robert Ryan head the cast, with Hunter portraying Christ, and Ryan in the role of Pilate.

Successful Iranian Drive Nets $174

Iranian Relief Day, October 5, was a $174 success, Bill Silver, Council of Organizations president, reported today.

Cosponsor of the event was the International Relations Club, under the direction of Joseph Jacobsen.

The money will be forwarded to the office of Mayor George Christopher, where the campaign originated with school department participation supported by the Board of Education. All public and parochial schools, colleges and universities were asked to participate.

Fifty-two jars and baskets were placed around the campus. Bill May, Associated Student president, stated, "The project worked out well, considering that it was a spur-of-the-moment thing."

Theme of the drive was to show the sympathy of the people of San Francisco and to express it with help for the earthquake victims of Iran. The Iranian consul in San Francisco will use the fund to restore educational activities in Iran.

The Big Day

Plans Progress For Homecoming Fete

Working with the Rally Committee toward the success of this year's Homecoming festivities, the Council of Organizations will make arrangements for a queen contest, car parade and dance, Otto Van Duyn, rally commissioner, announced this week.

The committee will provide entertainment for the rally, slated for Friday, November 9, during College Hour. Van Duyn added that he hopes to bring professional performers to the rally.

Bill Silver, COO president, declared that the possibility of a Homecoming dance this year is "very good," though arrangements are still pending.

In the Homecoming game, the Ram eleven faces the Diablo Valley Vikings for the final home game of the 1962 season.

Van Duyn announced that a special freshman rooting section will be set up at this Friday's game against Contra Costa College in the college stadium. He urged students to attend and display some "good old-fashioned spirit."

Art Students Donate Toward Bird Sanctuary

Art department students have been donating money to the Audubon Canyon Ranch, which is to be used as a natural bird sanctuary, art instructor Robert Kovacic said yesterday.

Donations go toward buying the privately owned ranch and preserving it as a wildlife refuge.

The ranch is a joint project of the Golden Gate and Marin Audubon Societies. Located on Bolinas Lagoon, 25 miles north of San Francisco, the 507-acre ranch contains rolling meadows, deciduous woodland and two canyons forested with redwood and Douglas fir.

Along with the ranch the societies are obtaining Bolinas Lagoon on a 50-year lease at one dollar an acre. This waterway provides a sanctuary for thousands of migrating and wintering shore and water birds. Birds of all types use it for food and rest.

Owners of the ranch are contributing 132 acres as a gift, while the remaining 375 acres must be purchased for $300,000.

Upon completion, the haven will offer a major education center for students from all of Northern California. Study of varied species of birds, wild animals and flowers will be possible.

Also, in nearby Bolinas Lagoon, tidelands and submerged reefs can provide interesting study. In the near future summer camps will make swimming, hiking and camping possible, the sponsoring societies anticipate.

For other students who are interested in making contributions, the address of the San Francisco branch is: Golden Gate Audubon Society, P. O. Box 2113, San Francisco.

Ralph Sutton Jazz Duo Appears In Concert Here During C-Hour Friday

By Michel Janicot

Jazz savants and afficionados of the college will not have to go to the Blackhawk or the Jazz Workshop to appreciate jazz during College Hour on October 19, for the versatile Ralph Sutton Jazz Duo will appear in the theater here on that date, Meyer Cahn, music instructor, announced yesterday.

Sutton will play with string bass instrumentalist Gary Elmwood and will discuss the jazz of the "Swing Era," in a lecture entitled The Jazz Age.

A tall, crew-cut, broad-shouldered, serious looking man of 40 from Hamburg, Missouri, Sutton has been on the jazz scene since he was 10 years old. At that time he was playing weekend riffs in his father's dance band and studying classics at the same time.

His most important influence was Fats Waller, but Bach still is part of his limbering-up exercises.

After graduation from high school he enrolled as a music major in Kirksville State Teachers College in Missouri.

Sutton Joins

Trombonist Jack Teagarden heard the 19-year-old student "blow" one night, and soon Sutton joined the band. His career was interrupted by army service, and he rejoined the trombonist in Birdland, the mecca of New York's 52nd Street.

He won the Arthur Godfrey Talent Scout contest in 1948 and played with such jazz giants as the great Sidney Bechet, Pops Foster, Eddie Condon and Gordon Jenkins. He took over the solo piano chair at Eddie Condon's, playing with Pee Wee Russell, "Lips" Page and "Peanuts Hucko" in the same year.

"This Is Jazz"

He has appeared on the ABC television series, This Is Jazz, with Louis Armstrong, the Garry Moore Show and Project 20.

In New York City he has played at the Village Vanguard, Jimmy Ryan's, the Embers, Basin Street East, Eddie Condon's and the Town Hall, and recorded numerous albums for Columbia, Decca, RCA Victor, Verve and Roulette.

He has appeared at the Newport Jazz Festivals, the Royal Festival of London and the Symphony Hall in Boston. In San Francisco he is currently packing the fans in the Lower Lounge of the Hotel Mark Hopkins. He has also performed at the Hangover, the Squaw Valley Lodge, the London House in Chicago and the Sheraton-Gibson in Cincinnati.

Ralph Moves

In 1956 Sutton moved to San Francisco with his wife and three sons, and he now plays in Bay City jazz clubs, records in Hollywood, and flies East for several engagements each year.

Critiques have ranked Sutton to a firmly based recognition: "A joyous sound; a splendid four-hand piano; a specialist of astonishing skill," says The New Yorker.

Time praised Sutton for "some of the solidest piano ever being pounded out today," while Downbeat said, "Rare rhythmic feeling." And the Saturday Review prophesied that a "great new syncopated star had risen."

Herb Caen's View

In the local reviews Herb Caen of The Chronicle commented, "Ralph Sutton, who plays jazz piano as if he invented it," and Ralph Gleason, also of The Chronicle, declared, "Sutton, one of the best pianists in jazz today . . . tremendous personal beat and drive."

Andre Previn once referred to Sutton as "one of the few jazz pianists who had complete mastery of his instrument."

With such cards in his hand Sutton is considered a man well worth listening to.

RALPH SUTTON, described by The Chronicle's Herb Caen as playing jazz "like he invented it," appears Friday in the college theater in a duo with Gary Elmwood.

Nineteen Attend Northern Region Confab Saturday

Nineteen delegates from the college will participate in the workshops of the Northern Region Junior College Student Government Association conference at Hartnell College in Salinas this Saturday, Peggy Thom-Wohrden, sophomore member of Student Council, said today.

There will be nine workshops which City College students will attend. Representatives include Bill Silver and Lauri Thurlwell in campus organization and activities; Dave Otey in current problems; Bill May and Alan Poletti in student government, and Miss thom-Wohrden, Susan Fitzpatrick and Jane Kayser will join the "spirit" workshop.

Other workshops and their members are finance, Paulette Walti, Rich Gray and John Theilen; campus organization, Rosalie Weiner and Ed Pawlus; athletics, Tony Reys and Jim Fuller; judicial systems, Walter Rice and Sam Andrews; current problems, Marsha Devlin, and freshman orientation, Ben Rodriguez and Vince Contreras.

This day-long conference will draw representatives of two-year colleges from throughout Northern California. The group of student leaders will discuss the current problems pertaining to the diversified activities predominant in colleges today.

Participants in the open discussions expect to gain knowledge in the fields that they have chosen. They also expect to acquire new ideas that will shed new light on the many problems that confront a college.

Book Drive To Aid 12 Asian Countries

An Alpha Sigma Delta sponsored "educational" book drive to benefit 12 Asian countries will end on campus Friday, Bill Miles, president of the fraternity, announced last week.

Hard-back texts published after 1945 concerned with the subjects of English and mathematics are especially wanted. Hemingway, Balzac, Emerson, Dickens and Plato are also particularly desirable, Miles said.

Containers are placed at prominent places around the campus.

Magazines or books other than those described above are of no use.

All contributions will be sent to the local chapter of the Asian Foundation. From there they will be shipped to countries in the western world.

According to Miles, fraternity members will pick up books at students' homes after this Friday if there is sufficient call for them.

The Asian Foundation, coordinating this project with the college's fraternity, is a nonprofit, nonpolitical organization, begun 11 years ago in California.

Mississippi To Outer Space— SF Cares Only About Our Giants

IN THE PAST WEEKS, the major news stories of the year have been presented to the eyes of the nation, and the public reaction to them has been most interesting.

In refusing to let a Negro enter the halls of University of Mississippi, the state's governor, Ross Barnett, openly and audaciously defied the law of the land. Rioting broke out, and two were killed and the federal government was forced to send 11,500 federal troops to quell the hostilities and keep the peace. Fifty per cent of the Mississippi student body refused to attend classes, and the site of an athletic event had to be switched for fear of more outbreaks of violence. America's prestige suffered throughout the world.

America's greatest scientific space achievement was completed when Walter M. Schirra Jr., a 39-year-old Navy commander, landed in the Pacific after a 160,000-mile ride in space. It was a perfect six-orbital flight. Schirra called it a "textbook flight" that could have gone for "12 more orbits."

Richard Nixon and Governor Edmund G. Brown battled in a sharp, one-hour exchange in one of America's TV debates. In short opening statements, Brown defended his administration, and Nixon predicted that another four years of it would be poison for California.

But the majority of the San Francisco public was not greatly concerned with state, national and international happenings. The Giants had handed San Francisco its first major league flag after a three-game playoff with the Los Angeles Dodgers, and the city was baseball mad. People who didn't know a hit batter from a field goal, a Willie Mays from a John Brodie, were suddenly saying, "Boy, our Giants are great." Everyone became a baseball fan overnight. The city flipped.

That pennant-winning night 50,000 stormed the airport to meet the heroes, and the city that knows how filled its downtown streets with a celebration the likes which have not been seen since V-J Day. Through the evening, Market street bore every aspect of New Year's Eve. There were horn-blowing and streamer-streaming automobiles, cheering, laughing, sometimes wobbling pedestrians, mixing in the merry pandemonium.

You could look at the situation with a cynical eye and justifiably claim that the outcome of baseball is not germane to the world problems and conditions. You could say the people are fatuous and are trying to hide from reality. But can you?

In days when mankind threatens to blow itself off the face of the earth, the average person can not always comprehend these problems, and many times can do nothing about them.

The world is not the happiest place. The United States seems to be getting nowhere; disarmament talks at Geneva remain at a stalemate; Mr. Khrushchev continues to rattle his missiles at us. The cold war doesn't seem to thaw out, and most likely the average person would go psychotic a lot quicker worrying about world problems than he would by seeking momentary escapes from reality.

One has to admit that anything that can make so many people happy and smile, anything that can bring a city together, has to be good. Baseball has made San Francisco and its inhabitants, momentarily, a happy town.

Lucky Kiss

Mute Mascot Possible Link To High Grades

A college tradition to be initiated . . .

The Redwood Ram—stalwart, sturdy, standing tall in scarlet magnificence—needs to be kissed.

This mute mascot maintaining a strong, staunch vigil, looms high in front of Smith Hall, surveying the campus with quiet dignity, yet he stands with all the pride and pomp of a Roman gladiator in full regalia.

He needs to be kissed.

Undaunted by blistering winds or blazing sunshine, this guardian of student welfare stands poised, ready to pounce upon any and all rascals detrimental to student welfare. He needs to be kissed.

On bleak, wintery nights his towering bulk seems to take on a new grandeur—one of a prince, alone at his majestic domain, waiting for dawn when once again his subjects shall appear.

How can such altruism, such devotion go unrewarded? Kiss the Ram.

When commencement period arrives, he is like a parent alone. And with resigned acceptance to the fact that his children have grown and must leave him, he awaits a new day, a new generation.

He deserves to be kissed.

A new generation of students—transistor radios, twist music and all—converge about campus; some stare at him with amazement, some perhaps with amusement, but no matter. He deserves to be kissed.

And kissed he was—once. In 1958 a comely coed, Diane Schubert, kissed him on the cheek and patted him on the nose, and it has been rumored that she received unusually high scores on her midterm examinations.

As to the effectiveness of this act, he can only answer in silence, yet at the very mention of a traditional midterm kiss, the Ram seems to stand a bit taller, a bit more proud. One can almost see a faint gleam in his eyes, a faint smile on his lips.

In fact, if he could speak and if it were not for his princely decorum, he would probably rear his hind legs and say, "A traditional midterm kiss is a smashing idea!"

What Type Of Exam Do You Prefer, Objective Or Essay?

By John Silva and Richard Michael

Marcia Muser, freshman:
I prefer exams to be half essay and half objective. On essay tests I can go into more detail and expound on information given in lectures.

Marty Musikant, sophomore:
I don't like either of them. I would prefer oral examinations. That way I could tell the instructor exactly what I know, and I wouldn't have to worry about eloquent prose. Objective exams are too mechanical. Last semester I took an IBM test and missed every question because I marked the wrong blanks on my answer sheet.

Ellen Hobson, freshman:
It's objective tests for me. You either know it or you don't in objective exams, whereas in essay tests you have to prove you know it. Objective exams don't require as much thinking or originality.

MARCIA MUSER
"I prefer exams to be half essay and half objective."

Jack Aslan, freshman:
Objective tests are better, because in this type of test there are no variables; there is only one answer—the correct one. Whereas in the essay type the student could be at a disadvantage if he didn't write well.

Marilyn O'Malley, freshman:
I like objective tests for only one reason: if I miss a question I lose only two points, but if I miss one essay question, I could miss 30 points. Otherwise I think essay questions are better, because if I read the text, I invariably do well in essay exams.

Alex Potitzer, sophomore:
For the student who really wants to learn, essay exams are better. I prefer them. They give me a chance to study my subject thoroughly through outside reading. Objective tests seem insufficient and contain too much textbook material.

Wendy Groner, sophomore:
I prefer objective examinations. They require me to know specific terms and are better tests of technical information in scientific fields. I find that topics concerning theories, beliefs and opinions are most readily revealed in objective exams.

Jerry Cooper, freshman:
I do well on objective exams, so I prefer them. They seem to be more specific, whereas the essay type seems more general.

• Mays In The Clutch

Editor, The Guardsman:

Thank you for your opinion of Willie Mays. It is refreshing to find a person in San Francisco who has something to say for "no-clutch hitting" Willie.

I'm not against him, but I sure would liked to have seen a few more homers hit in the clutch than when we were six runs ahead.

When you talk about the clutch hitters, you don't think about Mays, you usually think of Jimmy Davenport or Harvey Kuenn. Willie is not being paid for hitting in the clutch; rather he is paid for the great ball player he is and nothing else.

Telstar Age's Lexicon

By Michel Janicot

American students of English 1-A should not compiain about the difficulties of the English language, its vocabulary and usage.

The visitor from England is the one who has the problem.

In England, or in English-speaking countries of the Commonwealth, the Englishman starts his day by putting on a vest (undershirt), pants (shorts), a shirt, trousers (pants) supported by braces (suspenders), a waistcoat (vest), shoes, a strictly black conservative suit, a bowler (derby) and an umbrella; gum boots (overshoes) are de rigueur when it rains in autumn (fall).

Leaving his flat (apartment) or his maisonette (duplex) by the lift (elevator), he then proceeds to the works (factory). He can either use a tram (street car), the underground (subway) or his own right-handed wheel motorcar (automobile).

Petrol (gasoline) costs three shillings or 42 cents a gallon, imperial gallon, that is, and traffic uses the left hand side of the road. He might be the victim of a puneture (flat tire) or an accident with a lorry (truck) where his mudguard (fender) requires repairs.

Arriving at the office, he parks in the car park (parking lot) and sets to work.

Coffee with whipped cream (the American coffee with cream), tea and biscuits (cookies) compose the "eleven" (coffee break) until the luncheon of bap (soft bread roll) and broccoli or spaghetti sandwiches at 1 o'clock.

Tea time is at 4 and the working day ends at 5 p.m.

Right away, the rush is to the local pub (bar), where a glass of whiskey without ice is served for one shilling or 14 cents and a bottle of warm beer two shillings and six pence or 35 cents. The pubs close at 6 and the daily traffic jam sets at 6:15 p.m. sharp.

The pavements (sidewalks) are packed with bicycles and the foot passengers (pedestrians) have the right of way in the streets.

Friday evening is reserved to go to the pictures (movies); Saturdays and Sundays are usually spent coaching (sightseeing by bus) or visiting museums and parks. Nannies push prams (baby carriages) and children hold their dogs by a lead (leash).

The Englishman usually eats sweets (candy) and boudoir biscuits (ladyfingers) bought at the local chemist's (drugstore) while reading the daily (newspaper) or listening to the wireless (radio) or the gramophone (phonograph) in his drawing room (living room).

He uses drawing pins (thumb tacks), flex (electric cord), polat (electric outlet), torch (flashlight), tap (faucet), cooker (stove); he posts (mails) his letters in a pillar box (mail box) and calls the (rest room) a lavatory.

In a restaurant, the Englishman uses a serviette (napkin), the fork never leaves his left hand and (dessert) becomes sweet. He pays the account or the bill (check) and tips are not mandatory.

Bayside Bastille Victory

Soccermen Swamp Inmates, 6-0, In Brief Visit To San Quentin

By John McShane

Memories that linger. The beauty and plushness of one of California's most exclusive resorts was witnessed by 23 students of the college recently.

Situated in sunny Marin county, the showplace offers a breathtaking view of Richardson Bay and spacious grounds to please the guests.

It-is no wonder, with all the excellent accommodations, that the restful haven has a present number of 3700 guests who stay, on an average, two and a half years. Many of the occupants return again and again to enjoy "all the conveniences of home."

Another highlight of this enchanting hideaway is that all of the guests are given clothes to wear when they come to stay, compliments of the management. And it is very easy to make arrangements for a stay; all you have to do is to commit a crime.

The Sheraton Quentin, more commonly known as San Quentin penitentiary or the "Bayside Bastille," is open all year round to California men criminals.

Twenty-three innocent soccer players from the college invaded the premises and seclusion of the prison September 30 to play the "insiders'" soccer team at Coughlin Field on the prison grounds.

The college team, led by Coach Roy Diederichsen, played athletic policemen in curtailing any scoring opportunity by the Pirate soccer team. The Rams defeated the inmates 6-0.

Cheers and concurrent boos greeted the college players as they took the field. There were about 300 prisoners watching the action of the game.

All around the outskirts of the field were various musical groups lending almost as much spirit as the University of California's straw hat band.

After the game, one of the prison players in the spirit of fine sportsmanship came up to a college player and said, "Nice game, fellow; I'll see you next year if I'm still here."

Dinner was served to the visiting players in the guards' dining room. Before entering the room, the athletic director of Quentin said, "You can leave your bags out here; we have no crooks around here."

An interesting day spent, the players, that is the college players, embarked to the "City by the Golden Gate" with many memories stored up of a well-spent day away from the regular, but satisfying, routine.

Actually there is only a slight difference between keeping your chin up and stieking your neck out, but it is worth knowing.

Hygiene Classes Profit From New Ampex Recorder

By Boyd Burtnett

The new Ampex tape recorder, valued at $22,310, was put to use Monday and Tuesday of last week when health class movies were taped and replayed for all hygiene classes from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., according to Henry Leff of the radio and television department.

Recording both audio and video, the tape recorder was a gift from W. Eitel, president of Eitel-McCullough Inc. It was installed in the control room of the radio and television department in the arts building this summer.

The recorder, according to Leff, will be a boon to various other departments at the college as well as the radio and television department.

Television distribution lines have been connected to S-100 and S-136 to aid the science department, Leff pointed out, but as yet there has been no programming in Science Hall.

He said the first use of the recorder was after the September 21 Roy Bogas concert. The concert was played back in front of Bogas and an overflowing crowd after the College Hour recital in the choral room of the arts building.

Tapes used in the recording process cost $248, but, as Leff pointed out, they can be erased and used for another running.

Closed-circuit television was first utilized at the college in the 1961 summer session.

Faculty Awards Committee Selects Hamilton Wong For Lucille Lesser Scholarship

Award of one of two annual Lucille Lesser scholarships to Hamilton Wong was announced last week by the faculty committee on awards and loans.

Wong, a freshman here, is a graduate of Lowell High School and was one of eight contestants who applied for the scholarship. His major is engineering, and he plans to become either a mechanical or electrical engineer.

The total scholarship fund of $33,000 ($3000 more than originally announced) is to be expended over an 11-year period, with two awards made annually, one in the fall and one in the spring, the faculty committee said.

Funds are distributed on a three-point basis. Candidates must be graduates with a superior record of a San Francisco high school, must spend four semesters here and transfer to a four-year college or university to "earn" a total amount of $1500.

Upon completion of each semester at the college, Wong and other winners each year will receive $125 through a period of four semesters.

After registration at a four-year college or university he will receive $250 per semester for four semesters. Each amount depends on the recipient maintaining superior scholastic standing, or completion of 30 units of university parallel courses with better than a C average, Dean Mary Golding, scholarship chairman, explained.

Before the final selection of Wong was made, applicants appeared before two members of the faculty awards and loan committee for an interview.

As with other scholarships, need and activities are considered as well as scholastic records, Dean Golding said.

The scholarships, established in memory of the donor's wife, was first presented to the college last spring, and President Louis G. Conlan made the formal presentation of the award to Wong October 8.

CPS Offers Student Discount On Group Health Insurance

For the third consecutive year, the college's Associated Students have obtained a special group insurance plan for students here through arrangement with the California Physicians Service.

Eligibility requirements for this policy are that a student be currently enrolled at the college and have an AS card, according to Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser.

The cost is $13 for AS cardholders and $15 for non-cardholders for one semester's coverage. Coverage includes weekends, holidays and, if signed up to include the spring semester, the entire summer vacation.

Membership may be secured for one year, and applicants can receive further information on the cost from Elworthy.

The purpose of the health plan is to give students, not covered by family policies, coverage against accidents that occur away from home or at the college.

The plan provides hospital benefits, X-ray and laboratory tests, surgical benefits and physician visits to the hospital for illness or injury.

Students have free choice of a physician under the plan's terms.

In an interview last week Elworthy urged students to consider the plan seriously, since there is no college provision to cover injury or illness other than the minor type provided by the registered nurse on duty daily in S-190.

If such a plan were applied for outside the campus, it could cost up to $20 quarterly, Elworthy emphasized.

Full information and application blanks are now available in Elworthy's office, S-147.

H&R Extension In Blueprint Stage

Blueprints are now being mapped for addition to the hotel and restaurant and cafeteria facilities here from funds provided by the Statler Foundation, plus supporting donations collected last spring.

The new addition will be an east wing adjoining Smith Hall, and the main purpose will be enlargement of facilities for the H&R training program here, according to Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal education.

A lecture-demonstration room, in the form of an amphitheater, is one of the newly planned additions. It will seat 90 students and will be used for demonstration purposes.

The plans also provide for a demonstration kitchen, which will be used exclusively for the purpose of executing food preparations.

Also included in the plans is a library to include reference books associated with the hotel and restaurant program. This will be the only library of its kind in this area, and will be available both to students and to industry, Batmale said.

The fund is $100,000 from the Statler Foundation, and $50,000 from industry and H&R contributions.

Thirteen Officers Added To Campus Police Active Duty

A total of 350 parking citations had been issued a year ago at this time, but this semester an all-time high stands at 1050, Robert Mulhall, chief of Campus Police, announced today.

The Campus Police under Mulhall is composed of two deputy chiefs, Larry Stanfield and Thomas Cain, and 30 special officers.

Only 13 of these men are active policemen thus far, and they have totalled 280 hours of patrol on the campus.

The active Campus Police are William Barckiay, Le Roi Cann, Woodrow Herve, Howard Histed, John Irwin, James Kenney, Russell Leoni, Albert Mendoza, William O'Shea, Garry Pierce, Jerrold Shirinian, Edward Tank and Ronald Wilcox.

Mulhall, Stanfield and Cain round out the total force at present.

Merchandisers Schedule Dance

The Harbor King sightseeing cruiser will be the site of the Merchandising Club's Harbor Lights dance Friday, October 26, Warren Spiegel, publicity chairman of the club, announced today.

The seafaring vessel will leave from Pier 43 on Fisherman's Wharf at 9 p.m. and return to the same location at approximately 12 midnight. Boarding will begin a half-hour earlier, Spiegel said.

Spiegel explained that refreshments will be served on board during the cruise. Food will be free and soft drinks will be served at a nominal cost. A door prize will also be awarded.

Cost is $5 per couple, and Spiegel added that one person in each pair must be a City College student.

An estimated 250 persons are expected to attend this dance, which is the first of its kind ever to be sponsored by the college or an organization here.

Dress will be semiformal, Spiegel said.

Council Votes Funds For Second Vaccine

By Dick Bullard

A motion to allot Associated Student funds for the purchase of 3000 doses of type two Sabin oral vaccine was passed at last Thursday's Student Council meeting. The vote was six to five, with one abstaining.

The seafaring vessel will leave from Pier 43 on Fisherman's Wharf at 9 p.m. and return to the same location at approximately 12 midnight. Boarding will begin a half-hour earlier, Spiegel said.

Spiegel explained that refreshments will be served on board during the cruise. Food will be free and soft drinks will be served at a nominal cost. A door prize will also be awarded.

An estimated 250 persons are expected to attend this dance, which is the first of its kind ever to be sponsored by the college or an organization here.

Dress will be semiformal, Spiegel said.

The point was brought up that drivers who park their cars on the hill find it almost impossible to move them at the end of the day because of being hemmed in by late arrivals.

On the lighter side, the council took time out Thursday to honor the top AS card salesmen. Top award went to Alan Poiettl, who received an engraved desk pen for selling a total of 425 cards.

Second and third places went respectively to Richard Gray with 300 sales and Sam Andrews with 260. Both received Parker fountain pens. Dave Otey, card sales chairman, told the council that card sales total 2700.

Regarding the cafeteria, Elworthy said seating arrangements in Smith Hall have been altered to provide 31 more seats. "Of course, the ever present patrols will remain to discourage the long distance gangs," Elworthy added.

A section of the main cafe will be partitioned off at lunch for the use of students purchasing plate lunches.

Earl Hansen, West Coast manager of General Aniline Productions, a division of Ansco Company, was on campus this week to view the college's current exhibition of Civil War photography.

The exhibit, currently being shown in the gallery of Cloud Hall, is on loan from the Ansco Company's main office in New York.

The exhibit, called "one of the most complete ever assembled," was obtained through the efforts of Madison Devlin of the audio-visual aids department.

All pictures have been labeled by Ansco, and a descriptive explanation accompanies each picture.

The exhibit is arranged according to naval, infantry and cavalry battles. Another category includes famous persons representative in the Civil War period.

The collection of photographs will remain on exhibit until the end of this month when it will be shipped to San Jose State College.

Federal Loans Again Available To Students Here

Student loans under the National Defense Education Act will again be available this semester to students requiring financial assistance, Fred Foultz, chairman of the Federal Loan Committee here, announced today.

Loans, starting at $500 but not exceeding $1000 in any given year, can be obtained by students who qualify for the program.

Qualifications for the loan is a minimum 2.6 grade point average in all semesters of college work, Foultz said. Applications can be obtained in Dean Ralph Hilisman's office, S-149, or Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150.

Preference will be given to those students undertaking a course of study in a science, mathematics, foreign language, education or a professional field.

Determination of the number of students to receive loans, Foultz explained, depends on the amount of money allotted to the college by the federal program.

Students are required to begin repayment of the loan within one year after graduation, and must complete payment within a ten-year period. Students who enter either elementary or secondary teaching will be required to repay only 50 per cent of the loan minus three per cent interest.

Travelogues Set For College Hour

Switzerland and Glimpses Of Colorful Portugal are the two films to be shown during College Hour this Friday, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor, announced last week.

The films, which will be shown in S-136, depict the culture of the Swiss and the Portuguese, with colorful shots of the surrounding countrysides.

The travelogues take the viewer on a journey through Switzerland and Portugal, Devlin said. This is the third in a series of films to be shown at the college.

International Tea And Dance Feature IRC Entertainment

International Relations Club students here will provide entertainment at the third annual international tea and dance to be held between 4 and 7 p.m. Friday at San Francisco State College, Joseph Jacobsen, IRC sponsor here, announced today.

Approximately 1000 foreign students attending local colleges have also been invited to participate in this affair.

The American Federation of Musicians' Union, Local No. 8, has approved live music for the dance, which will be provided by Larry Bukovich and his orchestra.

The event is being cosponsored by the Golden Gate Chapter of the American Red Cross and the San Fraeisco Rotary Club.

In addition to this activity, City College's IRC is presently engaged in making plans for its ninth annual fair, slated for Friday, November 9, at Marina Junior High School auditorium, Jacobsen added.

To coincide with this activity this year, members of the club will appear on the Ben Alexander Show during a "spectacular" on Friday, November 2, to publicize it. An Israeli dance group from the college is scheduled to perform on this show, to be offered on KTVU-TV at 7:30 p.m.

"Our Associated Student Publicity Chairman, Herman Kligerman, is also working on a possible showing on Dick Stewart's dance party TV show in the near future," Jacobsen said.

Proceeds from the fair will benefit the Colombian unit of the Peace Corps. Tickets will be sold for $1.25 for aduits and 75 cents for children, and may be purchased in S-155 or at the door November 9.

Fiesta Time Around The World is the theme of this year's festival.

In addition to City College students, members of international groups from San Francisco State and Golden Gate Colleges will be featured in this event. "The majority of the acts will come from this college, though," Jacobsen said.

Exhibits, performers — both singers and dancers—and delicacies characteristic of the countries represented will be offered at the fair.

In conjunction with the fair a talent contest will be held on campus in the near future to select American talent to perform. The Council of Organizations, under President Bill Silver, is arranging this activity.

A possibility looms that participants in this competition may have a good chance to appear on a local television show.

AWS Plans Show For November 8

Grandstand Glamour, the semiannual Associated Women Student fashion show and tea, is planned for Thursday, November 8, from 3 to 5 p.m. in Smith Hall, according to Sue Fitzpatriek, AWS president.

The clothes that will be modeled in the show are from the new H. Liebes department store in Westlake Shopping Center. The models will be women students from the college.

One of the highlights of the fashion show and tea will be the presentation of the Inter-Sorority Council semi-annual plaque. The plaque is given to the freshman woman who obtains the highest grade point average in the first midterm period, Miss Fitzpatriek explained.

This semester's AWS officers are Imogene Walker, vice president; Diana Moore, recording secretary, and Paulette Waiti, fashion coordinator.

COO Readies For 5th Annual Fund Drive

Plans for the Council of Organizations' fifth annual Christmas Fund Drive are now in effect, according to Sherman J. Elworthy, Student Council adviser.

A double College Hour will be held on Friday, December 7, in order to launch the drive.

Money from the Christmas Fund will be turned over to the needy children in the Bay Area, Elworthy said. A list of the children will be supplied to the college by recognized charity groups such as the Salvation Army and the Red Cross.

How To Score Six Points

IF EVERY FOOTBALL PLAY went like this one, every coach would continually smile, and every game would end in a 218 to 218 tie. Against L. A. Valley, Walt Williams (14) took the handoff and circled left end. With his speed he turned the corner on two Valley tacklers, but the block that made the play go was thrown by fullback Mel Tom (83) on L. A. defender on far left. Ram (24) is Claude Shipp. It was a perfect 48-yard romp. —Guardsman photo by John Miller.

Booters Win By Forfeit

Maintaining an undefeated record, the Ram soccer team received its seforfeit victory of the season when the Cal Aggies of Davis were forced to cancel out.

Although the contest, scheduled at Davis Saturday, would have been postponed because of heavy rains, Coach Roy Diederichsen announced last Thursday that the Aggies had forfeited.

The Aggies had only seven eligible players, four shy of the mark. The remainder of the Cal team would have been made up of graduates and freshmen, both ineligible in the conference.

The forfeit leaves the Rams in first place with a three-win, no-loss record in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer League and an overall 5-0 record.

The unheralded second string varsity players, the Junior Varsity, has also compiled a 5-0 overall record and are 3-0 in league encounters. Surpassing the varsity in one respect, they have yet to be scored upon this season.

They shut out Menlo, 6-0; San Quentin, California by forfeit; Stanford, 1-0, and the Aggies by forfeit.

Scoring the JV's lone goal against Stanford was Washington Viteri, a rookie, who smashed one through unassisted from 20 yards out.

Other standouts were goalie Mike Remi and left half Lee Wurtenberg.

Both undefeated teams will be putting their records on the line Friday at 8 p.m. when they take on the Spartans in San Jose.

Because the Spartans lost two 9.4 100-yard dash men from their front line, the Rams are slight favorites.

It should be a tough contest defensively, but Waldon Hom, Caesar Pina and Jose Contreras, the South American Pan American Games transfer, should give the San Franciscans an edge.

The Rams received the first forfeit victory when California refused to play the college for reasons which appeared on the surface totally unvalid.

California won its first game of the year last week when the Aggies forfeited.

All other league action was washed out by weekend rains.

The Rams, which have won or tied for the NCISL title the last three years, defeated San Jose State, 7-0, last year en route to an undefeated season.

Ram star Al Korbus scored four times in the contest, but has since graduated and is presently attending San Jose, but is sitting out this season.

With Waldon Hom scoring three times, the booters upset Stanford, 4-1, two weeks ago. A tough defense, led by goalie Gary DeLong, stopped the Indians cold.

RAMBLINGS

Coleman Sparks Ram Offensive Attack

By Dave Kleinberg

TO ABSORB the pounding of 230-pound linemen, the modern day back, who carries the team's running attack, is expected to weigh from 200 to 225 pounds and stand about six feet two inches high.

You figure if your top ball carrier is any smaller the running game is going to suffer.

Ron Coleman, the college's top back, weighs only 170 pounds, stands only 5-8, but runs like a bull and has almost single-handedly carried the Ram offense this season.

Two weeks ago Coleman received a head injury against Phoenix and was forced to stay there a day for observation. Because of the injury, his playing status wasn't certain until the following Thursday, just prior to the league opener against Chabot. But Coleman did start and probably had his greatest day as a Ram.

He carried the ball 28 times, which must be a City College record. He gained 140 yards, and most important, he scored the winning touchdown from the four-yard line with 2:58 remaining in the contest to give the college a 12-7 come-from-behind victory.

Coleman, now in his sophomore year, was the number two back last year, next to the now departed All-Conference back Tim Piggee, but Ron easily stepped into the number one role at the beginning of this season.

Coleman is a graduate of Washington High, where he was an All-City back. He almost single-handedly defeated St. Ignatius, 27-13, in the championship game to give the Eagles their first and only prep crown.

In Washington's come-from-behind win, Coleman took a screen pass and rambled for 85 yards for the first Eagle score and then broke through the middle on a 60-yard gallop for the winning score.

Coleman is a clutch player, too. In last year's postseason Lettuce Bowl game in Salinas, Monterey had held the Rams deadlocked, 14-14. But the Rams were driving deep in the fourth quarter, and with 1:32 left in the game, Coleman took a handoff and skirted left end for 12 yards and the winning tally.

His speed, quick ability to diagnose a play and powerful tackling rate him with the league's top defensive backs.

For the statistical minded, Coleman carried 22 times for 138 yards and one touchdown in the 22-6 opening win over Los Angeles Valley. Before being taken out in the fourth quarter with the head injury against Phoenix, he had packed the ball 14 times for 59 yards.

With 142 yards in 18 carries against Oakland Friday, he has now gained 479 yards in four games, leads the team in pass receptions with four and has scored 24 of the team's 46 points. His 82-yard sprint against Oakland is the club's longest run of the year.

• • •

WE WERE GLAD to see the football squad score in the first half against Oakland last Friday. In the first three San Francisco contests, not ONE point had been registered in the first half. If anything, they may be trying to build up the gate with last-half and last-minute victories.

If that's the only way to raise attendance for home games, it's good. Something must be wrong somewhere when a college with an enrollment of 7000 can draw barely 300, while Phoenix College, with a 3500 enrollment, can field 5000.

Block Society Plans December 3 Banquet

Block SF Society is busy planning its awards banquet to be held at Smith Hall Monday, December 3.

Louis Vasquez, sponsor of the society, revealed that these plans are still tentative.

The society is hoping to have Jack Curtice, Stanford football coach, as the master of ceremonies for the occasion.

Rams, Coleman Slide Past Oakland, 12-0, In Wind, Rain And Mud

By David Kleinberg

Led by Ron Coleman's two touchdown runs, the Rams slipped past the Oakland Thunderbirds, 12-0, at the college stadium Friday in a game that was turned into a comedy by the wind, rain and mud.

In this wild contest that saw the Rams score their second straight Golden Gate Conference win, while handing the Thunderbirds their second consecutive loss, the following occurred before a crowd of of well under 100:

• Neither team gained a yard passing. The Rams threw three times, the T-Birds five.

• Each club fumbled six times.

• Punts into the strong northern wind were literally stopped in midair. Oakland had credit for a two-yard kick and a five-yarder.

• Kicking off with the wind at his back, Walt Williams booted one out of the end zone that kept going another 20 yards, finally resting 90 yards from the original spot. But kicking off against the wind in the second half, Williams' boot was stopped in midair, and the Rams recovered on the 50.

• After moving fairly well in the first half, Oakland was held to zero first downs and 16 yards total in the second half.

Coleman, the Rams' leading ball carrier, pass receiver and scorer, started the Ram machine moving in the second quarter.

Oakland, in their deepest penetration of the day, drove 58 yards to the San Francisco 8, but were forced back to the 16 and failed on a fourth-down pass.

Coleman, who gained 142 yards in 18 carries, hit the middle for two, then stunned the T-Birds on the following play.

He took the handoff from quarterback Ben Winslow, bolted over right guard and was in the open. At the Oakland 40, he cut in, and the last T-Bird went down to end Phil Singer's block at the Oakland 28.

Walt Williams fumbled on the extra point attempt, but the Rams carried the 6-0 lead into halftime.

The final score came quickly, and with only 3:57 left in the game. Jack Burgett, the Rams' 220-pound tackle, blocked an Oakland punt in the end zone, and the ball rolled out of bounds on the Oakland two-yard line.

Claude Shipp hit the middle for one, and Coleman went over the top from one yard out and the 12-0 win.

The Rams moved inside the Oakland 20 on numerous occasions, but the elements, more than the Oakland defense, halted potential scores.

Burgett, tackle Dennis Drucker and center George Benkie led the defense. Benkie blocked a kick in the third quarter, and the Rams took over on the Oakland 37. They drove to the 12, but a fumble on fourth down crippled the drive.

All other league action was rained out.

College Gridders Meet Comets Here In Friday Crucial

Backed by a 3-0 win-loss record, the Contra Costa Comets enter the college stadium Friday afternoon to battle the Rams in the first crucial of this young Golden Gate Conference football season.

San Mateo was scheduled to meet the Comets Saturday, but the game was called because of rain.

The Comets opened the season with a 13-12 win over strong Sacramento.

Comet Coach Vince Maiorana said of the Sacramento contest, "Our team did a fine job. The game was played in 90-degree weather, and we were lucky enough to score in a hurry.

"It was the first game, and perhaps Sacramento wasn't really up for us."

Perhaps Modesto, the Comets' next victim, wasn't "up" either for the Pirates succumbed, 20-12.

Coach Maiorana's comment: "It was a very rainy day, and we just recovered more of their fumbles than they did of ours."

Then with no climatic elements to contend with, the Comets gave a good, sound thrashing to Oakland, 20-8.

Coach Maiorana? "Well, we didn't show too much consistency in our attack. But our defense played a good containing game. And we had occasional excellent individual efforts."

Despite all their "lucky breaks," Contra Costa seems intent on showing up for the game. And when they do, they will bring some pretty formidable ballplayers who seem capable of making out, even without Lady Luck.

One of these featured performers is O. C. Emerson, a 6-3, 215-pound end. "O. C." was a second string choice for All-Conference honors last year in the stronger Big Eight Conference. He also received All-American honorable mention.

Other first-rate football players, all returning veterans, include quarterback Ron Melton, halfbacks Roger Martinez and Jerry Strong (both were all-league selections in high school).

Two linemen worth mentioning are Jim Harris, 6-4, 255-pound left tackle with good mobility, and rookie Jim O'Brien, only 5-9 but who carries 195 pounds on his short frame, was the state champion for the 12-pound shot while at DeAnza High last year.

Maiorana, who is likeable even when he doesn't seem to be telling the complete truth about the strength of his squad, bemoans the fact that he was only able to pull eight players from his main drawing area.

Nonetheless, one feels this is a team to be reckoned with.

On the Ram side of the coin, nothing too new seems to have appeared. They took their opener in league play from Chabot, 12-7. But it wasn't easy.

The Ram passing attack in the first three games resembled a grotesque nightmare, but reached an all-time low against Chabot when only one pass was completed in seven tosses; two were intercepted.

Against Oakland last Friday, the Rams did not complete a pass in three tries and had one intercepted, but it was in thunderstorm weather and should be excused. Oakland attempted five passes, could not complete one either, and had one intercepted.

In a game surprisingly free of penalties (two against the college, one against Chabot), the Ram defenders stole the spotlight. The Gladiators were limited to 52 yards rushing and 98 passing.

Again, Ram workhorse Ron Coleman starred on offense. Coleman, who gained 140 yards in 28 carries, seems to be fully recovered from his injury received in the losing effort against Phoenix.

Jose Valle Leads Spikers Against Foothill Thursday

With Jose Valle leading the pack, the cross-country team continues its title quest when they pick on the Foothill Owls at Los Altos Hills Thursday.

Foothill's highly rated Bert Stringer, the former Santa Clara prep who has a 9:19 two-mile to his credit, has decided to sit out this year, but the Owls still have veterans Jack Parson, Charlie Oakley, Bill Finstad and Tom Burton.

In the Rams' league opener, they trounced Oakland City College, 46-15, as Valle led the six Rams across the finish line. Valle ran the Oakland three-mile course in 18:24, followed by Ozzie Norris' 18:41, Gene Plotkin's 18:46, and Phil Dancel's 18:55.

Roger Ritchey, one of the college's better cross-country runners, finished sixth with 19:26 despite a sore foot.

In a preseason meet, the college swept past Modesto City College with Valle running first in 16:43. He was followed by Steve Jackson, Ritchey, Dancel, Plotkin and Hoy Henderson as the college took the first six places.

Recreation Association Slates Varied Program

Men and women students of the college are invited to participate in Recreation Association activities to be held from 3:10 to 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday afternoons in the women's gymnasium.

Coed folk and square dancing and women's basketball are on the agenda for Mondays. Instructors Melia Furgis and Frances Galloway are the respective supervisors.

Modern dancing and badminton are on tap for Tuesday under the leadership of faculty members Lene Johnson and Elizabeth Wirth.

Fencing gets under way on Wednesdays under the tutorship of Miss Johnson, while on Thursdays volleyball is played under the direction of Laurine Bergin, women's physical education department chairman.

Too Late! Intra Signups Close For Fall Semester

"Wait till next year!"

This was once the call of all stalwart San Francisco fans, but since the crew from Candlestick Cove has ascended to the pennant, this quote must be saved for all those who have not filed their petitions for intramural basketball competition.

The final day for filing petitions was yesterday.

The league is slated to get underway next Tuesday, October 23, at the men's gymnasium. Games will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, continuing throughout the semester until the championship game, which will be held on the Associated Men Student sponsored Sports Night, which will take place sometime in January.

Merchandisers Host Bay Dance Friday

By Boyd Burtnett

Unique in the history of the college, a dance on the deck of the scenic cruiser Harbor King will be sponsored by the Merchandising Club between 9 p.m. and midnight Friday, according to Elizabeth C. Helseth, faculty club adviser.

Price of admission will be $5 per couple, Miss Helseth said, and at least one of the persons of the couple must possess an Associated Student card before purchasing the ticket.

Tickets are on sale at the information booth in Science Hall or from individual Merchandising Club members wearing identifying badges.

The boat will begin loading at 8:30 p.p. and cast off at exactly 9 p.m. from Pier 43½ on Fisherman's Wharf. Miss Helseth warned that anyone arriving after 9 p.m. will be left "high and dry" on the shore.

Miss Helseth said she expects about 125 couples to be present at the dance and a door prize will be given.

The theme for the dance is Harbor Lights. A small combo will stage a 30-minute performance and tape-recorded music will be supplied by Frank Himenez, a student in the radio and television department.

There will be a nominal charge for food and beverage. The Golden Gate Steamship Line contract specifies that no alcoholic beverages will be sold or brought aboard the vessel.

Dress for the affair will be semi-formal, and Miss Helseth advised students to bring overcoats in case of chilly weather.

Miss Helseth pointed out that while the dance is in progress the boat will be continually cruising the bay and the guests will be able to view the nighttime spectacles of the San Francisco skyline — Alcatraz, the Golden Gate Bridge, the Bay Bridge and others.

The Merchandising Club has not sponsored a dance of this size for the past four or five years, Miss Helseth pointed out, and last spring the club members voted on a boat dance to more or less revive old traditions.

The club sponsored a men's fashion show last January, and it met with such success that another is being planned for this semester.

The Merchandising Club is a professional club with a membership of 25, Miss Helseth explained. It is open to merchandising majors or students who are working in stores and are interested. New members are always welcome.

Over-Crowded Conditions, Lack Of Cooperation Bring About New Cafeteria Policy

Because of overcrowded conditions and lack of student cooperation in the cafeteria, administration officials this week enacted a new policy of operation, Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser, announced today.

To begin around November 1, the new policy will attempt to insure an orderly and well proportioned filling of the cafeteria. Starting from 7:30 a.m. and continuing to 11 a.m., the only entrance to Smith Hall will be by way of the west door in the fountain section.

This will be the only section open until rush hours, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. The overflow from this section will then be funneled into the main dining area.

At this point, according to Elworthy, students will be required to sit along the tables nearest to the west wall.

During the three and a half hour period the only exit from the cafeteria will be the far west door in the fountain section.

The change is expected to create a more orderly atmosphere and insure an eating place for those who buy their lunch. Many students bring their lunches and take needed space in the cafeteria.

An added protection for those who buy their lunch will be the reserving of a row of tables along the far west wall. Students using these tables will be required to buy their food at the entree and hot foot section for a minimum of 50 cents.

The tables have also been rearranged to provide 31 more seats, in an effort to curb social gathering.

October 31 Last Chance To Drop A Course Here

Students were warned today by Registrar Mary Jane Learnard that next Wednesday, October 31, is the last day to drop an individual course.

Counselors and advisers have the necessary forms to fill out, but Miss Learnard emphasized that students cannot drop courses because of excess absences, either unexcused or excused or both.

IRC Slates Ninth Annual Festival For November 9

Fiesta Time Around The World will be the theme for the International Relations Club's ninth annual fair, set for Friday, November 9, at the Marina Junior High School auditorium, Joseph Jacobsen, IRC sponsor, announced last week.

The majority of the acts presented on this night will be staged by students here. Other performers, representing many different nations throughout the world, will come from San Francisco State and Golden Gate Colleges.

Featured at the event will be a Japanese number concerning a tea party, dance and Koto music, according to Jacobsen.

Tickets for the fair may be purchased in S-155 or at the door November 9. Prices are $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students, with all proceeds being forwarded to the unit of the Peace Corps in Colombia.

A plaque will be awarded to the organization on campus that contributes the most toward the success of the fair.

Tryouts for American talent to perform at the fair will be held on Friday, November 2, during College Hour in bungalow 6.

Nomads Subject Of C-Hour Talk

A lecture entitled The Last Nomads Of Europe will be given by Virginia Davidson during College Hour Friday in S-136, Irving Witt, faculty sponsor of the lecture series, announced yesterday.

The lecture is based on the Laplanders. The Lapps are one of the Mongoloid race of northern Scandinavia and adjacent parts of Russia and are characterized by very short stature and extreme brachycephaly — shortheadedness or broadheadedness.

Formerly, they lived chiefly as nomads, subsisting upon their reindeer herds, but are now settling among the Swedish and Norwegians.

Homecoming Queen Bids Due

Petitions to compete in the Homecoming Queen contest and car parade are now available but must be submitted to the Associated Student office, S-134, prior to 1 p.m. Friday, according to Bill Silver, president of the sponsoring Council of Organizations.

Applications may be secured from Silver or at the COO meeting at 1 p.m. tomorrow in bungalow 6.

Four wallet-size photographs should accompany each queen petition, and organizations are allowed to sponsor one car in the annual parade but may request an additional entry, Silver added.

Voting for the homecoming queen will begin at the silver pole in Science Hall Monday, November 5. An AS card will enable students to cast votes. Cars will be judged on originality of decoration.

Announcement of the winners in each competition will be made at a homecoming rally during College Hour Friday, November 9. In addition to a bouquet of roses, the queen will receive several other prizes.

Trophies will be awarded to the three best decorated cars.

Otto Van Duyn, rally commissioner, is hoping to obtain professional entertainment for this event, and the Catch Club, folk singers currently appearing at the Purple Onion, are tentatively scheduled to appear.

Concerning the homecoming dance, Silver emphasized that such an activity is out of the question now since the International Relations Club has already taken the November 9 date for its annual fair at Marina Junior High School.

Last year's dance was also cancelled.

The football game Friday afternoon in the college stadium will pit the Rams against the Diablo Valley Vikings. It will be the final home game for the local eleven in the Golden Gate Conference season.

A Flood In The Theater

CHUCK HUNTLEY, general manager of the theater and one of the nine who helped salvage the theater from the minor flood, repairs some theatrical apparatus.

Nine Alert Drama Students Save New Dear Brutus Sets

By Edy Grant

The Columbus Day flood, which caused considerable damage in the Bay Area, nearly hit the electric outlets and almost washed out Dear Brutus, the mystery-comedy production now scheduled for its last two performances at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

"If it had not been for the nine drama students who had arrived for 7 p.m. rehearsal," Michael Griffin, drama director, asserted, "the water would have engulfed the entire theater instead of only reaching the first row of seats at the level of six inches."

Kicking off their shoes and wading in the water, the drama cast, Randy Jones, Chuck Huntley, Bob Lasley, Claudette Good, Italio Tulipano, Bob Trubacco, Nick Rommel, Gary Smith and Ed Freeman, started the relief work.

They called custodians, newspapers and fire department for aid.

Arriving quickly, custodians shifted the scene cloth to make dikes and plugged the doors to prevent more water from splashing into the theater.

Adding to the confusion, 25, 50 and 100-pound bags of dry paint and cardboard barrels of dry glue were knocked down and were blended into the water.

Sets for Dear Brutus were not destroyed, but the older sets designed for other productions are no longer available for future use because of the flood's damaging effect. The loss in dollars is undetermined.

Glue, paint and cloth were the biggest losses.

By closing the double doors to the stage, the crew restricted the movement of the water to the cement floor instead of letting it drain into the wooden stage floor area.

Dedicated to Dear Brutus and the theater, the members of the cast and other drama students spent Saturday and Sunday, following the Friday celebration of Columbus Day, sweeping and clearing the mess.

Before the theater will be restored to its original order, a tremendous amount of work must still be done.

"Our greatest worry was that cases of pneumonia would break out among the cast as the result of their efforts to tame the slippery and sticky stream of water," Griffin said.

Thespians Appear Before Cameras On Video Tape

Members of the Dear Brutus company will soon be on camera again when a scene from the play will be televised according to television production methods, Henry Leff of the radio and television department announced recently.

The new video tape recorder will be utilized, Leff said, and will give the student actors the novel experience of watching themselves perform.

On October 16 the tape was used to record the first two acts of Dear Brutus, but the cameras were allowed very little versatility and television production methods were not employed.

Leff also announced that the next closed circuit telecast will be for instructor Grace Brown's reading class this Friday.

Ralph Sutton and his jazz partner got to view their performance last Friday after their College Hour concert.

New closed circuit telecasts of health movies were again shown to health classes on October 15 and 16, thus repeating the feat of the previous week.

Students Trade Time Ushering For Opera Attendance

For the students who are willing to trade a few hours of their time for a free attendance at operas and symphonies, Mary Golding, dean of women, offers ushering passes to these performances.

The Opera House, the Veterans Memorial and the Civic Auditorium offer college students an unique job combination of ushering patrons at the same time enabling the ushers to view the play.

The job is quite simple. The ushers, appropriately dressed, are assigned to a specific post and direct the arriving patrons to their seats, after first having verified their tickets for correct date, section and row. A program of the play is then returned with a stub from the ticket.

After the performance begins, ushers can leave their posts and attend the show.

Tonight, Pagliacci by Leoncavallo, and Cavalleria Rusticana by Mascagni will be presented in Italian, and tomorrow the San Francisco Opera presents its first showing of Igor Stravinsky's The Rake's Progress.

Thus far, 100 students have ushered at these theaters. All operas presented are world renowned and students get the chance to see such spectacular plays as Othello, La Boheme, Falstaff, Faust, Der Rosenkavalier, Il Trovatore, Carmen and La Figlia del Reggimento.

For interested students, the ushering passes are available in Dean Golding's office, S-150.

Pledge Activities Begin Monday

Pledge Week begins Monday for all fraternity and sorority candidates, with a second pledge day scheduled for Wednesday.

Le Roi Cann, Inter-Fraternity Council president, in making this announcement explained that the "week" is actually three days of pledge activity.

Feature of the activities is during College Hour on Friday, November 2, when pledge games will be held in the campus stadium. Sack races and egg throwing events are usually on tap in games of this type.

Highlighting and culminating Pledge Week will be the IFC dance from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight the same Friday in Smith Hall. Cann said that bids are available at $2.50 per couple for the semiformal affair.

Men students interested in joining fraternities should see Dean Ralph Hillsman in S-148 before the week is out, Cann said. It is very late to join and the matter should be taken care of before Pledge Week, Cann emphasized.

Coffee Preferences held last night marked the final sign-up for rushing a sorority, Rose Diggins, Inter-Sorority Council president, said.

Student Cooperation Almost Nil In Overpopulated Cafeteria

AT A QUICK GLANCE, you might suspect that the college cafeteria in Smith Hall is run in a nearly flawless manner.

The building, new and modern, was opened in 1955. The food, which may not be the quality of the Blue Fox, is still nothing to complain about. The college's hotel and restaurant department has long held the reputation of being one of the finest in the nation. Just recently a team of seven of the student chefs won top honors at the National Restaurant Convention and Exposition, held at Civic Center. Because most of the preparation and work is carried out by students, the cafeteria prices are substantially lower than at most colleges.

Yet there is a problem, and it's a problem that has been plaguing the cafeteria for a long time; it's a problem that seemingly has no solution.

On any campus there must be a place to eat and a place to socialize, or at least there should be one area with sufficient space to accommodate both. The college just does not have it.

The main problem is this: the cafeteria, at its capacity now, seating exactly 637 students, is serving a student body of well over 6900. Therefore, Smith Hall, because of its seating limitation, cannot serve as a place for groups to gather.

Nevertheless, the cafeteria is filled with a great number of students who are obviously not using the facilities for eating. Yet this is one of the few places clubs can gather. The library does not permit smoking or talking, and the Shack, located behind Cloud Hall and especially established to alleviate some of the pressure on the cafeteria, is too small and is not being utilized in any case.

From 7:30 to 11 a.m. the socializers cause no problem. There are enough seats. But after 11 a.m., when the two-hour rush begins, the situation is critical. The campus fraternities are the worst offenders. One instructor, close to the problem, said, "They (the fraternities) should set the example, but they're not doing it. They play with the salt and pepper shakers. They throw matches and cigarette butts on the floor when we have three ashtrays on each table. The other day they were throwing paper airplanes around."

In trying to curb the situation Sherman Elworthy, student government adviser, actually has paid help to notify non-eaters to kindly leave. When students persist in monopolizing entire tables for an hour or two to the point where they think they own the table, and if students fail to observe the manners of the slightest courtesy, we feel Mr. Elworthy is entirely justified in any action, forceful or otherwise, to relieve the condition.

Attempts have been made to enlarge the seating capacity, but the efforts have been superfluous. Recently the tables were rearranged at angles, but this added only 31 seats, when in actuality 310 seats are obviously needed.

To ask for the cooperation of the individuals involved seems a waste of time. It has been asked before; the instructors have pleaded, but nothing has changed. The situation appears no better today than five years ago.

Work has already started on the Smith Hall extension and should be completed in two years, and this appears to be the real answer. The Statler Foundation of New York presented the college with a grant of $100,000 last Novmber to enlarge the facilities.

16 Years And Now There Are Two

Bassoon Players Enrich College's Orchestra

By Michel Janicot

In his 16 years as music instructor here Meyer Cahn has sought a bassoon player in vain for the orchestra, and this semester not one—but two—such instrumentalists are currently registered.

The students, Catherine Samudio and David Cohen (shown at left) are the "curiosities" of the music department. Both are freshmen and both attended high schools in San Francisco, Miss Samudio at Washington and Cohen at Lowell.

Miss Samudio is majoring in music and Cohen in general education.

The bassoon is a wind instrument of the double-reed kind, having a long curved mouthpiece and a double wooden tube furnished with holes, which are stopped some by the fingers and some by keys, as in flutes.

It is quite an expensive instrument but a necessary one to be used as a natural bass to the oboe and the clarinet.

The bassoon has been generally credited to Afranio, a canon of Ferrara, whose phagotus was invented before 1539.

Modern investigation, however, shows that the bassoon really came from the old bass pommer, and not from the phagotus, in spite of the resemblance of that name to fagotto (a fagot, or bundle of sticks), the Italian for bassoon.

First use of the instrument was in Paris in 1671, when Cambert introduced his Pomone.

Letters to the Editor

Ram's Horn

• Parking Lot Problem

Editor, The Guardsman:

Concerning the Student Council coverage on page 3 of issue 4: "A discussion was also raised about the possibility of sectioning off the dirt lot in back of the arts building.

". . . drivers who park their cars on the hill find it almost impossible to move them at the end of the day because of being hemmed in by late arrivals."

The parking situation on the dirt hill has been my pet peeve for the last three semesters.

At the beginning of the day the entrance is always blocked by five or six inconsiderate drivers. If there are any cars able to get into the lot before the entrance is blocked they find it impossible to get out before 12 or 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

The entrance becomes so jammed with autos that it's questionable whether even a demolition team could blow their way out.

Some drivers who are hemmed in are forced to jump curbs or drive down the back of the hill to get out.

My question is this, what is Campus Police Chief Bob Mulhall or Student Council doing about it?

All that seems to be done is discussion.

Discussion is fine and all that, but this intolerable situation has gone on far too long. Talk is cheap; let's have action!

Three Days Of 'Torture'

Sororities Begin Their Annual Process Of Pledge Recruiting

By Edy Grant

Expressing their follow-the-leader tendencies in a three blind mice fashion, sorority women are now in the process of recruiting pledges.

Although democratic practices have not been completely abandoned by the sororities, selection of new members can hardly be called unprejudiced.

The renowned ding sessions—where prospective members are chosen by process of elimination—include such evaluation categories as attire, manners, personality and beauty.

If one of the 105 rushees answers a sorority member's question with too much assurance or lack of it, she might be considered as unsuitable sorority material.

Some of the sisters may fail to realize that the rushees may be suffering from stagefright since they are going through an unaccustomed experience.

A brilliant idea was created by the Inter-Sorority Council this semester in the form of a parent's tea where an explanation was offered as to what miseries would befall the women planning to engage in pledge week.

Pledge week has been cut down to three days of "torture" for the end of this month, whereas it previously was four days. Each day's festivities begin at 7 a.m.—happy chorus hour.

Pledges will usually greet the sorority sisters with a wide Donald Duck smirk and then proceed with their cheerful "good morning" songs.

Pledging stunts include proposing to the gallant fraternity men, making silly animal noises along with the gestures, and trying to outsing the neighbor sorority.

Demerits for talking to men without permission, smoking, neatness and cockiness are distributed right and left.

Sorority women frequently ask a pledge to light a cigarette and then, out of the goodness of their hearts, move their lips in such a manner that the cigarette wiggles back and forth swiftly until the pledge's finger has practically burned off.

Pledge week may be a frustrating experiment, but as the sorority slogan should go, it will make a woman out of you.

Do You Think Americans Tend To Be Conformists?

By Jim Healy, Dan Pavloff and Richard Michael

Sue Costa, sophomore:

Yes, I believe that most Americans are conformists. There is a great tendency in our society for people to be followers and to act, dress and do everything the same as everyone else. There is a definite lack of individuality in thought and action. People are afraid to be different.

Roger Arnal, sophomore:

Yes, I think there is a great deal of conformity in America today; the way our culture and our society are set up, you must conform or you are an outcast. There is a place for non-conformity in education and science.

SUE COSTA

"There is a great tendency in our society for people to be followers."

Dan Foley, freshman:

I believe conformists are the majority and that non-conformists are against our society. To have individualism is good but not to a great extent. American people should work together and try to extend the democratic way of life.

Gerald Pelzner, sophomore:

Generally yes, because it's doing what everybody else does; you must conform to society or you don't belong. Non-conformists are generally people who are mentally disturbed and can't face reality. There is no real place for non-conformity.

Elaine Scherer, freshman:

Basically, most people are conformists; however, there are some who are not, and they are known as beats. Most beatniks have their own standards and strive to be different.

Patrick Callahan, freshman:

A majority of the people are conformists. I think about 75 per cent of the American population are conformists. The 25 per cent who are individualists do not try to keep up with the Joneses and have a mind of their own. I think individualism should be encouraged in the youth of America.

Nick King, sophomore:

Americans are most certainly vigorous conformists. Their conformity will soon lead them down the tubes to the position of a second-rate power in the world. America is definitely in need of real individual thought if she is to continue as a real world leader.

Larry Johnson, sophomore:

Yes, all Americans are conformists, even the small minority who claim to be non-conformists and individualists are conforming. The beatniks and their followers always yell of their individualism, but even they are conforming. There's conformity in non-conformity.

TV's Virginian Trots On For 90 Minutes, But Tires Out After The First Half-Hour

By Hugh Wilson

EACH YEAR a new and different Western gallops onto the television screen. Some are good, others are dropped after six weeks, and some aren't worth the time it takes to watch them or the effort it takes to turn on the set. Such a program is The Virginian.

Produced by NBC it trots onto the screen every Wednesday night from 7:30 until 9 p.m. and is the first 90-minute Western series on television. Unfortunately, the show is 60 minutes too long.

Like other Westerns, it may have a "message," but it is lost in a jungle of 90 minutes and nine commercials. If there is any message in this show, it is one that shows what lack of imagination, preparation, initiative and purpose can accomplish.

The Virginian, for those who are acquainted with it only through NBC, is adapted from a novel by the same name written by Owen Wister. In past years Gary Cooper and Joel McCrea portrayed the drawling hero. Before them Dusty Farnum and William S. Hart starred in this saga of the West.

That was before pictures had a voice. This series would do well to copy Farnum and Hart.

One of the major problems facing the show, other than a lack of good writers, is the fact that it competes with Wagon Train. And if The Virginian is to survive the acid test, it must at least equal or surpass the Wagon Train ratings or be dropped by its sponsor.

A few changes have been made in the Wister novel but nothing of any great importance. Steve, who is hanged as a horse thief in the Wister version, is a changed man on NBC, and is one of the Virginian's band of merry men.

Molly Wood, the schoolteacher who taught the Virginian to read in the Wister novel, has been changed to a frontier newspaper woman. And though Wister "married" them in his novel, Miss Wood is undecided as to whom to marry. Presumably this indecision will go on for the next 39 weeks, if the series lasts.

That's The Virginian, Hollywood style. And though the show has a good cast made up of accomplished and well-known actors such as Lee J. Cobb, and will also star Lee Marvin and Ricardo Montalban as guest performers, it seems that the show is doomed.

The first episodes were bad. There was no direction to the plot, no reason for the action of the players. And it looks as if this is going to continue. Not even Doug McClure of Checkmate fame will be able to save it.

Perhaps the most valid reason for its non-success is that it is not a period Western. There is nothing authentic about it. It is just another Western, and a very poor one at that.

Maybe a more appropriate and less misleading name for the show would be Wyoming Eye or 77 Wyoming Strip.

If by chance you should tune in this program, and hear a loud whirring noise, don't be alarmed, it's only Owen Wister doing the Twist in his grave.

Ram Marching Band Returns

John Dunn's Group Faces Problem Of Money, Rehearsal

PART OF THE 24-MEMBER marching band that will play at the San Mateo football game this Saturday rehearsed under the direction of Sam Andrews, student drum major. After 14 years the college again has a marching band.—Guardsman photo by Bill Keener.

After a lapse of 14 years, the Ram marching band has been reinstituted to lend harmonious support at City College football games and other athletic contests.

Under the direction of John W. Dunn of the hotel and restaurant department, the band has operated this semester without a budget, and the uniforms are remnants from 1948.

The band was Dunn's idea. He felt that "a college of this size should have a marching band," and so went about organizing one. At registration time he sent out more than 2300 applications in search for prospective members.

He received two replies.

Rehearsals began early in September, and at that time there were only three members, including Dunn.

For the next rehearsal Dunn asked the two each to bring one friend. On September 14, 12 appeared.

That afternoon rehearsals started for the upcoming game, and in almost no time at all music was learned for the halftime entertainment. It was especially noteworthy that none of the band members had sheet music, and with only one hour of rehearsal the band, now consisting of 15, went out to entertain the spectators.

One of the many complications that the new band faces is lack of money and rehearsal time. The only time the band members have to rehearse is on Fridays from 2 to 4 p.m.

Many members have class conflicts and cannot make it for the full two hours.

"We want only those with a willingness, interest and spirit to play," Dunn emphasized. "One of the reasons that it was so hard to get this band started was the lack of spirit on the part of everyone.

"We hope by establishing this marching band to instill spirit into the student body."

In the college's football game at San Mateo this Saturday, the Ram band will boast 24 members. Sam Andrews is the student drum major, and he is assisted by twirler Clemmie Thompson.

Dunn noted that the band has already performed at the Los Angeles Valley, Chabot, Phoenix and Oakland games.

Plans for the future include a 100-piece drum and bugle corps. At present there are not enough brass players and not a correct balance among them.

It will be easier to train a band made up of this combination. There are many parade step patterns that can be accomplished with drum and bugles that cannot be done with a regular band.

Most important, however, a large band would be flexible and unhurt by dropouts or absenteeism.

Dunn emphasized that members are desperately needed and every applicant is welcome. Tentative plans are being made for instruction in playing the drum and bugle and in baton twirling.

Dunn also said that he has experienced a "most coopcrative" affiliation with the college's music department in regard to the use of instruments, music and technical assistance.

Interested students can consult Dunn in his office in the cafeteria, preferably on Fridays between 2 and 4 p.m. Dunn noted that candidates need not be maestros of their trade, only that they bring enthusiasm for expanding the organization.

BUSES READY FOR SAN MATEO GAME

Chartered buses will be available this Saturday to transport students to the San Mateo Bulldogs-San Francisco Ram game on the peninsula field, Otto Van Duyn, rally commissioner, stated today. Fee is 50 cents to holders of an Associated Student card, and tickets may be bought from Van Duyn.

Council Appropriates $200 To Support Proposition 1A

By Dick Bullard

In a unanimous vote last Thursday the Student Council allotted $200 to support Proposition 1A, the state's school bond issue. The funds will match a similar sum donated by the faculty.

The $270 million bond proposition will provide finances primarily for the state's colleges.

New facilities for university, state and junior colleges will require 80 per cent of the total funds, with the remainder going to the departments of youth authority, corrections, mental hygiene and conservation.

The issue, which will be voted on in the November 6 election, provides for the first time allotments for the state's junior colleges.

If the bill is passed, City College of San Francisco stands to receive $600,000.

Stress is being placed on the fact that the issue will not cause any tax increase to the people of California. The proposition has not received a great amount of publicity in the gubernatorial campaigns because of its noncontroversial nature.

Both Governor Brown and Richard Nixon have joined with various civic organizations in backing Proposition 1A.

At a meeting of the Golden Gate Conference at Foothill College last Wednesday, the participating colleges went on record to support Proposition 1A.

The motion put before council was an amendment to an earlier motion which allotted a smaller sum for support of the proposition. The council felt that the benefits to be gained from the issue warranted the larger allotment.

College Enrollment Here Reflects Small Scale UN

With 22 countries represented in the college's record registration this semester, overall composition of the enrollment resembles a small-scale United Nations.

Students from 22 countries, 41 states, 38 counties and 32 districts are represented here, according to statistics released by Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Fifty-four students whose legal residences are in foreign countries are attending here. Highest representation is from El Salvador, Japan, Peru and the Philippines. All of these have four delegates each at the college.

Other countries represented are Australia, Canada, Germany, Iran, Iraq, Ireland, Kenya, Korea, Lebanon, Norway, Scotland, Union of South Africa and several South American countries.

Of the 50 states in the United States 41 are represented at the college. Heaviest influx is from Hawaii and Texas, with 59 and 20 students, respectively. Alaska boasts one student here.

Statistics show that of the 58 counties in California, 38 have sent students here. The largest county represented, outside of San Francisco, is San Mateo County. A total of 304 students from various counties are in attendance.

Because college regulations require a release for students to attend a two-year college outside of their district, the 557 students from outside districts prove to be a real headache to the registrar. Thirty-two two-year college districts in California have sent delegates to the college. Heaviest accounting is from the San Mateo district with 240 students enrolled here.

A zoologist has discovered that a one-celled animal, the stenor, is capable of learning.

AS Members Get Nite-Life Discount At Ramporium

Nite-Life, a new entertainment book offered by Be My Guest Inc., is now on sale at the Associated Student bookstore, according to Ramporium manager Richard Main.

A total of 77 attractions for $7 is offered to the students of the college. Faculty members and students holding Associated Student cards may obtain the books for $5.

The book, patterned after the popular dinner books, features a wide variety of shows, dinners, sporting events and special attractions. The book includes something for even the most varied of tastes.

Everything from sukiyaki to Segovia; from horse racing to harbor tours is offered at discount prices.

The book works on the principle of one free ticket for any dinner or admission paid for. Because of the large number of night club tickets, the book will be available only to students 21 years of age or over.

Dr. Luckmann Begins TV Run

Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, will take over as moderator of the new KRON-TV panel program, Money In Motion, when the third program of the series will be televised this Sunday.

Initiated on October 14, the show will be on every Sunday from 2 to 2:30 p.m.

Adhering to the theme, How The Economy Affects The Individual, topics of the program will include The European Common Market, Overpopulation, U. S. Unemployment, World Trade In California and Federal Spending.

Money must be put into motion before any effects can be seen in the American economy, Dr. Luckmann emphasized.

Firmly convinced the program will be an asset to economics and political science students, Dr. Luckmann also states that the nation's problems and growth will be elarified throughout the series.

Beginning in 1951, Dr. Luckmann has appeared in other television programs, including The Gold Label Round Table on KPIX-TV, during which he acted as the moderator and instructor.

After serving as master of ceremonies on Art In Motion, sponsored by the San Francisco Museum of Art, he became convinced of the importance of developing television for educational purposes.

Ansco Rep Tells Story Behind Brady Photos

The current display of Civil War photography was visited last week by Earl Hansen, West Coast general manager of General Aniline Film Products, a subsidiary of Ansco Corporation, who told the behind-the-scenes story of the exhibit.

Matthew Brady was sponsored by Ansco, known then as Anthony Company. Brady had no money of his own, and wishing to record the events of the Civil War, needed a backer, which was Ansco.

Ansco, a combination of the names Anthony, the original company, and Scoville, is the oldest film manufacturer in the United States.

During World War II Ansco was owned and operated by the German government, and was taken over by the United States after the end of the war.

Wishing to disprove a popular misconception that these photos are new, Hansen pointed out that there have always been Brady photos, and these on exhibit have been reproduced in textbooks many times.

The photos were collected in honor of the Civil War Centennial. At that time four sets of photos were produced and sent to various locations.

The exhibit has appeared mostly at fairs and in museums and colleges. Ironically, however, the exhibit has never appeared in the Southern states. It appeared for two weeks in Florida, which is not really considered a Southern state.

Returning to the original topic of the photo exhibit, Hansen gave credit to Phil Mikoda, who assembled the display and handled the entire publicity campaign.

Mikoda, of the Ansco Company's main office in New York, spent months going through original Brady photo plates for the exhibit that is on display in the gallery of Cloud Hall.

The exhibit will leave next week. It will then be shipped to San Jose State College and from there to the University of Arizona.

Campus Police Augment Squad With 12 Rookies

The Campus Police acquired 12 brand new policemen when Thomas Cahill, chief of the San Francisco Police Department, swore in the rookies at the Hall of Justice last Wednesday.

The novice policemen are Dennis Carlomagno, Donn Ferrero, Robert Gerstenkorn, Robert Gonzales, John Marotto, Fred Mott, Donald Parner, William Pettit, Richard Phillips, Robert Sola, Lawson Waters and Sherwood Zammit.

The Campus Police force now boasts a total of 26 men.

Applications Due Now For State Scholarships

Applications to take the test to qualify for the California State Scholarships for the academic year 1963-1964, must be filed immediately, Dean Mary Golding announced today.

Application forms are available at S-150, and with the form, information will also be available concerning the scholastic aptitude test, which must be taken in order to be eligible for the scholarships.

The scholastic aptitude test may be taken on November 3 or December 1.

The awards will be allocated in amounts ranging from $300 to $900 and disbursed in $100 amounts. The scholarships may be used at any college or university accredited by the Western College Association, and may also be held in reserve for students attending two-year colleges.

The provisions set by the State Scholarship Commission are that the student must be a resident of California and be under 24 years of age. The student must also be a high school graduate by the summer of 1963 and in need of scholarship assistance.

In addition the Scholarship Commission states that the applicant must be of demonstrated high moral standards and dedicated to American ideals.

If the applicant is under 21 years of age and is not a United States citizen, he must have been admitted to the United States for permanent residency.

To apply for a state scholarship, the applicant must file application with the State Scholarship Commission, Room 234, 1108 O Street, Sacramento 14, California.

This application must be postmarked no later than January 8, 1963. The student must also apply for admission to the college or university of his choice.

The man who brags about sitting on top of the world might well remember that it turns over once every 24 hours.

Amori To Speak At Holiday Work Confab During C-Hour

A Christmas job recruitment conference will take place during College Hour Friday in S-100, Joseph A. Amori, placement director, disclosed today.

All students interested in employment during the holiday season are expected to report at that time, Amori said.

Early closing of the college on Friday, December 14, together with the heavy employer personnel demands which have been placed with the college placement center to date, point to one of the largest Christmas placement records in the history of the college, he said.

A Bay Area-wide survey just completed by the placement center indicates that the employers are forecasting the largest holiday season ever experienced in this region.

The majority of jobs center chiefly around sales and clerical work with the major department stores. The post office, through its local regular and air mail centers in the area, hires a great many personnel, most of them men.

While experience is preferred it is not the dominant factor in hiring for the holiday season.

Each employer sets up his own general and specific job entry requirements. Some employers are utilizing extensive testing for all applicants, while others rely on the recommendation of the placement center.

The post office department sets up its own requirements.

Amori will be in charge of the conference, during which aspects of the Christmas vacation employment picture will be described and explained.

Hotel And Restaurant Department Wins Silver Platter Award

Students of the hotel and restaurant program were presented on October 5 with a silver platter they actually won in August for their culinary efforts.

On October 5, the two directors of the Golden Gate Restaurant Association, Bob Grison and Dick Bronson, presented the silver platter to Louis F. Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal education, who accepted on behalf of the college team.

In addition, each member of the student chef team was presented with a medallion for his culinary efforts.

A Junior Culinary Olympic was held at Brooks Hill in August, and at the time a team of student chefs prepared a 100-man luncheon. In defeating other student chefs from Santa Rosa, Tacoma, Denver, Oakland, Seattle and Spokane, the college team scored 352 points out of a possible 400.

Also vieing for first place in the finals were Santa Rosa and Seattle.

Contra Costa Runs Over Rams, 12-0

College Blows 2 Chances, Suffers First League Loss

By David Kleinberg

Bob Battle and Jerry Strong, the Contra Costa Comets' answer to the Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside combination, led a 238-yard rushing attack that handed the Rams their first Golden Gate Conference loss of the season, a 12-0 decision Friday at the college field.

Battle, a 215-pound Jim Brown type runner from Richmond High, hit the middle of the Ram line 24 times for 125 yards, scored the first touchdown on a one-yard plunge and played a part in the clinching score.

Battle's blasts up the middle set up end runs for Strong, a 174-pound speedster and former El Cerrito back, who gained 100 yards in 10 carries.

The Rams, shutout for the second time this season, are now 2-1 in league play and 3-2 overall. Contra Costa is 2-0.

The San Franciscans blew scoring opportunities deep in Contra Costa territory the first two times they got the ball in the first quarter. The Rams stopped a 26-yard Comet march when Dennis Drucker threw Comet quarterback Ron Melton for a 12-yard loss.

On fourth down, a bad snap went over punter Strong's head and George Benkie recovered on the San Francisco 15. Two plays later the Rams had a first down on the four, but Mel Tom fumbled on the following play.

The defense, with Charlie Stewart smearing halfback Roger Martinez for a nine-yard loss on a key play, held, and the Rams took over on their own 37 after the punt.

They drove 48 yards to the Comet 15, the big plays a Ben Winslow to Phil Singer 18-yard pass and a 13-yard run by John Daigle. But Terry Mesa fumbled while trying to circle the end and the Comets recovered on the 25.

Trailing 12-0, the Rams showed a spark of life in the opening minutes of the final quarter.

From the SF 37, Ben Winslow fought off tacklers and just got off a long pass down the middle. Ron Coleman, the Rams' leading back, who was held to 69 yards in 18 carries Friday, made a leaping catch for 38 yards and a first down on the Comet 25.

The crowd of 200, quiet till now, started to yell, sensing a Ram comeback. Winslow dropped back again, and fired a bullet over the middle to Ernest Oliver. Oliver made the catch on the Comet 11, bounced off the ground and came running back into the huddle like a berserk reindeer.

But disaster struck on the subsequent play. Winslow's pass into the right flat was picked off by Comets' Jim Nelson on the five. Nelson returned it 48 yards, and the Rams were dead.

If it's any consolation to the losers, the Rams probably would have won if they had been playing professional ball. When Benkie recovered the fumble on the Contra Costa 15, he picked it up and went into the end zone, but in college, unlike in pro ball, you can not run with a fumble.

In the fourth quarter Drucker grabbed another bad pass over punter Strong's head, and with a convoy of five blockers big Drucker and his loose 215 pounds rambled 55 yards for an apparent score, but, of course, it was called back.

With Battle carrying seven of the 11 plays, the Comets went 80 yards for the final tally in the third quarter.

Melton, calling the perfect play, faked to Battle, and passed to halfback Martinez all by himself for the 20-yard touchdown and 12-0.

In other action, Foothill upset San Mateo, 27-20, and San Jose downed Oakland, 18-12.

RAMBLINGS

By Dave Kleinberg

PRIOR to the opening of the 1962 National Football League season Howard "Red" Hickey, head coach of the San Francisco 49ers, stated this was his "best team ever."

It is seldom that a coach makes such a bold statement, and it comes even more surprising from Hickey, one of the most conservative coaches in the league.

It's the kind of statement that can come back and haunt you, and in this town of quick-to-jump sports writers, it has more than once.

Hickey also said his set of pass receivers was the best he ever had, and this seemed to be the problem in early season. They just depended too much on the passing game.

The "best team ever" lost the season opener to the Chicago Bears, 30-14. The Bears had lost all five exhibition contests. Next week the San Franciscans lost to the Lions, 45-24, and the best-team-ever seemed like the worst-team-ever.

Since then, the San Franciscans have developed their running attack. In the first Chicago game, the Bear linebackers reddogged John Brodie all day and got away with it.

Two weeks ago, they couldn't. The running game was going and the 49ers won, 34-27. The 49ers traded away one of their top ends, Aaron Thomas, to get added backfield depth from the New York Giants in the form of powerful fullback Bobby Gaiters.

Just as an example of how the 49ers have switched from passing to a more balanced attack is the comparison between the New York Giant exhibition game and the second Chicago Bear league game.

In the New York contest San Francisco threw 36 passes and ran 26 times. In the second Bear contest Brodie threw 16 passes and the runners carried 42 times.

The 49ers have the runners. In Bill Kilmer they have potentially one of the best running backs in the league. Kilmer is not the fastest man in the world and he has that awful tendency to fumble, but he's the most elusive back on the club.

Fullback J. D. Smith is not the most exciting runner in the league. J. D. is the dependable, hard-knock type runner who can give you the short yardage when you need it, and he's not a fumbler.

It is still quite possible that this is Mr. Hickey's best team ever, but from last Sunday's game against Green Bay, the best team is apparently not good enough.

• • •

A LITTLE KNOWN FACT: If the San Francisco Giants want a raise they certainly deserve it solely on the amount of work they've completed this season.

The San Franciscans played more games this year than any other team in the history of modern major league baseball. This was the first year the National League switched from 154 games to 162; then they picked up three more in the playoff and seven in the World Series for a total of 172 contests. A college year is only 180 days.

RA Sponsors Bowling League For Students

A new bowling league sponsored by the Recreation Association started operation last Monday, Ruth Wimmer, RA president, announced today.

It will meet every Monday from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. at Westlake Bowl. Arrangements have been made to give members special student prices.

When The Wind Blows

RAM QUARTERBACK Ben Winslow (14) fired this pass in the wind, mud and rain against Oakland. Photographer Carruthers "stopped" the ball in midair, and no one can be sure exactly which way the ball is going. If the wind is with Winslow, the ball is going downfield. If it's against him, it's one big boomerang. Unidentifiable players all have mud on their uniform numbers.—Guardsman photo by John Carruthers.

Gridders Tangle With Bulldogs In Saturday Crucial

This is the big one.

When the Rams travel to Coyote Point campus this Saturday night to meet the San Mateo Bulldogs, this is the type of team they will encounter:

• A team that has won 12 of its last 13 contests and has-suffered only one league loss since 1959.

• A team that won the Big Eight Conference easily in 1960 and last year and retained most the starting lineup for this season.

• A team that was rated fourth in the nation last year and has the highest offensive potential this year, according to the All-American Gridiron Index.

• A team that stomped all over Diablo Valley in the league opener, 42-0.

• A team that tore apart powerful Stockton, 42-22, in a practice game this year.

Veteran quarterback Rick Norman guides the Doug Scovil-coached team. Norman, a veteran of three years of service ball, has found his big target in end Bill Garehime, who caught four passes in the Diablo Valley game for 100 yards. Garehime, 6-1, 205, was All-American at Mills, setting a reception record with 34 catches for 846 yards.

The Bulldog backfield isn't too big. Clarence Hamel weighs 160, Charlie Haysbert 179 and Claude McMillen 175, but they can move.

Hamel, an All-Big Eight Conference speedster last year, was the team's leading rusher in 1961 with 492 yards in 80 carries.

McMillen, the fullback, runs the 100 in 9.8 and is a breakaway threat. At Tennyson High, where he made All-Hayward Athletic League in 1960, McMillen gained 875 yards, averaged more than 10 yards per carry and gained 224 yards in one game.

The flanker, Haysbert, runs the 100 in 10.1 and 220 in 21.8. Willie Holman, All-City prep back at San Francisco's Balboa High in 1956 and 1957, has seen most of his action at defensive left safety this year.

The offensive machine rolled up 419 yards against Stockton, with McMillen gaining 118 yards running and Hamel 103. It gained 329 against Diablo Valley.

With all this going against them, it almost seems as though the Rams don't have a chance.

But that's not true.

The Bulldogs are going to find it pretty hard to run against the Ram defensive wall led by Dennis Drucker, George Benkie, Ernest Oliver, Al Almiral, Jack Burgett and Neil Shea. If the San Francisco secondary, which off past performances does appear somewhat vulnerable, can hold Norman's passes, the Rams could pull the upset.

They have reason to want to smash San Mateo. The Bulldogs were the only team standing in the Rams' way toward a Big Eight Conference crown last year.

San Mateo intercepted five San Francisco passes and took a 22-6 victory. The Rams finished the season in a three-way tie for second.

It should be an interesting game. On paper, from the San Mateo publicity department, it would appear San Francisco's chances are slim, but the San Francisco defense, especially against running, could hold the key.

What does Coach Dutch Elston think about the contest?

"We'll have to generate a lot more offense. We can beat them. We moved the ball pretty well in adverse conditions against Oakland last week, and the downfield blocking has improved.

"Our defensive line has performed exceptionally well. There was no measure of pass defense in the rain against Oakland."

The puddles were so deep on the sidelines there was actually the possibility of a player drowning in an out-of-bounds pileup.

Booters Blank Spartans, 2-0, In Injury-Marred Contest

By Fred Wales

Maintaining their undefeated record, the Ram soccer team shutout the stubborn San Jose State Spartans, 2-0, in a hard-fought, injury-riddled game last Friday night at San Jose State Stadium.

Despite the two-point margin, the contest was close down to the finish. The Rams didn't score till late in the second quarter.

With 5:38 left in the half, Waldon Horn took control of the ball on a fast break, and dribbled down the middle of the field. From 15 yards out he faked to his left, pulling the goalie to that side, and then kicked straight to his right for a 1-0 lead.

The Spartans repeatedly tried to retaliate, but either the long legs of rookie defensive star Gordon Miller or the cat-like hands of All-American goalie Gary Delong would halt the threat.

San Francisco's second score was again on a fast break, but didn't come until the fourth quarter. Taking a perfect pass from right wing Rudolfo Mesones, inside left Henry Lopez edged up to goal and from less than 10 yards out cut loose with a bullet that sent the Spartan goalie tumbling backwards. It crashed into the back net for the final tally.

However, the victory could be a costly one for the Rams. Promising rookie center fullback Ken Gregory reinjured his pulled knee with five minutes left in the game.

He was taken to a hospital and will be out indefinitely. Coach Roy Diederichsen feared Gregory may be lost for the season.

This was the second time the ambulance was called that evening.

In the Rams' 4-1 junior-varsity win, goalie Mike Remi was kicked in the jaw and was unconscious for 15 minutes.

Although taken away in an ambulance he later returned under his own power and watched the varsity game.

All-American Caesar Pina and scoring leader Waldon Horn received minor injuries during the game but both returned.

The win left the Rams with a 4-0 league record and a 7-0 overall mark. Next Saturday the team meets its strongest foe thus far when it takes on the tough University of San Francisco Dons.

Baseball, Cage Candidates Meet In Gym At C-Hour

There will be a compulsory meeting of all varsity basketball and baseball candidates in the men's gymnasium during College Hour Friday.

Varsity basketball practice will start at 3 p.m. on Thursday, November 1, and Coach Sid Phelan requests that all basketball players, regardless of experience or reputation, turn out. Although this year's squad does have a few outstanding players, it appears to have considerable less depth than previous Ram teams and help will be needed.

Intramural Loop Is Going Again

With an unusually large turnout of 14 teams, the intramural basketball league continues action tonight in the men's gymnasium when the nine-team Independent league starts its play.

In tonight's action the Collegiate Five meets Hotel and Restaurant, Alpha Phi Omega battles the Newman Club, the Hawaiians take on the Divine Ones and the Cook's Five mixes with the powerful Guardsman. The Mets have drawn a bye.

In last night's action the five-team Fraternity league started its play.

AS cards must be shown at each contest.

Spikers Battle Powerful San Jose

San Jose City College, which two weeks ago handed Foothill its first cross-country loss in its short history, battles the college spikers tomorrow at Golden Gate Park in a crucial Golden Gate Conference meet.

San Jose's Ken Noel, who breezed the San Jose three-mile course in 15:59, led the 15-45 win. San Jose trounced highly regarded San Mateo the week before, 16-42, and Noel came in with a time of 15:55, followed by teammates Ron Nelson, 15:55; Ron Pennington, 15:56, and Garlon Prewitt, 16:03.

On the home front, the college took its second straight league match by posting the second through seventh places and defeating Diablo Valley, 20-42, on October 17 in Golden Gate Park. The Vikings' Roger Dietch's 15:46 took first but was followed by Rams' Roger Ritchey, 15:51; Steve Jackson, Ozzie Norris, Gene Plotkin, Gene Dancel and Hoy Henderson.

In the 14-team Sacramento Invitational the college placed second behind San Jose State's freshmen on October 13 in the mud and rain that upped the times into the 20-minute zone.

San Jose's Joel Neff was the winner in 20:02, while the college's Jose Valle took 9th, Jackson 13th, Dancel 15th, Plotkin 16th and Ritchey 18th.

Coach Lou Vasquez says about the meet with San Jose City College, "They're the toughest squad in the conference. They should be favored to defeat us."

Public To Vote Next Tuesday On Fate Of Proposition 1-A

By Jean Zeidler

A $270 million bond issue, Proposition 1-A, will be presented to the California public for approval in next Tuesday's elections.

Passage of this bond issue will insure the construction of badly needed facilities for universities, state colleges and two-year colleges.

Student Council recently alloted $200 in support of the proposition and similar funds matching Student Council's donation were previously alloted by the Faculty Association.

Of the overall sum, $20 million will go to the two-year colleges, and $600 to $700 thousand will be specifically allocated to this college.

In addition to the amount earmarked for this college, the San Francisco school department is required to provide a sum to match the bond's allocation.

Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, noted that the college is anticipating enrollment of an additional 1000 students within the next three to four years.

"There is a definite need to increase space for the terminal technical programs and also for student union facilities," Anderson emphasized.

Passage of the bonds will provide for a new building on campus which will be used both for administration purposes and instructional facilities.

The present offices of the coordinator of student welfare and the registrar's office, space originally designed for laboratories, will be moved from Science Hall to the new building.

The counseling and testing area of Science Hall will be converted into the terminal-technical training area of the college, Anderson said, and student union expansion will relieve pressure on the library and cafeteria.

"Failure of a passage of this bond issue will have dire consequences for development plans for universities, four-year and two-year colleges, because higher education will be asked to accommodate 95,000 more students in the next three years," Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, noted last week.

Pledge Games Set For Stadium During C-Hour

For the All-American student in search of unusual "kicks," College Hour Friday will offer a variety of games and contests as part of the semiannual Pledge (Hell) Week, Le Roi Cann, Inter-Fraternity Council president, announced today.

A total of five events is scheduled to take place at the football field, and a strong attendance is anticipated.

For those who are known to have a big mouth, a pie-eating contest will be offered, and the Rally Committee can expect to recruit future potential members in the balloon-blowing contest.

The athletic department can also be on the lookout for javelin-event specialists, since an egg-throwing contest will be on the program. Also, if they need tracksters or cross-country marathonists, an 8 by 80 relay will be presented. Another unusual event will be a three-legged 100-yard race.

Each fraternity is limited to two members in each event, except for the relay, where four members are required for the event.

Three points will be attributed to the first winner, two for the second and one for the third. The team totalling most points will receive a trophy, now being held by Gamma Phi Ypsilon, last semester's winner.

Brady Civil War Photos Leave College Today

The exhibition of Matthew Brady Civil War photography will be taken down today and shipped to San Jose State College and from there to the University of Arizona.

The exhibit, obtained through the efforts of Madison Devlin of the audio-visual aids department, was donated by the Ansco film company.

Horticulture Center To Move

By Boyd Burtnett

For 15 years a familiar sight on campus, the horticulture center will be leveled in about two weeks to make way for the new freeway on Ocean avenue, Harry Nelson of the horticulture department disclosed recently.

The horticulture department must move to temporary accommodations in back of the football field, Nelson said.

Nelson and his people will have no easy task in moving. Besides all office equipment, classroom facilities and tools, they will have to transfer 30,000 plants.

The two temporary buildings being erected are polyethlene houses, Nelson said. They are wooden frameworks covered with thin plastic-like sheets.

The houses will be utilized in the growing of house plants, breeding plants and orchids.

Workmen on the project said that construction will be finished in 10 or 12 days. Nelson said he will immediately start to move in.

Horticulture students will be considerably more cramped in their new quarters, for there will be one-third less space for plants and tools.

In addition to the two polyethlene houses, the horticulture department will take over the ground floor of Annex C, Nelson announced. This space will be used for classroom, potting, work area and storage.

Plans are now being drawn for a new horticulture center, Nelson said. It is to be an elaborate ranch-type structure on the large dirt area adjacent to Judson avenue.

Ample space will be alloted for greenhouses, flower beds, display windows and teaching and work areas.

Architect for the new center is a former horticulture student of the college, Alex Woolworth.

In the past, horticulture students here have taken many honors for their green-thumb abilities, and this year was no exceptoin. They won first prize at the Oakland Spring Garden Show and third prize at the Marin Art and Garden Show.

Dance Tops Pledge Week

Beta Tau Hosts Indian Summer In Smith Hall

KEITH WOOLWINE, IFC rushing chairman.—Cypriano Ayalin photo.

Cornstalks and harvest moons in Smith Hall Friday night will bring an end to another Pledge Week. These and other autumn-like decor will highlight the Indian Summer theme of the Beta Tau-sponsored dance, according to Beta Tau President Fred Chernin.

Beta Tau will act as host to the Inter-Fraternity Council.

In what is in many respects an experimental affair, patrons can expect to find the atmosphere in Smith Hall quite changed, Cherniss said. Halloween overtones will prevail, and an attempt is being made to make the fountain look less like a fountain and more like a lounge.

In addition to free refreshments, entertainment will be furnished by a five-piece popular music group. The group, the Rocketeers, is a combo composed of two guitars, a drum, sax and piano.

As a special attraction, rock-and-roll singer Bobby Freeman will perform. Freeman is currently on a personal appearance tour throughout the state. A few of Freeman's better known recordings are "Candy Apple Red Impala" and "Shimmy-Shimmy."

The dance, lasting the usual 9 p.m. to midnight, will be a semiformal gathering. The $2 tickets will be on sale at the silver pole, or they may be purchased from any of the Beta Tau fraternity members.

The dance signals the official end to IFC Pledge Week. Pledges who have spent the week painting tables, picking weeds and doing other chores around campus will once again be on an equal footing with the rest of the fraternity members.

Beta Tau, the sponsoring fraternity, is the oldest on campus and boasts of a long record of campus service. It is also the only campus fraternity to hold a charter in the state capital. From its ranks have emerged many of the college's student government officers.

Alpha Sigma Delta Nets 1600 Books

Alpha Sigma Delta's educational book drive for 12 Asian countries ended October 19 with an overwhelming donation of 1600 books, Bill Miles, president of the fraternity, announced yesterday.

Containers were placed around the campus, and the goal set at 1400 books.

Among the generous donations were James Billwiller, assistant dean of instruction, with a gift of 130 books; George Steward, business instructor, with 200; the library and the college bookstore with an undisclosed number.

The books were mainly hardback texts and works of Hemingway, Dickens, Emily Bronte and Plato.

All contributions are to be sent to 12 Asian countries by the local chapter of the Asian Foundation.

Asked to comment on the success of the drive, Miles declared that "the last book drive a couple of years ago had a record of 800 books donated and this year, with 1600, the drive has been tremendously successful."

Library Noise Pet Peeve Of Students

"Without the word there is no memory of the deed."

The above quotation is one of the products of the Associated Men Student suggestion box, according to Jim Fuller, AMS president.

The box has received a great many constructive suggestions, Fuller said.

A recurring opinion in the box seems to be the problem of the undue noise in the library. The following statement is taken directly from one of the suggestion slips:

"Our library is entirely too noisy for anyone to benefit from it. I think the people talking should be asked to leave immediately. The next (time) they will not be so quick to disturb their fellow students."

Other suggestions include coat-hangers in the rest rooms, pay phones and vending machines in the arts building and more mirrors in the women's rest rooms in Smith Hall.

The suggestions under consideration are being taken up with Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management here.

AS Nominations Due At Convention

Nominations for the 20 elective offices of next semester's student government will be made at the nomination convention in Smith Hall on Wednesday, December 5, Larry Maibaum, election commissioner, announced recently.

A candidacy fee of $1 will be charged, and all candidates must file a petition containing the signatures of 15 Associated Student cardholders.

"It is advantageous to have an on-campus sponsoring organization," Maibaum said.

As listed in the AS constitution, requirements for the specific offices are as follows:

"President and Vice President shall have completed at least 42 units and not more than 60 with an over-all grade point average of 2.2 prior to his term of office.

"AMS and AWS Presidents must have completed at least 30 but not more than 60 units prior to his term of office.

"Sophomore Class President must have completed at least 28 and not more than 60 units prior to his term of office.

"Freshman Class President must have completed at least 14 but not more than 27.5 units prior to taking office."

Requirements for the seven freshman representatives to council are that they have completed at least 12 and not more than 27.5 units prior to taking office.

The seven sophomore representatives to council must have completed at least 28 and not more than 60 units prior to taking office.

AS Distributes Type Two Oral Sabin Vaccine Here Tomorrow

Sabin oral vaccine type II will be distributed here tomorrow and possibly Friday, Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, announced yesterday.

The Associated Students have allocated $600 to purchase the type II vaccine. This should be more than sufficient to immunize more than 2500 students, Anderson said.

As yet no specific location has been decided upon for the distribution of the vaccine, which will be given free to AS cardholders, but the cafeteria is the most likely location. Students will be informed as to the exact location via KCSF today or tomorrow.

Students who do not have an AS card will be asked to make a voluntary 25 cent contribution. "This is up to them," Anderson said, "and no one wanting the vaccine will be refused."

During the last immunization program more than 4000 received the type I vaccine during registration and during College Hour the Friday preceding the citywide immunization program.

Anderson echoed the sentiments of other educators and physicians in urging students to take the vaccine, either on one of the two dates on campus or to receive the inoculations during the citywide campaign next Sunday.

"The reason for the college inoculation program is one of convenience," Anderson said. By issuing the vaccine ahead of time, students will avoid waiting in line and needless waste of time.

In September the city held a large inoculation drive. Nearly 75 per cent of the residents received the Sabin one.

AWS To Present 14 Coed Models At Fashion Show

Fourteen coeds will become models for an afternoon, Thursday, November 8, when they show the newest look in women's fashions at Grandstand Glamour, the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea.

Site of the semiannual show is Smith Hall, and the show will run two hours, from 3 to 5 p.m., Sue Fitzpatrick, AWS president, said.

Models were chosen for their poise and walking ability by the three judges, Miss Fitzpatrick, Paulette Walti, fashion coordinator of AWS, and Gloria Dunn of the women's physical education department.

Fashions to be modeled are from H. Liebes of Westlake.

Sixty hostesses are needed to serve at the tea, and Dean Mary Golding is accepting signups in her office, S-150. Dress for the hostesses will be sheath and heels or a suit and heels, Dean Golding explained.

The show is being held to honor high school seniors. About 180 seniors from San Francisco public schools, their advisers and the deans of women will be guests of the AWS. All City College women are invited to the show, Miss Fitzpatrick said.

At model tryouts held October 5, the following women were selected:

Sally Kroll, Sandy Yakrals, Nancy Shandonay, Betti Martin, Ruth Wimmer, Kathy Ryan, Randee Herting, Mara Merritt, Virginia Yim, Lynette Fishel, Mary Jane Flynn, Diana De Ryana, Lynn Goodrich and Sandra Deer.

Final selections will be made this week, Dean Golding said.

McCloud Urges Students To File Free-Hour Form

Students who have not filled out "free-hour forms" and self-addressed postcards should do so at the counseling office, S-160, as soon as possible.

Students who fail to fill out the cards will receive late registration numbers.

Postcards are being sent out now for appointments with counselors in programming for next semester.

Today is the last day to file petitions for withdrawal from individual courses, Walter McCloud said.

Proposition 1-A Essential To Future California Education

IN JUNE of 1961, Proposition 3, a bond issue to allocate large sums of money for California's higher education system, was put before the people of this state, and either through misunderstanding, oversight or complacency, it was defeated. Although it was not passed then, the tragedy can be rectified.

It is on next Tuesday's ballot, with minor changes, as Proposition 1-A.

In the next four years it is figured that California's population explosion will produce a 40 per cent increase in high school graduates seeking a college education, and it is expected to increase the present enrollment by 120,000.

Proposition 1-A, a $270 million bond issue that is expected to add just a slight increase to the state debt, will finance the construction of classrooms, laboratories and other facilities needed by students in the fall of 1965.

Of the $270 million, $222 million of it will go for higher education, the remaining $48 million for 327 projects covering the department of youth authority, department of corrections, department of mental hygiene and department of conservation.

The $222 million for higher education will be split with approximately $102 million for the University of California, $100 toward the California state colleges and $20 million toward the junior college districts.

City College is expected to receive more than $600,000 for additional expansion.

University of California enrollments will be 70,000 by 1965, 36 per cent above the 53,700 enrolled on seven UC campuses in 1961. State college enrollments will be 113,000, which is 50 per cent higher than 1961, and junior college enrollment will rise to 232,000, a 43 per cent advance for the state's 67 junior colleges.

In comparison to Proposition 3, Proposition 1-A is tightly drawn. Proposition 1-A specifically assigns "not less than 80 per cent of the bond funds to the three segments of higher education" and limits the remaining money "to provide facilities to care for mentally retarded and mentally ill, and to provide narcotics control, correctional and fire-fighting facilities." Proposition 3 provided merely "for the building construction, equipment and site acquisition needs of the state government. The junior college section was tightened. Use of bond money to pay for completed buildings is not allowed.

Proposition 1-A offers voters the opportunity to rectify an intolerable and already worsening situation that will leave the state bereft within a few years if not passed. It must be passed at this election. It is extremely necessary. Buildings must be started the next year or it will be impossible to have them completed by 1965. The defeat in this election could be fatal to the education hopes of thousands.

Cuban Quarantine Justified

THERE are many in America today who believe nuclear war is unthinkable. Because of the world situation, nuclear conflict is something that must be thought of continually. Although no rational person would ever conceive of beginning an all-out conflict, it nevertheless remains a possibility in this ever-frightening world.

Without a doubt, the United States came as close to a nuclear war outbreak as in any previous time in its history when President Kennedy last week issued the Cuban quarantine. The action was 100 per cent necessary and fully justified even if it leads to nuclear conflict and annihilation. As Mr. Kennedy put it, "These actions may only be the beginning."

A line of communism's growth must be drawn at some point. With strong action now, a nuclear conflict may be avoided in the future. We have been lied to and bluffed. If we had appeased and said nothing, the inevitable conflict would have drawn closer. We have never been an appeasing nation, and we, as Americans, stand firmly behind President Kennedy's decision.

It was Mr. Kennedy who, earlier in his political career, profoundly said, "Mankind must put an end to war or war will put an end to mankind."

Superstition Step Aside— Green Side Of Dollar 'Lucky'

Is the number "13" unlucky?

Apparently a lot of people think so. Perfectly normal human beings will shy away from anything that has to do with 13. Many public buildings have no 13th floor and many ships will not sail on the 13th of the month.

But take a good look at the green side of a dollar bill, the side opposite George Washington. How many stars are there above the eagle's head? How many arrows is the eagle clutching in his left claw? The answer to both questions is 13.

How many leaves are there on the olive branch the eagle is holding in his right claw? How many olives are on the branch? How many letters in the words E Pluribus Unum? The answers are, again, 13.

How many light and dark stripes are there on the shield in front of the eagle? Going over to the left side of the bill, how many letters are there in the words Annuit Coeptis? Again, 13.

To most of the people in the world, the United States is the luckiest nation on earth, and yet it would seem that its Great Seal is based on the "unlucky" number of 13.—By B.B.

James Madison was the smallest President of the United States, at only 5 feet 4 inches. Lincoln was the tallest at 6 feet 4 inches in height.

Word To Wise—Or Purchaser Beware

Bulletin Board Becomes A Trading Post

An old German proverb warns, "A man trying to sell a blind horse always praises its feet." Czechoslovakians answer, "When you go to buy use your eyes, not your ears."

Most likely, both ancient warnings apply to the present day campus bulletin board on the first floor of Science Hall.

Semester after semester, merchants find the trading post a welcome place to sell and buy college and non-college necessities and non-necessities.

For example, a Chinese-English dictionary, selling for $6, is on the board. Chinese is not taught here yet.

Frequently, you'll get a touch of high class society. "To the boy with the red carnation: do you still want my philosophy books?" It was signed Olga.

Apparently no one wanted Olga's philosophy books because the following week this notice appeared. "To the boy with the red carnation: Are you sure you don't want my philosophy books?"

Advertisements of miscellaneous items range from transportation to housing rentals. You can purchase a slide rule for $17 or a 1939 Chevrolet (probably for $17, too). One student advertises his car as "in excellent condition, needs driver."

There is even something from the student who has problems in his studies. "Tutoring, when you call, state your problem." Sounds more like a Dear Abby answering service.

One student admitted he needed help. "Need extra money? I need tutoring."

For those who have money to throw away, "I type term papers, reports, etc. at 50 cents a page." A Delappe accordion was advertising as a real bargain at $995, and one ingenious student teaches rock and roll singing in exchange for voice lessons.

A complete set of new books advertised as "especially useful for Mr. Litter's class," is available. Available they may be; however, Mr. Litter is not. There is no instructor named Litter listed in the college catalogue.

So, as the old Latin proverb warns, Caveat Emptor. Or, let the buyer beware.

What Is Your Reaction To Kennedy's Cuba Action?

By Jim Healy, Dan Pavloff and Richard Michael

Pam Phillippe, freshman:
This situation has me definitely scared. I do believe that it was a necessary step that the President had to make for our national security, and I believe he was right. But it scares me.

George Prydz, sophomore:
I think Kennedy was correct in imposing the quarantine. I hope that he carries through all the way; it is a drastic measure but a necessary one. If the blockade is utilized, it will help the tensions in Laos, Berlin and India. It will show the world that our stand is not just a superfluous gesture.

Gene Siri, sophomore:
Kennedy missed his big chance at the Bay of Pigs invasion to rid Cuba of Castro. He should have listened to his Chief of Staff and supported the invasion. I would like to see someone in Cuba push the button so that we could demolish Russia. In spite of what anybody says, we are far superior to the Soviets. Economically and technologically they cannot compare with us.

Tom Wyn, sophomore:
It was going to happen eventually. So it is better for the U.S. to stop the threat now than later; it would have been better if they had stopped it earlier. It is a shame that Cuba is so close to home.

PAM PHILLIPPE
"It was a necessary step that the President had to make. But it scares me."

Mario Plazza, sophomore:
I feel that Kennedy did right by imposing the blockade; it shows we are not all talk and no action. I doubt there will be war. Both nations realize the outcome, and it could be settled in the United Nations.

Maryann Manning, freshman:
I heard Kennedy's speech, and I think he is doing the right thing. Because if you let them get away with it now they will keep doing it. When Kennedy said we were sticking by the Cuban people, it shows that we are interested in helping them attain their freedom.

Mike McCambridge, freshman:
I think that the President made an excellent move; actually, he had no other alternative. According to his speech on TV, he showed the American people that the communists are deceitful and must be dealt with in this sort of firm manner.

Ted Green, freshman:
An aggressive, affirmative stand on the part of the U.S. has been long overdue. However, in this case I wonder about the legality of the President's action. Presumably, a broad interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine might sanction it, but we might remember that we have had guns on Formosa aimed at Red China for years.

WAR DECLARED, But Now A Word From . . .

By Hugh Wilson

PROBABLY the greatest example of poor taste and lack of judgment in the history of the television industry was shown last week during the televised news broadcasts of the Cuban crisis.

With all of the millions and millions of dollars that the deodorant, cereal and insurance companies make each year through sponsoring various news programs, it is a shame that they had to get just a few more dollars by not relinquishing their time during the crucial and important newscasts of the Cuban event.

One news program went something like this: "The President has declared a blockade against Cuba. We will have a report on how this statement has been received by the Cuban government and elsewhere, after this important word from our sponsor.

Important word? What was more important at that time than finding out whether tomorrow's breakfast would consist of bacon and eggs or vodka and potatoes?

It would seem entirely if shudderingly possible that in the future we might hear a news commentary that went like this: "War has been declared and H-bombs are on the way, but more on this issue after an important word from our sponsor."

• • •

AS LONG AS this column deals with the subject "mysteries," it might be interesting to explore the whys of what happened to the educational and cultural programs that were once shown.

What has happened to Matinee Theater, Victory At Sea, Omnibus, Playhouse 90, and the other programs that stepped away from sex, sadism and violence to give the viewers a sample of what television could be or might have been.

It has long been a known fact in the television media that "culture" won't sell. After all, who is interested in watching a commentary on the Civil War, or World War I and II? Not many, and courageous indeed is the sponsor who will buy this type of show.

What has happened to the cultural shows? They have gone the way of the five-cent glass of beer, the dime cable car ride and the radio drama. Apparently no one is interested in learning; everyone is interested in becoming a neuro surgeon in only 36 weekly lessons, but the effort to watch anything that may change our lives in a cultural or educational sense is spurned.

Then there's the Brighter Day type of program, which is anything but bright. It was amazing that the Brighter Day actors didn't commit suicide; the situations they fell into were that bad.

Greek Queen

Local Beauty Wins Title, Las Vegas Vacation

From a field of 33 candidates and 12 finalists, Angie Touloume, a secretarial major here, emerged victorious and became queen of the San Francisco Greek churches recently.

Selection wasn't based entirely on beauty but rather was determined by each candidate's charm, poise, personality and congeniality. A personal interview also was a determining factor.

Asked why she entered the competition, Miss Touloume simply remarked, "Someone just nominated me and here I am."

The contest and ensuing Coronation Ball at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel was actually a benefit for the construction of a new Greek church in San Francisco.

As awards, Miss Touloume won a three-day vacation in Las Vegas for two, a self-portrait and a Hollywood-designed evening gown.

In reference to the first prize, she will take advantage of it, " . . . sometime during Christmas vacation, but I haven't decided whom I'll take with me yet."

Miss Touloume, 19, was born in Greece and came to San Francisco in 1956. She attended Lowell High School before enrolling here.

Besides taking a full academic load, Miss Touloume is secretary of the International Relations Club.

As to her future, she would like to return to Greece next spring and make her home there. Miss Touloume added, however, that her plans are still not definite.

Hard Is To Learn Language Foreign

Translation from one language to another is no "snap."

Part of learning a foreign language comes in the discovery of where the verb is placed. In Spanish the sentence, "My father's house is there," is translated, "There is the house of my father," and it is much the same in all the other Romance languages.

It's not easy to do this at first and many mixups occur, especially if the student is not aware of this "backwardness." For instance, "I am going to the store" is translated in Spanish as "To the store I am going."

So, that a mixup could occur is apparent. And that is exactly what happened a few days ago.

An instructor of one of the advanced language classes gave this sentence to translate (taken from Shakespeare): "Out, brief candle . . ." One student apparently took this a little bit too literally and translated it, "Get out, you short candle."

But, of course, this could happen never to a reporter who with words works. It could?

"TRICK OR TREAT all you want, but remember that tomorrow is a class day."—Guardsman photo by Richard Michael.

Nutcrack Night, Jack O'Lanterns, All Saints Day—It's Halloween

By Michel Janicot

Halloween is a magic word for children only.

It enhances a day of preparation toward festivities of candies and costume masquerading. Special games are played, such as bobbing for apples and telling fortunes and ghost stories. Children go from door to door threatening tricks for treats.

Little they know about Halloween itself.

Halloween, or All Hallows' Eve (meaning hallowed or holy evening) falls on the night of October 31, and is so-called as being the eve or vigil of All Hallows, or festival of All Saints, which falls on the first of November.

In the north of England, Halloween is known as Nutcrack Night.

In Scotland, the ceremonies of the eve were formerly regarded in a highly superstitious light, and Robert Burns' Hallowe'en gives a humorous and richly imaginative presentation of the usual ceremonies as practiced in Scottish rural districts in his day.

The Irish have a tale about the origin of jack-o'-lanterns.

They say that a man named Jack was unable to enter Heaven because of his miserliness. He could not enter hell because he had played practical jokes on the devil. So he had to walk the earth with his lantern until Judgment Day.

The Druids, an order of priests in ancient Gaul and Britain, believed that on Halloween, ghosts, spirits, fairies, witches and elves came out to harm people. They thought the cat was sacred and believed that cats had once been human beings but were changed as a punishment for evil deeds. From these Druidic beliefs comes the present day use of witches, ghosts and cats in Halloween festivities.

In the 700's, the Roman Catholic Church named November 1 as All Saints' Day. The pagan customs and the Christian feast day were combined into the Halloween festival.

In the early times in the United States, Halloween was an occasion for playing harmless pranks. But in later years, boys and girls played Halloween pranks that were not so harmless. They overturned sheds, broke windows and damaged property.

In some cities, the police must work hard on Halloween to prevent pranksters from doing damage. Many communities now prevent such actions by holding Halloween parades and gatherings which provide fun, in place of pranks, for children.

Popular belief ascribed to children born on Halloween the faculty of perceiving and holding converse with supernatural beings.

For students, however, Trick or Treat all you want tonight, but remember that tomorrow is a class day, filled with its English 1-A and history 17-A.

Homecoming Activities To Include Queen Contest, Car Parade And Rally

A total of three contests has been scheduled to highlight Homecoming Week, which begins on campus next Monday, Bill Silver, Council of Organizations president, disclosed today.

Voting for a queen to reign over Homecoming will start Monday at the silver pole in Science Hall. An Associated Student card is required for voting, Silver said.

Crowning of the winner will take place at the College Hour rally Friday, November 9. The woman selected will receive a trophy and a bouquet of roses, Silver said.

Contest number two will result in the selection of the best-decorated car. A parade will precede the Homecoming rally at which time the participating autos will be judged.

A first and second-place trophy will be awarded. There will also be a runnerup in the queen race.

As a conclusion to the week's activities, the third Homecoming contest and sixth league game see the City College Rams battle the Diablo Valley Vikings on the local football field. This will be the final home game of the season.

The second picture to be shown, Ages Of Time, is an 18-minute color film dealing with man and time.

Ages Of Time has been the recipient of awards including the Scholastic Teacher award merit, Chris Award at the Columbus Film Festival and Film Media's first place in the educational category.

It is a pictorial history of man's progress in telling time from the dawn of civilization to the present day.

Edison, Age Of Time Films Set For C-Hour

Two films will be shown during College Hour Friday in S-136, Thomas Edison Installed In The Hall Of Fame, and the award-winning picture, Ages Of Time, Madison Devlin of the college's audio-visual department said today.

The former is a motion picture of the installation of the famous American inventor in the national hall of fame, which honors individuals who have made marked contributions to humanity.

The picture will also cover Edison's major achievements.

The second picture to be shown, Ages Of Time, is an 18-minute color film dealing with man and time.

Ages Of Time has been the recipient of awards including the Scholastic Teacher award merit, Chris Award at the Columbus Film Festival and Film Media's first place in the educational category.

An official program, complete with pictures and summaries of both teams, will be distributed to all attending the game. The booklet was prepared by AS publicity chairman Herman Kligerman in cooperation with the graphic arts department.

Guardsman Wins Its 30th ACP All-American Award

The Guardsman received its 30th All-American rating last week from the Associated Collegiate Press for its spring semester volume.

In its 42 semesters of membership, The Guardsman has received only 12 First Class, or second highest, ratings from ACP, whose headquarters are at the University of Minnesota.

Of the 22 two-year colleges throughout the nation who were awarded honors, only five were rated All-American; nine were First Class.

All-American honor rating indicates "superior" performance and is reserved for top publications. First Class honor rating is comparable to "excellent," while Second Class is given to the majority of entries which have been doing a good job in a workmanlike manner.

Judges cited The Guardsman for its "superb performance all round."

"Unusually well done" was the evaluation accorded last semester's features.

Editorials received the two-word commendation, "very mature."

Last semester's Guardsman was led by Dick Dragavon, editor-in-chief.

Dragavon, commenting on the rating, said, "It's obvious that earning an All-American award must be a joint effort, but it was especially gratifying to see that written comments by the judges lauded the work of each member of the editorial board individually."

Dave Grieve, managing editor; Dave Kleinberg, feature editor; John Muller, staff editor; Bob Hacker, news editor, and Jerry Littrell, sports editor, were members of Dragavon's editorial board.

Editorial assistants were Thalia Demakas, Herman Kligerman and Anna Papagni.

Guardsman reporters included Kevin Curtis, Francine Dubonnet, Edy Grant, Vicki Grant, Miriam Howard, John McShane, Pat Nelder, Bob O'Lear, Hugh Wilson, Harry Cordellos, Jim Healy, Naomi Kates, Walter Rice and John Silva.

ACP judges are professional newspaper men and women.

Cashmere Coat Loses Tall, Good Looking Coed Here

A coed, described as being "tall and good looking," has mysteriously disappeared from the women's gymnasium, leaving behind a trail of cashmere.

The only clue to the mystery woman's identity is an expensive cashmere coat, Laurine Bergin, physical education instructor, explained.

Mrs. Bergin reported that last month the coed left her coat in a back dressing room; when she returned for her coat, it was gone.

Now, however, the coat has been found, said the instructor, but the woman has apparently disappeared; so, added Mrs. Bergin, "Will the owner please report to the women's gymnasium and claim her coat?"

28 Fill Ranks Of Men's Glee Club

Twenty-eight singers ranging from high tenor to bass comprise the members of the Men's Glee Club, which meets in the noon hour Monday, Wednesday and Friday in the arts building choral room.

At present the group is comprised of six first tenors, seven second tenors, ten baritones and five bass voices.

Although some fine singers are enrolled this semester, one doesn't have to be a Caruso to join the Glee Club, Director Galen Marshall said.

Main requirements are an audition with him and a basic ability to read music. However, he added, music reading, although helpful, is not necessary.

Although membership in the Men's Glee Club is now closed until the spring semester, interested students can consult Marshall for further information.

Among the club's repertoire are selections ranging from classical and spiritual numbers to folk music.

The first public appearance of the Men's Glee Club this semester will be made December 4 at the college's fall choral concert.

Council Passes $1237 Budget For Ram Band

By Dick Bullard

With congressional precision, Student Council met with and passed motions for allotments totaling nearly $3000 last week.

First on the list of motions was a proposal to allot $1237.57 to outfit the Ram marching band.

The band, under the direction of John Dunn of the hotel and restaurant department, has been operating under the stress of time-worn uniforms and ancient equipment. The new budget provides for everything from a whistle-with-cord for the drum major to a glockenspiel, bass drums and cymbals.

Dunn said that he expects to build the band into a 100-piece drum and bugle corps in the future. The motion was passed unanimously after discussion.

Council of Organizations President Bill Silver requested the council to appropriate $55 for the purchase of a plaque and trophies for Homecoming Week.

The plaque is to be given to the winner of a Name The Stadium Contest.

This proposal was carried after discussion and several suggestions without a dissenting vote by the nine council members present.

A motion by Guardsman Editor Dave Kleinberg to allot $41 for award pins traditionally voted to honor the editorial board members of an All-American publication was carried over to the next meeting because of lack of time.

Fuller, Silver Head Regional Meet Workshops

Two delegates from this college were chosen to head two of the nine workshops at the Northern Regional conference of two-year colleges held October 20 at Hartnell.

City College was the only institution to have more than one student presiding as a workshop chairman.

Jim Fuller, Associated Men Student president, headed the athletic workshop, and Bill Silver, president of the Council of Organizations, held the chairmanship for the campus organizations and activities workshop.

"Approximately 34 two-year colleges were represented," Peggy thomWohrden, a representative at the conference stated, "and on a whole I believe that everyone profited from it."

The main purpose of the conference was to discuss the prominent problems on campuses, and to exchange ideas on how to handle the problems, according to Miss thom-Wohrden.

Resolutions were made in some of the workshops and will be forwarded to the state conference later this semester.

"One of the suggestions was to have the hosting college honor the student association cards of visiting students at their home activities," Miss thom-Wohrden stated.

Another resolution called for all two-year colleges to work together in support of Proposition 1-A, the school bond issue which appears on next Tuesday's ballot.

In addition to student representatives from the two-year colleges, deans of men and women attended the semiannual meeting.

Ninth Annual IRC Fair To Benefit Colombian Corps

Proceeds from the ninth annual International Relations Club fair set for Friday, November 9, at the Marina Junior High School auditorium will benefit the Colombian unit of the Peace Corps, according to Joseph Jacobsen, IRC sponsor.

The festival will feature for the first time a performance by the college's concert band under Meyer Cahn's direction. The musicians will play a Rumanian Rhapsody and the overture from Lerner and Lowe's Brigadoon.

A select group from the band will also provide music for an international fashion show scheduled during the evening.

Tickets to the fair are available in S-155 or may be purchased at the door November 9. Admission is $1.25 for adults and 75 cents for students.

The majority of the more than a dozen acts on the program will be staged by City College students, although entertainment will also be supplied by performers from San Francisco State and Golden Gate Colleges.

The event will begin at 8 p.m. with a two-hour program planned.

To publicize this year's festival IRC members are expected to appear on two local television shows within the week. Friday they may appear on the Ben Alexander show at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 2, and next Monday a group will be interviewed on Dick Stewart's Dance Party at 4 p.m. on Channel 5.

TALENT TRYOUT FRIDAY

Auditions for American talent to perform at the IRC Fair November 9 will take place during College Hour Friday in bungalow 6, according to Associated Student President Bill May. Equipment necessary for the performance of each act should be brought to the tryout, May said.

Six-Point Program To Aid Operation Of Smith Hall

A six-point program for operation of the cafeteria will go into effect next Monday, according to Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser.

Part of the plan was announced here last week.

The new policy is an attempt to relieve overcrowdedness in Smith Hall.

Key points of operation are as follows:

- From 7:30 to 11 a.m. the only entrance to the cafeteria will be by way of the west doors in the fountain section.
- During this three-and-a-half hour period the only exit will be by the far east door in the fountain section.
- When the fountain is overcrowded, students will be funnelled into the main section to occupy two sections of tables.
- At 11 a.m. the east door of the cafeteria will be open.
- Students who are buying hot lunches or the day's entree from the cafeteria will have reserved seats along the east side of the main section, the set of tables nearest the windows.
- The exit door in the main section will also be opened at 11 a.m.

The new policy will enable the hotel and restaurant department to seat those who buy hot lunches.

The hourly schedule of operation is as follows:

Breakfast—7:30 to 10 a.m.
Snacks—10 to 11 a.m.
Luncheon—11 a.m. to 1:15 p.m.

Spectator: And The Show Goes On to the defunct Brighter Day, is just as bad, if not worse, and top it off with The Virginian, or some other such Western and what do you have? A series of shows that do nothing for the viewer except take up his time. They do not leave him with any sort of skill or knowledge. Yet these programs flourish, the sponsors make millions of dollars, and the show goes on and on.

And while all this is happening the one educational TV station in San Francisco, Channel 9, is running into debt again. And not enough care or will do anything about this fact.

The television media has always had a wonderful potential for mass education. In other states this is what the television is used for, and the results have shown that adults as well as students have benefitted from this type of instruction.

We may rightfully get the government we deserve, for we have a voice in how our government is run. But do we really deserve what television is offering us today? We should at least be able to pick and choose the type and quality of program we watch.

The wasteland is not gone; it has not left us. It has merely moved to another channel.

Ex-Ram Leads USF Past Booters, 5-1, To End 13-Game League Win Streak

By Fred Wales

Led by ex-Ram Jim Lynch, the University of San Francisco Dons upset the ailing Ram soccer team, 5-1, last Saturday on the victor's field.

The loss ended a 13-game league winning streak, dating back to mid-1960 when California handed the college its last defeat.

Scoring after two minutes of the game had elapsed, the Rams took a brief 1-0 lead. Left wing Henry Contreras took an inbounded pass in the center of the field and blasted from 25 yards out. The USF goalie put his hands up in an effort to knock it away. Instead, the ball ricocheted off and into the net.

USF came right back to tie it up on a similar play. Inbounding the ball from the right side of the field, the Dons set up a well-placed pass which inside right Jim Lynch hit with his head into the corner of the net.

Lynch played for City College two years ago and proved to be the difference in this game. He scored three times and was a standout on defense.

With the game tied 1-1, the Dons went ahead on an individual effort by old nemesis Lynch. Dribbling through most of the players and outrunning the rest, Lynch brought the ball to within 10 yards of the goal.

The only thing separating him from the score was All-American goalie Gary DeLong.

Gary crouched for a high-powered shot, but Lynch kicked one too low and to the right of his ex-teammate. It took a tricky hop, eluded the expert goalie and gave the Dons a 2-1 lead with 11 minutes left in the first quarter.

From that point on the Rams took control of the play but couldn't score. Play after play was either broken up or ended in a missed shot.

Halftime score found the Rams down by one point, and from the way they dominated the play in the second quarter, they seemed very much in the contest.

However, in the third quarter the Ram defense completely disintegrated. The inspired Dons scored quickly in the third quarter on a fake and then a kick play by Pepper Martinez from 10 yards out for 3-1.

The Dons scored again. This time it was Lynch again. Capitalizing on a Ram miscue, he alertly broke for the goal and fired a well-placed 20-yard shot past DeLong for his third score and the Dons' fourth.

The Dons final tally came in the third quarter as little Ike Sofaer booted one through from 10 yards out.

The loss puts City College in a two-way tie for first place with USF. Each possesses a 3-1 league record. Nevertheless, USF has not played powerful Stanford, so the Rams are still very much in contention.

Next Saturday at 11 a.m. the Rams take on the San Francisco State Gators in a game that may determine the championship. The Gators have a solid defense and have upset USF, 1-0.

The Rams missed center fullback Ken Gregory tremendously, as he suffered a broken knee in last week's win over San Jose State.

This, coupled with the fact that rookie standout Gordeon Miller had an off day, partly accounted for the Dons' five goals.

Success Story Of An All-American Goalie

By Fred Wales

The story of a champion is often a story of hard work and determination, and so it is with the Rams' All-American goalie Gary DeLong.

DeLong, one of the nation's leading goalies, allowed only seven goals last year, but despite his feats there was a time DeLong could not even make his soccer team.

In junior high he was told not to try out for the soccer team because he was too small and consequently would never get to play. Although discouraged, he did not let this destroy his keen interest.

DeLong enrolled here in 1960. In his first year with the team, which he considers his best, he was a prominent factor in that year's championship.

He reached a peak when he was selected All-American last year.

DeLong is also a member of the Sunday league Greek-American team, considered by many the strongest in the nation. He is the only college amateur on the team.

When asked what makes a good goalie, DeLong said, "It's mostly luck."

DeLong, as good as he is, still gets his practice in. One Tuesdays and Thursdays he practices from 3 to 5 p.m. for the Rams; from 7 to 10 p.m. for the Greeks.

It seems to be paying off. DeLong had only two goals scored on him in the first five games, one of these was a 12-yard penalty shot by Stanford. By continuing to play heads-up defense, the blond wonder should best the nation's goalies again this year.

Trouble Continues In NorCal Soccer League

By Dave Kleinberg

TROUBLE continues to brew in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer League.

Carlos Lopez, recording secretary for the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer League, reported recently, "Unfortunately a few schools are more interested in the regional playoffs than they are in the league championship."

Lopez was obviously referring to the University of California, which earlier in the year refused to play the college soccer team, after giving a reason that seemed totally unvalid.

City College is the only two-year college in the NCISL, but despite the fact has won or tied for the title the last three years, and apparently California just decided, "if you can't beat them, just ignore them."

Even more contemptuous is the action of the California press, the Daily Californian. No mention has been made of the Bear's forfeit, no mention was made that California took the loss in league standings and the California paper continues to refer to the Cal soccer team as "undefeated."

Since a two-year college by an NCAA ruling can not compete in regional play, the spot has gone to a four-year college in the last three years, and unfortunately California could be the team this year.

Roy Diederichsen, college soccer coach, can see the tendency among some of the larger colleges toward breaking up the league. "We feel more effort should be given to strengthen our league. The playoffs should become secondary."

Despite California's attempted boycott, the Rams have compiled a 3-1 record and could possibly win their fourth straight championship.

OAKLAND CITY COLLEGE has changed its playing site this year from Bushrod Stadium to new Frank Youell Field, and it's something that had to be done.

Bushrod Stadium had been a trap for football players for many years. Last year a Ram halfback suffered a shattered right foot after stepping into one of the numerous holes which dot the field.

We have a similar problem close to home in the Rams' practice field, adjacent to college stadium.

Head Coach "Dutch" Elston has said the field is in such poor condition the receivers are afraid to take their eyes off the ground while running pass patterns.

Just last week the holes were filled with sand, but it needs more than sand. "You have to walk through it to know what it's like," said line coach Alex Schwarz.

"It has to be taken care of during the off season. It becomes marred the worst after heavy rains when the kids come in on Saturdays and Sundays," Schwarz stated. "You can't really tell them to leave."

The tragic thing about the matter is that action is usually only taken after someone gets hurt. We hope it doesn't happen here.

San Mateo Goal-Line Stand Saves Homecoming Victory

By David Kleinberg

SAN MATEO—College of San Mateo put on a goal-line stand and intercepted two passes in the fourth quarter to quench a Ram rally and deal the college a 14-6 loss Saturday before a Homecoming crowd of 3000.

The loss shoved San Francisco, now 2-2, into fourth place, while the Bulldogs, 2-1, remain in third.

On the running of fullback Claude McMillan and the passing of Rick Norman, the Bulldogs scored twice in the second quarter and took a 14-0 lead before the Rams came to life in the second half.

The Rams drove 69 yards for their only score in the third quarter after taking over on a fumble recovery.

Ram quarterback Ben Winslow hit Neil Shea for nine yards, then hit Phil Singer for 16 and a first down on the San Mateo 30. San Mateo held, but with fourth and four on the nine John Daigle gained six yards over the middle for the first down. Two plays later he bolted over right tackle for one yard and the score.

The extra point attempt was fumbled and the Bulldogs, who retained the prize Tom-tom Drum with the win, led 14-6.

The Rams had chances in the fourth quarter, but everything went wrong. From the SF 43, Walt Williams hit the middle and then broke to the outside and rambled 39 yards to the San Mateo 18.

Daigle hit for one, and then Ron Coleman, the Rams' leading rusher, who was held to 31 yards in 14 carries, raced for 16 yards, just one shy of that beautiful goal line.

The Rams had a first down on the one-yard line and four plays to put it over. They couldn't. Claude Shipp gained nothing, a mixup in the backfield on the next play lost three, Williams hit right tackle for one, and on fourth down another fumble lost yardage.

San Francisco had three more chances before the final gun, but defensive halfback Charlie Haysbert took care of two of them personally. Quarterback Craig Schwartz was the victim both times.

From the SF 41, Schwartz fired for John Bell but Haysbert came up and picked it off. San Francisco held and took over on the SF 37 following the punt.

But Haysbert picked off a third-down pass, and that was it.

San Francisco had a final chance with 31 seconds left. From their own 46, Schwartz threw two incomplete passes, then hit Ron Coleman for 21 yards to the San Mateo 33. The clock was running out, and the Rams were out of timeouts. For some inexplainable reason, San Mateo called time out with one second remaining.

San Mateo Coach Doug Scovil almost blew his top. Had San Francisco scored it would have gone down as one of the all-time bonehead plays, but they could not.

San Mateo went 66 yards for their first score in the opening minutes of the second quarter. McMillan's 49-yard run on a draw was the big play in the drive that was culminated when McMillian went over right tackle from six yards out.

It took the Bulldogs only six plays to score the clinching touchdown, the payoff coming when Norman hit McMillan for 22 yards and the score.

Gridders Battle 'So-So' San Jose In Friday Game

Fighting to snap a two-game losing streak and to get back into the Golden Gate Conference championship race, the Rams venture into San Jose Friday night to battle the "so-so" San Jose City College Jaguars.

The Jaguars, who split a pair of preseason contests and a pair of league games, come into Friday's tilt a lot healthier than they were a few weeks ago.

In their second exhibition contest, a 12-6 loser to Reedley College, they lost five starters—two backs, a center, an end and a guard—but all should be ready Friday.

The big man in the Jaguar attack is Tom Danker, a veteran 175-pound quarterback from Lick High, who has sparked the San Jose aerial game.

In San Jose's respectable 20-6 loss to powerful Foothill in the league opener, Danker was responsible for the Jaguars' only score when, after rolling out, hit 190-pound end J. C. Smith with an 18-yard scoring strike.

It was an odd play. It was scored during halftime when the band was about to march onto the field. In college ball, a half cannot end with a penalty against the defensive team, and San Jose had received the gift on a 22-yard pass interference call to the Foothill 18. It was one of the few times a score was made after a half was over.

Other San Jose drives bogged down on the Foothill 26, 30 and 31-yard lines.

The Jaguars got into the win column when they nipped Oakland, 18-12, scoring all their points in the second quarter. Danker hit halfback Bill Pollock for an 11-yard score. Speedster Bob Moore ran a punt back 67 yards for the second, and Danker threw a 58-yard scoring strike to end the scoring.

San Jose's coach, Harley Dow, has only two starting veterans besides Danker. John Cali, a husky 5-11, 205-pound tackle, and Vince Macaluso, a 5-9, 180-pound guard, get the starting call.

The other backfield men to watch are halfback Joe Cavallaro, a 180-pounder from Willow Glen High, and fullback Phil Monk, a 205-pounder from Los Gatos High.

On the local front, it appears the passing game, dormant for the first five contests, is beginning to click with Ben Winslow apparently taking the starting quarterback job from ex-Lincolnite Craig Schwartz. It is far from the Unitas to Berry stage, but it's improving.

The defensive efforts continue to be led by Ernie Oliver, Dennis Drucker, George Benkie, Neil Shea, Ron Coleman and Jack Burgett.

Cross Country Team Meets San Mateo

In its sixth outing of the Golden Gate Conference campaign, the cross-country team will face the Bulldogs of San Mateo Saturday in Golden Gate Park.

Jim Huff, Ed Kamera, Mike Dable and Ron Pennington are the top harriers for San Mateo, Lou Vasquez, cross-country coach here, pointed out.

Behind the swift running of Jose Valle, Roger Ritchey and Steve Jackson, the Rams defeated Foothill College, 34-20, in its fourth league meet.

The one-two punch of Valle, 16:06, and Roger Ritchey, 16:15, who took first and second place, sparked the Ram effort.

Jackson took fourth place with a 16:28 clocking. The only Foothill runner in the top four was Charles Oakley, who took third with a 16:25 time.

Collegiate 5 Edge Guardsman, 81-27, In Intra Action

By Dick Bullard

Highlighting the opening round of the intramural basketball league last week in the men's gymnasium, the powerful Guardsman team was edged, 81-27, by the Collegiate Five.

In other action, the two clubs from Smith Hall tangled in a tight contest. The Cooks Five and the Hotel and Restaurant battled back and forth until the Cooks puiled ahead in the final period to win, 44-29.

Alpha Phi Omega, a team composed mostly of former Lincoln High students, fought hard but succumbed to the taller Divine Ones.

Behind by seven points at the half, the Divine Ones rallied late in the contest to win, 56-46. The Divine Ones' Mac Smith, a former Polytechnic High forward, led the scorers with 22 points.

In the women's gymnasium, the Newman Club squeaked by the Hawaiian Club, 35-31.

In Tuesday night's fraternity league Alpha Phi Epsilon defeated Alpha Kappa Rho, 63-22, in the men's gymnasium. John Giles led the winners' scoring.

Next Tuesday, Gamma Phi Ypsilon meets Beta Tau at 8:15 p.m., and Alpha Sigma Delta tangles with Alpha Phi Epsilon at 7:15 in the men's gymnasium.

Tonight in the Independent league, the Mets play the Divine Ones at 7:15 p.m., the Newman Club meets the Collegiate Five at 8:15 and H&R tussles with Alpha Phi Omega at 7:15 in the women's gymnasium. The evening rounds out with a contest between the Hawaiian Club and the Cooks Five at 8:15. The powerful Guardsman draws a much-needed bye this week.

Queen Contest Tops Homecoming

Fifteen Coeds In Line For Annual Festival Crown As Balloting Ends Tomorrow

By Herm Kilgerman

Announcement of the 1962 Homecoming Queen as determined by votes cast this week by Associated Student cardholders will be made at the College Hour rally Friday at the Redwood Ram, Bill Silver, Council of Organizations president, disclosed today.

A total of 15 coeds are competing for the title. They are Connie Beekman, sponsored by the Hawaiian Club; Gloria McClellan, Alpha Sigma Delta; Donna Felter, Kappa Phi; Gwendolyn Franklin, Rally Committee; Ilene Jones, Real Estate Club; Elaine Zins, Hillel.

Voting continues through tomorrow at the information booth near the silver pole. An AS card must be presented to mark the ballot, Silver added.

The winner will receive a bouquet of roses and an engraved trophy. Her runnerup will also be presented with a gold cup.

The queen will make her official appearance during halftime of the football game in the college stadium. Beginning at 2 p.m. the Ram eleven will battle the Diablo Valley Vikings in the final home game of the year. (See sports for details.)

Also highlighting the rally will be the selection of the best-decorated cars. A parade will be staged at which time judges will make their decision. Trophies will be awarded to the first and second place entries.

According to Silver, the parade route is around Cloud Circle to Phelan Avenue finally returning to the Ram.

A third Homecoming contest will conclude during halftime at the game when the winner of the COO-sponsored Name The Stadium contest is announced. The person submitting the winning entry will receive a plaque.

The college's stadium has been without an official name since its opening in the fall of 1960.

Because of a conflict on the social calendar, a Homecoming dance was not scheduled, Silver said.

Ron Zucca's Group Will Appear At Homecoming Rally

The Homecoming rally, featuring Ron Zucca and his quartet, will be held during College Hour Friday, Otto Van Duyn, rally commissioner, announced last week.

The rally will be held at the Redwood Ram.

The quartet is comprised of students here, and the performance will be the group's first.

Zucca, a music major, will be featured on the accordion.

"The yell leaders and song girls will, we hope, increase student participation with their new routines," Van Duyn commented.

Adding an extra touch of spirit, the college stadium will be decorated in traditional red and white, and red and white balloons will be released during the game.

"Together with student participation and spirit, the rally should be successful," Van Duyn added.

The queen contest and the car parade results will be announced during the 40-minute rally.

Last year, there was no extra entertainment during the rally.

Why No Homecoming Dance

For the second consecutive year, the once-traditional Homecoming dance is missing from the calendar.

The reason, according to Council of Organizations President Bill Silver, is that the International Relations Club had previously scheduled this Friday night for its fair. A dance at the same time would conflict too much, he explained.

Two years ago a similar situation occurred here with the IRC fair and Homecoming dance slated for the same night. Both events were held, but the latter wasn't too well attended.

Last year the international festival took place a week after Homecoming ended, but still no dance was included on the schedule. The reason in this case was that COO had been organized for just two weeks, and the officers did not have time to plan such a social event.

Joseph Jacobsen, IRC sponsor, explained that the date for this semester's fair was set far ahead of time and consequently superceded Homecoming.

Because of this fact, the prospect of sponsoring a dance for students to celebrate the climax of Homecoming Week was never considered, Silver said.

Looking back upon past Homecomings, it's evident that things have changed.

In the late forties such spirit-arousing activities as a bonfire rally for students and alumni was held prior to the annual game. A hillbilly dance featuring costume and beard contests were added to the festivities.

LINDA HINES, a pretty five-foot three-inch queen sponsored by Alpha Sigma Delta, was last year's Homecoming winner.

Since the college's stadium had not then been constructed, spectators jammed Kezar Stadium to view the football contest. In 1948 the game was played as a benefit for the Damon Runyon cancer fund.

Possibly the old cliche, "the good old days," is not so overused when you compare yesteryear with 1962.

Associated Women Students Present Fashion Show And Tea Tomorrow

By Barbara Snell

The Associated Women Students will present their semiannual fashion show and tea, Grandstand Glamour, tomorrow from 3 to 5 p.m. in Smith Hall, according to Sue Fitzpatrick, AWS president.

The program will open with a welcoming speech by Miss Fitzpatrick. The Inter-Sorority Council will then present its academic award to the low freshman woman who had obtained the highest grade point average during the first midterm period.

Sportswear, campus dress and dressy dresses will highlight the first half of the fashion show, and floor length formals the second half.

Entertainment Chairman Imogene Walker has arranged for Charlotte Smith to sing two popular songs and for Anna Wong to dance.

A high point in the afternoon will be the introduction of the International Relations Club queens. Approximately 25 foreign countries will be represented by the queens, who will appear in their national costumes.

Decorations for the show will be based on a football theme and will be made in the college's colors, red and white.

The tea will be served by this semester's sorority pledges and hostesses will serve other fraternities.

Invitations were sent to about 100 senior women from Washington, Lincoln, Lowell, Galileo, Mission, Polytechnic and Balboa high schools, to their advisers and to the deans of women.

The commentator for the fashion show will be Barbara Gray. The fashion consultant and fashions are from H. Liebes in Westlake.

Hostesses include Noryne Chernikoff, Edna Louise Walsh, Pat Sprouse, Marilyn Cassidy, Mary Atkinson, Vicki Graham, Lana Case, Alice Ransom, Cecilia Carlin, Pat Sims, Rosemary Belkman, Sue Rubino, Karin Poggi, Sue Quinne, Margaret Lawless, Kathie Grove;

Leitha Harper, Suzy Henson, Kathy Gill, Sandy Dearborn, Marion Canuto, Mary Dunlap, Patricia Douglas, Margie Tall, Claudia Epstein, Gwen Burton, Rita Maltson, Linda Goodson, Kitty Hartin, Sandi Alhadeff, Aileen Jones, Linda Buckner, Christine Thompson;

Madeline Hicks, Claudia Culiner, Judith Carlin, Sharon Laine, Kathleen Ward, Sybil Cohn, Sharon Lambing, Sharon Harrison, Beth O'Flanagan, Carol Clift, Betty Jo Mache, Kathy O'Leary, Mary La Plant and Laura Bourdon.

ISC Will Award Scholastic Plaque

Inter-Sorority Council officers will present a scholarship plaque, in the form of a golden book, at the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea tomorrow.

The plaque will be awarded to the woman student who obtained the highest grade point average in the first midterm examinations.

A semiannual award, the plaque was donated to the college by eight sororities in the spring semester, 1961.

The award has been won by Marina Popoff, formerly at George Washington and now working, in Spring 1961, and to Kathryn Kafafian, also from George Washington and now a premedical student at the University of California, in Fall 1961.

The plaque is on display in Cloud Hall near the entrance to the library. In addition, the winner will receive a charm for a bracelet.

Dean Mary Golding noted that purpose of the award is to encourage good scholarship.

UC Scholarship Request File Date November 30

Applications for the annual University of California scholarships will be accepted beginning November 30.

Scholarships of $400 to $500 are made available through endowments, regents and alumni programs. The scholarships are awarded on the basis of academic achievement and also financial needs.

Applicants must file requests with the Educational Testing Service for the scholastic aptitude test. This test cannot be taken later than the January administration of the test.

Parents are also required to file a confidential statement, for which forms are available in S-150.

The World Is Yours Set For C-Hour Showing

A 26-minute color film, The World Is Yours, will be shown during College Hour Friday in S-136, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instruetor, announced today.

The film concerns a group of college students who are enrolled in a course in merchandising. Learning from their professor how modern American retailing operates, they are especially interested in the opportunities available in the field.

This story, described as absorbing and entertaining, shows how one of America's giant retail store chains keeps abreast of world styles and tends to serve the nation with a salute to its system of free enterprise.

Free enterprise made possible the founding of merchandising after the great Chicago fire.

Highlights of the film include a Paris fashion show, a feast in the mountains of Italy, and an exclusive camera footage of Moscow's famous Gumm department store.

Correct Dress Creates Uneasiness

Survey Shows Men Conform To 'Fashion'

By Michel Janicot

Surprising—to this reporter anyway—were the answers of a group of 10 City College men students to a survey on men's fashions.

Out of 40 questions, one—do you wear pajamas—might have appeared a bit risque but brought a smile and even a snigger from the majority of the male students.

Of these 10, only two wear pajamas, mostly the bottom part.

Men students buy their clothes or rags or sets of threads at department and men's stores from money previously saved from work and spend from $25 to $115 for a suit.

Continental style leads the conservative, and Ivy League lags in third place. (Fortunately, this question wasn't asked at Princeton or Yale!)

A sports coat ranges from $15 to $45, a pair of slacks from $10 to $25, a pair of shoes from $10 to $25 also, sweaters from $10 to $27, and shirts, sports and dress, from $3 to $20.

Students do not have a color preference and select their clothes on the wholesome appeal presented. But black, olive, red and light blue are still the favorites.

An even number indicated a special suit of clothes reserved for "special occasions" and party-going and/or giving, while school clothes and "hanging around" clothes are in the same category.

Only one man answered positively that he follows the current men's fashions, while the others evasively said, "I try," "More or less," "Not too closely," and firmly "No."

The same answers are reflected in the next question of copying other students or men in general: one "Yes," five "To an extent," and four "No."

The trend goes further, with two "No," two "To an extent" and six "Yes" on the tendency to conform with each other's attires.

As to being influenced by newspaper and magazine ads, there is an unanimous individual disapproval, displaying students' egos and super-egos.

Collegians buy their clothes "Whenever I feel like it," "Only when I see something I like" and "Whenever I need clothes."

Because the majority of the men students here wear levis, sneakers and jackets of dubious colors, the question, Why don't you wear suits or dress-up clothes, drew four answers:

1. "I feel uneasy when correctly dressed."
2. "Too expensive."
3. "The guy next to me doesn't either."
4. "Laundry and dry-cleaning bills are too high."

No one owns a tuxedo, and only one answered "Yes" to thinking it wise to own one. Only one wears a hat, "For it gives a better appearance," eight "Have no need for a hat," "I have never worn one and would feel uncomfortable with one," and one, "I want to show my hair."

Nine change their socks daily or every two days, and one, twice daily. So, he wasn't asked if he carried an extra pair in his pocekt or in his lunch bag.

Now, from these answers, one should be able to have a clear picture of the average City College man, as the next questions and answers could lead to controversial discussions.

Do you like your date(s) to be appropriately dressed when going out, drew an unanimous "Yes" and "Always," and nine "Yes" and one indifferent "No" to, Do you notice the clothes girls wear.

Vice versa. Do girls comment on your attire, obtained nine "Yes" and the same indifferent "No."

Of these two questions, it appears that the man student is only too glad to step out on the town with his bewitching, curvaceous I. Magnined girl friend (after all, men will remain men), but try to define HIS attire . . .

When he goes out stag or with a "buddy," he spends from $3 to $20, and on a date from $5 to $40. But one student spends, when alone, $20 to $25, and on a date $12 to $15. (No comments from the infuriated woman reader.)

There were other tempting questions that could have been asked, but once more, the debonair City College student would have scornfully answered "No" to wearing a double-breasted suit or pleated trousers.

Pretty coed Peggy thom-Wohrden summed it up when asked what she thought of the men students' attire. "Here, most men look crummy and I like men neatly dressed, taking pride in their appearance."

United Nations Displays Full Strength In Tense Cuban Crisis

THE UNITED NATIONS, organized in 1946, probably served its greatest usefulness last week when it played a major role in resolving the first round of the dangerous Cuban crisis.

Within the past few years, the efficacy of the United Nations has been questioned in some quarters, and some have even advocated that the United States leave the body.

There are a number of reasons why some have advocated this procedure. To many the United Nations just does not seem to be leading the world closer to major settlements or major actions. They call it a propaganda board for the Communists. Russia's continued practice of vetoing in the Security Council, and the Soviets' unwillingness to pay their share of the United Nations expenses has caused some to believe it's time the United States just got out.

The United Nations was set up to keep the peace, develop relations among nations, achieve international cooperation in solving international economic, social, cultural and humanitarian problems, but under today's conditions, the United Nations' primary goal is keeping the peace. Without the peace there is nothing.

As long as there is an organization where nations can debate, argue and SLAM SHOES on tables, the world is not fighting, and any type of talking is better than fighting today.

The value of the United Nations was never more clearly present than when the Cuba crisis began. In President Kennedy's message, one of his first moves was to ask for an emergency meeting of the United Nations' Security Council, where the primary responsibility for keeping world peace rests.

In separate statements, Russian Khrushchev and Cuban Castro immediately condemned the United States, but rather than take belligerent action, both also asked for emergency meetings of the Security Council.

Acting Secretary-General U Thant must be commended along with the rest of the United Nations with the way the situation was handled and the way the world was nudged back from the brink of cosmocide. Again the United Nations has proved its indispensability as a soundling board and a way to peace.

It has been said that the United Nations is mankind's last hope for world peace. It could be so.

COO Planned It—Now Back It

FRIDAY marks the 1962 Homecoming for the college. It is the culmination of more than a month of work by the sponsoring Council of Organizations.

Homecoming takes place but once a year and supposedly is the high point of college activities.

But COO can only set up, plan and design the homecoming queen contest, the car parade and other events. They can't make anyone participate.

We hope City College students take advantage of the day's activities—the rally during College Hour at 9:50 a.m. and at the college stadium for the football game against Diablo Valley at 2 p.m.

Blondes Outshine Others In Homecoming Queen Contest

Blondes seem to have an edge over other coeds here.

The men are apparently convinced that women with the golden tresses have more on the ball, because they have elected blonde beauties to be Homecoming Queen three times in the last five years.

Does this oddity appear to be gaining the proportions of a precedent or tradition at the college?

Not by a long shot; particularly when one recalls the far-from-fair-haired comeliness of Lee Ann Meriwether, who enrolled here in 1953.

Apparently Miss Meriwether's raven beauty, classic proportions and sparkling personality found favor in other parts of the country as well, for she went on to win the Miss America title in 1955 at Atlantic City.

Homecoming activities this year feature a car parade, Friday's gridiron clash between the Rams and Diablo Valley's Vikings and the crowning of 1962's queen.

Duties of Her Highness will also include the Homecoming rally, although definite plans have not materialized as yet, according to Bill Silver, Council of Organizations president.

Scuttlebut has it that this year the Redwood Ram favors redheads, but with all the recent popularity of wigs and hairpieces . . . well, anybody for a bikini contest in November?

Do You Think 18-Year-Olds Should Be Given The Vote?

By Jim Healy, Dan Pavioff and Richard Michael

Randee Herting, freshman:

No, because the greater majority of the 18-year-olds would just voice the opinions of their parents; many of the people are not mature enough to make an intelligent choice. I believe many of them would be easily swayed to vote without giving it real thought.

RANDEE HERTING

"Many of the people are not mature enough to make an intelligent choice."

Ray Flynn, sophomore:

I think that the vast majority of young people today are much more aware than their counterparts of 15 years ago. Improvements in communication, and a much greater sense of awareness that was missing just a few years ago have entered the scene. I believe 18-year-olds should vote.

Cathy Bossert, freshman:

No, many of the people who would qualify are just out of high school and do not really know what is going on. They would just be trying to play an adult game they are not ready for. I don't think that 18-year-olds know enough to vote intelligently.

Greg Gayon, freshman:

I think that 18 is a good arbitrary age for the right to vote because the generations of today tend to be more mature and to mature faster than in previous years. Also, in Georgia, they gave 18-year-olds the right to vote with success.

Nancy Maggio, freshman:

I think the voting age should stay at 21 since a person would have more time to study politics and learn what it is all about. At 18 you are really not interested in politics, and at 21 it will be more of a privilege. Today's generations are growing up too fast.

Bill Deiucchi, sophomore:

The way the two major parties have demonstrated their inconsistencies on the "so-called" liberal and conservative form of policy does not give you much choice between the two. I'd rather wait until I am 21 for a new party that would really express my views.

Rose Cappelletti, freshman:

I think most 18-year-olds are mature enough and have enough knowledge of our political system to be able to cast an intelligent vote. Because of the way the world situation now stands, the young people of our country pay more attention to politics than ever before.

Abe Totah, freshman:

Yes, I think at the age of 18 a person has reached the age of maturity and already has quite a few responsibilities toward his country as well as for himself. If a person is old enough to carry his responsibilities with a mature attitude, he is old enough to vote.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

● Fraternity Service

Editor, The Guardsman:

In the October 24 issue of The Guardsman, an editorial statement was made, critical of fraternity activities in the cafeteria. We would like to point out the following:

1) Scholastically, fraternities as a whole maintain a better grade point average than the student body in general.

2) Contrary to popular belief, fraternity and sorority life on campus is not based entirely on social activities.

This semester, as in the past, fraternities and sororities are again actively engaged in services to the college . . . such services as painting the tables in the shack, painting the garbage cans, painting the Ram, aiding the horticulture division and the library.

They also participate in student government by backing their decisions and providing officers for many of the organizations. The men and women in fraternities and sororities hold such offices as:

- Associated Student Vice President
- Associated Men Student President
- Associated Women Student President
- Council of Organizations President
- Campus Police Chief
- Election Commissioner

Fraternities and sororities also sponsor service projects that benefit the community: book drives, blood drives, Miles-of-Dimes drive, UMOC scholarship fund, tuberculosis help drive, aiding the handicapped and collecting for the United Nations International Children's Fund.

We trust that you will accept this as it is intended; that fraternities and sororities can be, and are, a definite asset to City College and to the community.

Cuba, Berlin Threaten, But There's Still HOPE

By Hugh Wilson

WITH the Cuban crisis tapping at the front door, and the Berlin situation rapping at the back door, it was indeed relaxing to watch the recent Bob Hope show. For a moment at least, the present world situation seemed less urgent.

Hope has been in the entertainment business for some years now, and everyone from privates to generals and Presidents of the United States has served as his audience. And Hope has utilized his talent for making people laugh at their own situation to make the world crisis (whatever it was) seem a little less serious and give much-needed boosts to troop morale.

The recent show was Hope's first appearance since last spring. He has long since learned what many other comedians could do well to copy: leave the audience wanting more and don't wear out your welcome.

As usual, Hope's opening monologue was the best part of the show, and his sly and not so subtle jabs at "Niki" and the USSR in general, were gems of satiric wit.

The parody (with Bing Crosby) on Bonanza was the high point of the show. It made that particular Western and Westerns in general seem more ridiculous than they actually are.

There is not much more that can be added to the tribute that has already been given this entertainer. But perhaps the best and most effective was given to him by the Congress of the United States. In part, Hope was lauded for "making us forget our troubles in time of stress and making us laugh at ourselves."

Let this then be his tribute . . . "He made us laugh."

NOW THAT the World Series has become a thing of the past, San Franciscans are finding that another innovation has taken place. Christmas in November.

Slowly but surely "Santa" has been creeping up on us until, lo and behold, two weeks before Thanksgiving and seven and a half weeks before Christmas is to be celebrated, we are being urged by the Messrs. Macy, Emporium and Roos Brothers to buy, buy, buy. In fact if we don't hurry, money just may go out of style.

Again, in fact, Christmas has become so commercialized that the only thing "green" about this holiday is

Drama Student Performs Mime In C-Hour Friday

A solo performance of Mime Of A Young Man by Samuel Becket will be given by Tom Purvis, a high freshman and psychology major here, during College Hour Friday in the little theater, Robert Lasley, technical drama director, announced last week.

Twenty minutes is the approximate length of the mime, a play without words. According to Purvis, Mime Of A Young Man is an abstract type of presentation.

This mime portrays a young man who is faced with the problem of growing up and with life in general. However, it goes even deeper into the frustrations of mankind, especially shown by the individual who is almost ready to face the world on his own.

Interested in the theater for five years now, Purvis has been connected with some of the Actor's Workshop productions. He also played the role of Matt in the Threepenny Opera at the Opera Ring.

In addition to his interest in drama and psychology, Purvis has given the guitar a chance to inspire him in his future endeavors.

In other drama department developments, casting for its full scale production, The Potting Shed, a mystery in three acts by Graham Greene, was underway last week following tryouts. The drama department is expected to release the names of the cast soon.

Calling for six male and five female roles; the play will be presented at four performances, November 30, December 1, 7 and 8, Michael Griffin, drama director, said.

The fight between religion and atheism is the theme of the play, which ends on a note of hope rather than one of shooting sacrilegious words at the audience.

Greene is widely known as a writer and his work, End Of The Affair, provides serious entertainment in novel, movie or play form.

Carmen Capaibo and Stanley Chase first persented The Potting Shed on January 29, 1957, at the Bijou theater in New York City with Lewis Gasson and Carol Lynley in the leading roles.

Horticulture Center Moves To Temporary Site

Instructors, students and professional moving men began transfering equipment on October 30 from the doomed horticulture center to new temporary quarters, Harry Nelson of the horticulture department said last week.

Classroom equipment, tools, shelves and work tables will be moved first, Nelson said. The department's 30,000 plants will be transported after the polyethlene greenhouses are completed.

"We're going to move everything that can be moved," he stated.

The temporary accommodations behind the football field are considerably more cramped, add Nelson expressed some doubts about finding room for all his paraphernalia.

As soon as everything is removed from the old green buildings adjacent to the men's gymnasium, the highway department's bulldozers will begin their work of demolition.

Plans for the new horticulture center, to be erected in the large dirt area beside Judson avenue, are now being considered by the city architect and will soon be inspected by the Board of Education, Nelson announced.

Original architect for the proposed center is a former horticulture student here, Alex Woolworth.

Naturally, many difficulties are arising from the moving, and when Nelson was asked how he was going to transport 30,000 plants in the short time alloted, he replied, "That, my friend, is a good question."

Coed Pledges Offer Service To College

Deviating from their former practice of having pledges perform stunts during free-from-class hours in the cafeteria, sorority women initiated the precedent of assigning their prospective members with service projects throughout this semester's Pledge Week.

Each sorority pledge was required to contribute three hours of service to the college.

Theta Tau pledges devoted three hours of service to the library as assistants to Irene Mensing, reference librarian.

Helping to clean up and store the props for Dear Brutus, the last drama production, Kappa Phi pledges also provided the college with three hours of service.

Accepting Instructor Laurine Bergin's suggestion of helping the physical education department, pledges of Phi Beta Rho cleaned and pulled out weeds on the pathways leading to the women's gymnasium.

Both Phi Beta Rho and Delta Psi pledges helped to file exchange papers from other colleges in The Guardsman office.

Delta Psi and Delta Sigma Tau sewed the curtains for the student union. Gamma Kappa Beta also assisted in registering students for the second distribution of the KO Polio vaccine here.

Veterans Day Holiday Monday

Students will not climb the hills of City College to attend classes next Monday because of an extended three-day weekend, when Veterans Day, November 11, falling on a Sunday, will be celebrated on the following day.

The story behind Veterans Day goes back to November 11, 1918.

The Treaty of Versailles, signed on June 28, 1919, was officially declared valid on January 10, 1920, and marked the end of World War I. The treaty was signed by United States President Woodrow Wilson, Great Britain Premier David Lloyd George, France Premier Georges Clemenceau and Italy Premier Vittorio Orlando.

The United States was the only country which didn't ratify the treaty, when the Senate refused to give its consent and the United States made a separate treaty of peace with Germany in 1921.

In 1919 President Wilson proclaimed November 11 as Armistice Day, and in 1954 Congress changed the name to Veterans Day to honor all American veterans.

BILL BOLDENWECK, Examiner reporter and former Associated Student and Guardsman news editor, remembers getting his first big by-line at the Examiner in a story about City College's hotel and restaurant department.

Prominent Grads Talk Cuba, Football

A small group of alumni returned to the college last week for an informal luncheon and discussed everything from the Cuba crisis to the prospects of the California Bear football team.

It went something like this from the faculty dining room:

"What do we want to liberate Cuba for? Liberty and democracy? Those are no reasons."

"Redwood City built the 49ers' headquarters, and we rent them from year to year."

"California's quarterback Craig Morton sure looked good."

The group of eight prominent Bay Area businessmen returned to their former college carrying a bit of nostalgia that was clearly evident.

James Neal, Redwood City manager, vice president of the pioneer 1935 Associated Students and president the following year, remembered clearly the days when the City College campus was spread across San Francisco, but about these reunions, "Everytime I'm at one of these, I'm always the oldest."

Dick Meister, a San Francisco Chronicle reporter and former editor of The Guardsman, walked in late and jestingly reported, "I got lost looking for the cafeteria by the reservoir."

In that line it continued. Bill Boldenweck, a San Francisco Examiner reporter and former Associated Student president and Guardsman news editor, remembered getting his first big by-line at the Ex in a story about City College's hotel and restaurant department.

None could forget his old postoffice job. Said one, "Best job I ever had. I had no problems, no worries. I just did homework, read science fiction and drank coke most of the time."

Gene Valencia, second ranking Navy flier and a World War II ace, was present, indicated his retirement plans and talked of his current part in the filming of television's Joe Foss Story, a 60 to 90-minute series which will begin its run in September, 1963.

Valencia is vice president of the Fighter Ace Association and will serve as a technical director to producers George Stevens, George Sydney, John Ford, Frank Capra and movie star John Wayne in the Foss Story.

Others in this cross-section of professions were Charles Harper, assistant to the San Francisco postmaster; Lloyd Ferguson, assistant manager of California Auto Association; Joseph Mignola, assistant public administrator for the city and county of San Francisco, and Charles Meyers, assemblyman for the 19th district.—By D.K.

IRC Hosts Festival Friday

Variety Of Acts Highlights Semiannual Marina Fair

By Herm Kligerman

Variety is the theme of the ninth annual International Relations Club fair set for 8 p.m. Friday at Marina auditorium, Bay and Fillmore streets, IRC sponsor Joseph Jacobsen revealed this week.

Among the featured acts will be Tahitian knife dancers, an Israeli dance group, a five-piece Latin American combo and Samoan fire-sword dancers.

Tickets may be purchased in advance at the information booth in Science Hall or at the door Friday night. Admission is $1.25 for the general public and 75 cents for students and the college faculty.

Proceeds will benefit units of the Peace Corps in Colombia, where former student Jerry McMahon will use the funds to establish a cooperative for Colombian citizens.

At last semester's California Junior College Student Government Association's statewide conference, a two-year college precedent was set regarding contributions to the corps.

Nine world centers, including the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, Greece, Spain, Israel, Samoa, Tahiti, Japan and the United States will be represented at the fair.

The majority of the performers will come from this college, Jacobsen said, adding that other acts will be staged by San Francisco State and Golden Gate College students.

At least seven activities are scheduled to highlight the two-hour show.

- The college's concert band will perform. Under Meyer Cahn's direction, the musicians will play a Rumanian Rhapsody and the overture from Lerner and Loewe's Broadway musical, Brigadoon.
- An "international" fashion show will be presented with a select group from the band providing music for the event.
- A simulated luau is expected to enhance the entire program.
- A contest to select Miss International Beauty will be conducted, with the winning coed slated to reign over the fair's activities.
- Following the program, a display of art goods will be held in the auditorium lobby.
- Sale of foods characteristic of each country represented will also take place, and samples will be distributed.
- A combo, calling itself Los Caballeros, is expected to provide music for dancing after the show has ended.

"The purpose of the fair," Jacobsen explained, "is to emphasize the different culture patterns in San Francisco and the fact that this city is a melting pot for peoples of many nationalities."

IRC officers working toward the success of this year's festival are President Joseph Tershay, Vice President Effie Apostolopoulos, Secretary Angie Touloume, Treasurer Franz Sticher and Historian Peter Aldrete. Publicity was handled by Associated Student Chairman Herman Kligerman.

Soph Class Revises Rules For King And Queen Contest

By Judy Carlson

Rules and regulations regarding the submission of entries for the Sophomore King and Queen contest have been changed this semester, Vince Contreras, class president, announced today.

Contrary to procedure of past semesters, campus organizations now will be required to sponsor both king and queen rather than individual candidates for the contest. The couple must be sophomores with a grade point average no lower than 2.0.

The change of rules was decided upon by the Sophomore Class representatives. Contreras commented, "We felt that by having the campus organizations enter couples, more interest would be directed toward the contest."

Sponsoring organizations, Contreras explained, will now be required to complete and submit their petitions with two 4 by 5 inch photographs of each candidate by December 3.

The traditional penny-a-vote method will be used to select the royal couple. Containers for the votes will be placed at the silver pole in Science Hall and in Smith Hall from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m., December 7 to 14 and January 2 to 4. Voting will resume at the dance until 10:15 p.m., and the King and Queen will be introduced at approximately 11 p.m.

All proceeds from the contest will go to the Sophomore scholarship fund, Contreras said. He also stated that the King and Queen will have their names engraved on the respective perpetual trophies and that they will also receive individual trophies and prizes.

The Sophomore Ball will be held at the St. Francis Hotel on January 4. Its theme is A New Year's Affair. Dress will be semiformal, and Ray Hackett and his band will entertain.

No President has ever died in the month of May.

Spectator: The Greenback Season

the money spent in its preparation.

Jingle Bells is being replaced by cash register bells, and a generation of children is growing up to think of Christmas as immediately following Thanksgiving, as a time of getting, and getting until the real meaning of Christmas has been totally ignored.

This is, of course, just another commercial craze, but it is one that is getting totally out of hand. One local storekeeper was selling pre-fab Christmas trees in July; another, Christmas cards in May.

The way the present trend is going, we should set aside one month of the year so that we could have all the holidays, including Christmas, at once. Think of the fun and money the store-owners and stockholders would have, making money, money and more money.

They, as well as too many of us, have forgotten exactly what Christmas stands for and what it represents. And mainly, we have forgotten whose birthday we are observing.

Christmas? In its present form . . . HUMBUG!

5 Set To Attend State Conference

Associated Student President Bill May will lead a delegation of five to the California Junior College Student Government Association conference at Asilomar November 15, 16 and 17.

Accompanying May will be Rose Diggins, Marcia Devlin, Jim Fuller and John Theilen. Bill Silver and Susan Fitzpatrick were named as alternates during last Thursday's Student Council meeting.

The conference is a gathering of delegations from the state's 67 two-year colleges. The purpose of the conference is to discuss the problems which arise in student government and to make plans for the coming year.

In other council activity, Rich Thomas, Freshman Class president, announced that his class will sponsor a canned food drive for needy families. The food will be distributed to the families for the Thanksgiving holidays. Boxes will be placed at key spots around the campus.

The first American college fraternity of which there is a record was the Flat Hat Club that appeared at the College of William and Mary in 1750 and continued in existence until after 1772. It was secret, literary and social.

The Battle Of The Ball

IF RAM RUDULFO MARSONES (foot on ball) is a bit dejected, it might have been because he knew what was coming. What was coming was a 5-1 upset loss to USF—the soccer team's first league defeat since mid-1960, and it ended a league winning streak of 13 straight games. Booters Whip State, Clinch Title Deadlock

By Fred Wales

Playing without his doctor's consent, All-American Caesar Pina led a high spirited Ram soccer club to at least a tie for the Northern California intercollegiate soccer title by defeating San Francisco State, 4-2, in a hard-fought contest Saturday at State.

The victory left the Rams with a final 5-1 league mark, while second-place Stanford is 4-1 and must play San Jose State next week. Should Stanford bow, the Rams will take sole possession of the crown. Stanford handed USF its second loss over the weekend with a 2-1 win.

This is the fourth consecutive year the Rams have won or tied for the title, but once again will be barred from the NCAA regional playoffs because of a ruling which prohibits two-year colleges from national play.

Although the Rams controlled in the first half, State opened the scoring on a fast break by Pete Edwards who smashed a hard boot into the left corner of the net on a straight shot from 20 yards out. Pina, who played despite a leg injury, tied it up. After taking a perfectly placed pass from Waldon Horn, he routed through the uprights to deadlock the game, 1-1.

The Gators scored again in the second half when Otto Bos got a shot past Gary DeLong from 10 yards out after numerous misses.

With the pressure starting to bear as the game moved into the final period with State leading 2-1, it was again All-America Pina who brought the Rams to life. On a fast break he fired a scoring bullet from 25 yards out to deadlock it at 2-2.

With but five minutes left in the game, Olaf Strohmeier, who played a brilliant game at his wing position, inbounded a high floating kick that came down directly in front of the goal, and little Joe Simon managed to put it through on a perfect head ball for the 3-2 advantage.

The final score resulted on an outstanding execution of teamwork. With less than three minutes remaining, Horn and Rudulfo Marsones relayed back and forth until they got in close. Then Horn passed to Marsones who knocked it in from 15 yards out.

The Rams played an inspired game and the return of center-fullback Ken Gregory, who was supposed to be out for the season, helped defensively.

It was his well-placed head shots, coupled with the fine all-around play of Pina, who was advised not to play because of torn ligaments in his leg, that were prominent factors in the win.

Runners Ready For Conference Meet

Seven members of the Ram cross-country team will participate in the Golden Gate Conference championships Friday at Stanford University.

Jose Valle, Steve Jackson, Roger Ritchey, Eugene Piotkin, Ozzie Norris, Phil Dancel and Hoy Henderson will compete for the local spikers.

Valle, Jackson and Ritchey, the 1-2-3 runners, are veterans of last year's championship team. In the comparable Big Eight Conference championship last year, Jackson placed second with a time of 16:09, only two seconds behind the first place runner. Valle placed 11th and Ritchey finished 16th.

The Rams took the now extinct Big Eight Conference championship ahead of second place Sacramento.

Taking third, sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth places wasn't enough as San Jose defeated the college in the last meet, 33-22.

Norris 15:31, Ritchey 15:31, Piotkin 15:44, Henderson 15:50 and Valle 15:56 were the team leaders in the San Jose meet.

San Jose, Foothill and San Mateo will be the threats in the conference championship meet. Dave Kamrar of San Mateo has recorded a speedy 15:26 already this season against Foothill.

Giles Scores 28 In Intra Contest

Led by 5-4 John Giles, Alpha Phi Epsilon defeated Gamma Phi Ypsilon, 58-16, to highlight action in the second round of the fraternity league last Tuesday night in the men's gymnasium.

Giles dunked 28 points for the winners.

Also in fraternity league play, Beta Tau downed Alpha Kappa Rho, 21-18, in a close contest. Neither club went ahead by more than one point until the final period.

The independent league games saw three teams remain undefeated. The Divine Ones, Collegiate Five and the Cooks Five kept their records clean by downing their opponents handily. The Divine Ones defeated the Mets, 55-45. The Collegiate Five easily topped the Newmans, 46-28. The Cooks Five downed the Hawaiian Club, 40-24.

In an earlier game, Alpha Phi Omega picked up its initial win of the season by handing the Hotel and Restaurant five its second straight defeat, 38-24.

Rams, Lowly Diablo Valley Mix In Homecoming Clash

The Diablo Valley Vikings, still seeking their first win of the year, meet the Rams at 2 p.m. Friday at the college stadium in City College's 1962 version of Homecoming.

Win or lose, the Rams, fighting to stay alive in the Golden Gate Conference championship race, will gain at least the name of a stadium when the day is over.

Council of Organizations, under the leadership of Bill Silver, has conducted a Name-The-Stadium contest, and the results will be announced Friday during halftime.

If past Homecomings are any indication of football performances, the San Franciscans and their powerful running attack should prevail.

It was in last year's Homecoming game, before a small crowd of 400 who braved small showers, that the Rams upset powerful Stockton, 7-6, in the last seconds of the contest.

But if the Rams win Friday it won't be an upset—AT ALL. Diablo Valley, which had a happy time in the Coast Conference last year, winning five and losing two, lost almost the whole first club to graduation and have had problems ever since.

Diablo started badly and got worse. In preseason contests, the Vikings dropped the opener to Modesto, 21-8, and came their closest to winning a game when they deadlocked Santa Rosa, 14-14.

The league season started on an inauspicious note when Diablo Valley met San Mateo in the opener—and from the score it might as well have been the league closer.

San Mateo, roiling up a total of 329 yards, ripped Coach Sam DeVito's club, 42-0. The Vikings gained only 123 yards rushing and only 22 passing.

After three conference games, the Vikings had scored but eight points while yieiding 88 and had ignominiously suffered two shutouts. Even Oakland, which held an 0-3 record, took Diablo Valley, 18-0.

But the Vikings have come to play, and the Rams could be ripe for an upset. After seeing what the Los Angeles Rams, who had lost six straight league games, did to the 49ers, anything is possible in football.

For an indication of what the Vikings lost to graduation, the entire Viking roster shows but four returning lettermen.

Van Boschetti, a 210-pound center and first team All-Coast Conference center in 1961, leads the starters. Other lettermen are guard Bill Watkins, linebacker Jim Ricioii and center Dave Chapiik.

Top newcomers are fullback Anthony Bucallato, a guard from Pittsburg High and a member of the 1962 Shrine team; tackle Ed Zubey, halfback Bill Humphrey and guard Les Ferguson.

According to DeVito, "The strong forward wall of the Vikings is much bigger and has a lot more speed and depth."

So where's the weakness?

"We have the balance from end to end, but the running backs are not up to par with the line," DeVito ruefully reports.

The Vikes have 13 men weighing more than 210 pounds, led by tackle Ron Biies at 285 pounds and Zubey at 270.

In this first meeting between the two clubs, the San Franciscans are expected to stay on the ground, with workhorse Ron Coleman doing the main work.

Coleman, also the team's leading scorer and pass receiver, will be backed by John Daigle, Wait Williams, Claude Shipp, Terry Mesa and Mel Tom in the backfield.

The big linemen are Dennis Drucker, Neli Shea, Ernie Oliver, Jack Burgett and Bill Hoiman.

San Jose 'Schoolyard' Play Beats Rams In Last Minutes

By David Kleinberg

The San Jose Jaguars scored on a third down and 18 yards to go "schoolyard" play with 4:23 left in the game to hand the Rams a frustrating 12-7 defeat Friday night on the winners' field.

The Rams took a 7-0 lead in the opening play of the second half when speedy Ron Coleman took the kickoff and skirted 82 yards to the Rams' only score.

But the Jaguars, now 3-1 in the Golden Gate Conference, scored once in the third quarter and then hit the winner on a play that never should have happened.

After taking over on the SF 49, San Jose drove to the 21, but were forced back 15 yards on a holding penalty. Lou Danker, the San Jose quarterback, threw incompiete; Dan Heckerman ran for seven, setting up the play that plunged the Rams to their third straight defeat after two wins.

From the 29, Danker handed off to halfback Bill Pollock, who earlier in the game set up the first score by passing 13 yards on a fourth down play. Pollock rolled to his right, stopped and threw to end Gary Landi, who was ail by himself.

The loss proved one thing: you can't win without an offense. In the Rams' seven games they have scored only once in the first half and have averaged only eight points per game, and you can't win many bail games that way.

Everything seemed to go wrong. Three times in the first half, potential scoring drives were halted by crucial penalties.

The Rams drove 62 yards to the SJ 25, but a holding penalty on a third and two situation killed the drive. A brilliant 57-yard punt return was nullified because of a clip, and an offside penaity cancelled a 35-yard scoring pitch from quarterback Ben Winsiow to Neil Shea.

In the third quarter, hoiding a 7-6 lead, the Rams drove 52 yards, but failed on a fourth and two situation at the San Jose 10-yard line.

Danker hit Pollock for six yards and San Jose's first touchdown.

The second half was miserable. San Jose ran 44 plays to San Francisco's 19. The Rams wound up with a minus five yards running in the second half.

For the game, San Jose outgained the San Franciscans 303 to 132 yards.

Dennis Drucker, with two interceptions, led the Ram defense. George Benko found the hunt, Warton Brown recovered it. Rich Clews, Jeff Farber, Jack Burgett, Joe McGinity, Phil Assia, Tom Laman and Al Aimiroi stood out on defense.

But defense is not enough.

McGriff Leads '63 Cage Squad

Basketball tryouts began last Thursday with a good turnout. Coach Sid Phelan welcomed back three first stringers from last year's state championship Ram team, plus an array of rookie talent.

Everett Adams, guard, 5-10; Elton McGriff, center, 6-7, and Charles Currington, 6-4, are the three returning first clubbers. Reserve veterans are Randy Sims, forward, 6-3, and Mel Tom, forward, 6-4.

New candidates will be Art Adams, Gary Ferrari (Galileo), Stan Fuelscher (Lowell), Art Hopkins (Mission), Tony Jackson (Polytechnic), Ken Scalmining (Washington), Mac Smith (Polytechnic), Dennis Walker (Washington) and Brandon Chappell (Polytechnic).

Men students wishing to try out can still do so, Phelan said.

RAMBLINGS

New Stadium... Old Problem... Few Fans

By Dave Kleinberg

A CROWD prediction for Friday's Homecoming game is easy. There will be more persons there than at a championship frog-jumping contest and fewer than at an Oakland Raider football game.

In other words, the crowd will be small, most probabiy under 500. This subject has been treated before. Small crowds at City College home football games is nothing new.

The college's finest journalists in the past have tried to encourage support, but it has not seemed to help.

The San Francisco road games have drawn well. In Phoenix, a college of 3500, had 5000 partisans at the contest. At Chabot, the Rams played before 1500, and against San Mateo before 3000.

At home, the San Franciscans drew poorly against Los Angeles and Contra Costa but probably reached a low when under 100 were present to see San Francisco topple Oakland. In the Oakland game, the poor weather conditions and a Columbus Day holiday probably explain the low crowd, but there were no excuses for the others.

There are probably two major reasons why the attendance is low at home games.

1) Most students work on Friday afternoons.

2) San Francisco has almost reached the saturation point in sports' attractions.

In the last five years San Francisco has seen additions to the point where the average sports fan doesn't know where to spend his dollar.

In 1958, the New York Giants came west, giving San Francisco its first major league baseball team.

The Oakland Raiders tried to get into the money picture when the American Football League began in 1960.

Professional hockey with the San Francisco Seals of the Western Hockey League began in 1961.

The Philadelphia Warriors added the latest addition this year, when 7-1 Wilt Chamberiain and his professional NBA team arrived.

Add to this the proposed Oakland Oaks professional basketball team, the firmly-planted 49ers, college basketball at St. Mary's, USF; professional boxing and professional wrestling and various others.

The average sports fan could go nuts trying to select where to be and when.

Too much of anything is not good, and this was indicated in Los Angeles a few years back.

The Los Angeles Jets couldn't take the competition of the Los Angeles Lakers and had to disband in the middle of the season.

It happened a year earlier when the now San Diego Chargers were forced out of Los Angeles by the Rams.

A football squad puts in the minimum of 15 hours a week in practice, and when the men take the field, they hope to have some one present to appraise their hours of work.

Friday's game is the last home contest of the season.

Sing A Little Song

Sorority's Golden Cotillion Culminates Pledge Week Friday Night In Smith Hall

By Jean Zeidler

Culminating rushing and pledging for sororities, Inter-Sorority Council holds its semiannual "presents" from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight Friday in Smith Hall, Dean Mary Golding announced last week.

Theme of the semiannual presentation is Golden Cotillion, and decoration for the event will be centered around the ramp in the dining section of Smith Hall.

During intermission each of the 36 pledges, wearing pastel-colored cocktail dresses, will be introduced and presented by their sorority presidents.

Music will be provided by Sal Vance and his band, and attire will be semiformal. Attending the presentation, which is by invitation only, will be parents, friends and dates.

"This year produced the smallest pledge class," Dean Golding remarked. She noted that the reason was that not enough applicants carried C grade point averages to meet sorority scholastic standards.

Margo Bragetta, president of Phi Beta Rho, and her committee are in charge of making arrangements for musical entertainment and for floral decoration.

Kappa Phi's committee, headed by President Claudia Vasquez, will be responsible for general decoration for the affair.

Rose Diggins, president of Delta Psi and ISC, together with her committee is in charge of the lineup and presentation of the pledges.

This committee is also making arrangements for a photographer to attend the presentation.

Heading Theta Tau is President Carol Robino, who will work with her committee in preparing the electrical arrangements for the evening. This includes microphones and spotlights.

President Birgitta Bergman, Gamma Kappa Beta, and Nettie Cook, president of Delta Sigma Tau, will have their committees work in conjunction with cleaning up.

KEAR Representative Speaks During C-Hour

William Mandoerfer, coordinator of radio station KEAR, will address the Roger Williams Fellowship during College Hour Friday.

Mandoerfer is station coordinator and in charge of sending scripts to the stations in such cities as Sacramento and Bakersfield. Scripts are furnished by such groups as the Moody Bible Institute.

The station has no advertising and depends upon voluntary support.

The lecture will be held in A-212 and all are welcome, regardless of denomination, a club spokesman stated.

Station KEAR, 97.3 on the FM dial, is a nonprofit group affiliated with Family Stations Incorporated.

Janice Meilach Wins ISC Academic Award

Janice Meilach, low freshman with a 3.6 midterm grade average, is this semester's winner of the Inter-Sorority Council's academic award.

Presentation of the award was made at the Associated Women Student fashion show last Thursday.

Miss Meilach, a George Washington High graduate, is a business and secretarial major and a song-girl here.

This is the fourth semester that the award has been given, and each time a Washington graduate has won.

The plaque, a semiannual award, was donated to the college by eight sororities in Spring 1961.

A program of 12 units and graduation from a city high school are minimum requirements for award qualification.

Candy Sale To Aid Council For Blind

Boxes of chocoiate candy will be sold on campus all next week in a drive to benefit the California Council for the Blind, Council of Organizations President Bili Siiver announced today.

The candy will be sold in Smith Hall, at the siiver pole in Science Hall and at other key locations throughout the campus. Proceeds will go to the Council for the Blind, which sponsors a schooi for sightless persons and aids other organizations dedicated to helping the blind.

According to Siiver, there is no definite goal set for this campaign since "this is the first year such a drive has been held at the college."

A second charitabie activity to be sponsored by the COO this semester is the annual Christmas drive, whose aim is to coiiect funds to purchase food for needy households in the city in the Christmas season.

Students may sumbit names of families they believe should benefit from the drive. These names will be taken under consideration along with names submitted by local clergymen, Silver said.

Third In Series Of C-Hour Concerts Scheduled Friday

Fred Stockton's Program Features Classic Guitar

By Michel Janicot

For guitar-loving enthusiasts, College Hour events Friday feature Fred Stockton presenting the third concert of this semester's series in the college theater, Meyer Cahn, series sponsor, announced yesterday.

Stockton's program will include Etude in B flat, Minuet in C major and Minuet in E major by Fernando Sor; Venetian Boatsong by Felix Mendelssohn; Granada by Albeniz; Marieta, Prelude No. 2 and Capricho Arabe by Francisco Tarrega, and Franz Schubert's Ave Maria.

A middle-aged, white-haired guitar devotee, Stockton was born in Missouri when his concert pianist mother was en route from Chicago to Louisiana. Stockton attended grammar and high schools in Portland, Oregon, where he studied piano nearly five years before taking up brass and reed instruments.

He played trombone for two years with the Portland Symphony under the direction of Wilhelm Van Hoogstratten in 1923-24. He then went into dance orchestra work where he performed for 19 years with Cole McElroy.

When he first travelled to Mexico in the early part of 1941, he heard the classic guitar for the first time and started to play as a hobby. The hobby developed into a serious interest in the instrument, and he decided to take it up permanently.

Stockton encountered his first problem when trying to locate a competent guitar teacher. He studied under Vahdah Olcott-Bickford but was dissatisfied with her methods and returned to Mexico to learn to play the guitar by himself.

His interest in the guitar became so intense that he now devotes himself exclusively to it.

Two years ago Stockton travelled to Europe to learn more about the guitar, its players and music publishers and developed a guitar collection hobby.

Thus far, he has collected 30 guitars from Germany, Spain, France, Italy, Holland and Mexico.

Stockton came under the influence of world renowned guitarist Segovia, and although they have met numerous times, Stockton never has been a student of Segovia.

Stockton has taught the classic guitar and conducted studios in the Bay Area for 11 years, as well as having given many recitals in the area.

He has a studio in San Jose and another one in San Francisco's North Beach on Columbus avenue.

FRED STOCKTON and the magic of his guitar will entertain students during College Hour Friday in the third of this semester's concert series.

CJCSGA Climaxes Year's Student Government Talks

Delegates from the state's 67 two-year colleges will meet this weekend at Asilomar, near Monterey, to climax this semester's statewide student government conferences, according to Bili May, Associated Student president.

The California Junior College Student Government Association conference will be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The college will send a delegation of five, led by May. Accompanying May will be Rose Wiener, AS vice president; Bill Silver, Council of Organizations president; John Theilen, finance chairman, and Rich Gray, Student Council member.

Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser, will also be at the convention.

The various workshops and regional conferences which have been held over the last two months have laid the groundwork for the CJCSGA convention. The purpose of the conference is to meet and deal with problems which arise in student government.

The member colieges discuss such topics as budgets, student government organization and minimum grade point averages for athletes and members of student organizations.

Last year's conference initiated a statewide biood drive program.

The coliege has performed many services for the conference and, according to May, "City College is well known at all state and regional conferences."

This semester the college has again been assigned the responsibiiity of compiling the State Information booklet. This booklet is an index of activities and material pertinent to all two-year colieges in the state.

Council Allocates Funds For Booters' Trip To Colorado

By Dick Bullard

An agreeable Student Council last week listened to soccer coach Roy Diederichsen request additional funds to send his team to Colorado Springs, Colorado, for an invitational game with the United States Air Force Academy, to be played Sunday, November 18.

After listening to the request for $285 to send the team and two substitutes to the game, the memory of the Phoenix football fiasco was brought up. In that case a lack of substitutes possibly caused the club's poor showing.

President Bill May then suggested a caucus among Diederichsen, Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser, and Finance Chairman John Theilen. May hinted that the council would probably be favorable to a larger allotment.

After the caucus, Theilen introduced a motion to allocate $534 to the team. The additional funds are to be used to allow the club to take four substitutes instead of the originally planned two. Diederichsen cited that the high altitude in Colorado Springs makes frequent substitution a necessity. The motion was passed by council with a vote of 10-0-1.

In additional reports, Campus Police Chief Bob Mulhall outlined plans for the future of the much-discussed dirt parking lot off Judson avenue. Mulhall stated that the lot was closed one day last week to give police a chance to section and mark parking stalls.

These stalls are temporary and will be improved in the future. Mulhall expressed concern that the problem had been allowed to exist this long, adding that parking permits will be needed in the lot effective next Monday.

Tickets will be given to all cars not parked in stalls or blocking the paths.

A statement was directed at Mulhall that many students are complaining about receiving two or more citations at one time. Mulhall replied that his officers are completely within their rights in giving five, six or even seven tickets at a clip.

Recurring compiaints about the noise in the library prompted the council to form a committee for campus improvement. Councilman Les Brandin was named to head the committee. The group's function will be to find suitable places for students to congregate who don't wish to study.

The possibility of placing more benches around campus was offered as a suggestion.

Other complaints to be acted upon concern the discount shops listed on Associated Student cards. Chairman Dave Otey has promised an investigation.

Frosh Class Sponsors Canned Food Drive For Needy At Thanksgiving

In an effort to assist needy families at Thanksgiving time, the Freshman Class, led by President Rich Thomas, is conducting a campus-wide canned food drive.

This is the first such endeavor held by a campus organization here, and Thomas has set his goal at 3000 cans this year.

All donations will be given to the Mission Neighborhood Center Association, which has, eight distribution points throughout San Francisco. "They will match our contributions with turkeys and other food appropriate to the holiday," Thomas added.

Any nonperishabie article will be accepted.

A total of 18 containers have been placed at key spots around the campus. Five are in Science Hall, six in Cloud Hall, three in the arts building, three in Smith Hall and one in the shack.

"This can be a Frosh Class activity which will result in about 250 cans being donated, or a college-wide effort which should result in at least 3000 cans. It's up to the students here which way it will be," Thomas emphasized.

"If half of the students gave just one can of food each, we will meet the goal. We think it should be easy to surpass it, though," he remarked.

The drive will end next Monday. Thomas was disiiusioned when he counted results of the first two days of contributions. Only one can was in the containers.

"If students feel embarrassed carrying such articles to college, their outlook may be changed if they realize the good they can accomplish," Thomas emphasized.

Thomas cited the results of the recent Alpha Sigma Delta book drive, saying, "They collected a total of more than 1500 books. Our drive should be easier to meet and consequently the goal should be surpassed."

Why Didn't Norwegians Award Nobel Peace Prize This Year?

NORWEGIAN Nobel Institute, delegated to give out the annual Nobel Peace Prize, decided recently to skip the 1962 award because "the world situation is too unsettled to confer the honor on anyone this year."

We disagree with this decision. We are the first to admit that the world situation this year has been unsettled. There has been conflict in most parts of the globe—Cuba, Africa, India, Latin America and so on. But this is not a sufficient reason to deprive someone of this type award. There are thousands working for world peace, and although trouble continues, it is no fault of the peace workers.

Frankly, there are nations working AGAINST peace.

At a time when the world needs peace more than anything else, we feel the Norwegian organization displayed a particular lack of discretion in their action. It left the impression that things were not progressing at all. It left the impression that no one was working for peace in 1962.

The peace prize is awarded to the person or organization which has done "most or best to further brotherhood among the peoples, to abolish or cut down the standing armies and to create or further the work of peace congresses."

Certainly, there are a number of such peoples and organizations which meet the qualifications One could suppose that Nikita Khrushchev would surely step forward and claim the peace award on the basis of his pulling missiles out of Cuba, and pulling the world back from the brink of war.

But it's men like U. N. Secretary-General U Thant, Adlai Stevenson, President Kennedy, Dean Rusk and countless others who could and should have been considered.

Certainly, someone was working for peace in 1962. Never was a year so full of pacifist marches—in Washington, in San Francisco and in other world cities. What about such organizations as the Committee for Non-Violent Action or the newly formed Bay Area Committee for World Wide General Strike for Peace? A lot of workers, but no award.

Albert John Luthuli, a Negro resistance leader of South Africa, was named a year late for the 1960 award at the same time the 1961 prize was awarded posthumously to Dag Hammarskjold, the former U. N. Secretary-General.

We think the Norwegian authorities made an irrevocable mistake this year.

The Spectator — Hollywood Can Not Leave Morality Alone

By Hugh Wilson

MOVIES are better than ever, or so Hollywood would have you believe. But don't you believe it! If anything the movies of today are worse than ever. In reality, the great majority of movies released from Hollywood is nothing more than legalized pornography.

It seems that Hollywood's greatest trouble is that it cannot leave morality alone. The thesis seems to be, the sexier the better, and as a result, a never-ending stream of filth is paraded before us.

The comedy situations of five years ago have all but vanished from the theater screen, and a look at recent releases shows that they may have led to the safety of reruns on television.

Room At The Top, Suddenly Last Summer and The Children's Hour have all dealt with some phase of emotional insecurity and deviation; all this was offered to the public in the guise of "entertainment."

The most recent offender is The Chapman Report. Based on the book of the same title, it is hardly worth the time to watch. The picture has no "message" and is not even entertaining.

If a private citizen tried to sell this sort of material on the street corner, he most assuredly would be arrested and fined or jailed.

This is not to say that we should become a nation of "prudes" and bury our heads in the sand when these topics are brought up, but when they are thrown at us from the theater screen, it is time to act.

Perhaps one of the many reasons the industry is losing business is its lack of good taste. After all, there are not many people who will sit through 3½ hours of eternal and domestic problems of an overeager housewife; the Kinsey Report would probably make for more exciting reading than the movie, Chapman Report.

There is also another fact being overlooked. A great number of children and teen-agers attend these movies. Could it be that there just might be some connection between crimes of violence and movies like Rebel Without A Cause and The Wild Ones?

It is no wonder that the youth of today is a bit mixed up. On one hand they are told to respect authority, but Rebel Without A Cause shows defiance of anything but mob rule.

Under the guise of "art," still more of these pictures are creeping into the nation from other parts of the world. Yet no protests are made. Surely things have not advanced so far that pornography is condoned just because it comes from abroad and is offered at the Bijou.

It takes no more effort to laugh at the antics of Laurel and Hardy, or Bob Hope, than it does to chuckle at a case of friendly cannibalism; so why settle for the latter when better entertainment is available.

The solution is simple enough. A real censor's office is badly needed, and not one that toadies to the Mr.

For Wisdom

The Library Has Something For All—Books

By Boyd Burtnett

The wisdom of mankind is stored in books, and students may now enjoy a new and better wisdom with the arrival of new books in the college library.

Romantically inclined students will, no doubt, devour either The Art Of Loving or Thank You, Dr. Lamaze; A Mother's Experiences In Painless Childbirth.

For students who happen to be a little strapped for cash, a book entitled Medical Care For Welfare Recipients may be just what the doctor ordered.

Math majors will be glad to know that now a book has been written for them on a different level. Instead of struggling through the usual dull, difficult textbooks, they can read A Child's Conception Of Geometry.

A recommended mystery selection is What Ivan Knows That Johnny Doesn't, the book said to be on the list of the Bolshevik Book-Of-The-Month Club.

For those interested in the exotic fruit of the Orient or horticulture, who knows what they will learn when reading Mei Lan-fang, Leader Of The Pear Garden.

If, when he grows up, a student finds that he wants to be his own boss, he could find many ideas in How To Build An Infants', Children's and Subteens' Business.

Followers of the Cuban crisis may supplement their knowledge by reading such works as Fallout; A Study Of Superbombs, Strontium 90, And Survival, and, Fundamentals Of Aerospace Weapon Systems. These two volumes are filed under the Useful Arts section.

This is only a partial list of the 132 books the library has received since last April.

As shown, there is something for everybody in the library and to quote somebody, "Let's give the taxpayers a run for their money."

No One Wants Lost Glasses

How students who wear eyeglasses lose them and don't even attempt to reclaim them is a mystery to Ruth Hoburg, secretary in the educational management office.

The lost and found department, where Mrs. Hoburg doubles as a "hat-check girl," has 14 pairs of eyeglasses and two pairs of sunglasses in its custody.

Among other lost and found objects, there are seven slide rules, two missals, a leather pouch full of tobacco, two pocket-style Japanese-English dictionaries and five combination locks.

A couple of beer-can openers, countless numbers of keys (that makes one pause to reflect how their losers get their cars started and how they enter their homes), also can be found.

Myriads of pencils and pens, rulers, compasses, socks, sweaters and purses are there as well as umbrellas, gloves, tennis shoes, combs, lipstick tubes, compacts and costume jewelry.

Instructors: What's Most Unusual Happening In Class?

Bev Pasqualletti, photography department:

One student wandered into my office early this semester but couldn't remember what section he was in. I made a deal. If he told me his name, I would tell him what section he belonged in. But he couldn't remember his name. Next day he found out his name, went to class but is no longer with us—he flunked out before the first midterm.

Harold Cunningham, physics:

This is what happened to me: I was lecturing—about modern living and its swift pace when I glanced down and noticed that I was wearing shoes of different colors. I guess it could be said that my shoes served as visual aids.

Joseph Jacobsen, counselor:

One day during the crucial World Series, I had a television set installed in my classroom and proceeded to use about half of the hour to explain the great American institution of baseball to my foreign students, most of whom had not heard of such a sport before.

James Haran, English:

The most unusual thing occurred last semester in one of my English 1-A classes when everyone turned his research paper in on time. There were no excuses, no questions—they all came through. This doesn't happen too often.

BEV PASQUALLETTI

"One student wandered into my office but couldn't remember what section he was in."

Adolph Stoll, psychoolgy:

This is an example of the power of suggestion. The students complained that the fan was making too much noise, so I went over to the switch and quickly turned it off and then on again. The students agreed that it was quieter, but the fan was still on; they only thought it wasn't.

Lee Dolson, social science:

The craziest thing happened to me when I started teaching at another school. I was lecturing when my supervisor came into the room, sat down and promptly fell asleep. He slept through three classes, but the students cooperated—they tip-toed out of class.

James Billwiller, dean:

This incident occurred on the college's old west campus. I was instructing English at the time and drew a detailed outline on the blackboard. When I finished, two workmen took out their screwdrivers and proceeded to remove the board from the wall. I was dismayed.

Norma Carlisle, nursing:

One woman decided that a desk wasn't the most comfortable place to take an exam, so without a moment's hesitation, she took her test sheet and flopped on the floor where she proceeded to finish the exam—quite contented.

Reporter's Excuses

The Things That Make It Hard To Put Out A College Newspaper

Putting out an issue of The Guardsman, to the average reader, may appear on the surface an easy task. But it isn't. As with any job, there are those who won't cover or turn in their assignments. Thankfully, most do cover their assignments and The Guardsman continues to publish.

Some of the excuses received for missed assignments are so ridiculous that they could be printed themselves. As a matter of fact, see for yourself:

* * *

Editor of the news:

I have nothing to report, 'cause nothing has happened. I went to sec my assigned source, but he had taken all of the AS funds and fled to Cuba (or some equally out-of-the-way spot) and nobody from that department would talk with me.

Then I went to the bookstore. There is always some kind of a story there. But it had just been robbed and the manager had been bopped on the head, and nobody would talk with me.

Next I went to the language lab. With all the fuss about tape mixups, I thought there might be a story there. But everybody was busy listening to the World Series and nobody would talk with me.

I was kind of tired by then, so I went to the P.E. department, hoping for some kind of feature to write about. But it was kind of crowded down there with all the rest of the reporters and I left. It seems that one of the students ran a two-minute mile and the 100-yard dash in 0.0.

I got a ride up to the library in a police car that was going up there anyway. Somebody had chained out the stacks, and the staff was kind of excited. But nobody would talk to me, so I went to the science department as a last resort.

Nothing much was happening there, a student has found a formula for making artificial blood that works in the body. One of the frogs that was being used in dissection jumped back into a tub of water. But other than that nothing happened.

I went to see the president, but he was busy with some guy yelling, "We will bury you," and pounding the floor with a stick.

It has been a pretty rough day. I'm sorry I didn't get a story. But as you can see, there wasn't much to write about.

Sincerely,
Homer T. Brey

Sometimes Fun Hurts

Nurse Assumes Burden For College Ills

Physical education not only aids students in becoming adept at sports but is the resultant force behind their biting other students.

During a volleyball game, for instance, a student may jump across the court, spread his arms out to hit the ball over the net, and by accident, fling a finger into the mouth of a teammate.

After a portion of his finger begins to bleed, the student runs to the office of the college nurse, Gloria Anderson, for examination, and is really examined.

In another instance a student's head struck a windshield. He attended classes until he entered the nurse's office with a slight headache complaint.

The nurse's office, S-190, is the site where numerous unusual and routine health afflictions are treated.

For example, bee stings are a common injury that frighten students into seeking medical assistance. They are more startled than the bee, who dies shortly after its stinger wounds a client.

And allergies present quite a problem, especially for gas station attendants who are allergic to some substances which compose oil. Tears enter the eyes of women students who love to paint their face, but are allergic to the ingredients contained in makeup.

Furthermore, Mrs. Anderson confirms that there is a higher percentage of students at the college with severe medical problems than usual.

Such problems include chronic asthmatic disorders, heart conditions and diabetes.

Diabetics usually do not give any indication of having a disorder, but suffer occasionally from an attack.

A tremendous hazard is in the location of the buildings on campus, according to Mrs. Anderson.

Students quite often do not walk along the pathways in the direction of the gymnasia, but, instead, take a shortcut from the rocky hills that lead them straight to the nurse for treatment of cuts and minor sprains.

A student, after spending three-quarters of the day prancing around campus, discovered that something was hurting him. That "something" turned out to be a "busted" foot.

In addition to foot ailments, the no-medications-by-mouth law, governing institutions in the unified school district of San Francisco, has many students in a frenzy.

One, with fire in his eyes, painfully expressed his view, "How are we supposed to receive decent midterm grades if we have headaches during exams and the nurse can not give us aspirins to cure them."

Elworthy Eyes Success In New Cafe Program

Commenting on early results of the new six-point cafeteria operation, Sherman Elworthy, student government adviser, today expressed optimism for success of the policy.

The new policy, an attempt to relieve cafeteria overcrowdedness and to install orderliness, was desperately needed, Elworthy noted.

"Although the new policy is strange to students, we have had many compliments," Elworthy said.

Announcing changes already in effect and more to be expected, Elworthy noted that limiting entrance to the west fountain area from 7:30 to 11 a.m. creates a lesser flow of traffic.

As a result, during this 3½-hour period, the only exit, the far east fountain exit, helps channel the flow of traffic.

"Students," Elworthy stated, "should not be concerned with the fact that the exit in the cafeteria will not open before 11 a.m., but should realize that no seating is available in that part of Smith Hall before 11 a.m."

The east side of the cafeteria, with the set of tables nearest the windows, is reserved for students buying hot luncheons, and this point of the new policy has been met with complete approval from students.

The west side will be the only area of the cafeteria available to students before 11 a.m., and then only if the fountain is overcrowded.

"Precedents for this kind of policy in a cafeteria have been set by many colleges in the area," Elworthy commented, "and we not only want students to make use of these facilities, but would also like to have them approve and like them."

Elworthy, in making these statements and voicing an opinion for staff members of the hotel and restaurant department, noted that the policy is based on a positive attitude.

Hope for a real solution to the cafeteria problem was sparked by passage of Proposition 1-A November 6. Passage means funds will be available here for student union facilities, a place for students to gather other than the library and the cafeteria.

Student Candidates Start Campaigns After Convention

Immediately following the nomination convention on Wednesday, December 5, in Smith Hall, the campaign season of the Associated Students will be underway.

Nominees vying for the various student offices will be out to get votes, and while things may not get as lively as the Brown-Nixon contest, student leaders anticipate some colorful spectacles.

The nomination convention, with a proposed starting time of 7:30 p.m., will be a small-scale representation of the national conventions, Larry Maibaum, election commissioner, said. Colorful parades and milling crowds will be prevalent.

Inauguration of the nomination convention idea occurred last semester under the leadership of then Associated Student President Dan Collins. Previously, there had been a two-party system.

AS President Bill May and Maibaum will preside over the activities this semester. Each on-campus organization will carry a placard "which will be hoisted high in the air when somebody from that organization wishes to make a nomination."

After the nomination has been made, Maibaum said, it must be seconded by another recognized campus group.

The convention will be open to any City College student, but a nominee must be the holder of an AS card, Maibaum stated.

He also added that anybody seeking a student office must file a petition with the signatures of 15 AS cardholders and at the same time deposit a $1 nomination fee in the student bank. This may be done before or after the convention.

Color Film Shows Philippines Today

A new film, showing the reconstruction in the Philippines since World War II, will be shown in S-136 during College Hour Friday, according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor.

The Philippines Today is a 28-minute film in color. It emphasizes the changes in living conditions and the growth of industry.

"The Philippines are quickly becoming the industrial center of the Far East. This movie should be effective in showing the many improvements," Devlin commented.

College Hour movies have been shown for 16 years, Devlin said.

"They've been quite a success here," he said.

Three Groups To Perform In Fall Choral Concert

Three choral groups, the A Cappella Choir, the Men's Glee Club and the Trebie Clef, will perform at the college's fall concert set for 8 p.m. Tuesday, December 4, in the college theater, Galen Marshall, choir director, announced this week.

The concert marks the first appearance in several years of the men's group, Marshall said. Twenty-eight students comprise this organization, he added.

The A Cappella Choir will present three works by Bach and a motet by Brahms from Psalm 51. Men's Glee is expected to offer a Russian selection by Tchesnokov and three Schubert part-songs.

"This is not a Christmas concert but, rather, will feature a variety of works of many different composers," Marshall explained.

Richard Fenner, music instructor, will assist the choir director by conducting the Trebie Clef.

Admission is free and the public is invited, Marshall said.

Lester On, Ex-G'man, Now Heads Spartan Daily

Three former members of The Guardsman staff are now on the editorial board of the Spartan Daily, San Jose State College's daily newspaper, one of whom is editor-in-chief.

Lester On, editorial assistant here in 1960-61, heads the Spartan staff.

Feature editor of the paper is Tom Kennedy, who served as The Guardsman's sports editor during the Spring 1961 semester.

Fine arts editor of the daily is Bob Pacini, who was editor-in-chief of The Guardsman in Fall 1960 and Spring 1961.

The Potting Shed Scheduled For Next Drama Production

Robert Lasley will replace chief director Michael Griffin in preparation for the forthcoming production of The Potting Shed, which is scheduled to open Friday night, November 30.

A member of the Mountain Play Association in Marin County, he produced and directed mountain plays for the yearly productions presented on Mt. Tamalpais.

Leading roles in The Potting Shed went to Jeanette Allyn, Tom Purvis and Jerry Jump, following tryouts.

Jump, a sophomore and the alias Mr. Purdie in the last drama production, Dear Brutus, portrays a young man, James, who is faced with conflicting emotions about whether he should accept religion in his basic philosophy of life or whether he should turn to atheism.

Chosen to play the role of Father Callifer, the devoted uncle of James, Purvis presented a solo performance in Mime For A Young Man last Friday during College Hour.

In 1958, Purvis won the Oregon dramatic reading contest, which is an annual competitive event among the high schools of the western coast. The following year he won first place in both the Oregon and Washington contests for high school drama students.

Scheduled for four performances, the play, a mystery in three acts, will be presented November 30 and December 1, 7 and 8.

AS Card Sales Hit 2800—Near Goal

At the last count, some 2800 Associated Student cards have been purchased, according to Dave Otey, AS card sales chairman.

It was expected that the 3000 figure would be reached by this time, but sales have bogged down; however, it is expected that this figure will be reached by the end of the semester, Otey said.

A new parking policy which will be in effect next Monday may increase sales, Otey added. The new policy, which affects all parking behind the arts building, was set up to relieve the confusion created by careless parking of cars.

Parking sections will be roped off, and parking permits will be required.

The Cutest Of Them All

The ball was held October 19.

Guests of the Hawaiian Club, the winning couple was presented with dinner-theater tickets to the Garden Court of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel where Pajama Game was playing. They attended the per-performance last Friday.

In one of the most successful and well attended Frosh Balls in recent years, Young and Miss Mar were chosen as the Cutest Couple from a field of 25 couples.

Twenty of the couples were chosen at the college prior to the ball on the basis of their appearance in interviews held by the Cutest Couple committee. Along with five other couples selected at the ball, the 20 couples competed for first place.

Judges of the contest were Freshman Class sponsors, Mary Perry and Edward Rogers, and Associated Student President Bill May.

650 Men Students May Get Christmas Post Office Jobs

More than 650 veterans and nonveterans have been referred to the San Francisco Post Office department for full-time Christmas jobs, according to Joseph A. Amori, director of placement.

Post office brochures state, however, that veterans will be given preference.

Because of a curtailed federal post office budget, the overall personnel demands were less this year than before. Despite this, however, the college was given one of the largest quotas in the San Francisco area, Amori said.

Work schedules will coincide with the closing of the college December 14, and will include work at the main and substation branches of the post office, as well as the airmail facility at the International Airport.

Jobs will pay a minimum wage of $2.10 an hour with a ten per cent differential from 6 p.m. and 7 a.m.

Conferences with personnel staffs of department stores and specialty shops in San Francisco and surrounding areas have produced many diversified job openings for both the men and women students, Amori said.

These jobs will begin with a limited work schedule during the evenings, with full-time assignments going into effect after the college closes for Christmas vacation.

Pay scale for this type of work ranges from a minimum of $1.25 per hour to a high of $2.70, depending upon the product sold, experience and union status.

Though the post office jobs are already filled, a great many job openings are still available for qualified men and women students with sales ability, who can begin working now on a "short day" schedule nights and Saturdays.

Women with skills in wrapping and cashiering are especially in demand. While previous experience is desirable, there are some job opportunities for beginners with special aptitudes in public relations.

Amori cautioned students not to wait until the last minute to file for part-time Christmas work. "There won't be any," he said.

Twenty-six Years Of Digging

Pick, Hammer Society Still Going Strong

Founded here in 1936, the Pick and Hammer Society is an organization serving to promote good fellowship and to extend knowledge of geology and allied subjects to serious students majoring in geology.

The society meets weekly during College Hour and once a month with guest speakers from the National Park Service, universities and from the geological field at large at the homes of the club's sponsors, Chester Crowell and George Baffico.

In addition, the students take field trips, designed both for education and pleasure, to various points of geological significance. Next weekend, the field trip goes overnight to Lake Berryessa on the Monticello Reservoir, Bayes Hot Springs and the Petrified Forest area.

The bivouacking future geologists travel by Volkswagen buses and provide their own food and sleeping bags, and are even urged to "bring your girlfriend along."

Last semester a government scientist, Manuel Bonilla of the United States Geological Survey in Menlo Park, "discovered" that an earthquake fault is running directly under the campus. The fault, known as City College fault, runs parallel to the famous San Andreas fault which caused the devastating earthquake in 1906, but it is not considered active.

Actually, Crowell and Baffico, both geology instructors here, commented that geologists have known about the fault for a long time but did not positively affirm its existence until last year.

Crowell is a veteran geology instructor here and will retire next June.

His replacement is unnamed.

Baffico first became interested in the society when he was a student here in the 1940's. He has been sponsor of the group for the past 14 years.

Baffico's daughter, Diana Marie, attends City College. Here last semester was his nephew, Jim, now attending the University of Nebraska with a full football scholarship.

Jim, former co-captain of the Ram football team, won All-American recognition last semester.

Another Baffico daughter, Georgiana, was graduated last June and is now a dental assistant.

Baffico teaches anthropology, geology and geography.—By M.J.

45 Women Here Join New Dental Assisting Group

A Dental Assistants Society was formed here last week with a membership of 45, including second, third and fourth semester students enrolled in the dental assisting program.

Already having drafted its constitution, the society will meet during College Hour Friday in S-350, according to Ruth Inskipp, instructor in the dental assisting department.

To cooperate with the San Francisco Dental Assistants Society, to participate in activities on campus, and to promote dental health on campus are the goals of the organization.

Activities of the club, which is termed a "study" group, will consist of clinics and outside lectures given by qualified members of the profession.

All coeds last semester who took the all-day dental assisting examination were awarded with certificates of merit.

As members of the American Dental Assisting Society, graduating students of the program are entitled to take advantage of the placement service here.

Elected November 2 during the College Hour meeting, officers include Merveen Vernon, president; Kay Ilch, vice president; Anita Nagel, secretary; Caroiyn Wall, treasurer, and Carol Mar, representative to the Council of Organizations.

Spectator: Film Capital Morality

Bigs of Hollywood; a censoring office that is just as strict, if not more so, than those in other countries.

But this will do not one bit of good if theatergoers want to wallow in the mudholes that the movies are providing. Maybe the real problem is that we have advanced in some aspects, but we are still morally back in the time of Nero where orgies were expected and enjoyed.

If this is the case, then there is no hope. Hollywood has triumphed, and all that decency stands for will be lost at the box office.

This problem was voiced more adequately by the late Mack Sennett, the man who made a generation of Americans laugh and forget their troubles. Taken to see a typical Hollywood spectacular that was "hot and seductive," Sennett turned to one of the directors and asked, "Where is the laughter, nobody is laughing. What happened to laughter, there used to be so much of it?"

To that we add, what has happened to our sense of morality, there used to be so much of it.

Rams Down Winless Vikings, 15-6

Three First-String Vets To Lead Ram Title Quest

With the preseason contests just two weeks away, the Ram basketball team, backed by three solid returning first strings, are getting set to defend their 1961-62 state championship.

Elton McGriff, a big 6-7 center, will be joined by guard and playmaker Everett Adams, a 5-10 deadeye from Washington High, and Charles Currington, 6-4½, who has a half year of eligibility.

Other returnees are 6-4 forward Mel Tom and 6-3 forward Randy Sims.

Top new candidates are expected to be Art Adams, Ken Scalmanini from Washington High, Art Hopkins from Mission High and Stan Fuelscher from Lowell High.

IT IS OFTEN SAID the backs get all the glory and the lineman all the bumps. But without the lineman the backs get no glory and the team wins no games. Jack Burgett (left) and Dennis Drucker are pictured in stance, and when they move, others move.—Guardsman photo by Bill Keener.

Ron Coleman, Claude Shipp (We Think) Spark Attack In Foggy Homecoming Win

By David Kleinberg

In foggy weather that made it almost impossible to identify who was who, the Rams broke a three-game losing streak with an easy 15-6 victory over the winless Diablo Valley Vikings last Friday in the college's 1962 Homecoming.

The long runs of Ron Coleman and Claude Shipp, a pair of ex-Washington High speedsters who have played on the same team for the last five years, plus a nearly impeccable defense evened the Rams' Golden Gate Conference record at 3-3, and sent the losers down to their fifth straight defeat.

The fog was so thick that if a team had 14 men on the field, the officials probably would have had a difficult time detecting the infraction.

Coleman, a cinch for All-Conference back, who previously held the longest kickoff return of the year of 82 yards, and longest run from scrimmage, also 82, added the longest punt return to his credit when he raced a brilliant 80 yards to give the winners a 9-0 lead in the second quarter.

After the game, head Coach Dutch Elston said this about the mecurial 170 pounder: "To my way of thinking, there's not a better back in the league. He's not only our best runner, but he's probably our best blocker, best defensive back, best pass receiver. What more can you say?"

But it wasn't all Coleman. There were countless others in this one. Shipp, who had in his first seven games gained only 63 yards total, broke loose up the middle in the third quarter and went 74 yards to give the Rams a 15-0 lead. Shipp gained 92 yards in 10 carries for the day, Coleman 106 in 15 carries.

Then there was the defense led by big Mel Tom. It was a defense that held the Vikings to four yards total in the first half and didn't surrender a first down until the last play of the third quarter.

The Vikings scored late in the fourth quarter on a 55-yard pass play from Jim Hammett to Jim Rinne, but only against Ram substitutes.

The Rams got on the scoreboard early in the second quarter when Warton Brown charged through the weak and ineffective Viking line and knocked the ball loose from quarterback John Dyer on the Viking 20. Brown pounced on the ball, but in the soggy field, it squirted out and kept rolling back.

Diablo Valley's Bob Hariman finally got to the ball, but was jumped on in his endzone by four Rams for the safety, and a 2-0 lead before a miserable crowd of 200.

San Francisco blocking on punt returns was nothing short of spectacular. On a Coleman 24-yard return, Tom, tackle Jack Burgett and halfback John Daigle each threw ground-leveling blocks.

Coleman's 80-yard punt return was something to see. He started for the right sideline, cut in at the 25 and got a block from Tom that seemed to level three Vikings. Tom was hit at the San Francisco 48, but spun out of it and then just outraced everyone to the endzone.

Gridders Battle Foothill Friday In Season Final

After five straight wins—two preseason, three league—Foothill College's Owls appeared unstoppable in their Golden Gate Conference title quest.

But two weeks ago along came lowly Oakland, destitute with but one win in four outings, and caught the Owls looking the other way. The 14-13 upset knocked Foothill out of a tie for first place.

The Rams, now fighting to maintain a winning percentage, venture to Los Altos Hills Saturday night for their last game of the season in hopes of ending Foothill's title chances once and for all.

It won't be an easy task, though. Foothill has a balanced attack centered around the passing of brilliant Steve Moreno and the running of speedy converted halfback Doug Schoenwetter who threatens to break the Foothill rushing record.

Moreno has been completing more than 50 percent of his passes, and has averaged about two touchdown throws per contest. In Foothill's 48-8 preseason rout over Santa Clara's freshmen, Moreno completed 6 of 11 for 115 yards as the Owls ran up a 44-88 yardage advantage.

Veteran Moreno hit for more than 600 yards in 1961.

Schoenwetter, 5-10, 196-pounder from Cupertino, was the Owls' first string fullback in 1960 and sat out the 1961 season. But at the rate he's going, it appears he's lost nothing.

Schoenwetter gained 237 yards in 1960, but has long since passed the mark this year. He leads the league with more than 600 yards and could break Foothill's mark of 813.

Backing Schoenwetter is 200-pound fullback John Travis, an All-SCVAL back from Fremont. Travis has the speed to go all the way. Against Santa Clara he gained 140 yards in nine carries, scoring twice on runs of 39 and 33 yards.

Foothill opened its preseason schedule with a 23-16 win over Santa Monica.

They won the league opener from San Jose, 20-6, the following week they were rained on against Diablo Valley. They took on San Mateo, unbeaten in league play since 1959, and handed them their first loss, 27-20, when Travis intercepted a Bulldog pass and returned it 70 yards in the last 32 seconds.

They kept rolling the following week by dumping Chabot, 32-14, but then they met Oakland, and they were asleep.

The Bill Abbey-coached club has eight lettermen, including guard John Buck (6-3, 200), tackle Brent Berry (6-3, 235), tackle John Twelvetrees (6-2, 210) and end Gary Chiotti.

Top newcomers are John Rose, an all-SCVAL tackle from Camden High, and Mike Feely, a tackle from Blackford High.

Foothill is a renowned punting club that tries to keep the opposition continually deep in its territory, hoping to take advantage of a break.

The Rams, their offense in need of help, their defense in need of rest, will be putting an end to a season which hasn't been a particularly happy one.

There were many frustrating defeats—defeats that could have been victories except for that fatal IF. The San Franciscans have not lost a league game this year by more than two touchdowns, and have not lost a game that they could not have easily won.

Booters Settle For Title Tie As Stanford Tops Spartans

The Ram soccer team had to settle for a title deadlock in the Northern California Intercollegiate soccer league when Stanford defeated San Jose State in its final contest to give the Indians a 5-1 record. The Rams finished the season with 5-1 last week.

The Indians won, 6-4, last Friday.

And thanks to the Student Council, the Rams will fly to Colorado November 17, to take on the United States Air Force Academy team the following day for the rule of the West.

The NCAA regionals will be held next week in St. Louis. Either Stanford or the Air Force will be selected as the representatives of the West.

San Francisco can't compete in the regionals because they are a two-year college. However, the Rams have beaten Stanford and should they defeat the Air Force, they will be considered the best team in the West.

By defeating the Falcons, the Rams would also put Stanford in the regionals.

Ram Coach Roy Diederichsen welcomed the chance to let his team prove the strength of our league, which he feels is the strongest in the nation. He thanked Student Council for the allocation for 15 players to fly instead of the original 13.

"In that mile-high Colorado, the availability of a few substitutes could be a big factor," Diederichsen mused.

Once there, the Air Force will take care of room and board and, as a special event, the Rams will take in the Air Force-Baylor football game.

Champs to represent San Francisco are Ivan Amador, Gary DeLong, Ken Gregory, Waldon Hom, Larry Katzeff, Tony Losada, Rudy Marsones, Gordon Miller, Andy Nabong, Caesar Pina, Joe Simon, Olaf Strohmeir, Lee Wurtenberg and Tom Wynn.

As far as any predictions go, Diederichsen felt it would depend on "how well the boys can adjust to the altitude."

In preparation for the big game, the Rams dropped a practice contest to the University of San Francisco, 3-2, last Tuesday, November 5, at Crocker Stadium.

Playing without four first stringers, the Rams fell behind 3-0 before rallying for two goals in the last quarter. Second stringer Larry Katzeff scored the first goal on a pass from Rudy Marsones, and a second score was added later in the contest.

It is a fitting way to end this controversial season. At the beginning of the year, the University of California refused to play the Ram soccer team and took the loss in league standings. As it turned out California suffered only one defeat after thereafter, and it cost them a chance to compete in the NCAA regionals.

California's attempt to push San Francisco out of the soccer league has, at least for the time beginning, been thwarted, and the Rams are champs again.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon Forfeits Intramural Basketball Tilt

By Dick Bullard

Failure to bring Associated Student cards and the use of pledges in the lineup forced the Gamma Phi Ypsilon team to forfeit its Tuesday night game to Beta Tau.

Associated Men Student President Jim Fuller informed the league that any future breach of regulations will not be tolerated. Fuller told the clubs that future infractions could disqualify the club concerned from further league participation.

In other Tuesday night action Alpha Phi Epsilon continued its win streak by trouncing Alpha Sigma Delta, 44-13.

As the fraternity league reached the halfway point, Alpha Phi Epsilon remained in first place with a 3-0 record. Beta Tau is in second with two wins and one defeats.

Last Wednesday night the women's gymnasium was the scene of a determined Cooks Five going down to defeat before the Collegiate Five. With the win, the Collegiate Five maintained its 3-0 undefeated record.

The losers held the lead throughout the contest until the Collegiate Five rallied late in the fourth period to win, 44-40.

Other independent league contests saw the Mets gain their initial league victory by downing Hotel and Restaurant Club, 49-31. The Hawaiian Club remained winless by dropping its contest to Alpha Phi Omega, 49-40. The loss was the Hawaiians' third in a row.

The Guardsman lost to the Newman Club, 42-27. The losers held a two-point halftime lead.

After three weeks of competition the Collegiate Five leads the independent league, followed by the Divine Ones with a 2-0 mark. The Divine Ones drew a bye last week.

Next week's action in the fraternity league Tuesday night matches Beta Tau with Alpha Sigma Delta at 7:15 p.m. in the men's gymnasium. This game will be followed at 8:15 by a contest between Gamma Phi Ypsilon and Alpha Kappa Rho.

Tonight the Divine Ones meet the H&R Club in the men's gymnasium at 7:15 p.m.; and The Guardsman takes on the Cooks Five at 8:15. The women's gymnasium is the scene of the Mets and the Hawaiian Club game at 7:15, and the Collegiate Five and Alpha Phi Omega contest at 8:15.

Spikers Eye Title In NorCal Meet

In its last competitive action of the season, the cross-country team will send seven representatives to the Northern California championships Friday at Sierra College.

Finishing the regular Golden Gate Conference with a third place 3-2 record, the locals will send Jose Valle, Steve Jackson, Roger Ritchey, Gene Plotkin, Ozzie Norris, Phil Dancel and Hoy Henderson.

Tabbed for top honors by Coach Lou Vasquez is San Mateo and San Jose. This is an indication on how tough the conference was this year.

Last year the Rams took second place in the Northern California championship. Valle copped fifth place in the action in which Fresno took top honors.

In its last meet of the season, the spikers lost to San Mateo, 25-30. Bulldogs' Dave Kamrar took first place with a 15:09 clocking. Plotkin placed second with a 15:39 while Norris and Ritchey placed fourth and fifth, respectively.

Plans Continue Toward Block SF Awards Banquet

Plans for the Block SF's awards banquet to be held December 3 are still in their primary stages, Lou Vasquez, sponsor of the Block Society, reported yesterday.

Coach Vasquez said he is still hoping to have Jack Curtice, Stanford's football coach, as the main speaker for the program.

RA Volleyballers Win Championship

By Edy Grant

Displaying a keen sense of competitive spirit, the college's coed volleyball team in the first division captured the championship during the Napa Junior College sports day last Saturday, according to Frances Galloway, sponsor of the Recreation Association.

Gaining an undefeated status in the preliminaries by winning all four games attempted, the first division team, led by Captain Tim Dunn, wiped out Oakland City College with the score of 12-5 in the championship bout.

The team had won the division championship after defeating Foothill College by two points.

Pacita Ayay, Jack Young, Sue Davis, Margaret Jacobs and Myrna Lau helped to score in the games as members of the champion team.

Each of these members was awarded a championship leather book mark as recognition of their prowess.

Second place in the second division went to the other coed team from the college.

There were ten two-year college teams, which were divided into two divisions, represented in the competition.

Last Thursday was the date for the annual San Mateo-San Francisco volleyball sports night. The San Mateo Recreation Association was host for the event, which included dinner, entertainment and volleyball.

Signups are now in progress for the San Mateo sports day, which will be held on Saturday. It will include badminton, volleyball and bowling.

Recreation Association officers said they are greatly in need of bowlers, and invited all who are interested to sign up.

Sportsman Holiday, theme of this college's sports day, is scheduled for December 1. Preliminary plans are now underway, and the activities will include tennis, folk dancing, badminton, bowling, volleyball and archery.

Fencers are also on the move again with the purpose of keeping in shape to defend the Western Intercollegiate fencing title, which the Ram team won last season.

Presentation of awards to outstanding members of the association and installation of officers for the spring semester will take place at the RA social, which is scheduled for January 4. Shield block and star awards will be presented.

Board Of Education Allots $413,000 For Horticulture Center Construction

By Jean Zeidler

Members of the Board of Education last week approved a total of $413,000 for the construction of a new horticulture center on campus.

The allocation is comprised of state funds amounting to $322,000 and $91,000 of San Francisco school district funds from a 1956 bond issue.

The original architect is Alex Woolworth, a former horticulture student here and presently a supervisor with the California Division of Highways. A city architect who studied Woolworth's plans then submitted the plans to the Board of Education for approval.

The old horticulture center is being demolished to make way for a new freeway extension which will run along Ocean avenue.

The horticulture department, which moved three weeks ago to temporary quarters in back of the football field, is operating under cramped conditions. It has one-third less space than that of the old horticulture center.

Instructors and students occupy the lower deck of Annex C, and two temporary greenhouses have been constructed to house a portion of the 30,000 plants housed in the "doomed" center.

The new horticulture center will be built on the present large dirt area facing Judson avenue and, according to the architect, blueprints provide for ranch-type construction.

Harry Nelson, founder of the horticulture department, last week described the main features of the new center.

There will be two classrooms, four greenhouses, a flower shop and two lath houses. Of the four greenhouses one will be divided and used for specialized horticultural purposes.

One section will house a collection of 3000 orchids and the other used for putting the Mist System into practice.

This system, the basis for horticulture, provides for a constant layer of moisture in the air, making for rapid root development.

The new center will also contain a practical work area for students.

The front area of the center, facing Judson avenue, will be permanently landscaped, Nelson said.

Part of the surrounding area will be used for temporary landscaping in the form of turf trials. A two-point program has been drawn up in connection with this facet of horticulture department work.

Plans are being made for an experimental area for turfs and small landscape plots. One group of students will plan the plots, another group will be responsible for the construction and a third group will be in charge of maintenance.

Landscaping in these areas of the new center, because they are temporary and experimental, will be changed from time to time, Nelson noted.

Providing areas for 16 facets of horticulture, the new center will have one area limited to the collection of botanical plants. Here botany students, together with horticulture students, will have facilities for plant material study, Nelson said.

Along the steep areas of the site, students will be able to work and experiment in their study of erosion control. A small soils laboratory will also be constructed.

The center will contain an entomological collection and a horticulture library.

"We still do not know when construction on the new center will begin," Nelson commented.

THIS ARTISTIC ABSTRACTION won a silver cup for the best educational exhibit in an International Flower and Garden Show some years back and is typical of the work that the college's horticulture department has been producing in its many years on campus.

First Showing Of Potting Shed Scheduled For November 30

By Edy Grant

The Potting Shed, a mystery in three acts, will unfold its unusual tale for the first of four performances at 8 p.m. Friday, November 30, in the college theater, Michael Griffin, drama director, said today.

Scheduling the remaining performances for December 1, 7 and 8, the drama department grants admission to Associated Student members, while general admission price is $1.

Potting Shed playwright Graham Greene, author of End Of the Affair, novel turned play, turned movie, uses the theme of the struggle between religion and atheism in his newest play, The Potting Shed.

Preparation for the production is under the direction of Robert Lasley, Griffin said. Lasley joined the faculty this semester.

Following tryouts, leading roles in The Potting Shed went to Jeanette Allyn, Tom Purvis and Jerry Jump.

Central story line of the play concerns James, a man in his forties. He is portrayed by Jump, who played the role of Mr. Purdie in Dear Brutus, and as the play opens he has just arrived in his home town for his father's funeral.

An atheist, James has been disowned by his family and shut him out from all family news for 10 years until his niece informs him of his father's death.

After being disowned, James had begun his endless wanderings in a state of emotional insecurity and confusion. Something that happened to him in the "potting shed" or greenhouse kept plaguing him, since he could not recall the event.

Actually, he had committed suicide at that site 14 years before his father's death. He, however, was brought back to life through his uncle's bribery, which was directed to the Lord.

Since his uncle, played by Purvis, an experienced actor, was a confirmed atheist, his statement, "Take anything I have, Lord, even my faith, but let him live," did the trick and James resumed his identity in the world.

The play ends with the key word of hope, and although it is not literally of a religious theme, sincere faith is a prime factor to the plot and theme.

Other members of the cast are Tom Leland, Jo Janosky, Sharon Richardson, Karl Gillespie, Al Gonzales, Sandra Lundwall, Dale Atvater and Julianne Jarett.

Production staff members include Bob Trabucco, technical director; Jeanette Allyn, light designing chief; Dave Goldberg, assistant for light design; Don Bauer, stage manager; Laraine Boucher, assistant stage manager, and Claudette-suzanne Good, mistress of wardrobe.

Caesar Villavicencio, master of properties; Nick Rommel, publicity director; Carolina Cotton, makeup mistress, and Gonzales, special effects.

Fred Fischer, Steve Lent, Scott Gay, Mary Atkinson, Suz Henson, Vincinetta Gunn, Miss Boucher and Goldberg are on the construction crew.

Costumes will be handled by Toni Mancusso, Miss Henson and Miss Richardson.

Gerry Running, Bob Brown and Rosie Fang will aid Miss Cotton in the makeup department.

Publicity crew members include Maggie Laine, Italo Tulipano, Aaron Straus and Randy Jones.

Students Have Short Rest For Thanksgiving Holidays

No classes will be held tomorrow or Friday in observance of the annual holiday of Thanksgiving.

All classes, however, will resume Monday, starting second midterm week which ends Friday, November 30.

Because of the holidays, no issue of The Guardsman will be published next week. The Guardsman will resume publication December 5, David Kleinberg, editor-in-chief, announced.

The remaining publication dates will be December 5 and 12. The last issue for this semester will be published January 16.

Christmas Drive In Two Weeks

A double College Hour rally on Friday, December 7, is scheduled to launch Council of Organizations' fifth annual Christmas fund drive here, Herb Ziemer, COO publicity chairman, disclosed today.

Money donated by students will be turned over to hard-pressed households in the Bay Area to provide food for the holiday season. A list will be supplied to the college by local churches and charitable organizations, Ziemer said.

Plans are now progressing to book entertainment at the rally, Ziemer stated, adding that more information should be available within the week.

During the week beginning Monday, December 10, COO members and representatives from other campus organizations will move about the campus carrying containers in which students may deposit their donation.

Receptacles will also be placed near the silver pole in Science Hall and in the cafeteria, according to Ziemer.

A candy sale, intended to benefit the California Council for the Blind, was cancelled last week because "the college has reached its quota of three charity drives this semester." The quota is set by San Francisco school department authorities.

The three drives are the Iranian relief drive, the Thanksgiving food drive and the annual Christmas drive.

Fourth Concert In Series Features Choral Program

Fourth in the college's current series, the Fall Choral Concert is scheduled at 8 p.m. Tuesday, December 4, in the campus theater, with three groups participating, the A Cappella Choir, Men's Glee Club and Women's Choir.

Choir and Men's Glee Director Galen Marshall said that the program is open to the public.

Under Marshall's direction, and led as an organization by President Tommy Brocker, Secretary Carolyn Sparks and Vice President Virginia Yim, the A Cappella Choir will present works by Bach and a motet by Brahms from Psalm 51.

The Men's Glee Club, headed by President John Wodarczyk, Vice President Stan Pappas, Secretary Robert Johnston and Manager Frank Jones, is expected to offer Russian works by Tchesnokov and three Franz Schubert part-songs.

In addition to the Women's Choir repertoire, Sharon Karp will be soloist in the choir's presentation of Gabriel Faure's Messe Basse.

Richard Fenner, also a music instructor here, is director of the Women's Choir.

Piano accompanist for all groups is Warner Jepson, a graduate of the Conservatory of Music at Oberlin College, Ohio, and composer of the opera, San Francisco's Burning, which was presented last December 15.

He is also the accompanist for the women's physical education department.

Last Thursday the A Cappella Choir sang at the Fairmont Hotel for an assembly of 1600.

Asked why a Tuesday night was selected for the concert, Marshall explained, "The majority of the local church choirs practice on Wednesday and Thursday nights, and a good number of the performers belong to these choirs. Weekends are filled with campus activities, and Tuesday becomes the only logical week night for this concert."

H&R Department Offers Thanksgiving Luncheon Today

In keeping with the tradition of Thanksgiving, a special Thanksgiving Day luncheon will be served to students today in Smith Hall by the members of the hotel and restaurant department, Pierre Coste, executive chef, said yesterday.

The luncheon, which will include chicken soup, roast turkey with giblet gravy and cranberry sauce, green peas, candied sweet potatoes and pumpkin pie, will be offered to the students for the nominal price of 65 cents, Coste said.

"For the student who may not want the entire meal," he added, "there will also be a la carte service." The special luncheon will be served during the regular cafeteria luncheon hours, 11 a.m. to 1:15 p.m., and the three-week-old cafeteria operation policy will be in effect.

Luncheon will be prepared by the staff and members of the hotel and restaurant classes, and more than 20 gallons of soup will be prepared.

Twenty-five turkeys will be roasted and 30 to 40 pies served. In addition to the traditional pumpkin pies, Coste said, other pastries will be available.

Coste stated that because of the increase in enrollment, H&R students are prepared to serve more than the usual 2000 students.

IRC Nets $300 For Peace Corps

Gate receipts from the International Relations Club fair held November 9 at the Marina auditorium raised approximately $300, earmarked for use by units of the Colombian Peace Corps, according to Joseph Jacobsen, IRC sponsor.

Proceeds will go toward the goal of $1000 which is needed by the Peace Corps in Colombia.

Former City College student Jerry McMahon will use the money to establish a cooperative whereby the Colombian people can pool their efforts and raise produce that can be traded for articles they need.

The $300 raised is from gate sales only. The total amount raised will be known as soon as individual sales at the fair are tabulated.

Purpose of the fair, according to Jacobsen, "to emphasize the different culture patterns in San Francisco, and the fact that this city is a melting pot for peoples of many nationalities," was evidenced by representation at the fair.

Representatives from world centers such as the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, Greece, Spain, Israel, Samoa, Tahiti, Japan and the United States performed in the fair's stage show.

Included in the acts were Tahitian knife dancers, an Israeli dance group, a five-piece Latin American combo, Samoan fire-sword dancers and Japanese dancers.

Jacobsen termed the fair "very successful." He particularly noted that attendance was better than last year's fair, and that more students attended.

College Election Can Nurture Voting Habits And Maturity

WITH the state elections completed and the City College election campaigns about to commence, it might be a good idea to take a good look at the status of the City College of San Francisco voter.

By figures, we know the average student at City College is somewhere between the age of 18 and 21 years old. Twenty-one is the age citizens are qualified to vote, 18 is what many have advocated that the age should be.

Reasons for the 18-year-old vote seem very strong. The average 18-year-old today is more mature, more concerned and thoroughly aware of local, state and world affairs than his predecessors of the last few generations.

But is the 18-year-old mature? Let's try to answer that looking at it from a different angle. In the last presidential election, only 60 per cent of the eligible voters cast ballots. That means 40 per cent did not exercise the American privilege. Is this maturity? And of the 60 per cent, how many voted a straight ticket, disregarding totally the capacity and abllities of the individual candidate? Is this maturity?

You might then ask: Why hasn't the 18-year-old received the right to participate in important selections? If we bring it back to the local level, we might find the answer.

In an effort to increase voting at City College, the whole student body last semester was permitted to vote instead of just Associated Student cardholders as in previous elections.

The election was considered something of a success because 1144 students voted. But 1144 students represented only 19 PER CENT of the student body. A year before, approximately 600, or only NINE PER CENT, of the student body voted.

There's the obvious answer. It appears that students here between 18 and 21 are just lackadaisical and perfunctory when it comes to government affairs as the public over 21 sometimes appears to be.

We can only suggest that students take advantage of these coming elections. Show by participating, supporting and voting in the City College elections that you are capable of making decisions in higher elections.

Most of the candidates have had previous experience. Most of the candidates have different ideas as to how they intend to run the college governmental affairs.

Read The Guardsman for background and previous experience on this semester's candidates. Find out what they stand for and plan to do next semester by reading their statements. Look into what they have done in the past and then VOTE.

What Alibis Do Students Use To Escape Citations?

Bob Mulhall, Campus Police chief:

Most of the excuses that I hear are similar. The excuse most often used is: "The car next to mine did not get a ticket; why did mine?" The students feel that we have given them a ticket while ignoring who is to them equally guilty.

Larry Stanfield, deputy chief:

One particularly humorous experience happened to me last year. I was writing a citation for a car without a parking permit. While I was writing the ticket, the car's owner came along and told me he had had a new windshield installed, and the permit was on the old windshield.

BOB MULHALL

"The car next to mine did not get a ticket; why my car?"

Thomas Cain, deputy chief:

In my experience, I have found that women students try a lot harder to escape citations than do their male counterparts. Many use their feminine charms to "escape." They blink their eyes, tell me how handsome I am. I let them finish before giving them a citation.

Albert Mendoza, patrolman:

I generally have the early morning detail directing traffic in front of the college and consequently do not give too many citations. When I do pull a car to the curb, I point to the driver and wave him over. The driver usually looks innocent and says, "Who, me?"

Russell Leoni, patrolman:

I work early in the morning and rarely meet the persons to whom I give traffic citations. But when I do meet them, they invariably mutter a nasty word to themselves as I hand them the citations. They will not say it aloud, just mutter—so as to not be heard.

Jerry Shirinian, patrolman:

The great percentage of the excuses I hear are the same ones used over and over. They all say, "Everybody else is doing it, why do I get the citation and they do not?" Most of the students claim ignorance where the laws governing speed limits on campus are concerned.

Rags Scanlin, patrolman:

The funniest experience I had concerned a student who came into our Campus Police headquarters to complain about a ticket he had received for having no parking permit. He explained that his younger brother had scraped it off of his windshield.

Rich Phillips, patrolman:

The majority of the excuses I hear from students trying to escape a citation are in the field of sympathy. They try to win my sympathy; they say that they are sorry, they did not mean it, and, if I let them go, it will not happen again.

Sightless Cameraman Writes Photo Book

Honor Graduate Waits Publication Decision

Harry Cordellos, honor student here, one of last semester's commencement speakers and a recipient of the President's Award plaque for service to the college, may soon "see" his first book published.

Actually, Cordellos will not see the manuscript in its printed form since he is blind—and living proof of the proverb, "Where there's a will, there's a way."

Born with congenital glaucoma, which resulted in total blindness a few years ago, Cordellos acquired the will to pursue a teaching career early in his school days.

He hopes eventually to instruct other sightless persons at the Oakland Orientation Center for the Blind. He, himself, attended this clinic before enrolling at the college two years ago, where he learned to function efficiently without vision.

Although an education major here, Cordellos was enrolled in the photojournalism courses and photographed individuals and inanimate objects with equal excellence. One of his best shots is an informal photo of Dean Ralph Hillsman. He was also a top reporter for The Guardsman last spring.

His camera is set according to the direction of the sun, and Cordellos judges distance by knocking his Braille slate against his cane and then listening for the echo which bounces off the subject.

"Since graduation, though, I haven't taken too many pictures," he commented. "Actually, I can remember shooting only one last summer."

How did he study at the college?

"I sent most of my texts to Soledad prison where the inmates there put all the pertinent information on tape for me. Student readers, paid by the state, also helped," Cordellos explained. He took tests orally.

Actually, the state facility offers this service to approximately 400 blind students annually.

Besides maintaining a four-point average here—making him a life member of Alpha Gamma Sigma statewide scholastic honor society—Cordellos has spent much of the past three years writing a book to which he gave the title, Amateur Photography.

"It's based upon my experiences while at the college and also what I learned at the Orientation Center," he explained.

The National Foundation for the Blind in New York City has indicated interest in Cordellos' effort. If deemed worthy of publication, the manuscript will be forwarded to a printing house by the foundation.

While awaiting the "verdict," Cordellos keeps himself active by participating in a psychology group therapy class which meets here each Friday. Begun three weeks ago, it is expected to continue ". . . at least through Christmas vacation if not the rest of the semester."

In the group, problems experienced by sightless students are examined and hopefully resolved.

A slight damper was put on Cordellos' ambitions this past summer. Following commencement, he underwent a series of minor operations and, acting on the recommendation of his physician, is resting this semester but plans to enter Alameda State College in the spring.

"While there, I'll also be student-teaching at the Oakland Center," Cordellos said. He will receive college credits for this, and as he puts it, "It will help me decide whether I should continue to study for a four-year degree in the teaching field."

At the center, which recently celebrated its tenth anniversary and has facilities to accommodate 400 blind persons, Cordellos will assist other instructors (most of them are also sightless) in Braille and shop-work classes.

He will also head discussion groups he has organized.

Cordellos has never felt sorry for himself. "I have no need to; I feel that I can get around just as well and accomplish just as much as those who possess all of their senses. It just takes will."—By H.K.

BLIND honor graduate and author of a probably soon-to-be-published photography book, Harry Cordellos manipulates a focusing apparatus that he developed to aid him in his photography class, and he plans to teach other sightless persons at the Oakland Orientation Center.

This Is Thanksgiving

—Guardsman photo by Bob Lawrence.

This Little Turkey Went To Market

Automation has overshadowed tradition again!

No more does the poor Thanksgiving turkey come to market in his feathered finery. In this age of progress, the little fellow is shorn and shipped around the country in clear plastic bags showing his nakedness.

Nude and covered with turkey pimples, his scrawny little neck dangling at a haphazard angle, the unfortunate tyke is subjected to the ridicule of pedestrian crowds.

No more is he allowed to strut around in Pilgrim tradition until his appointed hour.

No more do his feathers grace the chopping block accompanied by the screams of small children.

Yes, turkeys are victims of progress.

Instead of gobbling in wooden cages in the poultry shop, this fowl of holiday destiny is stacked in inglorious heaps in supermarkets.

There he remains at the mercy of prodding, poking suburban housewives until a certain Thursday afternoon—when he arises from the oven in brown and savory splendor.

Eleemosynaries Symbolize Season

Actually, a turkey is really for the birds.

The American adult male turkey is about four feet long, has a handsome plumage of metallic green, copper and bronze, its body feathers have black tips, its legs have spurs and the fleshy growth on the front of its head is called a snood, dewbill or leader—roughly as pictured above.

Turkeys need much the same care as chickens but need more room to run around. They are more delicate, especially when young. They are also very susceptible to cold rains. The hen turkey usually produces only one brood a year, unless she loses her first hatching. That's when the fun begins.

The shrewd male often tries to break the hen's eggs, and the females have to find hiding places for their nests; hence, the toms can be called eleemosynaries.

So, while celebrating Thanksgiving this year, don't talk turkey or you might be called one, and if you still have enough energy left after the meal, do the turkey trot, or, if going bowling, try to get a turkey.

The Spectator

(Today's Spectator is by Herman Kilgerman)

ROBERT STROUD is 75 years of age. He has spent 57 of those years behind prison bars.

This remarkable person is the subject of a new movie, Birdman Of Alcatraz, starring Burt Lancaster.

Stroud was born in 1887, was convicted of murder when 18, and, while serving a life sentence at Leavenworth prison, was convicted for the murder of a prison guard. He was then sentenced to death.

His mother appealed to the wife of the ailing President Woodrow Wilson and, consequently, had his sentence commuted to life in solitary confinement.

While exercising alone in the prison courtyeard, Stroud heard a chirping noise coming from a tree's fallen branch. A small sparrow was caught in the branch. Noticing the bird's suffering, Stroud released it and took the bird to his cell and taught it how to fly again.

From that time on, the "Birdman" literally lived for his birds.

From an old pop bottle he made a drinking cup; from an orange crate he ingeniously manufactured birdcages.

In the process, he turned his cell block into a bird sanctuary, but not until he almost put the United States Government in the bird business with him.

Today, Stroud's book on birds and their diseases is considered one of the best and most complete accounts of the subject ever written.

The prize-winning film sympathetically relates other incidents in Stroud's life. In the film, when a new Federal Department of Prisons is organized, Stroud is transferred to Alcatraz—minus his birds.

The drama then includes a sequence of the 1946 riot on "The Rock."

In 1959, Stroud was released from the "Rock," but it wasn't a release to freedom.

Instead, he was promptly ushered onto a train which eventually delivered him to Springfield Federal Penitentiary, where he now "lives."

Twenty-four successive appeals for his release have been denied by the courts.

Birdman Of Alcatraz is 2½ hours of moving entertainment that should be placed at the top of each person's must-see list.

Franee suffered 6,160,800 casualties during World War I.

NSA Travel Representative Highlights Council Meeting With Entertaining Lecture

By Dick Bullard

The state conference at Asilomar last Thursday weakened Student Council in size but not in spirit.

A jovial council listened to an entertaining talk by Ellen Raider of the United States National Student Association. Miss Raider is the West Coast office director of the association's education travel division.

A graduate of Temple University in Philadelphia, she outlined NSA's program of student tours. The tours are budget-priced, and all accommodations are arranged by NSA.

Tour costs range from the $480 whirlwind tour, touching five countries, to the $895 North-South tour, spending nearly three months in nine countries.

The whirlwind tour combines sightseeing in Holland, Germany, Austria, Italy, France and the Riviera. Miss Raider informed council that she had taken this tour herself and enjoyed it immensely.

In addition to the usual sites of interest and concerts, the tour includes parties with students of the countries visited. Miss Raider noted that she had met many interesting people on her trip and is still corresponding with a number of them.

In outlining the program, Miss Raider stated that there are 400 member colleges in the association.

She stressed the fact that colleges do not have to belong to the association for students to take advantage of the low-cost tours but added that there is an additional $30 charge for students from nonmember colleges.

The organization, in operation since 1948, has provided low-cost travel for thousands of American students by combining tours with a large degree of personal freedom.

Every trip enables tourists to meet European students in the same age group and with similar interests. It also provides ample time for students to explore the countryside at their leisure.

Miss Raider further stated that the organization, whose offices are in Berkeley, would help to establish a travel office on this campus.

In addition to the sightseeing tours, NSA also has a number of travel-study programs in which a student combines his tour with a curriculum of study ranging from art to politics. These tours are usually under the supervision of an American professor.

NSA, a nonprofit organization, has been praised by President Kennedy, former President Dwight Eisenhower and many educators across the country.

In concluding, Miss Raider noted, "Travel has become a cocurricular activity."

In other business, Dave Otey, Associated Student card sales chairman, notified council that art students are working on new designs for next semester's AS cards. Otey informed council that the contest is open to all students and a prize would be given for the best design.

Otey added that rules for the contest would be posted at locations around campus. The contest closes Monday, December 3.

Modern Jazz Group Scheduled To Play Here November 30

Among the extracurricular entertainment that appeared during College Hour on October 26 was an unknown, still unnamed jazz sextet, which received a warm welcome from jazz enthusiasts of the college.

The group will appear here again on Friday, November 30.

Singer Paul Taliaferro leads the sextet, with Joe Williams on trumpet, Joe Cavallero on drums, Homer Williams on piano, Jerry Sialand on bass and "L. J." Smith on tenor saxophone.

The sextet blows cool modern and progressive jazz, and all the members are City College students, "jamming" together on their free time.

Leader Taliaferro formed the sextet a month and a half ago after hearing the five other musicians play in the arts building. Soon, everyone agreed to form a combo, and the result proved satisfying to all concerned.

Singer-leader Taliaferro shows great concern over his newly formed group and has high hopes of future engagements in Bay Area jazz clubs.

The sextet practices three days a week in the arts building here and at other times at San Francisco State College.

Two Films Set For C-Hour Showing

Exhibiting the beauty and tourist attractions of Austria and Sicily, two movies will be shown during College Hour Friday, November 30, in S-136, according to Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor.

"In Austria, the beautiful Vienna Woods attract most of the public attention. It's a place similar in character to Marin County's Muir Woods where thousands of people may picnic," Devlin added.

This movie also shows scenes of the famous Strausburg music festival and of the popular ski resorts in Austria.

The second movie, Sicily—Island Of Memory, has much of its emphasis on the ruins of the Roman era. Scenic views such as Mount Vesuvius are also featured in the film.

According to Devlin, Windows Of The World will be shown during College Hour Friday, December 7, and will be followed by three other films before this semester's series ends.

Open Nominations Here Curb Party Monopoly

By Boyd Burtnett

One of the advantages of the open nomination convention is that it provides a safeguard against a student political party getting a grip on campus politics.

Last semester's Associated Student President Dan Collins made a statement in his opening remarks at the first nomination convention, saying that the convention ". . . would eliminate one powerful party's dynasty."

He was speaking of the Students' Representative Party, an organization that had held a virtual monopoly on campus politics for some period of time.

The nomination convention idea was a drastic innovation, and some feared that the students would get out of hand and nominate 25 or 30 candidates for one elective office.

This was not the case. At the first nomination convention last semester, there were 45 nominations for the 20 elective offices. This was a ratio of a little more than two candidates for one office.

Also inaugurated last semester was Student Council's idea of letting non-Associated Student cardholders vote in the student elections. The reason for this was to get more participation from the students in the elections.

This semester the convention will be held on Wednesday, December 5, in Smith Hall. Associated Student President Bill May and Election Commissioner Larry Maibaum will preside over the activities.

Maibaum reported that non-AS cardholders will be able to vote, pending Student Council approval this semester, which is expected. However, he emphasized, all nominees must possess an AS card.

The convention will be open to all students at the college, Maibaum said. Proposed starting time for the event is 7:30 p.m.

Homecoming Queen Reigns

Gloria McClellan Wins Fall Crown

Overtones of last year were evident during 1962 Homecoming Week activities.

Weather—a dense afternoon fog—again placed a slight damper on festivities, a dance was not scheduled for the second consecutive year and Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity again sponsored the coed who was selected Homecoming Queen.

Gloria McClellan, attractive dental assisting major, was the surprised recipient of this year's honor and was crowned during a College Hour rally at the Redwood Ram November 9.

Council of Organizations, sponsor of the festival, presented her with the traditional bouquet of roses and a gold trophy.

Local newspapermen and television cameramen attended the rally to cover the event.

A member of Phi Beta Rho sorority, Miss McClellan, 20, received the largest number of student votes in the queen contest, which began November 5 and continued through the week.

Runnersup were Barbara Russo, sponsored by Beta Tau fraternity, and SAMMY THE RAM jumps for joy as the dense Homecoming fog lifts for a moment, showing a 15-6 gridiron win for the Rams.

Car Trophy Goes To Newman Club

Randee Herting of the Newman Club.

Last year's Homecoming Queen was Linda Ann Hines.

Judged as the best-decorated car in a condensed version of the motoreade which preceded the rally was Newman Club's entry. Beta Tau, with two cars entered, placed second and third.

Twenty cars were scheduled to appear in the parade. As it turned out, only seven autos braved the damp weather to participate in the motorcade.

Miss McClellan made her official appearance in the best-decorated car during halftime of the City College Rams-Diablo Valley Vikings football game in the stadium. The local eleven, incidentally, won the final home game, 15-6.

A COO-sponsored contest to name the college's stadium was cancelled because of the lack of student participation and adequate advance publicity.

Pistol Team Takes Second Place In National Matches

In the rough competition at the National Pistol matches held at Fort Ord November 11, the college's pistol teams took second places in the three different types of shooting.

The shooting experts who compose the pistol team are all enrolled as criminology majors, according to Fred Fitzgerald, head of the criminology department. Members of the top team include Campus Police Chief Bob Mulhall, Captain Jim Olson, Ralph Brown and Ron Wilson.

The rigid contest at Fort Ord consisted of firing 100 rounds each of .22, .45 and .32 caliber bullets for speed and accuracy.

Funds for ammunition used in practice and matches are provided by the Associated Students. Powder and cartridges are bought separately, and shells are put together by criminology students so that cost of ammunition is approximately only one-third of that bought in stores.

Numerous trophies, modestly stored in the criminology department, attest to the fact that in recent matches the team has taken many first places.

Last semester alone, crack shots of the pistol team won a total of 60 trophies and medals. The trophies were team-won, while medals were given to the individual team members.

Awards Set For Criminologists

The Footprinters Association is currently offering two $250 scholarships for criminology students here this semester, Fred Fitzgerald, criminology department head, announced last week.

These scholarships are given throughout the country to top criminology students by the association, an organization that promotes identification by footprints. Two $500 grants a year are made to City College students.

The candidates for scholarships are chosen by a committee headed by Fitzgerald, and including criminology instructors Lawrence Lawson, John Walsh and Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal courses.

Last semester's winners of the Footprinting scholarship were Lewis Pollack and Steven Thatcher.

Pollack was Campus Police chief in Spring 1962. A member of Student Council and Alpha Gamma Sigma, he maintained a 3.2 grade average. He received an Associate in Arts degree last June and is now attending San Jose State College.

Thatcher maintained a 3.5 grade average and was a member of the state championship pistol team last April. He also received his A.A. degree in June and is attending San Jose State.

On his 50th wedding anniversary, Henry Ford was asked his formula for a successful married life. He replied that it was the same formula that made his automobile successful—"Stick to one model."

Judy Job To Perform For Modern Dance Club Today

Eighteen members of the Modern Dance Club here will observe the latest in creative dance techniques when Judy Job, an artist in the field, performs during the master dance lesson from 2:15 to 3:15 p.m. today.

Soloist in Peter Wright's Dance Theater, Miss Job was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley and earned her teaching credential there, according to Frances Galloway, sponsor of the Recreation Association.

She distinguished herself by the power and versatility of her style as exemplified in her American Set, Cornelia, and Jane Addams, some of the dance scores included in The Gallery Of Women collection.

Also possessing a special gift for comedy, she is famous for her own choreography sketches. Heide and Peter Pan, for teenagers, Deep River Negro Historical Society's Fest, and Little Women with Gloria Unti are several of her originals.

The San Francisco Chronicle praised Miss Job with the statement that she is extremely skillful in character sketches. "Her themes are successfully sustained in broad, vigorous style," The Oakland Tribune commented.

A reception where faculty members and guests will meet informally will follow the master dance lesson, Miss Galloway said.

Miss Job persented a choro dance with her mother, Mrs. Peter Wright Job, in the theater yesterday.

Mrs. Job established the modern Peter Wright theater in 1953 and directed special events for performance in the Bay Area in the past six years. Programs are shown each spring in collaboration with other San Francisco artist-dancers.

Called "the backbone of the dance movement in San Francisco," the Peter Wright Dance School was founded in 1912.

Including ballets, which provided the background for operatic programs, the Peter Wright theater also presented dance sketches at the opening of the Civic Auditorium in San Francisco.

According to well-known modern dancers, the Peter Wright school is one of the few schools of creative dancing which encourages creative spirit.

College Active In Acceleration Plan For Prep Seniors

City College is participating in a statewide plan for acceleration of honor students whereby they are enrolled in certain college-level courses while seniors in high school.

A special section of psychology 1-A is currently in session at Lincoln High School with a total enrollment of 32 students, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction here, said yesterday.

City College faculty member Ralph Granncberg is the instructor teaching the course, and all fees and textbooks are paid for by the San Francisco Unified School District.

This section of psychology 1-A is open to recommended high school seniors. While it was expected that most students assigned to this course would come from the group of students officially designated as "gifted minors" under state regulations, counselors and school principals may recommend students for the college-level courses.

The course is one normally restricted to high freshmen here and at the University of California, Luckmann said. Three units of college credit on an official transcript may be earned.

Lack Of Funds Cancels Dance

Doubting that they can raise the necessary funds, Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity has canceled its Carrot Top dance, Bill Miles, fraternity president, announced last week.

The dance, originally scheduled Friday, November 30, was called off after the fraternity members decided that if a loss should occur there would not be sufficient funds in their treasury to complete the semester as an active group.

"Right now our financial situation is all right," Miles said, "but we did not have enough surplus in case the dance turned out to be unsuccessful."

Miles also explained that it is late in the semester, and since a few fraternities have already held their dances, it would be difficult to encourage students to attend. Also, the dance was scheduled immediately following Thanksgiving, which circumstance would have been an added deterrent to student attendance.

"We are okay financially now, but we just cannot risk the loss," Miles emphasized.

UC Scholarship Form Deadline November 30

Deadline to file applications for the state of California scholarships to the University of California is Friday, November 30, Dean Mary Golding said today.

The scholarships pay for the recipients' tuition to any of California's state colleges or to the University of California.

Applications for the scholarships are available from Dean Golding in her office, S-148.

Students planning to apply for the scholarships should take the Scholastic Aptitude Test. The fee for this is $5.

The winner of the scholarship will be announced sometime next March, Dean Golding added.

Rams Lose--But Go Down Fighting

Foothill Holds For 19-18 Win As Near Riot Erupts

By David Kleinberg

LOS ALTOS HILLS—In a game that typified the entire 1962 season, the Rams roared back from a 19-0 deficit and then bowed to the Foothill Owls, 19-18, Saturday night—but they went down fighting.

Moments after San Francisco failed to make the two-point conversion that would have returned them 20-19 victors with 1:32 left in the game, a fight broke out that nearly turned into a full-scale riot.

Players leaped from both benches and were soon joined by fans, and the battle raged for a full minute before order was restored. No one was ejected and the game was played to its completion without further incident, but it was scary for a moment.

It was the final game of the season for the Rams, and maybe it's best. The Rams finished the season with a 3-4 record and fifth place in the Golden Gate Conference. Foothill, now 4-2, has one game left, but Contra Costa, 6-0, has the league title clinched.

The Rams outgained Foothill in total yardage, 214-201, but poor clutch football in the first half cost San Francisco the game.

After Foothill bounced in for two quick scores and led, 13-0, San Francisco drove inside the Owls' 10-yard line on three separate occasions and failed all three times to take it in.

They missed after taking over on a fumble with a first down on the nine. They missed after Neil Shea made a great catch of QB Ben Winslow's 21-yard pass to give San Francisco a first down on the Owl eight, when Winslow's subsequent pass was intercepted. They missed after driving 46 yards to the one, when Winslow fumbled the fourth down snap.

That was the first half, and worse seemed on the way when Ram Claude Shipp fumbled the opening second half kickoff and Foothill moved in for 19-0 on two plays.

John Daigle had a brilliant 61-yard touchdown punt return nullified by a clipping penalty, but the Rams finally started capitalizing on Foothill mistakes.

Owl QB Steve Moreno fumbled on his 29 and Daigle recovered on the 27. On the first play from scrimmage, Ron Coleman, the league's leading rusher, who picked up 72 yards in 21 carries Saturday, went over the right side, broke into the clear and scored.

The Ram defense was working. A quick kick attempt was blocked by Mel Tom and Foothill recovered for a 17-yard loss, and two plays later with a fourth and 41 yards to go, Wharton Brown broke through to block the punt and Tom recovered on the one. Claude Shipp went up the middle on the first play for the TD and 19-12 and still the fourth quarter to play.

San Francisco took over with 4:29 left in the game and after three plays, found a fourth and eight. On the crucial play, Winsiow hit Joe Giacomini for 15 yards to the Owl 37. Coleman got seven, Shipp got 25, Coleman got four and then one for the touchdown, setting up the final act of this drama.

Winsiow dropped back to pass for the two-pointer, threw over the middle for Neil Shea, who couldn't get to the ball--and the football season was over. The boxing season was about to begin.

Foothill scored the first two times it had the ball and it appeared they would turn the contest into a rout. The first payoff came when quarterback Moreno fired 17 yards to halfback John Travis with just minutes gone in the game.

The Rams fumbled the ensuing kickoff and on the first play it was Moreno again. From the 28, Moreno faked into the middle and caught the Ram defense completely asleep.

End Dave Wolfsmith took the 28-yard scoring strike 10 yards behind the nearest Ram. The Owls went ahead 19-0 on Don Elam's three-yard run on the first drive of the second half.

Pass interceptions played a big part in the contest. Winslow lost three and Moreno lost two—both to defensive halfback Ben Brown.

In the fourth quarter the Rams were victimized by one of the worst calls seen in a long time when the official ruled the ball dead after a Ram recovered an Owl fumble.

Oarsman Hickman Seeks Sixteen 'Iron Men' To Man Four Boats

Sixteen "iron men" are being sought to man four wooden boats.

Myron Heckman, a 26-year-old sophomore here and a member of the Dolphin Rowing Club, is seeking these individuals for participation in the sport of crew.

He is not looking for just anyone, though. As he puts it, "I want men who will meet my standards; I won't lower the requirements to satisfy their abilities."

Membership in this "exclusive circle" is open to men 6-0 or more who have outstanding physical and mental coordination, the insatiable desire to win and a completely unselfish attitude.

Crew is definitely a team-sport and as Heckman relates, "There's no significance to an individual in this game, which is why one of the basic requirements is an unselfish outlook. If a person isn't this way the boat will just sit dead in the water."

Four-man teams will be organized as soon as enough applicants are accepted. The ability to swim, according to Heckman, is only necessary to accord self-confidence to the participants. "There is no danger of the boat capsizing," he asserts.

Practices are held at Lake Merced this semester. The "period of devotion" to the sport is four days a week, two hours a day including weekends.

Since crew is a spring sport, beginning next February dedicated rowers will have to practice seven days a week at about two hours a day.

Men who feel they can live up to the rather stiff requirements outlined by Heckman may consult him at SK 2-4460 week-nights after 6 or at the Lake Merced boathouse on Saturday mornings.

The Dolphin Rowing Club was organized in 1877, and a possibility looms that a division of this group will be recognized as an on-campus organization here in the near future.

WEEBEND BULLETIN

The Rams, with 50 points, placed second to San Jose City College's 44 in the Northern California cross-country championships last Friday at Sierra.

1963 Basketball Season To Commence In 10 Days

With just 10 days remaining before the basketball preseason schedule begins, the Rams are about set to attempt to repeat last year's record—namely, a state championship.

Last year, under the guidance of Coach Sid Phelan, the cagers returned the college its first state title, and the remnants of that powerful cage squad remain. Only Brad Duggan and Bill Nocetti have left the first club.

Back and big Elton McGriff, 6-7, and playmaker Everett Adams, 5-10. Charles Currington, 6-4½, may return with a half-year's eligibility.

But the newcomers should make up for what was lost. Art Adams, Gary Ferrari, Tony Jackson and Stan Fuetscher will help the club considerably.

Big help could possibly come from Hawaiian Mel Tom, a muscular giant now playing football, and 6-3 forward Randy Sims.

Walt Williams could help the team once he changes over from football to basketball.

Ex-Ram All-American Stars At Nebraska

Jim "Chico" Baffico, All-American, All-Conference, outstanding lineman and captain of the second-place Ram football squad last season, is now attending the University of Nebraska on an athletic scholarship—and is the club's first-string center.

"Jim is one of the top centers on our varsity squad and has played well in all our games to date," Bob Devaney, new head coach at the Midwestern university, remarked.

Majoring in business administration at Nebraska, Baffico's scholarship is renewed each year.

Nebraska, supporting a winning record in the Big Eight Conference, also uses the burly center for point-after-touchdown attempts.

Grover Klemmer, last year's Ram coach, commented, "I am very high on Jim. Baffico is an outstanding boy with excellent football ability (outstanding lineman in league during the '61 Big Eight Conference campaign) and notable leadership (elected captain of the Ram eleven last year)."

In recognition of his hard tackling and excellent blocking at tackle, the ex-St. Ignatius footballer made the two-year college All-American team named by the Williamson Rating System.

A versatile athlete, the 6-2, 245-pound Baffico also plays a good round of golf.

"Jim may play golf this spring if he can work it around spring football practice. Otherwise, he will have to wait until Spring 1964," Devaney explained.

JIM BAFFICO, who was named All-American for the Rams last year, has been shifted from tackle to center at the University of Nebraska and is playing first team.

Alpha Phi Omega Scores Upset In Intra Cage Play

Alpha Phi Omega, with Russell Rege scoring 20 points, stunned and upset the unbeaten Collegiate Five, 52-39, to highlight action in the fourth round of the intramural basketball league last week.

In other independent league action (if you can call it that), Hotel and Restaurant and the Cooks Five could not place five men on the court and forfeited. The Hawaiian Club forfeited to the Mets and the Cooks Five romped over The Guardsman, 48-33.

In the fraternity league, Alpha Sigma Delta downed Beta Tau, 26-17, in a low-scoring contest, and Gamma Phi Ypsilon defeated Alpha Kappa Rho, 36-23.

In tonight's action in the men's gymnasium, the Newman Club meets the Cooks Five at 7:15, and the Divine Ones play the Hawaiian Club at 8:15. In the women's gymnasium, The Guardsman battles Alpha Phi Omega at 7:15 and at 8:15 the Mets and the Collegiate Five mix.

The fraternity league concluded play last night.

Alpha Phi Omega, after dropping their opener to the Divine Ones, has won three straight and appears in the best position for the independent league title.

Snow In Colorado Springs Cancels Ram-Air Force Academy Soccer Contest

The postseason soccer clash between the Rams and the Air Force Academy, scheduled for last Sunday at Colorado Springs, Colo., was canceled because of heavy snows.

A 15-man team and Coach Roy Diederichsen, scheduled to depart from San Francisco Saturday morning, received a phone call from the Air Force coach, Captain Robert Strickland, late Friday night that "heavy snowfall would make the game an impossibility."

The Rams tied Stanford for the Northern California Intercollegiate title with a 5-1 record, despite being the only two-year college in the conference.

SOCCER COACH Roy Diederichsen, who guided the Rams to a Northern California Intercollegiate soccer league title deadlock, expressed disappointment that snow canceled the postseason clash with the Air Force Academy, scheduled for last Sunday at Colorado Springs.

"We waited as long as we could," Strickland told The Guardsman by phone from Colorado Springs. "It had been snowing heavily for three days and eight or nine inches had piled up.

"We're certainly disappointed. We were counting heavily on the game, and had the programs and posters all made up. Our fields are frozen solid."

Several football contests were postponed.

The chances of San Francisco traveling to Colorado later in the year are doubtful. The Air Force is coming to the West Coast this week and is scheduled to meet California Thursday and possibly Stanford or USF Friday. There's a good chance the Rams and the Air Force will battle over the weekend in San Francisco.

From his Palo Alto home, Roy Diederichsen expressed disappointment for his club and the fact they did not get the much-needed chance to display the strength of the NCISL, which Diederichsen considers one of the nation's best.

West Coast soccer prestige dropped over the weekend when Stanford fell, 9-3, to St. Louis in the first round of the NCAA regionals.

In last week's NCISL All-Conference selections, the Rams placed Caesar Pina on the first club, and Waldon Hom and Gary DeLong on the second team.

Last Wednesday, the Rams downed Menlo College, 6-1, in a practice game. The junior varsity's Tom Wynn and Lee Wurtenberg looked good, but it was veteran Larry Katzeff who led the scorers.

The junior varsity will meet Diablo Valley Junior College today, and unless something comes through with the Air Force, the varsity is through for the season.—By D.K.

Melendez Speaks At Block SF Dinner

Juiio Melendez, soccer and boxing coach at San José State, will be the guest speaker at the December 3 Block SF Banquet.

Mr. Melendez is well known for his coaching of the United States Olympic boxing team at the 1960 Olympics in Rome, Italy. He coached Cassius Clay, the aspiring young heavyweight.

John Jacobson, president of the Block SF Society, will be the master of ceremonies for the banquet, to which the high school coaches of the men receiving awards have been invited.

Melendez will be the main speaker after the dinner, and awards will be presented with each coach presenting them to his own athletes.

Coach Lou Vasquez, Block Society sponsor, will present cross-country awards; Coach Dutch Elson, football, and Coach Roy Diederichsen the championship soccer team's awards.

Football Handlers Dominate Publicity

By Dave Kleinberg

FOOTBALL is a funny game as far as publicity goes. It seems that the only players who see their names in print are the people who handle the ball.

The crowds at football games only remember and watch where the ball goes. The poor lineman is usually buried in obscurity, never to be found, never to be congratulated.

In truth, the unsung heroes are the big men up front. The big men up front engage in more physical battle than any of the backs, and without the big men to open the holes and block for the passer, no team can win. Big men stop the opposition from scoring.

San Francisco's defense has yielded fewer than 13 points per game. Who's responsible?

Middle linebacker Dennis Drucker, the 1960 Northern California lineman of the year from St. Ignatius, has held the middle up. There are others:

George Benkie, a 6-0, 195-pounder from Washington, has blocked many a punt. Jack Burgett, 6-0, 225-pounder and a veteran of three years of service ball, has held up one tackle post. Joe McGinity, replacing injured Bill Holman at tackle, has moved many a man.

The little men have helped, too—guards Phil Assia and Al Almirol plus center Roy Someya, who, grouped together, stand only 16 feet, 9 inches and weigh 522 pounds.

It's not only the first string linemen. Numbers like 65, 71, 76, 55 and 68 have come into the ball game and stopped key plays.

Guard Tom Laman, tackle Jerry Roberts, newcomer Rich Clews, a 298-pounder; Carl Conner and Jeff Farber have never been noticed by the fans.

But they did their jobs this year.

EASH SEMESTER the intramural basketball leagues run into trouble, either by forfeits or by not enough teams competing.

This semester the leagues—Fraternity and Independent—have run smoothly.

Jack Gaddy, director of athletics, and Jim Fuller, Associated Men Student president, deserve much of the credit. We hope it continues in this fashion.

Nominating Convention For Spring Officers Set Tonight In Smith Hall

By Boyd Burnett

Potential nominees will get their names on the election ballots tonight at the nomination convention set to begin at 7:30 in Smith Hall, Larry Maibaum, election commissioner, reported last week.

Nominations are for the coming Associated Student elections which are to be held Tuesday and Wednesday, January 8 and 9, when four voting machines will be situated at strategic spots around the campus, Maibaum said.

All students of the college will be eligible to attend the convention, Maibaum said, but in order to be nominated a person must possess an Associated Student card.

Festivities tonight will be presided over by Associated Student President Bill May and Maibaum.

"Any student who is an AS cardholder may be nominated," Maibaum stated, "but it would be advantageous to be sponsored by an on-campus organization."

According to Maibaum, after the convention the candidates must file a nomination petition containing the signatures of 15 AS cardholders with the Election Commissioner. At the same time they will deposit a $1 nomination fee in the student bank.

Also, there are seven freshman representatives to council and seven sophomore representatives to council.

As quoted in the Constitution of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco, the qualifications for the various offices are as follows:

"The President and Vice President shall have completed at least 42 units and not more than 60 with an over-all grade point average of 2.3 prior to taking his term of office.

"The AMS President and AWS President shall have completed at least 30 and not more than 60 units with an over-all grade point average of 2.2 prior to taking office.

"The Sophomore Class President shall have completed at least 28 and not more than 60 units prior to his term of office.

"The Freshman Class President shall have completed at least 14 and not more than 27.5 units prior to his term of office."

In addition to the above-mentioned there are 14 members-at-large of the Associated Students.

The seven freshman members-at-large ". . . shall have completed at least 12 and not more than 27.5 units of work at the time of taking office . . ."

The seven sophomore members-at-large ". . . shall have completed at least 28 and no more than 60 units of work at the time of taking office . . ."

Pending the outcome of the special AS election on December 13 and 14 either all registered students here or only those with an AS card will be able to vote in the general election for spring officers.

Tonight's convention is the second of its kind. This policy was initiated last semester.

Gambling Closes The Shack; AS Calls Special Election

4 Students Caught; May Blasts Council

Should Non-Card Holder Get Vote?

By Dick Bullard

The Student Union, one of the key hopes to alleviate the cafeteria pressure, will be closed indefinitely after four students were found gambling in the building last week.

Card playing and dice throwing, encompassing a two-week period, was halted last week, and the four apprehended were sent before the dean of men, Ralph Hillsman.

But the action did not stop there.

Council and cabinet members were blasted at last week's council meeting for shirking their responsibilities in supervising the Shack. When the union was founded, it was agreed upon that these students would devote an hour of their time weekly to supervise the union's activities.

Failure to do this led to the conditions which caused the closing, Associated Student President Bill May said.

May explained that not all the blame was to be directed at the council and cabinet members. At the time of the dice incident, at least 50 students were present in the building, most of them enjoying the action.

Most students acted as if the gambling was none of their business, but, May added, "I think that all students should be advised that any such action is their business!"

It was noted that the gamblers showed animosity toward any type of student supervision. When a cabinet member attempted to break up a card game, he was told to "get the - - - - out of here!"

At the closing of the union most students voiced typical comments, such as, "It isn't fair for us to be thrown out because of others."

With the closing went one of the cafeteria's hopes of alleviating some of its crowded conditions. It had been hoped that the student union would attract many of the students who normally use the cafeteria.

If the union is opened again, May informed council, it will be under the condition that strict regulations concerning supervision and conduct be adhered to.

Bill May and his Student Council last week passed a motion which may once and for all settle the controversial question concerning student government elections.

Should a student without an Associated Student card be allowed to vote for AS officers?

The Amendment Students Will Vote On Next Week

Students, in a special election, will vote December 13 and 14 whether to keep or reject the following amendment in the Associated Student constitution:

"A member of the Associated Students may have the full privileges of electing student officers for the forthcoming semester."

When the constitution refers to "Associated Students" it specifically means holders of AS cards.

A special election on constitutional revision will be held Thursday and Friday, December 13 and 14. It proposes to amend the constitution by striking out paragraph 4 of Article IX, which reads, "A member of the Associated Students may have the full privileges of electing the student officers for the forthcoming semester."

This paragraph restricts the voting privileges to AS cardholders only. With the omission of this paragraph, Student Council will have the right to open the elections to the entire student body if they so wish.

The special election will be a ballot-type poll with boxes placed at the silver pole, and another position as yet undetermined. In order to pass, the proposition must carry a two-thirds majority.

This special election is open to AS cardholders—ONLY.

Two students will be elected to the Sophomore Council in the special election. Petitions are now being accepted for the positions.

Candidates must have completed 28 and no more than 60 units of work at the time of taking office, must have an overall grade point average of 2.2, and must have completed at least 12 units in the required grade point average in the preceding semester.

The special election is the product of the last three council meetings. In the meeting of November 20 the motion was raised and passed to open the elections to all students holding a registration card. On November 27, Associated Men Student President Jim Fuller stated that the motion was "- - - completely unconstitutional."

A discussion followed and the previous motion was shelved. Time ran out before any concrete action could be taken and the question was carried over until the next meeting. It was then that Constitution Revision Chairman Les Brandin made the motion to amend the constitution by striking out the paragraph mentioned through a special election.

Christmas Rally, Drive Highlight Double C-Hour

Council of Organizations will launch the fifth annual Christmas charity drive with a double College Hour rally Friday in the men's gymnasium, COO President Bill Silver announced this week.

Because of the rally, 10 o'clock classes will not meet Friday. College Hour will begin at 9:50 a.m. as usual, but will be extended to 11:30 a.m.

Both student and professional entertainment is planned to highlight the event. Godfrey Pinder, a folk singer here, is expected to perform, as is a Philippine Island dance group.

The Rally Committee, according to Silver, is working to secure professional entertainers.

"We are staging the rally inside this year because of the ever-present threat of bad weather," Silver disclosed.

COO is also planning a mile-of-dimes campaign to coincide with the drive's opening. Cellophane tape will be stretched from the flagpole between Science and Cloud Halls to the cafeteria. Students will be able to place their monetary donations right on it.

Purpose of the mile-of-dimes campaign, it was explained, is to encourage each student to contribute at least one dime during the drive. COO hopes, however, that students will contribute as much as they can afford.

Organizations, members of COO, are also expected to spur the drive as they did last year by assuming responsibility for containers for contributions.

The drive will actually officially begin next Monday and continue through the week. All campus organizations will pitch in in an effort to reach this year's goal of $300, Silver added.

All money collected will be used to purchase food orders for needy families prior to the Christmas holidays. Households will be selected by COO from suggestions submitted by Bay Area clergymen, from consultation with organizations such as the Red Cross and from private sources.

The amount each family will receive is determined by the number of children living in the home, Silver explained.

Last year's drive netted a total of $255. With this money, ten families were given food orders.

Filipino Dance Set For Friday

With entertainment furnished by its members, the Filipino Club will host its annual dance from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight Friday in Smith Hall, Lernie Prudenciado, club president, disclosed this week.

Theme of the event is Evening In The Islands, and Smith Hall will be decorated in an appropriate manner, according to Prudenciado.

Tickets, which are available to the entire student body, are on sale until Friday at the information booth in Science Hall. Cost is $2 per couple, and dress is semiformal.

Proceeds will go to the club's scholarship fund to aid Filipino students in need of financial assistance.

The Premiers, a singing group, will appear on the evening's program along with several students who will perform dances representative of the Philippine Islands.

The Rocketeers will provide music for dancing, and refreshments will be served during Intermissions.

Working toward the success of the affair are committee members Nohemi Garcia, Leroy Padilla, Tony Reyes and Leny Aguire.

Potting Shed Closes Saturday

Conflict between religion and atheism is the theme of The Potting Shed, a mystery play by Graham Greene which is scheduled for its last two performances at 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday nights in the college theater, Michael Griffin, chief drama director, announced today.

With two performances already behind them, a cast of 11, under the direction of Robert Lasley, a member of the Mountain Play Association of Marin County, will be ready for the stage when the curtain rises.

The audience will consist of Associated Student members, who will be granted free admission, and the general public who will be charged a fee of $1.

What happened in the potting shed? This question plagued James, a man in his forties who had been disowned by relatives 10 years before the story begins. His family did not approve of his atheistic beliefs.

Actually, he had been going through ambivalent feelings as to whether he should accept religion in his basic philosophy of life or whether he should wholeheartedly turn to atheism.

The play opens as Jerry Jump, who portrays James, comes on stage. James has just returned to his home town for his father's funeral. Emotional insecurity and confusion dominated his inner self while he led a life of endless wandering after being disowned.

Whatever did happen in the potting shed? Truthfully, he had committed suicide at that site 14 years before his father's death. Through his uncle's connivance, James was brought back to life after a prayer was sent to the Lord.

"Take anything I have, Lord, even my faith, but let him live," the uncle had sincerely prayed. His bidding was granted and James resumed his identity in the world. This line carries the whole impact of the play and is a clearcut explanation of the fateful day.

The role of the devoted uncle is played by Tom Purvis and James' disillusioned mother is played by Jeanette Allyn.

Crackdown On Campus Parasites Should Increase AS Card Sales

THE GUARDSMAN'S first editorial of the semester violently opposed those advocating mandatory Associated Student card sales here. Although there never has been a serious attempt toward compulsory AS card sales, there has been in the past few semesters a general trend toward limiting the non-AS cardholders.

Non-AS cardholders, through the courtesy of a magnanimous administration, have received numerous and undeserved benefits and advantages from AS funds.

The general trend is to put a little extra pressure on the parasites by reducing some of the benefits that non-cardholders are really not entitled to in the first place. A special campus election December 13-14 will determine whether students without AS cards may vote in student elections. This, of course, would constitute a privilege, not a benefit.

In the past, an AS card was not needed to participate in the intramural basketball league. Recently, the status was changed. Students and clubs have had to possess an AS card to compete, and the rule has been strictly enforced. The idea again: to cut down on the freeloaders. The cost of running the basketball league (electricity, scorers, referees) comes out of AS funds, which—of course—is money from card sales. Why should AS cardholders carry the whole load?

It has been a standard practice for years that all campus organizations supported by AS funds must have 100 per cent AS card sales. It is exactly the same in the athletic department.

By clamping down on the parasites, card sales are bound to increase within the coming semester. Their increase will bring more benefits to the students.

The latest move, the best one yet, began as recently as last month. The dirt parking lot, behind the arts building off Judson avenue, which has a capacity of nearly 200 cars, was sectioned and marked off. The move, completely justifiable because the area is under campus control, now gives only students with parking permits, obtainable with an AS card only, the right to park in the area. Because this eliminates the last free parking space on campus, parking is now limited.

It would be safe to predict an AS card sale record next semester.

We are in complete agreement with this practice. This is the method that should be used to foster the promotion of AS card sales. It is legitimate, sound and can't miss.

TV Taking Turn For Better? Not Really!

By Hugh Wilson

FOR A LITTLE WHILE last month it almost looked as though television might be taking a turn for the better. But somewhere along the line it made a U-turn and remained its old self.

During the Thanksgiving holidays CBS presented Leonard Bernstein's Young Peoples Concert. Bernstein, whose subject was acoustics, illustrated his lecture by conducting the New York Philharmonic in several selections. The wandering TV camera caught many of the young audience in poses of such rapt attention to the maestro that it was really a pleasure to see.

Part of the enjoyment of this concert was in the fact that the sponsor interrupted the program only once during the entire program. The concert was not degraded by constant urges to buy, buy, buy. It was really an enjoyable evening, and it was nice to know that the audience was not made up of children who were forced to attend.

Even the youngsters who were seen on camera seemed to be enjoying what they were hearing.

Another program that warms the cockles of this iconoclast's heart is Going My Way. Though in all honesty it must be pointed out that this is a situation comedy, it is one that is done in good taste and with a humor that is not often found in the seasonal television show.

It is too bad that there aren't more programs like the Young Peoples Concert and Going My Way and fewer like Saints And Sinners and The Virginian.

With these good programs on two weeks ago, it was assumed that last week's programs might be of the same caliber. They weren't. Programs ranging from culture and subtle humor to slapstick nonsense of Red Skelton rounded out the month. Not that Skelton isn't funny, but his funniness is so artificial that it is obvious.

After 30 minutes of his program even The Nurses would have been a welcome relief. But with luck we won't have to watch many of these sleepers much longer. For this month is "chopping" time.

This is the season when the sponsor looks at the rating sheet with one head and at the bank balance with the other. And among those slated for chopping is Saints And Sinners.

This program beyond a doubt can take the award for being the worst program on television.

The actors, especially the star Nick Adams, seem to have no facial expression whatsoever, unless it is the ability to register surprise and shock.

These emotions are probably added because there is a possibility that the actors might read what they are acting in, or maybe have seen reruns of past programs.

Unfortunately, among those scheduled for the axe are It's A Man's World and Fair Exchange. Fair Exchange, like Going My Way, is a situation comedy but it too is a good comedy, with the scenes shot on location in New York and London.

If tribute is to be given it should go to the film editor who must give the program sensible continuity.

It's a Mans' World is rather hard to describe. It has an unusual appeal because there is no real pattern to what happens. Whereas in Fair Exchange the viewer knows what to expect, this is not the case in Man's World.

It is not a situation comedy, nor is it a "family" type show. It is just the happenings of four boys on a houseboat. But despite the difficulty in labeling exactly what the show is, it is definitely of a high caliber and deserves more than it is receiving at the hands of the sponsor.

And that is that. For a moment it looked as though we really might be getting somewhere with television. But except for the aforementioned programs, it is still the same. A glob of algae on the surface of the water. And if the industry remains true to form, the programs that are really worth watching will go the way of the Edsel, American Cousin and Liberace.

Stores Display New Toys

All Ages Find Fascination In Windup Dolls

By Michel Janicot

With Christmas only a few weeks away, windows of downtown department stores are already displaying mountains of shiny new toys.

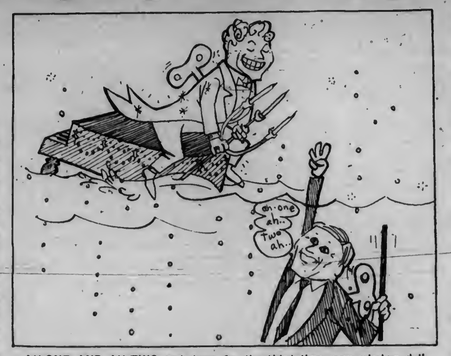
Among the competing treasures, a particular toy stands out. It's the windup doll, and this toy is sure to find a friend with both children and parents.

To start with the political dolls, there is one which doesn't do anything for eight years except play golf, and one which walks backward. Another doll goes through several crises, and the Khrushchev doll takes off its shoes.

The Kennedy doll comes in three types. The biggest doll, handsomely gift-boxed, comes with a rocking chair and asks what you can do for your country; a younger doll calls in the National Guard, and a beautiful doll redecorates the White House and searches for a French chef.

Also, there is the Fidel Castro doll, appropriately dressed in army fatigues, which nationalizes foreign investments and if wound up too much, harangues a crowd before television for the whole afternoon.

Two dolls need not be wound and they are the John Birch doll, which points a finger at you, and the De-Gaulle doll, which needs a special mirror to reflect its grandeur.



The musical dolls are represented by the Miles Davis doll, which turns its back on the spectator, the invariably smiling Liberace doll and the Lawrence Welk doll which drowns in champagne bubbles.

The Hollywood dolls are introduced by the untouchable Walter Winchell doll, the Jayne Mansfield doll, which gets trapped on a deserted island for a week-end, the Brigitte Bardot doll which drops the towel.

To get in the Frank Sinatra doll one has to wind up the Sammy Davis, Jr., doll, the Dean Martin doll, the Joey Bishop doll and the Peter Lawford doll.

The Huntley-Brinkley dolls support the press while the Burdick-Lederer dolls portray the ugly American foreign policy of Capitol Hill.

The dolls should be handled very carefully and not be wound more than necessary, for they are unique and sometimes quite expensive to replace.

AH-ONE AND AH-TWO and down for the third time goes wind-up doll Lawrence Welk submerged in an ocean of champagne. Floating to the reacue goes Liberace, another wind-up doll. The wind-up dolls? They are Christmas gifts.—Cartoon by Ann Thompson.

Furry Intruder Poses One Heckuva Domestic Problem For Student

Most people think of the turkey when they think of Thanksgiving, but not Marty Musikant, an engineering major here.

Musikant, who lives in an eight-room Victorian mansion on Pacific avenue, had a less than welcome visitor for the Thanksgiving holidays.

One day last week Musikant rose for breakfast and sauntered into the kitchen. When he turned on the light, he was somewhat taken back by a black and white furry flash darting across the kitchen floor.

At first glance it looked feline enough to be an urban member of the cat family, but upon closer scrutiny the white stripes and fluffy tail left no doubt as to its lineage.

Musikant proceeded to do the only honorable thing. He retreated to give the matter some serious thought. True to the code of the engineer, Musikant decided to build. Specifically, he built a skunk trap. Although what one does with a trapped skunk, Heaven only knows! Perhaps call the veterinarian?

At any rate this action was not necessary because the little fellow seemed to enjoy the sociability of the parlor to the confinement of the kitchen trap.

After days of looking at an empty trap and hearing a nightly pit-pa across the kitchen floor, Musikant decided to change his plans. Realizing that the one thing more compatible than a trapped skunk is no skunk at all, Musikant made arrangements to sever his association with his furry friend.

The question now was how to make the visitor leave. Musikant tried all the accepted means of animal eviction. He hid the food. That failed. He turned off the heat. That failed.

After days of frustration, Musikant came up with the perfect answer.

Anyone want to rent a Victorian mansion? Cheap!—By D.B.

College Gets Gator Race Bid

When the subject of alligator races comes up, it's difficult for anyone to keep a straight face. At least this has been the case here during the past week.

It all began when a letter was received by the college's Associated Student office from Bakersfield College. "What do they want?" was the immediate question.

The query became laughter once the sealed envelope was opened. It contained a letter inviting this college to participate in the first annual intercollegiate baby alligator race this weekend at the Bakersfield campus.

The note read in part: "You supply the $5 entrance fee; we supply and train your alligator."

"This is a matter for Student Council," one member of student government declared. The letter was read at the following council meeting, and everyone laughed. How ridiculous, they probably thought. No one made a motion in favor of, or against, the request—they just laughed.

One student thought that the college should approach Bakersfield and Orange State (which last semester sponsored an elephant race) and attempt to set up a combination alligator-elephant race.

The originator of the idea hasn't spread the word or identified himself yet. He's afraid he'll be laughed at.

What Is The Longest Time You Have Spent On Phone?

By Dan Pavloff and Richard Michael

Barbara Elbl, freshman:

I talked for three hours to a boy I didn't even know. I met him through dedications over the radio. He turned out to be a premed student at the University of California, and he used to help me with my chemistry homework. I talked to him on the phone, but I have never met him in person.

Frank Jiminez, sophomore:

I conversed for one hour with my girl friend who lived in Sacramento. We talked about various subjects and made plans for the future. The cost of the call came to about $10, but it was worth it.

Bonnie Brady, freshman:

I talked to my old flame for four hours one night. The reason we talked so long was that it was the first time he had called me. During the remainder of the week we also talked for about an hour or so each time he called.

Francis Moriguchi, freshman:

I once talked four hours with a girl. We talked about anything and everything that came into our minds. Why did I talk so long? It was just that I hadn't seen her in a long time.

BARBARA ELBL

"I talked for three hours to a boy I didn't even know."

Judy Longo, freshman:

I talked for three hours to my girl friend Bonnie Nielsen about various topics including boys, dates, clothes, cars and marriage. It is surprising how long you can talk about interesting subjects without realizing it.

Le Roy Beatty, sophomore:

I don't believe in making long phone calls. I think it is best to say what you have to say in the least time possible. The longest time I have talked was 15 minutes. On the whole the calls I make are usually limited to five minutes.

Jan Mellack, freshman:

The longest time I talked was four hours. The reason I talked so long was because I was baby sitting and there was nothing else to do. I phoned my girl friend and we discussed the various happenings at school and the happenings of our social life.

Bill March, sophomore:

I talked for two and a half hours to a friend of mine about rebuilding the engine of my car. After this conversation I got things straightened out and was able to fix my car without running into any more problems.

Photographic Key To Mural Mounted

George Mullany Gift Serves As Guide For Fresco

By Robert Hacker

A photographic key of the Diego Rivera mural, presented to the college by George Mullany, journalism and graphic arts instructor here who retired last June, was mounted near the mural last week.

It will serve as "an excellent guide to the understanding of the fresco," Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, declared.

Mullany, who retired after 17 years of service, presented the key last spring as a gift to the college.

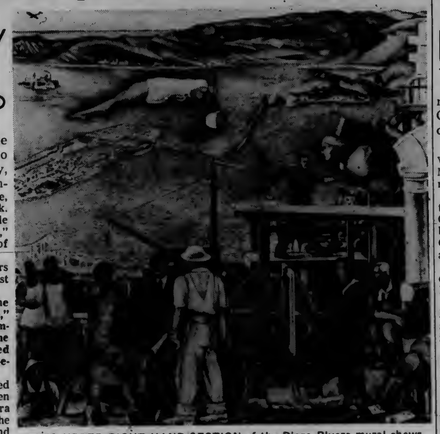
"One of the difficulties with the Diego Rivera mural is reading it," Luckmann stated. "It is both contemporary and historical at the same time. But," he added, "with this keyed outline, reading of the mural will become much more efficient."

Originally painted by the late famed Mexican artist for the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition, Rivera called his work of art Marriage Of The Artistic Expression Of The North And South On This Continent.

It was given to the college in 1941 by Timothy Pflueger, the college's architect. He had received it from Rivera as a gift.

After arriving at the college the mural was stored until a permanent resting place could be found. It was placed in a shack north of the men's gymnasium.

During this storage period, a small fire broke out in the shack. While extinguishing the fire, one of the firemen unwittingly chopped a hole in one of the panels of the mural.



It remained in the shack until the completion of the arts building and college theater in Spring 1961, finally finding its place in the lobby of the theater after 18 years in storage.

When mounting of the mural itself was completed, the college administration set about to find someone to repair the panel that was damaged in the fire.

Emmy Lu Packard, Rivera's assistant during the painting of the mural, was consulted, and last year repaired the only blemish on the fresco's surface. She is a San Francisco artist.

The college gained national fame when Life Magazine published an article descriptive of the mural.

Measuring 75 by 22 feet and composed of ten separate panels, the painting portrays countless scenes of American and Mexicans ploying their arts.

THIS UPPER RIGHT HAND SECTION of the Diego Rivera mural shows the vast complexity of Rivera's work, making it extremely difficult to read. However, a photographic key to the mural, presented to the college by George Mullany, journalism and graphic arts instructor who retired last June, was mounted last week and will "serve as an excellent guide to the understanding of the fresco."

Voting For Soph King And Queen Begins This Week

Voting for a Sophomore King and Queen to reign over the semiannual Soph Ball began last Monday and will continue through Friday, December 14, Laurie Thurlwell, class publicity chairman, disclosed this week.

Balloting will resume on Wednesday, January 2, and officially end at the Soph Ball on Friday, January 4, at the St. Francis Hotel.

Deadline for petitions to compete in the contest was last Friday.

The traditional penny-a-vote method is being used again this semester. Containers are placed at the silver pole in Science Hall and in Smith Hall, Miss Thurlwell said.

All containers will be removed at 3 p.m. January 4 and brought to the site of the dance.

An abrupt change was necessary in the contest ". . . because of lack of interest and participation by clubs here," Miss Thurlwell added. The class decided to adjust regulations adopted in November so that organizations could sponsor individual candidates rather than couples.

According to Miss Thurlwell, members of the Council of Organizations were evidently opposed to the standard—club support of both King and Queen contestants—set forth by the class, because "not one petition was submitted."

The royal couple will reign at the Soph Ball and receive awards from the sponsoring class.

Phi Beta Kappa, the honorary scholarship fraternity, was organized in 1766 at William and Mary College in the state of Virginia.

CJCSGA Changes Total Of Regional Conferences To 8

By John McShane

Reorganization of the regional conferences was the major accomplishment of the California Junior College Student Government Association conference held last month at Asilomar, near Monterey.

The reorganization provides for a division of eight regional conferences rather than the current three, effective in the Fall of 1963.

City College student leaders will participate in Area Six Regional which will include eight other colleges, Cabrillo College, College of San Mateo, Foothill, Hartnell, Menlo, Monterey Peninsula, San Benito and San Jose City Colleges.

An amendment to the state two-year college constitution brought about the reorganization.

The resolution for amendment, as with all other resolutions in the convention, was put before the 370 delegates in the general assembly by the 72-member President's Cabinet, made up of the Associated Student presidents of all two-year colleges in California.

Adoption of the amendment was passed by the assembly by a vote of 56 for, 9 against and 2 abstaining.

In passing the amendment, the Northern California Junior College Student Government Conference will be made defunct.

According to Bill May, AS president here, the amendment will facilitate transportation, and will permit an easier method of organization in business transacted at the various regional conferences.

Six resolutions and one other amendment to the constitution were also successfully dealt with at the convention, May disclosed.

Also attending the three-day convention from this college with May were Rosalie Weiner, AS vice president; John Theilen, finance chairman, and Marcia Devlin and Rich Gray, sophomore members of council.

Bill Silver, Council of Organizations chairman, helped in compiling the State Information Booklet.

Gray, Theilen, Miss Weiner and Miss Devlin attended three different workshops November 16.

The workshops dealt with such topics as the distinctive place of the two-year college in higher education, campus publications, spirit, finances, public relations, intramural programs, judicial systems, current problems, foreign students and club activities.

Saturday the general assembly, composed of all the delegates from the colleges represented, met.

Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser here, was also in attendance at the conference.

May, in summing up the convention, said it went exceptionally well and ran smoothly.

Of the 33 Presidents 27 lived to be over 60; seven died in July; three died on July 4; seven died in office and three were assassinated. And of the 33 all but one left estates. William H. Harrison died in debt.

Robert Hargis, Social Science Instructor, Dies

Robert Hargis, instructor here since 1959, died suddenly of a heart attack last Thursday morning in his Oakland home. He was 41.

Mr. Hargis, an instructor in the social science and history departments, had attended several colleges before teaching here. Among them were Riverside Junior College, University of Redlands, Princeton Theological Seminary and the University of California.

From 1947 until 1951, Mr. Hargis was minister of the First Baptist Church in Montrose, California. From 1958 until he was hired by the college, he was a member of the Alameda County Welfare Board.

Services were held in Berkeley Hills Memorial Chapel last Saturday.

Film Features Architecture

A 30-minute film, Architect At Work, will be shown in College Hour Friday, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor, said today.

"This movie will be of special interest to students majoring in engineering, architecture or art," Devlin stated. The movie explains how an architect works and the importance of his job in the construction of a home.

The most significant objective of the movie is to describe the stages involved in the building of a skyscraper, Devlin emphasized.

Windows Of The World was originally scheduled to be shown this College Hour, but Devlin cancelled the film, terming it "a dog" because of its irrelevance to college students. "Architects At Work, however, will be of special value to students," he added.

Hare To Appear On NBC's Meet The Professor

John E. Hare, biological science instructor here, has been invited to appear on one of the 26 programs in the third annual series of ABC-TV's show, Meet The Professor, currently shown at 3:30 p.m. Sundays.

Hare, who received his M.A. and Ph.D degrees from the University of California, has been a member of the science department since February, 1946.

The program, which will originate from ABC television studios in San Francisco, concerns the work of the college professor in teaching and research and is also used as a means to stimulate public interest and understanding of the teaching profession.

Yule Concert Moves To Friday's Double C-Hour

Originally scheduled for Friday, December 14, the college's annual Christmas Concert will instead be presented during the double College Hour Friday in the theater, when 10 o'clock classes will be cancelled.

The California Wind Quintet, scheduled originally this Friday, will perform the following week during a regular College Hour, Meyer Cahn, band and orchestra director, announced today.

The Christmas Concert will feature the A Cappella Choir, the Men's Glee Club and the Chamber Choir, directed by Gaien Marshall; the Women's Choir, directed by Richard Fenner, and the Cahn-directed orchestra.

Part of the concert will be a repeat of the Fall Choral Concert, presented last Tuesday night.

The Women's Choir will sing a Messe Basse by Gabriel Faure with soprano soloist Sharon Karp performing.

The A Cappella Choir will sing a Motet from Psalm 51 by Johannes Brahms, and the final address by Johannes Bach.

Works by Bach, Palestrina, Tchesnokov and Franz Schubert will be presented by the Men's Glee Club, with Robert Johnston, baritone, soloist in Schubert's The Gondolier.

The orchestra will play incidental music from several 17th century compositions by Purcell, and the First Movement of Symphony No. 92 by Haydn.

Flutist Mary Neri will participate in a Minuet from Handel's Orpheus, a waltz from Serenade For Strings by Tchaikovsky, dances by Borodin and Dance Rhythms by Riegger.

State Board Of Education Holds 2-Day Meet Here

Members of the California State Board of Education produced a "first" for City College last Thursday and Friday by holding their meeting on campus in the arts building theater.

Roy Simpson, retiring superintendent of public instruction in California, presided over the meeting which heard discussion of subjects relative to the state's school system.

Topics included financing essential for California public schools and colleges, the language program recently made compulsory in elementary schools and problems concerned with the selection of textbooks.

What institutions may grant teaching credentials and whether the office of state superintendent should remain an elective position or be changed to an appointive office were other topics discussed.

The 12 members of the state board also heard representatives of community boards of education throughout the state.

Although the meeting was a formal one, it was actually in preparation for the Sacramento legislative session set to begin next month.

Regular college classes, which were scheduled to meet in the theater last Thursday and Friday, were shifted either to Riordan High School or S-100 and S-136, according to Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management here.

Christmas Decorations Lend Holiday Spirit

With Christmas near, some decorations have been placed around the campus and more will soon be on display, Bill May, Associated Student president, disclosed yesterday.

Campus organizations are responsible for the displays now on exhibit and those which will be added this week.

Christmas cards are currently on display in the cafeteria below the clock along the wires, and Beta Tau is planning to set up its traditional Christmas tree in front of the main entrance to Science Hall.

Orchestra Presents Special Concert Tuesday In Theater

Featuring the "largest and most competent orchestra and band in many years here," a special concert is scheduled for 8 p.m. next Tuesday in the theater, according to orchestra and band director Meyer Cahn.

Twenty-seven students now comprise the orchestra, while 30 musicians are members of the band. "Both groups have been steadily improving this semester and are able to play first-class music with quality and excellence," Cahn commented.

Utilization of the college's Ampex video-tape recorder will be made at this program. Students in the TV-radio department, under the direction of Henry Leff, will tape the entire performance so that musicians can use the film as a study-guide following the concert.

Previously, orchestra-band concerts have been restricted to the spring semester because of pressure in maintaining the Ram Band for football games during the fall, Cahn said.

"Now that John Dunn (cafeteria manager and Ram Band director) has taken over this operation, we have more time to study music here and plan programs," Cahn stated.

A "first" next Tuesday will be the orchestra's performance of Haydn Symphony, No. 92. "This will be a real challenge to all concerned," Cahn said.

Also included in the program are compositions by Purcell, Grundman's Civil War Suite, and a Roumanian Rhapsody by Enesco.

In addition, the orchestra will play a Tchaikovsky waltz from Serenade For Strings, Dance Rhythms by Riegger, Borodin's Polovetsian dance and a Gluck waltz.

Admission to the concert is free, and the public is invited, Cahn said.

Air Raid Drill Tests College Alert System

An air raid drill was held here November 21, the day before Thanksgiving.

An administrative announcement relative to the drill was made over KCSF. The drill was signaled at noon by five long rings on the classroom buzzer, the regular signal for an air raid alert.

At that time students lined up in the halls shoulder to shoulder, as they would in an actual air raid warning, to escape flying glass.

The following are excerpts from the Air Raid Civil Defense Dispersal Plan, posted in classrooms throughout the campus.

"When the college is notified by defense authorities that an air raid is imminent, a dispersal alarm will be given over the public address system. All persons on the campus will be advised to go immediately to the parking lots, where all available automobiles will be loaded to capacity.

"Drivers will proceed to Ocean avenue, turn onto Ocean, turn left onto Plymouth avenue, travel south on San Jose avenue until they reach El Camino Real where they should continue south on El Camino Real until they reach San Jose.

"Once in San Jose, students are requested to proceed to the Herbert Hoover Junior High School, at the corner of Park and Nagler avenues."

The dispersal plan further states, "Students are requested to inform their parents of their plans for evacuation of the campus. Parents who wish to give other directions may do so."

Evacuation is voluntary, the dispersal plan stipulates, and it is assumed that students will act in accordance with their parents' wishes if the alarm is given, college officials explained.

McGriff, Leading Rebounder Of Last Year, Holds Key To Ram Title Chances In 1963

By Fred Wales

Preparing for the 1963 basketball season, the defending state champion Ram basketball team will meet Napa, Vallejo and Sacramento at the newly established Vallejo invitational tournament tomorrow and Saturday nights.

This year's team will be led by returning veterans Elton McGriff, Everett "Goose" Adams and Randy Simms. Last year McGriff, the 6-8, 210-pounder from Jackson, Texas, hit 79 goals and 51 free throws for a total of 209 points.

On the boards he led the team in rebounding with 194 and was chosen All-Conference center. In the Citrus College game, with the state championship in the balance, he led the scorers with 18, and was an All-Tournament choice. This year he has improved offensively and will definitely be considered the team's big gun.

If McGriff has a big year, the team may end up in the top three for sure. Accompanying McGriff will be guard Adams, who played his high school ball at Washington High. With a height of 5-10 and a weight of 165 pounds, the speedy playcaller hit 64 field goals and 22 free throws last year for a total of 150 points, 14 of them in the Citrus game.

Despite his size he managed to pull down 51 rebounds. A fine all-around player, his shooting and jumping have improved this year, and he is rated one of the league's better guards.

The third returning veteran is the 6-4, 175-pound forward, Randy Simms. After playing for Balboa High, Simms came here and scored well in his limited action. He was strong under the boards, pulling down 49 rebounds. Simms has the potential of becoming one of the top players in the conference.

Although in a newer and tougher Golden Gate Conference, the team is the defending champ of both the state and the new defunct Big Eight titles. Last year the Rams averaged 61 points per game while allowing only 51 points to their foes as they compiled a 13-win, one-loss record.

In addition to the big three are guard Stan Fuelscher and forward Art Adams. The 6-2 180-pound guard and former Lowell High star in 1960 has been described as a fine all-around player and play maker. Teamed with Everett Adams, the two could become the best pair of guards in Ram athletic history.

Art Adams fills out the first string. Art, no relation to Everett, is a 6-2 185-pounder from Sterling, Sonth Carolina, and a tremendous jumper and a fine shooter. Predictions are that he will become more and more effective as the season progresses.

A couple of second-stringers to watch will be Ken Scalamanini and Mac Smith. Scalamanini is a 6-0 165-pound guard from Washington, who is showing up surprisingly well.

Smith at guard, a Polytechnic High graduate, is a 6-1 182-pound forward who is considered a strong jumper and a fine shooter.

Also improving rapidly and providing Coach Sid Phelan good reserve strength are Larry Curran and Walt Williams, guards; Bill Denniston, West Hatch and Andy Woods, forwards.

Curran is a 5-10 155-pound freshman from Lincoln High School. Williams is a 5-8 160-pounder who is better known for his football abilities, but was also a basketball standout at Galileo High.

Denniston, up from the J.V.'s, is a 6-0 170-pounder from Lincoln High. Hatch is a 6-1 170-pound freshman from Lincoln, Texas. Woods, also 6-1, is a 183-pound sophomore from Stuttgart, Germany.

The team as a whole seems to be a good one. When Coach Phelan was asked how it stacked up against last year's team at this time, he answered, "It should be a faster team, but a little weaker under the boards and on ontside shooting."

A definite blow to the team will be the loss because of an injury of the big 6-4 230-pound rebounder Mel Tom.

Other losses to the team will be guard Art Hopkins and forward Gary Ferrari. Hopkins, the Mission High star, has taken a leave of absence, and Ferrari decided not to play this year.

Phelan considers Oakland, with one of its strongest teams in its history, to be the toughest foe this year. Not far behind will be San Jose City College. Contra Costa, with a strong ball club, should also figure in the picture.

After the Vallejo tournament the team takes on the San Jose State Frosh next Tuesday at San Jose. The league season opens January 11 against San Jose City College at San Jose.

The Rams lost two key members from last year's club. Brad Duggan and Bill Nocetti, both starters, are now at San Francisco State.

College To Host Fencing Competition Saturday

Host for the first Intercollegiate Fencing competition of the season, scheduled for 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday in the gymnasiums, will be the college's fencing club, according to Lene Johnson, fencing coach.

The round-robin competition will incinde two teams from each high school, two-year college and four-year college participating. Each participant will use a French foil and in order to win a bont mnst be the first person to make five tonches.

Teams will compete against each other in the tonrnament and will be composed of three members and an alternate.

Football Wrap-Up: 'Season Of Misses'

"It was a season of near misses."

That was the way football Coach Art "Dutch" Elston summed up his first campaign in the Golden Gate Conference--a campaign that produced three wins and four losses.

"All year we missed opportunities," Elston said. "We never moved away from anyone. All the scores were close. Each game was a battle, and the league showed pretty good balance among the first five teams."

Missed opportunities is one way to say it. Poor clutch football is another way to say it. Take your choice. Of the four contests the Rams lost, there was not one that they could have won easily. In every case, they lost by a range of one point to 12.

Take a look:

(LOSS 1) Contra Costa 12, San Francisco 0. The Rams drove to the Contra Costa four and 15-yard lines the first two times they had the ball but fumbled both times.

(LOSS 2) San Mateo 14, San Francisco 6. The Rams drove to the San Mateo one-yard line, trailing 14-6, in the fourth quarter, but missed on four tries.

(LOSS 3) San Jose 12, San Francisco 7. San Jose scored the winning touchdown with 4:23 left in the game. The down was third, the yardage was 18, the play was a halfback pass, and the Rams were fooled. Three times in the first half Ram potential scoring drives were crippled by penalties.

(LOSS 4) Foothill 19, San Francisco 18. San Francisco drove inside the Foothill 10-yard line three times in the first half but failed all three times. In the second half a 81-yard touchdown punt return was returned by a penalty, and when the Rams closed the score to 19-18 with 1:32 left in the game, they failed on the two-point conversion.

Ron Coleman, the little speedster from Washington High, salvaged most of the good of the season for the Rams, leading the club in every department except punting and passing. He led in rushing, 626 yards; in pass receiving, 10 for 204 yards; in scoring, 48 of the team's 92 points; punt returns, an 80-yarder, and kickoff returns, an 82-yarder.

"We had one back -- Coleman," Elston said. "And they keyed on him. It made it tough to move offensively."

It was tough to move offensively. Of the Rams' 92 points for nine games (counting a split of two preseason games), only 15 points were scored in the first half, none in the first quarter.

The Rams tried anyone and everyone at fullback except Elston himself. Claude Shipp came on near the end of the year to pick up 150 yards in two games, but he was needed earlier.

What saved the Rams? "Defensively they were very good," Elston stated. "Guys like George Benkie (center), Dennis Drucker (guard) and Jack Burgett (tackle) will all be good four-year college prospects."

Indeed, it was a very strange football season. It was close and it was exciting. All that's left to ask for is a winner. The ball may bounce the other way next year.

Jackson, Coleman And DeLong Win Block SF MVP Awards

Highlight of the semiannual Block SF banquet, held last Monday in Smith Hall, was the selection of Steve Jackson (cross-country), Ron Coleman (football), and Gary DeLong (soccer) as the most valuable players of the Fall 1962 season.

Speaker Julio Melendez, soccer coach at San Jose State and boxing coach of the 1960 Olympic team, kept the athletes and coaches entertained with his commentary on both sports.

Master of ceremonies John Jacobsen, Block Society president, was given a merit service award by the club. Other awards were presented by the respective coaches.

Football jackets were awarded to Joe Amirol, Jack Burgett, Coleman, John Daigle, Dennis Drucker, Joe Giacomini, Bill Holman, Tom Leman, Ernie Oliver, Cal Rothman, Neil Shea, Claude Shipp, Phil Singer, Bill Wasley and Ben Winslow.

Recipients of football block letters were Phil Aissa, George Benkie, Ben Brown, Wharton Brown, Rich Clews, Carroll Cox, Dennis DeLee, Carl Conners, Jerry Cooper, Clarence Diggles, Bruce Marovich, Joe McGinity, Terry Mesa, Howard Oliver, Jerry Roberts, Craig Schwartz, Rod Someya, Charles Stewart, Mike Scanlon, Mel Tom, Ron Williams, Bernard Wiley, Bruce Delfino (Mgr.), Harlan Wilson (Mgr.) and Harry Smith.

Soccer trophies were presented to Caesar Pina, Lee Wurtenberg and Tom Wynn, and the following received championship jackets: Tony Amador, DeLong, Jose Flores, Ken Gregory, Jose Gonzales, Waldon Hom, Phil Jung, Larry Katzeff, Tony Losada, Rudolfo Mesones, Gordon Miller, Andy Nabong, Mike Remy, Joe Simon, Olaf Strohmeir and Washington Viteri.

Cross-country awards were given to Phil Dancel, Hoy Hendersen, Jackson, Ozzie Norris, Gene Plotkin, Roger Richey and Jose Valle.

Fraternity Intra Schedule Ends

Winding up a perfect season by defeating Beta Tau, 66-20, Alpha Phi Epsilon captured the fraternity league crown in intramural action prior to Thanksgiving.

In other fraternity league action, Alpha Sigma Delta defeated Alpha Kappa Rho, 26-24.

In the independent league, the Collegiate Five remained in a first place tie with Alpha Phi Omega by defeating the Mets, 37-23. Alpha Phi Omega kept pace with an easy win when The Guardsman forfeited.

Other games saw the winless Hawaiian Club drop its fifth straight by losing to the Divine Ones, 74-47.

Last week the independent league took a rest after the Thanksgiving holidays. Action resumes tonight when the Collegiate Five meets the Divine Ones in the women's gymnasium at 7:15, and The Guardsman follows at 8:15 against the Mets.

Tonight in the men's gymnasium the winless Hawaiian Club and the likewise Hotel and Restaurant five tangle at 7:15, and the Newman Club meets Alpha Phi Omega at 8:15.

A New Light On The Ram-Bear Soccer Issue

FROM the beginning, the soccer altercation between City College and the University of California has been one-sided.

California, giving a reason which seems totally invalid, forfeited to the college soccer team last September but hushed it up to the extent that the California students never learned of the incident.

Until now, the only words have come from The Guardsman; but Vincent Liu, an engineering student at California and a former City College soccer player, wrote a long and critical letter to the California student newspaper, the Daily Californian.

The letter shows the precarious position in which California has left the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference; and incidentally, had California played and defeated San Francisco, it would have tied Stanford for the title. As it was, the Rams finished 5-1, Stanford 5-1, California 4-2.

Excerpts from the letter follow:

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR, DAILY CALIFORNIAN

". . . So the athletic department made the move this year: it turned soccer major, using the new status as a technical excuse for the refusal to play CCSF since the university ruling forbids major sport competition with junior colleges. When the other members of the league didn't oblige, in the face of Cal's firm stand, to expel CCSF from the conference, Cal, to save face, forfeited its game to CCSF.

". . . But what's hurt most of all by our athletic department's selfish move is the soccer league itself. The league, in the first place, has been suffering from lack of teams participating in the conference. San Jose State and the University of Santa Clara had been dropping out of and reentering the league in the past due to difficulties in getting players.

"In 1960, Santa Clara dropped out of the league once again and hasn't returned to it since. Last year the Cal Aggies from Davis forfeited all their won games because they had to use ineligible players to field a team.

"Cal, who else, dug hard to discover the Aggies' violation of technicality after a loss to them. As a result of the Aggies' forfeiting their games, the Cal soccer team subsequently moved a notch higher in the standings from fifth place to fourth.

"This year the Aggies failed to field a team and forfeited all their games again. The league has dwindled down to only six teams (including CCSF) and it needs help. So what did Cal do? It tried to run CCSF out of the league to give itself a better shot at the title.

". . . CCSF has been invited by the league with the National Collegiate Athletic Association's approval to play in the league with the condition that it cannot go to the national tournament should it win the title.

". . . CCSF has been a member of the league since 1936, and nobody had made a squawk about it. Then it won three titles in a row (now four). Now, why didn't Cal try to expel the CCSF five, ten or 15 years ago? Why didn't Cal turn soccer . . . into a major sport five, ten or 15 years ago? Why did Cal all of a sudden do it now? Is Cal really making an effort to boost the sport? Look around you and see—the answer is NO. Do you find a daily report on the soccer team in the Daily Cal? . . . Ask yourself: Is soccer major? Heck no, it's as minor as ever!

"Now let's go back to the technicality. If our athletic department does not allow major sport competition with junior colleges, why is its swimming team, considered major here, playing against Foothill? Is Cal really serious about the rules?

"The funny thing is that neither the Daily Cal nor the athletic department has once given us students the news that CCSF has been dropped from our soccer schedule and the reason why."

Silver, Contreras Get Top AS Bids

Four Offices Remain Uncontested; Deadline For Nominations Today

By Boyd Burtnett

Before a disappointing crowd of 51 persons, Vince Contreras and Bill Silver were nominated for the Spring Associated Student presidency at the nominations convention last Wednesday in Smith Hall.

The 51 included Associated Student President Bill May, Election Commissioner Larry Maibaum, Dean Ralph Hillsman, Dean Mary Golding, and a custodian and the gentleman in charge of the public address system.

BILL SILVER. —Guardsman photo by Ron Turner.

Only 22 students were nominated for the 20 elective offices of student government next semester.

Malbaum emphasized that the nominations were not closed. Students wishing to run for student office have until today to file their nomination petitions containing the signatures of 15 AS members.

Dean Hillsman attributed the poor showing to the scheduling of the convention. He pointed out that it was the Christmas season and many students who wanted to attend were unable to do so because of job commitments.

Maibaum candidly said the small number of nominations was because persons do not seem to have enough interest in student government.

May was disappointed in the number of organizations not represented at the convention and said, "Those clubs not in attendance will receive a letter from me, personally."

Only three offices are presently contested, the Associated Student presidency, one Sophomore seat on Student Council and the AS presidency.

Presidential candidate Silver is this semester's president of the Council of Organizations, and candidate Contreras is Sophomore Class president.

Sue Fitzpatrick was the only person nominated for Associated Student vice president. She is currently AWS president.

Nominees for AWS president were Ruth Wimmer and Imogene Walker. Alex Bobroff is so far unopposed for Associated Men Student president.

Mike Nevin was nominated for Sophomore Class president, and Bob Roderick was nominated for Freshman Class president.

There were six nominations for the seven offices of Sophomore Class representatives to council are Lavone Heath, Sue Pahill, Nancy Maggio, Beryl Knoller, Howard Moody, Carol Wong, Michelle McCarey and Al Paoletti.

These persons are to file their petitions with the Election Commissioner, and at the same time deposit a $1 nomination fee in the student bank.

There was considerably more participation in the first nomination convention last semester. At that time, 45 students were nominated for the 20 elective offices.

This is not, however, the poorest showing as far as campus politics here are concerned. In Spring, 1952, there were 21 elective offices for student government and only one, the AS presidency, was contested.

Maibaum expects more candidate slots to be filed by today's deadline.

Special Election To Decide Future Voting Procedure

In a special election tomorrow and Friday, members of the Associated Students will decide once and for all whether they alone should have the privilege of voting in AS general elections.

The issue centers around Article IX, Paragraph 4, in the Associated Student constitution which reads: "A member of the Associated Students may have the full privileges of electing student offices for the forthcoming semester."

AS cardholders will vote on whether to retain this clause in the constitution or eliminate it entirely.

Should voters decide to omit the paragraph, Student Council will automatically be given the prerogative to open future general elections to all students whether they possess an AS card or not.

If the proposition fails, general elections will be open only to members of the AS. In either case, a two-thirds majority is needed.

Since the clause is still in effect, only students with an AS card can vote in the special election.

Results of the election will take effect immediately and affect voting for spring officers, scheduled Tuesday, January 8, and Wednesday, January 9.

The secret ballot method will be utilized in the election. Boxes will be placed at the silver pole in Science Hall, in Smith Hall, at the Ram entrance to the arts building and in the library. Polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.—By H.K.

Top Nominees Disagree On Shack Problem

By Herman Kilgerman

Vince Contreras and Bill Silver, candidates for next semester's Associnted Student presidency, voiced differing opinions on solving the problem of supervision in the Shnek in an interview with The Guardsman last Thursday.

The Shack was closed two weeks ago because four students were caught gambling. Student Council was blasted by AS President Bill May for shirking its responsibilities.

"I feel that members of Student Council and, if necessary, Council of Organizations, should sign up for three hours of the regular student leadership course and use one of those hours to supervise the Shack," Contreras declared.

"In this manner, students will be obligated to fulfill their responsibility since they will be doing it as part of a regular class and as basis for a grade," he continued.

Silver, however, suggested that less supervision is the best thing for the Shack: "At the beginning, supervision will be necessary but as the semester progresses and as conditions improve in the Shack, supervision should become more and more relaxed," he stated.

COO Christmas Drive Ends Friday

Efforts to reach or surpass the $300 goal set for this year's Christmas charity drive by the sponsoring Council of Organizations will continue through Friday, COO President Bill Silver disclosed today.

Receptacles for monetary donations are placed near the silver pole in Science Hall and in Smith Hall.

To coincide with the campaign, a cake sale is being held this week. A request to reopen the Shack for this purpose was being considered by the college's administration last week.

"If this isn't possible, the sale will be conducted at the main entrance to the library," Silver commented. Hotel and restaurant students have donated pastries, as have members of several campus groups.

All money contributed will be used to purchase holiday merchandise orders for needy households in the Bay Area. Names of hard-pressed families have been submitted to the college by recognized charitable organizations.

AMS Invites All Students To January Sports Night

Sports Night will be held Wednesday, January 9, in the men's gymnasium.

The event, sponsored by the Associated Men Students, will feature the playoffs for the semester's intramural sports. AMS President Jim Fuller emphasized that all students, including coeds, are invited to the event. Admission is open to Associated Students. Admission to non-AS members is 50 cents.

The program includes volleyball, basketball and eight boxing matches.

Free cigarettes, cokes and cookies will be served at intermission. (For additional details, see page 4.)

The Shack Reopens Tomorrow—Under IFC Supervision

The Shack, closed two weeks ago because of gambling, will reopen tomorrow—under heavy Inter-Fraternity Council policing.

The Shack had been one of the key hopes to alleviate the overcrowded conditions in the cafeteria, but it was closed when four students were apprehended playing poker and craps.

It was only this week that it was learned that three of the four students involved do not attend City College. The fourth was only watching the action, and no disciplinary action was taken.

IFC is NOT taking over complete control of the Shack's supervision. Council and cabinet members, who were recently blasted by Associated Student President Bill May for "shirking their responsibilities," will work with IFC to insure complete control.

Dean Ralph Hillsman said the responsibility in maintaining order is being felt by all parties concerned. They were confident a repeat of the gambling incident would not occur.

The gambling incident, over a two-week period, came as somewhat of a shock.

When the nnion was founded, it was established that council and cabinet members would put in one honr per week toward the Shack's supervision.

Failure to do this led to the conditions which caused the closing, May said. But May did not place the whole blame on council and cabinet members.

At the time of dice gambling, at least 50 students were present, most of them watching the action.

Most students acted as though the gambling was none of their concern, but May said, ". . . any such action is their business."

St. Francis Site Of Semiannual Sophomore Class Ball January 4

Closing the fall semester social season, the semiannual Sophomore Ball will take place from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight Friday, January 4, at the St. Francis Hotel, Vince Contreras, class president, stated today.

The theme will be A New Year's Affair.

Highlight of the dance will be the selection of the Soph King and Queen. Petitions to compete are due this Friday in the Associated Student office, S-134. Two four by five-inch photos must accompany each form.

Voting for the King and Queen begins here Wednesday, January 2, and continues until the night of the dance. The traditional penny-a-vote method will again be used.

Proceeds from the balloting will go toward scholarships for sophomores, based on their needs and scholastic ability, Contreras said.

Bids for the ball are being distributed all this week at the silver pole in Science Hall for sophomores only. A registration card and Associated Student card must be presented. Between January 2 and 4, remaining bids will be available to others.

The Italian, Colonial and Georgian Rooms are the sites for the ball. Ray Hackett's band will supply the entertainment.

Climaxing the evening will be the 11 o'elock announcement of winners of the King and Queen titles. Until 10:15 p.m., voting will continue. When the winners are introduced, they will receive their individual trophies, the queen will be presented with roses and be crowned and robed.

The king will receive the traditional boutonniere.

Holidays Interrupt Publication Of 'G'

Because Christmas vacation begins Friday, this will be the last issue of The Guardsman until January 16, 1963.

Classes will close Friday and reconvene Wednesday, January 2, 1963.

This is the first time in several years that the college is on a regular Christmas vacation schedule. Therefore, there will be no classes held between the Christmas and New Year's holidays.

The placement office will remain open through December 21 in an effort to fill employers' last-minute job needs. Students who have not as yet received Christmas work are expected to keep in contact with the placement office through this date.

Wind Quintet Offers Concert On Friday

The California Wind Quintet, featuring a variety of classical music, will appear during College Hour Friday in the campus theater, Meyer Cahn, music instructor, announced last week.

Formed in 1955, the quintet is composed of Ross Taylor, playing the French horn; Walter Subke, flute; Raymond Duste, oboe; Donald Carroll, clarinet, and Bob Hughes, bassoon.

The quintet repertoire will offer Quintet in B Flat by Beethoven and 24 Charactersitic Pieces by Tchaikovsky.

A blood drive was conducted last year here for the benefit of the San Francisco Symphony Association, and to show their gratitude the association is offering the concert free of charge.

The music for this occasion is provided by the cooperation of Local No. 6 of the American Federation of Musicians, AFL-CIO, through a grant from the Recording Industries Trust Funds.

Taylor is the founder of the group and has transcribed and arranged much of the music which they play.

He studied for four years at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City, and from 1947 to 1950 played fourth horn with the New York Philharmonic.

He then played solo horn in Cleveland under George Snell. Since 1955, he has been playing principal horn with the San Francisco Symphony and Opera.

Subke had a scholarship at the Juilliard School of Music and studied flute there with Arthur Lora from 1947 to 1949. He was principal flutist with the San Francisco Opera Company for six years, and has been soloist for ten years with the KCBS program, Masters of Melody.

Duste is playing oboe and English horn with the San Francisco Symphony and Opera. For five years he has been soloist with the Bach Festival, and eight years with the Little Symphony.

Carroll is a graduate of San Francisco State College and has been with the Symphony and Opera for six years as third clarinet and bass clarinet. Carroll teaches at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music and the Miracle Music in San Rafael.

Hughes has a B.A. from the University of Buffalo where he studied bassoon.

Friday, January 11, Carl Zytowski, tener and associate professor of music at the University of California in Santa Barbara, will give a concert in the college theater. He has appeared at faculty recitals and has prodnced and directed several opera performances.

Shack's Closing Unfortunate; The Quick Reopening Is Wise

THE RECENT CLOSING of the Shack, because of gambling, was an unfortunate occurrence.

When the Shack was opened almost two years ago, it was hoped that the new facilities would alleviate some of the overcrowded conditions in the cafeteria.

While it was a noble thought, the Shack could never help the cafeteria to any great extent. It is small—the size of two average classrooms. It was out of the way — almost undistinguishable behind Cloud Hall. It lacked sufficient eating facilities—limited to cigarette, soft drink, coffee and candy machines.

But in many ways the Shack was a success. It was being used, and during many hours it was populated to near capacity. The Shack served as a place where students could eat, study or just relax. And it was being used for all these purposes.

Without funds, proper and strict supervision of the Shack became a major difficulty. Each council member was held responsible for a one-hour per week vigilance. In this uncoordinated operation, something can easily go wrong. It happened when four students were caught playing poker and rolling dice. The Shack was closed, but will reopen Thursday.

The main responsibility of control and order in any establishment, of course, belongs with the people who use it. We don't look for any one person or group to take the blame for this incident. We are happy to see the supervision problems have been straightened out and the Shack is to be reopened.

Yule Drive Deserves Support

THIS YEAR'S Christmas charity drive, sponsored by the Council of Organizations under the direction of President Bill Silver, will end this Friday.

Donations collected will be used to purchase food orders for underprivileged families prior to the holidays.

It may be in this time of ever-increasing prosperity that we sometimes forget that there are those who suffer real financial difficulties. This is one of many projects that aid these people.

If every student were to drop one dime (equivalent to about three minutes labor to the average worker) the drive would far exceed the $300 goal.

We thoroughly support this worth-while drive. We hope students do also.

Intercom Phoning Made Easy

Digit-Dialing Here To Stay, But If Letters Were Applied . . .

By Boyd Burtnett

"Save the letters in our telephone numbers!" cry the anti-digit dialers in their losing fight against progress.

These people may have a fine idea, but their concept lacks scope. Why not carry the whole thing a step farther and have a completely alphabetical dialing system?

Already this is partially in effect. A person can dial LOST DOG and get the SPCA and also dial the name of a prominent pizza house and get piping hot pepperoni delivered to the front door in no time. Herb Caen points out that dialing POPCORN will get you the correct time.

But this idea may not work, so it would have to be tried out in some small, out-of-the-way place like—City College.

Connecting some 300 offices and rooms on the campus are intercommunication phones. These telephones have a three-digit dialing system, but they have no alphabetical letters on their dials.

The first thing to do is to take all numbers off the college intercom phones and replace them with alphabetical letters as found on regular telephones.

Then, if the same phone numbers are kept, dialing becomes much simpler.

Art students wanting to check with the bookstore about supplies will dial ART.

Want to know something about photography? Dial ASK and ye shall receive the information needed.

If some alert student smells smoke, he will put two and two together, dial ASH, and tell the custodian all about it.

If the dean of men is needed for "cleanup," dial DUZ and the dean answers.

For some strange reason, a coed will dial DAD to reach the dean of women.

Now, the next thing to do is change the telephone numbers. A few of the instructors and administrators would be very dissatisfied under this new system with their present numbers.

Maybe the cool campus cat can dial FUZ, get the Campus Police, and complain about a recent parking ticket.

And maybe the student looking for work could dial JOB and ask the placement department about openings.

Or maybe the dean of women's phone number could be changed from 323, which "spells" DAD, to 666, or MOM.

Perhaps the medical assisting department could get DOC for a phone number, and The Guardsman could get MAD.

But, for several reasons, this system will probably never go into effect. For the rest of its days, the college will no doubt be shackled with dry, dry numbers and people will have to keep devising ways to remember them.

Santa Brings His Greetings To All

'No Postman Am I'

'Twas a month before finals and all through the hill,
Not a freshman was stirring, all was quite still.
The Ram was all painted, brightly with care,
In hope that vandals would never be there.

Messrs. Hillsman and Brady were tucked in their beds,
No student problems danced in their heads.
Dean Golding and staff, Devlin and May,
Had just settled down for a long holiday.

When out on the lawn there rose such a clatter,
The custodian ran to see what was the matter.
Away to the door he hastened to see,
Just who the devil it could possibly be.

And what do you think his eyes did behold,
But the little fat man, just come from the pole.
"What manner of mailman has this city now reared?"
"No postman am I," replied the man with a beard.

"I bring you all greetings, down to a man,
And I'll start with the top, President Conlan.
Cheer to you all, Luckmann, Learnard,
Anderson, Mayo, all working so hard.

"And Mr. Amori, I shan't forget you,
For giving the students something to do."
Right down the line he cheered everyone.
Diederichsen, Muller, Brackett and Dunn.

He cheered all the faculty and students too,
This being done, the sleigh away flew,
And he was heard to say, as he moved out of sight,
"Merry Christmas to all and remember Sports Night."

What Gives You The Most Enjoyment At Christmas?

Norync Chernikoff, freshman:
During the Christmas season I enjoy decorating the tree and wrapping packages. I also enjoy the true spirit of Christmas, but it is a shame that so many people use that time of year for their own benefit. As the years go by, Christmas tends to lose real meaning.

NORYNE CHERNIKOFF
"As the years go by, Christmas tends to lose real meaning."

Dave Hicks, sophomore:
Mostly I enjoy having a good time, especially on New Year's Eve. It is also a time to earn money to carry me through the semester. I also have extra time to study for the finals that come up soon after the holidays.

Marilyn Kuhn, freshman:
I like going home after work, relaxing and listening to music and looking at the gaily decorated tree. The colorful and cheerful atmosphere that prevails throughout the season gives me a general feeling of warmth and good spirit.

Bill Dorn, sophomore:
I enjoy the easy relaxation most of all. I can rest up for the remainder of the semester. It is a good vacation and a time to earn some extra money for Christmas. But basically, it is just the rest that I enjoy before going back to classes for the finals.

Sue Gilfether, sophomore:
I think the best thing about the Christmas season is the way it brings people closer together. It is the time of year when your whole family gathers in one house. The tantalizing aroma of the turkey, together with that of the Christmas tree, give one a feeling of warmth.

Walter Rice, freshman:
I like the idea of what the holidays are supposed to be—relaxation, fun and a chance to catch up on the studying I never do. I usually wake up around noon each day of the two weeks and then do what I have the greatest aptitude for—wasting time.

Christine Thompson, freshman:
I think the best thing about the holiday is Christmas Eve. I really enjoy watching the family opening their presents, and I also like to decorate the tree. Christmas shopping is enjoyable, too, although it is hectic at times.

Don Black, sophomore:
Christmas itself really doesn't do very much for me. I like the extra time to study for finals and earn money, and the chance to be with my family. We don't see much of each other during the year, so Christmas is a family activity.

The Spectator — Mother, Please!

By Hugh Wilson

AS "MOTHER, Please!" rings through your ears, and little pills tumble down wiggly tubes, does your stomach tend to flip and flop? Then maybe you need a capsule that has tiny little time pills to relieve your tensions fast, fast, fast.

Every time a viewer sits before his idiot box he is subjected to a commercial at least every 15 minutes. Not only is he urged to buy, buy, buy, but he is also told to take out a very small, simple back-breaking loan if he cannot afford to buy.

Being subjected to national advertising is many times bad enough. But when the viewer is forced to watch a local used car salesman make a fool of himself by throwing money in the air, it is just too much to bear.

Not all the commercials are in bad taste. Many of them are not only amusing, but constructive. However, these are ones produced by the government or some other nonprofit type organization.

Smokey the Bear and the Little Litter Bug tend to have an air of lightness, but at the same time put across their point without insulting the intelligence of the viewer.

Commercials that urge viewers to buy bonds and to support colleges of their choice point up the problems that face a growing American economy.

For the most part, these types of commercials are respected by most persons.

But these and other constructive ads are overshadowed by screaming voices, happy children with large smiles and no cavities, and washing detergents that keep "sudsing and sudsing and sudsing."

How many intelligent people, because of the offensiveness of a commercial, have actually boycotted a sponsor's product?

If a survey could be made, it is almost certain that the sponsor would find that he loses as many customers as he gains.

If this system continues it will be a prime argument for the adoption of pay television. It would seem that the advertisers not only believe that Americans are physically unfit, but mentally unfit as well.

● Spectator Under Fire

Editor, The Guardsman:

Currently appearing in The Guardsman, and written by Hugh Wilson, a gifted young iconoclast, is a column entitled The Spectator.

The column is devoted to cinema, theater plays and television criticism; hence the name of the column. But it could very well be rebaptized the Backseat Spectator.

In one of Mr. Wilson's latest ambitious aspiration that appeared in the November 14 edition of The Guardsman, he displays a comprehensive sermon worthy of The Plymouth Colonists.

The headline alone reveals the story: Hollywood Cannot Leave Morality Alone. (Yellow Journalism died a few decades ago, but Mr. Wilson must be from The Old School.) —

Starting in the first paragraph, he states, "The movies of today are worse than ever," and, "The majority of movies released from Hollywood is nothing more than legalized pornography."

From this quote, it appears that Mr. Wilson attends movies, theatrical plays, and watches television intensely; and therefore knows when a good play, movie or program is worth watching—if you were born near Plymouth Rock.

In 1856, in the town of Friberg, Moravia, formerly Austria, now Czechoslovakia, a man by the name of Sigmund Freud was born. He developed the theory of psychoanalysis. It broke all existing barriers in human prudishness. Perhaps Mr. Wilson hasn't even heard of Sigmund Freud?

Mr. W. attacks Room At The Top as dealing with emotional insecurity and deviation and offered to the public in the guise of "entertainment." Perhaps Mr. Wilson has never been emotionally insecure.

And the movie was filmed in England, with an international cast, and brought Simone Signoret an Academy Award.

Of course, what does the award mean? To Mr. Wilson, the award is simply a jest, and he does not seem to realize that actors do work for their awards. To him, Hollywood throughout is morally corrupt.

Further, Mr. Wilson offers the suggestion that if a man tried to sell this sort of material in the streets, "he most assuredly would be arrested and fined or jailed."

Then, Mr. Wilson, what are your comments on the so many downtown "establishments" of Market Street, displaying pinball machines, pornographic literature and other coin-playing machines of obscene and lascivious movies?

These "places of amusement" do exist, and yet Mr. Wilson prefers to react to films already cut by the censor.

But he adds, "We should not become a nation of prudes . . . when these topics are brought up," displaying his own prudishness by contradicting his earlier statements.

Everyone agrees that our present generation of youths is maturing faster and earlier than a decade ago, but to say that "there just might be some connection between crimes of violence and movies" with the disturbance of the youth of today is an overexaggerated generalization belonging to little old ladies from Pasadena.

To quote again, "On one hand they are told to respect authority, but Rebel Without A Cause shows deflance of anything but mob rule."

Mr. Wilson perhaps does not understand the rebellion of a growing (mentally disturbed) adolescent with the problems he encounters while growing. Perhaps Mr. Wilson never met these dilemmas when he was a young man.

Another attack is made, this time on foreign art pictures, which Mr. Wilson describes as being disguised pornography. Yet the city's leading newspapers and the nation's better known magazines always compliment and praise these pictures as being entertaining.

Is it perhaps Reality that Mr. Wilson is afraid of and therefore attacking?

Realist.

Historians tell us the past. Economists tell us the future. Only the present is confusing.

Presidential Candidates Consider Apathy As Major Problem, Suggest Solutions

"Students should feel that it is their responsibility to follow directions and govern themselves. This is college, not high school," Silver declared.

When conditions are improved in the Shack, Silver added, he hopes for installation of a juke-box and sandwich machines.

Both candidates agree on at least one matter. Silver and Contreras both contend that the main problem here is a lack of student interest and participation in activities.

As a remedy for this, Contreras suggested that the attention of all campus organizations should be directed to campus-wide activities and should not merely be centered around their own individual activities.

Silver had a similar conviction, adding that students should take more interest by attending regular meetings of the Student Council and Council of Organizations.

"This should begin when students first enter the college so that we can follow them—and push them, if necessary—through their tenure here," Silver stated. Silver declared that he hopes to revise the orientation program administered to incoming freshmen to acquaint them with the college and its problems.

Both candidates are also in accord regarding sale of AS cards. Students should be polled to get their opinions on what these cards should stand for, and a full investigation should take place into establishments offering discounts to college students.

Silver, commenting on the AS constitution, stated that it does have some "loopholes" and that he has attempted to clear up certain discrepancies in the document.

"One such loophole concerns provisions in the constitution regarding election of AS officers and the procedure necessary for determining the winners.

"I can sum up my desires in becoming AS president next semester in a brief statement," Contreras said. "This college has offered me free education and I feel that I have a responsibility to repay it in some small way.

"By being elected president, I feel I can fulfill this desire."

Silver, in conclusion, stated: "If elected, I can only start the ball rolling on certain matters here at the college. It will be up to future elected officials to carry out these proposals."

The matter of qualification of these candidates speaks for itself, since each has equal ability and extensive leadership background.

Contreras has served as Freshman Class president and is currently president of the Sophomore Class. He also has served as a representative on Student Council and with the Council of Organizations from the Recreation Association and Alpha Phi Omega fraternity.

An engineering major here, Contreras is presently in his third semester.

Silver is now president of the Council of Organizations and served as chairman of the campus organizations and activities workshop at the recent Northern Regional California Junior College Student Government Association conference.

He also attended last month's state conference at Asilomar. Silver is an electronic technician major in his fourth semester at the college.

These candidates and aspirants for the other student offices have already begun campaigning, since there is not too much time left before the actual election will be held.

AS Election Dates Set For January 8, 9

Voting for the 20 elective Associated Student offices for the Spring 1963 semester will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, January 8 and 9, according to Larry Malbaum, Election Commissioner.

The polls will open at 8 a.m. and close at 2 p.m. each day.

Voting machines will be located by the silver pole in Science Hall, at the second floor entrance to the arts building, at the entrance to the library and in Smith Hall.

Recreation Association Slates Awards Social For January 3

Recreation Association members will present their semiannual awards social from 6 to 10 p.m. Thursday, January 3, in the women's gymnasium, according to Frances Galloway, RA sponsor.

Beginning the evening's festivities, a dinner will be held for all RA members. Each semester a specialty, such as a typical Chinese dinner, is offered. This semester's featured menu will be determined at a meeting later this week. Election of officers will also take place at this time.

Highlight of the event will be the presentation of awards to all qualifying RA members. First semester students will receive shields. Blocks will go to second semester participants, and pins will be awarded to third semester members.

New officers will be introduced and sworn in immediately following the entertainment.

Entertainment will probably feature Rags Scanlon and his ukelele. "Scanlon might not be able to appear, since his type of outstanding talent is in constant demand nowadays," Miss Galloway stressed.

H&R Department, Student To Get Sheraton Awards

Presentation of the America Award to the college's hotel and restaurant department will be made by the Sheraton Corporation at a dinner to be held next month.

The H&R division here has recently been selected as one of the training institutions, making it eligible for the award.

In addition, an award will also be presented to one of three students from the fourth semester class, Patrick Flaharty, Glen Nance or Charles Swanson, who were selected candidates by student and faculty vote.

Qualifications necessary to receive the award provide that the student should be eligible for the Associate in Arts degree and H&R certificates of completion. The student must be in his fourth semester and must also be engaged in work experience.

Other requirements state that a candidate must have maintained a 2.5 grade average and be not more than six units away from his certificate of completion.

In voting for candidates, consideration was given to class work, leadership activities, ability, participation in Hotel and Restaurant Society activities and interest in the progress of the hotel industry.

The award is an individual plaque for the student and a permanent plaque for the department.

Italy Subject Of C-Hour Film

Variations On An Italian Theme will be presented during College Hour Friday in S-136 as part of this semester's movie schedule, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor, announced today.

"It will show some of the regions of Italy that are not too well known, such as the dolomite region and the lakes of Northern Italy," Devlin stated.

On Friday, January 4, a 30-minute film, The Early Days, will be shown. It is concerned with the history of flying and the importance of air power. "It has an outstanding narration and is quite interesting," Devlin said.

The film scheduled Friday, January 11, is a documentary combining historical scenes with the construction of the Panama Canal.

Three Engineering Majors Share New Scottish Rite Grant

A Scottish Rite scholarship of $500 was equally divided into grants to three outstanding engineering majors at the college recently, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced yesterday.

The three students are Lawrence Attinger, Robert Bachman and Alan Poletti.

Attinger is a graduate of Lick-Wilmerding High School and is presently employed as a page in the San Francisco Public Library. His ambition ultimately is to become a quality control engineer.

Bachman is a graduate of Galileo High School where he was boy's vice president of the students and winner of the American Legion award. He is in training to be an electrical engineer.

Poletti is a graduate of Lincoln High School and was rioted for superior work in the pre-engineering program. He plans to be a mechanical engineer.

Grants are offered by the Scottish Rite Foundation to students who are United States citizens, graduates of San Francisco high schools and are preparing for a bachelor of arts degree.

They must have had "B" grades in high school, satisfactory scores on the entrance examination with high marks on the S.C.A.T. and the reading section, and 30 units of university parallel work at a 2.4 average, Dean Golding said.

This fall was the first time the Scottish Rite scholarships have been offered.

Counselors List Reg Times For Spring Semester

Registration numbers for returning spring semester students were announced last week by Walter McCloud of the counseling department.

Because of a record-breaking influx of about 6900 students this semester, some early registrants were not issued registration numbers, McCloud said.

Registration numbers for spring semester students are as follows: February 4, 1963, at 8 a.m., numbers 1-800; 8:30 a.m., 801-1300; 9 a.m., 1301-1700; 9:30 a.m., 1701-2100; 10 a.m., 2101-2700; 10:30 a.m., 2701-3100; 11 a.m., 3101-3400.

At 1 p.m., numbers 3401-3600; 1:30 p.m., 3601-3850; 2 p.m., 3851-4100; 2:30 p.m., 4101-4600. On February 5, 1963, at 8 a.m., 4601-5000; 8:30 a.m., 5001-5400; 9 a.m., 5401-5800; 9:30 a.m., 5801 up.

McCloud emphasized that students failing to meet counseling appointments will be penalized one and a half hours for spring registration schedules, and he added that those wishing to change appointment dates should give counselors notice of no less than two days or they will be penalized one-half hour at registration.

AS Council Dinner Set For January 10

A Student Council dinner honoring all officers of the Associated Students, council and cabinet members will be held at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, January 10, in Smith Hall, Rosalie Weiner, AS vice president, announced yesterday.

Guests will include student presidents and faculty advisers of the eight colleges in the Golden Gate Conference.

Following the dinner, a number of awards will be presented.

The awards given will include Rams-head pins and guards for each AS officer and member of the Student Council, cabinet officers and Guardsman All-American Editorial Board members of Spring, 1962.

A major event will be presentation of the Outstanding Service award to the student not holding an office, chosen by council for service to the AS.

An award in the form of a plaque will also be presented to a faculty member for outstanding service to the college.

Also included in the events will be the installation of the newly elected AS president and vice president.

During the Korean War 800 MIG-15's were shot down by the USAF, which sustained only 58 losses.

College Artists Compete In Packaging Design Contest

A total of $6100 in cash and savings bond awards plus 48 medals and eight all-expense trips to Chicago will be awarded to the student winners of the St. Regis Paper Company's Fourth Annual Collegiate Packaging Design competition which opened recently.

City College students are entering the competition for the first time this year, William Davis, instructor in the department of advertising design and commercial art, stated.

"Any student is eligible to participate in this contest, which is aimed at stimulating interest on the collegiate level in the field of packaging design," he said.

"Not only will participating students become eligible for prizes, but more significantly," Davis added, "they will have an opportunity to better acquaint themselves with a profitable outlet for their artistic talent."

This year's competition has been broadened to include every college and university in the United States.

Students are eligible to submit entries in four categories:

1. Graphic design for a bag of lawn and garden fertilizer.
2. Graphic design for a bread package.
3. Graphic design and construction of a folding carton for one pound of candy.
4. Graphic design for a corrugated shipping container.

Entries are due in Chicago no later than April 1, 1963.

Winners will be announced in May, with the top person in each division being flown to Chicago for presentation ceremonies. Full details and entry blanks are available from instructor Davis in the art department.

Sharpshooters Capture 2 First Place Trophies

Consistently tops in shooting competition, the college's pistol team walked away with two more trophies after competing against ten sharp teams in national matches December 2 in Oakland.

First-place trophies were taken in both the .22 and .38 caliber classes. The target shooting consisted of firing 30 rounds each of .22 and .38 caliber bullets from 50 yards. The three types of firing are slow, timed and rapid fire.

Members of the college pistol team are Campus Police Chief Bob Muihall, Captain Jim Olson and officers Ralph Brown and Ron Wilson.

Some of the opposing teams at Oakland were the Fish and Game Department team, San Francisco Police Revolver Club, Alcatraz pistol team, Oakland pistol team and the Block Busters. Also the Army, Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard and Navy had teams entered.

Oakland's matches ended the pistol shooting season until March, when the matches will resume. However, the team is expected to compete at the National Rifle Association matches in January.

Top pistol teams from 11 Western states are expected to make the NRA matches an exceptionally good contest for the crackshots of the college pistol team.

Sponsors Choose Travel Theme For Feminine Fling

Let's Go Globe Trotting, the theme of this semester's triple-sponsored Feminine Fling, is scheduled for Friday night, January 11, in Smith Hall, Sue Fitzpatrick, Associated Women Student president, announced today.

This affair, jointly sponsored by the Inter-Sorority Council, the Recreation Association and the AWS, is open to all women students.

The Feminine Fling is held every semester to honor outstanding women students here.

Two guests will discuss How To Go To Europe On A Shoestring. They will explain the best way to travel in Europe, what to see and what proper wardrobe to select.

The International Relations Club will provide music, and the decorations will include travel posters, crossroad signs and brochures.

The Margaret Dougherty trophy, honoring the memory of the college's former dean of women, will be awarded to the sorority with the highest grade-point average.

The AWS service award will be presented to the woman student who has given outstanding service to the college throughout the semester, and the final presentation will be the Recreation Association award.

Chairmen working with Miss Fitzpatrick are Marilyn Kuha, food; Rose Diggins and Carole Rubino, decorations; Betty Trope and Kathy Peelen, entertainment, and Ruth Wimmer, paper plates and cups.

IFC, COO Supply Yule Decorations

The Inter-Fraternity Council, in cooperation with the Council of Organizations, will take part in a campus-wide Christmas decoration this week, Dean Ralph O. Hillsman, faculty sponsor, said yesterday.

Beta Tau fraternity will put up a small Christmas tree near the silver pole in Science Hall, and Phi Beta Delta will also be posting Christmas greeting cards in the cafeteria.

In addition to these activities, the fraternities are joining in the COO food drive which ends on campus Friday. The advertising arts department, under the direction of William Eckert, has arranged a display in the lobby of Science Hall.

The display, in keeping with the spirit of Christmas, was designed by Robert Andrini and Margaret Omera, students in the advertising art department.

Cagers Capture Vallejo Tournament

Volume 55, No. 11 WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1962 Page 4

6-8 McGriff, 5-9 E. Adams Lead Rams To Title, Fourth Straight Preseason Victory

By Fred Wales

With the combined shooting of guard Everett Adams and center Elton McGriff, the Ram cagers came from behind to beat Vallejo, 73-64, and win the Vallejo tournament championship last Saturday at Vallejo.

After completing four games the Rams are already starting to show their stuff—and it looks good. Everett Adams, 5-9, proved his accuracy from outside and underneath as he bit nine out of 11 from the outside in Thursday's Vallejo opener, and eased in nine straight charities in Saturday's championship tilt. All total his 39 points were the high for the tournament. He hit 20 Thursday and 19 Saturday.

BASKETBALL COACH Sid Phelan, who guided the Rams to their first state championship last year, ponders over strategy for the holiday contests.

All-State McGriff, 6-8, proved to everyone at the tourney why he was given the honor last year. He was only one point behind Adams in scoring, hitting 15 points Thursday and leading all the teams Saturday with 23.

Freshman Art Adams from South Carolina knocked in 12 points both nights.

Forward Randy Sims had problems with the officials, picking up four personals Thursday and five Saturday, but still managed to control the boards on both offense and defense.

Guard Stan Fuelscher also picked up five fouls Saturday, but not before tanking 11 points, scoring on the fast break.

The team got its first real test Saturday against a strong Vallejo. Grabbing an early lead, the Rams moved to a 19-9 advantage halfway through the first period. But Vallejo came back to tie it up with five minutes left in the first half on a bucket by their leading scorer, 6-4 forward Frank Mixon.

With 3:39 remaining in the half Vallejo pulled ahead 29-25 on three consecutive jumpers by guard Dave King, and led at the half, 35-33.

The Rams tied the game at 35-all and forged ahead on two fast breaks by Fuelscher to open the second half. Then Everett Adams hit eight points on a scoring splurge, and the Rams were up, 51-43.

Vallejo pulled within three points of the Rams at 53-50 with 10:29 left in the game. Simms received his fifth foul, and the Rams were in trouble.

McGriff came back with four points and the Rams again moved ahead, 59-53, but tenacious Vallejo cut the margin to four points at 62-58 with 4:15 remaining.

Using a full court press, Vallejo moved within four points with three minutes left.

Fuelscher made two charities, and Art Adams dropped one in after a steal for a 68-60 lead with 2:30 left.

McGriff clinched it with two more buckets and 73-64 was the final.

The Rams reached the final by swamping Sacramento City College, 84-51, Thursday night. The 84 tied a City College record for most points scored in one game.

Everett "Goose" Adams started the rout by bitting the first seven points from the floor, and continued his marksmanship from outside to total 14 points at the half.

The Rams held a wide 40-19 lead at the half. The second string was even used in the first half.

Sacramento was never in the contest as the Ram fast breaks and torrid shooting was too much for the losers.

Reserve forward Wes Hatch and guard Mac Smith looked good. Smith hit eight and Hatch six.

In other preseason contests, the Rams knocked over Stockton, 76-69, Tuesday, December 4, at City College.

Stockton had four of last year's starters back and were considered strong. With 5:15 left in the first half, SF trailed, 30-28. But all five starters hit in double digits, and the Rams came back.

In the fourth quarter the Rams led by 21 points. Stockton rallied, but fell short.

San Francisco missed 14 of 18 free throws. Bright spots were the offensive show of strength led by McGriff, who tallied 17 points and Simms who had 12 points in the first half and 15 total.

The Rams opened the season with a 56-50 win over the Stanford JV's Saturday, December 1, down on the Farm. Art Adams hit 12 points in the first half but settled for a tie with McGriff for scoring honors at 17.

McGriff spent most of the game on the free throw line, hitting 14 out of 23.

This Friday at 4 p.m. the Rams take on the California JV's here and Saturday move to USF to take on the highly ranked Hilltoppers.

Ron Coleman 'Back Of Year'

For an unprecedented third straight year, a City College back was named Back Of The Year in the annual conference selections.

Ron Coleman, the tenacious 170-pound speedster, who dominated the Ram statistics and the league long runs, continued the San Francisco Back Of The Year reign.

In the old Big Eight Conference, Gary Lewis, the powerful fullback from Polytechnic High, was Back Of The Year in 1960, and last year Tom Piggee tied a Modesto back for the top honor.

Dennis Drucker, who played sparingly behind guards Dave Urrea and Alex Darnes in 1961, was named to the first team offensive squad, while Mel Tom, a husky 240-pound Hawaiian, was named to the first defensive club.

Tackle Jack Burgett and center George Benkie were named to the second team.

Coleman was deserving of the honor. He wasn't the league's leading ground gainer, but did place second to Foothill's Doug Schoenwetter. He was second in the league in average gain per pass reception, and had three of the league's longest runs.

HALFBACK RON COLEMAN (left) was named the Golden Gate Conference's Back Of The Year. Dennis Drucker was named to the first team tackle spot.

He scored the longest run from scrimmage, 80 yards against Oakland; the longest kickoff return, 82 yards against San Jose, and the longest punt return, 82 yards against Diablo Valley. He scored 42 points to tie Contra Costa's Bob Battle for the league scoring title.

Forfeit Hurts Divine Ones' Chances For Berth In AMS Sports Night

The Divine Ones' chances of gaining a berth at the January 9 Sports Night basketball playoff were crippled last week after they had seemingly clinched the independent league title.

After defeating the Collegiate Five, 68-37, two members of the varsity cage team were found to have played. This resulted in the forfeiture of the contest, and it all but killed any chance the Divine Ones have of grabbing the crown.

The loss threw the league into a tie between the Collegiate Five and Alpha Phi Omega. If the league ends in a tie, there will be a special playoff game the first week of January. The winner of this will meet Alpha Phi Epsilon for the over-all title at the Associated Men Student sponsored Sports Night.

Sports Night will present, in conjunction with the basketball playoff, a volleyball playoff to determine the college championship in that field and eight boxing matches. The boxing matches will present eight bouts in different weights ranging from feather-weight to heavyweight.

The evening will begin with the volleyball game, followed by the basketball contest.

Trophies will be given to the winning teams in basketball and volleyball. A trophy will also be given to the high scorer in the intramural round-robin play. The boxer voted as the outstanding fighter of the night will receive a trophy also. All participants in the events will receive medals commemorating the night.

Admission to the Sports Night is free with Associated Student card, and cigarettes, cokes and cookies will be served at intermission, AMS President Jim Fuller said. Admission to non-AS members is 50 cents.

RA Wins Another Volleyball Crown

Recreation Association participants in the college's sports day, held in the women's gymnasium last Saturday, came through in grand style.

The volleyball team again won the championship. They played 10 games with an undefeated status. "It looks as though we definitely have the top two-year college team," Frances Galloway, RA sponsor, stated.

Tom Rice won first place in the archery competition, Carol Hoffman and Guy Oei placed first in the badminton doubles, while Barbara Harrison took second place in the singles by defeating a San Mateo student.

Carol Roberts received a ribbon for being the best folk dancer representing a two-year college. "Sports days have improved considerably because of the renewed interest in volleyball. Many more students are now attending these events," Miss Galloway said.

RAMBLINGS

COCKY CASSIUS CLAY

CASSIUS CLAY, for a man 20 years old, has a pretty big mouth.

He also has a pair of pretty big fists.

The two, together, within a few years could produce one of the greatest boxing machines of the century.

Already the loquacious Clay, the world's fourth-rated heavyweight, has steam-rolled past many of the better heavyweights, including a sensational kayo victory over ancient Archie Moore last month.

Clay makes no qualms about his ability. Just ask him who's best. He'll tell you he's the world's greatest. He goes into the ring predicting the round he will knock out his opponent and repeatedly has backed his boasts.

Is this the real Cassius Clay? Has he always been this cocksure of himself? At Rome in 1960, where he won the Olympic light-heavyweight title, was he the cocky Cassius?

"He's always been very talkative," Julio Menendez, Clay's coach in the 1960 Olympics, said. Menendez, the boxing and soccer coach at San Jose State, spoke at the recent Block SF dinner here.

"He talked just as much then; well, maybe perhaps a little more now. He realizes that all his talking increases his value at the gate.

"The kid really believes in himself. He must believe what he says. Sometimes he'll give himself a pep talk. He'll ask a question and then answer it himself."

Did the other boxers resent Clay's ostentatious boasts?

"At first they did," Menendez said. "I did, too. I figured it was going to be tough living with this for three months during training. But there were the little things that made you like the kid.

"For instance, at Fort Dix, where we were training, Clay was always complaining he didn't have any money. So, he took in everyone's laundry. I think he charged 15 cents to wash a shirt, 10 cents to starch it. He did a real good job."

Clay has come a long way. In two years from washing laundry, Clay is now clearing $50,000 per fight and more.

Menendez says Clay has a real obsession for the fight game. "From my standpoint he's the best I've ever coached. He has all the physical equipment. He has the right attitude and he loves to train. He realizes he has to back up his talking.

"Clay told me when I talked to him at the Tiger-Fullmer fight that he didn't care what people said about him. He didn't care whether they wanted him to win or lose, as long as they came out to see him fight. He's in it, of course, for the money.

"I remember once we were walking along the boardwalk at Rome right next to the Mediterranean, and Cassius said to me, 'Coach, what's on the other side of this lake?'

"But the kid does have a real sense of humility. When he was about to enter the ring in a quarter-final match against the defending champ, a Russian, Clay told me, 'I'm really scared!' "

Cage Roundup: Oakland Big

January 25 is a long ways away, but that's the date Coach Sid Phelan and his Rams are probably watching carefully.

That's the date when the Rams meet the Oakland Thunderbirds for the first time in the 1963 Golden Gate Conference basketball season.

The Rams are the defending champions, they have height and they have speed, but Oakland is equally big if not bigger and they're fast, too.

In evaluating the conference, Phelan thinks Oakland City College is destined for first place. Oakland is sparked by Tom Luster, the Big Eight Conference leading scorer and rebounder last year. San Jose City College looks tough, and Phelan figures them for second place.

Phelan modestly predicts a battle between the Rams, College of San Mateo and Contra Costa for third place. San Mateo looks strong with a 6-foot, 5-inch plus average on the forward line.

Foothill, Chabot and Diablo Valley appear to be the dark horses of the Golden Gate Conference. This will be Chabot's first season of basketball, as the college opened just this fall.

Foothill is led by 6-7 center Bill Parks, 6-6 and 6-5 forwards Jerry Causey and Don O'Dale. The Foothill coach feels his team "is potentially one of our better teams, and could be our best."

Diablo Valley has good shooting ability but is lacking in height. Aside from its 6-7 center, Mickey Toner, the rest of the team is not over 6-3.

The Ram five, defending champions of the state title and the now extinct Big Eight Conference, figure to have a tougher time of it this year. All eight teams in the new Golden Gate Conference are tough.

Returning veterans Elton McGriff, Everett Adams and Randy Simms carry the Rams' hopes for a second consecutive title.

McGriff is a 6-8, 210-pound center who was All-Conference last year. He sparked the team with 209 points and 194 rebounds.

Veteran guard "Goose" Adams, who is only 5-9, 165 pounds, will have to carry a lot of the weight on his shoulders. The speedy little guard scored 150 points and pulled in 51 rebounds last year. He appears to be one of the better guards in the conference.

Former Balboa High star, Simms, figures to be important. His height of 6-4 will be important on the forward wall. Although his playing time was limited last year, he managed to pull in 49 rebounds.

Completing the starting lineup are forward Art Adams and guard Stan Fuelscher. Adams is a 6-2, 185-pounder from South Carolina. His shooting and rebounding proved to be a great asset to the team in preseason games against the Stanford Frosh and Stockton College.

Bill Silver Captures AS Presidency

Students Decide AS Membership Needed To Vote

Members of the Associated Students decided in a special election last month to restrict voting rights in general AS elections to holders of AS cards, Larry Maibaum, election commissioner, revealed following tabulation of votes.

The issue in the election was Article IX, Paragraph 4, of the AS Constitution. This section reads, "A member of the Associated Students may have the full privilege of electing student officers for the forthcoming semester."

Fifty-four per cent of the voters decided to keep the paragraph in question effective.

Forty-six per cent of the students who cast ballots in the special election voted to omit this paragraph so that Student Council would have the prerogative to open elections to the entire student body.

For an open elections victory, a two-third majority was needed.

Maibaum voiced disappointment in the results of this special election and also in the meager turnout of students who cast ballots.

BILL SILVER (right) receives congratulations from his opponent, Vince Contreras. Silver, by a margin of 169-159, was elected as next semester's Associated Student president.—Guardsman photo by Cypriano Ayalin.

Sue Fitzpatrick Wins VP In Poor Election Turnout

Bill Silver defeated Vince Contreras for Associated Student president during the student elections last week by a small margin of 10 votes.

Silver compiled 169 votes to Contreras' 159, with a total of 328 students casting ballots. The total number of eligible voters on campus is 3175.

"This is the poorest participation we've had in student elections in a long time," Election Commissioner Larry Maibaum said.

Sue Fitzpatrick was unopposed in her bid for Associated Student vice president and received 265 votes.

Mike Nevin defeated Alan Poletti in the contest for Sophomore Class president, 173-135.

In the contest for Freshman Class president, Bob Roddick was the victor over Dan Foley with a total of 174 votes to 140.

John Thielen was unopposed for Associated Men Student president and compiled a total of 210 votes. Imogene Walker received 170 votes to defeat Ruth Wimmer (127) for Associated Women Student president. This was the largest winning margin.

One office for the seven seats of Sophomore representatives to council was unfilled because of the lack of a candidate.

The six unopposed candidates for this office were Clemmie Thompson receiving 218 votes, Phil Robbins receiving 210, Janet Sisk receiving 207, Jim Stern receiving 302, Gerald Mendes receiving 175 and Tony Taormina receiving 159.

The seven unopposed candidates for fresbman representatives to council were Howard Moody receiving 210 votes, Carol Wong receiving 209, Nancy Maggio receiving 207, Beryl Knoller receiving 192, Sue Padilla receiving 192, Al Paolinello receiving 183 and Joel Cohen receiving 178.

A revision in the constitution was also passed in the election allowing the incumbent council organization to pass budget proposals for the following semester. Previously, budget proposals were passed in the semester for which they are used.

This same constitutional revision was put before the voters last semester and was soundly trounced with a total of 463 students voting against with only 622 ballots cast. This semester the amendment received the two-thirds majority.

Although the turnout of voters was much lower than last semester, student leaders pointed out that non-AS cardholders were allowed to vote in the previous election.

Vandalism Hits— Student Shack Is Closed For Good

By Herman Kilgerman

The Shack, a center of controversy, has been permanently closed because of a series of recent incidents climaxed by a rash of vandalism during the Christmas vacation.

Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman cited several reasons for the Shack's closing — all centered around the basic fact that students here cannot police themselves.

"There has been a definite lack of cooperation among the students using the Shack this semester. Inter-Fraternity Council members had the best intentions when they volunteered to police the bungalow but, without student cooperation, very little could be accomplished," he said.

"Vandals broke into the union during the vacation and ransacked the vending machines," Hillsman re-

John Silva Named Editor Of Spring Guardsman

John Silva was elected last week by The Guardsman Editorial Board to serve as the paper's Editor in Chief for the spring semester.

Silva, currently news editor, is replacing Editor Dave Kleinberg, who was named Sports Editor.

The editorial board also elected Herman Kilgerman Managing Editor, Michel Janicot Feature Editor, Dick Bullard News Editor and Boyd Burtnett Staff Writer.

Kilgerman is presently Assistant Managing Editor and Bullard, Janicot and Burtnett are currently reporters on the paper.

Cecil Poole, U. S. Attorney, Lauds Civil Rights Premise

'Magna Carta... Parallel To Emancipation Proclamation'

By Jean Zeidler

Cecil Poole, United States Attorney, terms the Magna Carta and the American Declaration of Independence parallel in importance to the Emancipation Proclamation.

Speaking here during College Hour January 4 on the historic background and development of the Emancipation Proclamation, Poole said he felt that a moral premise was created in high authority for the law of the land.

"We must give more than a casual observance to the Emancipation Proclamation," Poole stated, "because it was one of the decisive changes and a struggle for self respect in our history.

"Although Lincoln faced an emotional problem, it was courage, and the past historic premises, which furthered the Proclamation," he said.

Poole stated that the Emancipation Proclamation could have been used by Lincoln as a powerful means of war, but also stated that Britain would not enter in alliance with slavery.

Poole described Lincoln as the executor of the world's greatest causes, freedom and human dignity. Lincoln's open promise of a someday realization of equality made him that executor, Poole remarked.

"What has America done to bring real freedom?" Poole asked of his audience. He pointed out that only two statutes dealing with the Negro vote have ever been passed, one in 1957 and the other in 1960.

Only recently has any activity on civil rights been conducted, Poole said. He pointed out that during the last 24 months 100 suits have been filed, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been probing civil rights cases.

Poole added that the Department of Justice has taken steps in halting intimidation, appointing federal officials in connection with such work. "Progress is slow, but wheels are turning and gathering momentum," Poole said.

"Little Rock, Mississippi and New Orleans are sad stories," Poole stated, "but all that sadness goes far beyond bullets, bottles and blood." He stated that among many factors dealing with the disturbances is a 1896 document stating that no descendants of slaves would be given education.

Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin was a great help in bringing out a problem to the people, Poole said.

"Our negro problem," Poole remarked, "is one of national ethics; it is a problem in the hearts of Americans, and it is there that the struggle goes on."

According to Poole, although the problem has been somewhat alleviated, contemporary north and west America still have gaps between preaching and practice, and the solution remains a mirage.

The turning point in intergroup relations, according to Poole, is the population expansion, both urban sprawl and suburban growth.

Poole stated that although there has been a steady social, national and economic transition, the negro is still impatient and neurotic when confronted with differentiating treatment.

Each man possesses that which distinguishes him from an animal, Poole explained; therefore, slavery is not a physical bondage but a tyranny of the mind.

"Of the South, it must be said that times are clouded with nearby threats of violence," Poole stated, "but in another 100 years we may hope to celebrate the true Emancipation Proclamation."

H&R Operates St. Francis Tomorrow

By John Silva

More than 30 hotel and restaurant students here will assume major managerial positions tomorrow at the St. Francis Hotel for the 11th annual "Operation St. Francis Day" program, according to Lawrence Wong, H&R placement director.

"Top hotel positions, from managing director to pastry chef, will be occupied by fourth semester students who, for one day, will work side by side with persons regularly assigned these jobs," Wong explained.

This unique program—the only one of its kind west of the Mississippi—begins at 9 a.m. outside the renowned Mural Room where students will be welcomed by hotel personnel. Then the grand tour begins.

"The tour, throughout the entire building, consists of observing the work performed at each phase of hotel operation. After that students will go to their assigned posts to work directly with personnel," Wong said.

Dan London, the hotel's managing director, originated this program in 1952 when he authorized some 30 H&R students to partake in what was then titled "Operation—Hotel." Since then it has been renamed "Operation St. Francis Day" and has been held annually.

Accompanying participants to this semester's program will be Louis G. Conlan, college president; Louis F. Batmale, coordinator of technical instruction, and Wong.

Assuming top position of managing director will be H&R student Charles Swanson. Second in command will be Michael Stack, residence manager; followed by Jon Leuteneker, Peter Schwind and Richard Grossman, assistant managers.

In charge of business development will be Kenneth Migge and Patrick Flaharty. Taking charge of room clerk, personnel and staff planning will be Joseph Calderaro, Robert Famiglia and Gordon Clark, respectively.

Glenn Nance will work as food and beverage manager, Brian Weiss will take over as executive chef, while Robert Di Aeri will handle the sous chef position and Thomas Baume that of pastry chef.

Appointed chef's secretary is Robert Taylor and in charge of auditing is Vernon Huth.

At the helm as credit manager will be Michael Moss, aided by William Cain, head cashier, and Peter Scopazzi, general cashier. Duties of housekeeper, chief engineer and purchasing agent will be assumed by Edward Morrison, George Hawkins and Jim Martinez, respectively.

Others participating in the program are Richard Furtado, head storeroom; Tipton Cohen, assistant beverage manager; Ralph Brennan, publicity, and Hoyt Scott, telephone department.

Osvaldo Mariti will be in charge of the Grill Room; Paul Bromham, Medallion Room, and Adolfito Grafilo, Terrace.

Room service, banquet service and the mail department will be managed by Martin Bonlen, Charles Sbockey and Craig Hannah, respectively.

Representing other college departments at the hotel will be Dave Kleinberg and John Silva from journalism, Herman Kilgerman from publicity and Al Gosseff and Bill Worthington from engineering.

4661—When Evil Spirits Beware!

Chinese To Celebrate Year Of The Hare

By Boyd Burtnett

—San Francisco, with the rest of the world, is bracing itself for the holiday blast that will usher in the year 4661—on the Chinese calendar, that is.

This is to be the year of the Hare and from the start of February 9, all evil spirits must beware. Things will really be hopping.

Although 4660 years have passed on the Chinese calendar, formal celebrations did not occur until the Tang dynasty, 618-906 A.D.

For about 400 years prior to the Tang dynasty it was observed in the same manner as today's Thanksgiving. Peasants would give thanks for the harvest and ask for blessings in the coming year. Prior to this period there was no celebration at all.

Chinese tradition is rich in symbolism and it is important to start out the first day of the New Year, called Yuan Don, on the right foot, lest misfortune befall you in the days to come.

On the first day one avoids whipping children, breaking dishes, sweeping the floor, using needles, killing animals, scolding people and cussing.

Children are especially delighted with the shooting of firecrackers and receiving Li Shee. Li Shee is money wrapped in red paper and is considered lucky for both giver and receiver.

Chinatown, San Francisco, U.S.A., is planning the biggest celebration in the history of the Chinese-American observance of Yuan Don.

For ten full days starting February 1, the 1963 Chinese New Year Festival will feature public events including the Miss Chinatown, U.S.A. Pageant and Coronation, the Chinese New Year Parade and the Coronation Ball.

Also there will be exhibits, entertainment and a street carnival.

Last year a City College student, Anna Wong, was chosen Miss Chinatown, San Francisco, during the festivities.

As The Year Of The Tiger slinks into history and the Hare approaches, the explosions of firecrackers and the dancing of dragons may herald the entrance of a year that will long be remembered on Grant avenue.

College Poll Reveals Apathy Toward Student Government

STUDENT IGNORANCE and apathy toward student government operations here were loudly punctuated in the results of a recent survey completed by the college's public relations class.

In nearly every college, awaking students to student government and campus affairs is a major problem. How much apathy there is or how much neglect of student affairs is present is difficult to pin down. This survey, sampling 106 students, did measure a small amount of student response concerning these issues. It is the first such poll of its kind taken here recently.

Only 17 students of 106 knew that 15 students comprise the Student Council, only 17 of 106 were remotely interested in becoming a member of the council and only 25 of 106 voted for council members in last semester's elections.

These disheartening figures were coupled with the reply that almost 50 per cent of the respondents were unaware of how the funds from the sale of AS cards, which amounts to more than $15,000, are used.

If anything, the survey pointed out there is a strong campus need for some kind of communication that can give the students this type of information.

The Campus Carrier and The Guardsman, the main communication sources between the college and students, must be supplemented in some other form, perhaps a more thorough orientation period for the incoming freshman, if the situation is to be improved. In this new year, these might be some of the possibilities to look into for the new semester.

Public Relations Instructor, Class Conduct Campus Poll

An "argonaut" joined the college's faculty this semester as public relations instructor and Publicity Committee adviser.

Those upon Webster's dictionary may be hitting their heads against the wall by this time wondering what an "octopod cuttlefish" is doing here. Actually, an argonaut, in this case, is a member of the college's first graduating class.

Barbara Latz Rosenthal, the instructor, is one of this group. While at the college in the late 30's, the then Barbara Latz was business manager of The Guardsman, after which she transfered to the University of California.

Now supplementing her teaching here, she is a public relations counselor in San Francisco owning her own firm. Her chief interest is with youngsters and youth organizations.

The well experienced counselor conducts the only statewide adoption agency, and is enjoying her work with mentally retarded children and operates a youth teanis school.

As an instructor of public relations, she hopes to "bring to the college a comprehensive study of public relations, both in theory and actual practice by the course."

As a class project this semester, members of the public relations course polled students in communication classes as to their knowledge of campus affairs. Partial results of this poll along with editorial comment appear on this page.

How AGS Members Maintain Their High Grade Averages

Gayle Wilson, sophomore:

It's easy for me to remain in Alpha Gamma Sigma—it just takes studying. There's isn't any real substitute for studying. I try to make good notes in my classes and then try to remember the facts by making a mental picture of them. In that manner, I find it easy to recall important material.

GAYLE WILSON

"It's easy for me to remain in Alpha Gamma Sigma—it just takes studying."

Ron Block, sophomore:

Maintaining a high grade point average requires much time and effort. I try to devote as much time as possible to my studies. I think that the most important factor involved in maintaining good grades is having a keen interest in the subjects I am taking.

Bettie Boudrout, sophomore:

I consider examinations the real crux of achieving good grades. Prior to an exam, I try to get plenty of sleep so that I am at my sharpest in the morning. Examinations are especially important because they determine your grades.

Armand Attia, sophomore:

Proper study habits help one attain a high grade average. I don't have a real master plan for good grades since each individual course dictates my attitude of action. I try to do a broad review and hit all the high points without doing any cramming.

Shirley Chang, sophomore:

I study as much as possible and don't go out very much. I am a chemistry major, and I consider it a very interesting field. Being an exchange foreign student I have to study my English very hard. I learned English only two years ago and still have some problems with it.

Carolina Brooks, sophomore:

For certain courses I will employ the "cram" technique. I have something of a photographic memory. I also have a high degree of retainment for short periods of time. Although this is a great help to me, I try to rely on comprehensive review.

Dennis McCue, sophomore:

My major is engineering, and there is no substitute for putting in a lot of time studying. I am married and have a part-time job in the lab. This helps me, for in addition to spending a lot of time on his subjects a person must also have a working interest in them.

Evelya DeLuna, sophomore:

I disregard all cramming and fall back on the studying I've done all semester. Studying is a progressive thing that builds. When finals come, I am pretty well prepared. I make an outline and go from one thing to the next.

She Never Misses

Buffie, College's Cocker Spaniel, Is Shy, But A Heckava Postman

Camera shyness can be a very trying experience, especially for a little dog or a celebrity. Just ask Buffie or Frank Sinatra.

Buffie is an affectionate brown-eyed toy cocker spaniel, and Sinatra is an affectionate blue-eyed songster. Both are "cowards" where cameras are concerned.

Whenever a photographer points a black box at either of them, they jump into the air and howl.

A pet of the former dean of men here, Edwin C. Browne, Buffie has copper-colored fur and weighs approximately 23 pounds. Sinatra weighs about the same—well, maybe a bit more.

But here is where the similarity ends. Sinatra is rich and has his deliveries made by other people. Buffie is still struggling in the world of competition and makes her own deliveries.

Under the care of Uriel Furlong, the secretary to the deans of men and of women, Buffie plays the role of a canine mailman.

With intelligence regarded by some as more than instinct, she carries letters, bedroom slippers, important messages and parking records automatically to the respective owners.

"Buffie has a remarkable memory shown by her trustworthiness in never having lost any mail in her possession. Not even the students can claim this record," Miss Furlong emphasized.

Craving attention and food, the pampered pooch received space in Herb Caen's column because Miss America of 1958, Lee Ann Meriwether, wrote numerous love letters to her.

Students of the college know Buffie is a female who will use her wily charms to procure tasty morsels at meal time.

Terming Buffie the unofficial mascot of the college, Miss Furlong expressed one fear, "I would certainly hate to see Buffie receive a paint job such as the Ram occasionally acquires."

Centuries ago it was the custom for newlyweds to serve honey to all guests in their home for a month after marriage and from that custom comes the term honeymoon. — Edward L. Friedman.

Television Viewer Rates Coloring Book

ONE OF THE LATEST innovations in children's coloring books has been those which satirize various forms of political and nonpolitical life. There is a JFK coloring book, an executive coloring book and a Kremlin coloring book.

With all of these coloring books gaining such popularity, it is only fitting and just that a coloring book for Mr. Average Man be put on the market. So with apologies to the publishers of the aforementioned, we offer the Television Viewer's Coloring Book.

So that all will recognize these mythical books, we offer excerpts from the book that just might appear—sometime in the near-distant future.

"These are The Nurses. They work very hard. Look at them argue with the doctor. Color the doctor's face livid red. Leave The Nurses' faces blanc. Color in some expression instead."

It has been said of this program, "These nurses never should have been registered," and after watching several programs it is easy to see why.

"This is a neuro-surgeon. His name is Ben Casey. See him scowl. Scowl! Scowl! He never smiles. He snarls instead. Color his face the color of Mt. Rushmore. To make him look neater, add a button to his tunic. . .

"Here is an intern. He assists Dr. Casey. The intern doesn't know much about being a doctor. Color the intern green."

"This is The Virginian. He doesn't like horses. He is afraid of horses. Color the horse black. Color his pawing forelegs black, too. Color his eyes angry; he doesn't like the Virginian."

Many episodes have passed since it first began. It has not changed much. It is still too long; it still shows lack of imagination. Its writers could do well to take a course in bonehead script writing.

"This is Lee J. Cobb. He is the star of The Virginian. He has just read some of the future scripts. Color his face a digusted color."

"This is a reporter. He works for the Bulletin. His name is Nick Adams. He has no talent. He never should have left The Rebel. Color his clothes yellow, the color of corn.

"See the beautiful home in Beverly Hills. Hillbillies live here. They are very rich. They are also very stupid. Soon they will run out of funny material. Then the show will flop. It will be replaced by a better program like the Loretta Young Show."

The less said about this show the better. If anything, it is nothing more than a second cousin to The Real McCoys. And that is not a compliment.

"Look at the head shrinker. We call him that because we cannot spell psycharist. He appears on The Eleventh Hour. Color the whole picture the color of an ink blot test. Send it in and he will give you a personal analysis of what is wrong with your psyche."

"This is a typical television viewer. He can find nothing wrong with any of the TV programs. He likes them all. Color the viewer's glasses rose colored. Color the padding on the walls white."

This is the end. Color it a blank color.

AGS Has Final Exam Secret—Study Pays Off

Contrary to popular belief, Alpha Gamma Sigma scholastic honor society members do not have a secret method for more than pasing final examinations. Unbelievable as it may seem to some students here their system is the same as everyone's else—study!

Although it might seem that they do not need to hit the books because of an alleged "reserve supply of knowledge," AGS members will have to burn that oil along with the other 6000-plus students here during the coming week—but maybe not through midnight.

These select students—an estimated 271 are AGS eligibles—are like anyone else here except for one major difference; they have an average that isn't lower than 3.5.

While others are worrying about just barely passing their finals in order to be allowed to return to college in the spring, AGS'ers are seeking a grade average which will continue their membership in the society.

This, to them, is the important factor.

Students all know how to study, so any suggestions would probably merely go in one ear and out the other. Everyone has a method, but as some have discovered—or will very soon—some systems aren't as good as others.

Student brains will be able to recuperate during the midsemester recess which immediately follows the conclusion of finals week.

Of course, some may have an extended vacation reaching far into next semester—but not AGS students.

RA Honors 28 Members At Semiannual Banquet

Presentation of 28 awards by the Recreation Association to participants in its program took place at the semiannual dinner and social held on January 3.

Ruth Wimmer, this semester's RA president, was awarded a plaque commemorating her term in office.

Feature attraction of the evening was the showing of slides taken by Guy Oei at the association's sports days. Those depicting volleyball were of particular interest since the team has an undefeated record, Frances Galloway, RA sponsor, stated.

Awards consisted of shields for first semester participants, blocks for a second semester and stars for those students taking part in the program for a third semester.

Sue Davis and Tim Dunn received stars.

Blocks were presented to Orlando Dacosta, Joyce Holeman, Guy Oei, Merlyn Prescott, Fran Richardson, Kathy Riley, Carol Roberts and Virginia Rush.

Shields were awarded to Bruce Arbeit, Barbara Graratz, Mary Henderson, Elie Hines, Gladys Higgins, Tania Loubousky, Donna Lieces, Margaret Jacob, Pamela Machado, Michelle McCarcy, Ola McDonald, Willa Robinson, Geri Schneider, Clarence Scanlan, Richard Surabian, Erna McClendon, Gail Everett, Rosalie Ferrari and Dorothy Johns.

Shack Closed For Good—Vandalism

vesled. "After this incident, vending companies would just be playing with fire if they installed more machines. There isn't enough security to warrant valuable equipment in the Shack."

It was noted that about this same time last year vandals also hit the vending machines. This, and the more recent incident, prompted the vending companies to take the course of action they have.

"The companies have not officially announced their policy, but it's evident that they would be foolish to reinstall machines," Hillsman said.

Hillsman doesn't put the blame on any one factor but cites several reasons for the closing.

The Shack first entered the news this semester when four men—not students here—were caught gambling there, a violation of Board of Education rules. The bungalow was immediately shut down for an "indefinite period."

IFC members volunteered to take over supervision of the Shack if and when it was reopened. Upon this offer, the college's administration relented, and scheduled an opening of the Shack for December 13.

For an undisclosed reason, the union was not opened on schedule, but Hillsman disclosed that the bungalow was open for student use before the final closing last week.

Tapson Wins Award Best Article Of Year

For his article, Indian Warfare On The Pampa During The Colonial Period, Dr. Alfred Tapson, social science instructor here, was awarded a $100 prize for the best contribution to appear last year in the Hispanic American Historical Review.

While on sabbatical leave in Madrid, Tapson did much of the research for the article.

He received his degrees from the University of California, taught at Mission High School and joined the college staff in 1956.

Council Presents Service Awards To Thompson, Dunn

Bill Silver and Sue Fitzpatrick were installed as next semester's Associated Student president and vice president, respectively, at a Student Council dinner, which also honored all officers of the AS, council and cabinet members last Thursday in Smith Hall.

Major event was the presentation of the Outstanding Service Award to a student not holding an office and chosen by council for service to the AS. This semester the award went to Clemmie Thompson.

An award in the form of a plaque was also presented to a faculty member for outstanding service to the college. John Dunn of the hotel and restaurant department was the winner.

Other awards included Rams-head pins and guards for each AS officer and member of Student Council, cabinet members and Guardsman All-American Editorial Board members of Spring, 1962.

Gamma Kappa Beta Top In Scholarship

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority won the Margaret Dougherty scholarship trophy and Rosie Fang the Associated Women Student service award at the Feminine Fling, held last Friday.

The Margaret Dougherty trophy, honoring the memory of the college's former dean of women, is awarded each semester to the sorority having the highest grade point average.

Members of Gamma Kappa Beta maintained a 2.36 grade point average for the semester.

The AWS service award is presented to the women student who has given outstanding service to the college through the semester.

Gamma Kappa Beta also won the award in Spring 1961 with a grade point average of 2.5.

The Royal Couple

LOIS HAGUE AND MIKE CALDERWOOD show off their trophy and flowers after being crowned King and Queen of the Sophomore Ball held January 4 in the Italian, Colonial and Georgian roome of the St. Francis Hotel.

Two hundred and twenty dollars was collected from the penny-a-vote method which determined the winners and will be donated to the Soph Claee scholarship fund.

First and second runners-up were Katy Dwyer and Jim Horan, and Paulette Waiti and John Thelien, respectively.

Swanson Wins H&R Award From Sheraton Foundation

Charles Swanson, fourth semester student in the hotel and restaurant department here, was awarded the semiannual American Award by the Sheraton Corporation at a dinner held on January 4 in the Comstock Room of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel.

Each semester the award is presented to an outstanding student who is eligible for the Associated in Arts degree and H&R certificates of completion. The student must be in his fourth semester and must also be engaged in work experience.

The award itself is an individual plaque and the student also receives the honor of having his name engraved on the permanent plaque which was granted to the college by the Sheraton corporation.

James Stahlbaum, currently sales manager for the corporation and graduate of the department, made the presentation.

Patrick Flaherty and Glen Nance were the other two students eligible for the award.

In voting for the candidates, students and faculty members of the department considered class work, leadership, ability, participation in activities and interest in the progress of the hotel industry as important qualifications.

Other requirements provide that a candidate must have maintained at least a 2.5 grade average and be not more than six units away from his certificate of completion.

Recently, the H&R department here and at Cornell University in New York were the only two institutions selected as training centers, making them eligible for the award.

McCloud Warns Students To File Program Cards

Students who have not completed their Spring 1963 preprogramming card should see their counselor now, Walter McCloud of the counseling department warned today.

All students who plan to return for the Fall 1963 semester will be required to fill out a free-hour form and a self-addressed postcard during registration, he added.

January 25 Last Date For Textbook Resale

Used textbooks may be sold to the Ramporium until Friday, January 25, Dick Main, bookstore manager, emphasized today.

Texts of the hardbound and paperbound variety will be accepted and priced depending upon their condition.

Main emphatically stated that January 25 is the final day for selling books. They cannot be sold during registration week.

He Gambled—And Lost

Driver Plays Tag With Campus Police; SF Police Say He's 'It'

By Bob Hacker

A man claiming to be an ex-student here gambled with a Campus Police officer's authority last week.

He lost.

It all started when the driver, traveling north on Phelan avenue, went through the cross-walk in front of the college at a speed the officer in the walk said exceeded the limit.

The officer tried to flag the driver down but to no avail.

Not realizing a good thing when he saw it, the driver then proceeded to make a U-turn, and, like all good "criminals," returned to the scene of the "crime."

This time the officer was ready and waiting to get his man. As the car approached, the officer stood his ground and at the last minute made his move. He jumped in front of the car, billy-club in hand.

Not wanting to hit the officer for some reason, the driver swerved. Undaunted, the officer swung fiercely at the passing car and smashed the left rear window.

How do you fight a campus policeman? You call the city police; and that's just what the driver did. And, like the cavalry appearing out of the horizon, the city police came.

Four squad cars—tires squealing, red lights flashing—raced to the scene ready to take on driver or officer—they weren't sure.

The driver, who called city police to protest Campus Police authority, wound up with a smashed window, a citation for speeding and failure to comply with an officer's instructions—plus a crushed ego.

As he left the scene, he mumbled, "Who's going to pay for my window?"

Adams Tips Foothill In Last Nine Seconds

Everett's Score Gives S.F. 39-37 Comeback Victory

By David Kleinberg

With nine seconds left in the game, little Everett Adams dribbled into the key, jumped high and swished the ball through the net to steal a 39-37 victory from Foothill last Saturday at Los Altos Hills.

It was the second Golden Gate Conference win for the Rams in two tries, and it was probably the most exciting game of the year. San Francisco won its opener Friday night against San Jose, 66-56, at San Jose.

After Everett hit the two-point field goal to hand Foothill its second straight two-point loss in two nights, the Owls missed a frantic shot at the buzzer, and Everett, who appeared to be in a state of semi-consciousness, was swarmed upon by his jubilant teammates.

It was a long, up-hill battle for the Rams. Foothill took a 6-5 lead early in the first quarter and never trailed through the entire game until Adams' winner.

San Francisco, which missed eight of 10 foul shots in the first half, trailed by as much as nine points in the fourth quarter, but started to creep up on Foothill, which spent a good deal of the last quarter in a semi-stall.

The Foothill stall was a failure, but it was only a failure because the Owls could not connect on four straight one and one foul shots in the final three minutes.

With less than five minutes to play, the Rams trailed, 37-31. But Art Adams, who led the winners with 13 points despite hitting only four of 16 field goal attempts, hit a long jumper for 37-33.

Art cashed in on two foul shots for 37-35 with 3:22 left. After Foothill missed three foul shots, San Francisco rebounded. Art Adams missed on a long jumper, but Randy Simms, playing his second game after sitting out two weeks with a shoulder separation, hit a 10-foot jumper to tie the contest at 37-37 with 55 seconds left.

Foothill's Jim Gardiner was fouled by Simms with 40 seconds remaining, but the 6-3 center, who held Elton McGriff to three points but couldn't stop the Rams' big 6-8 center on the boards, missed and the Rams, winner of 13 of 14 preseason contests this year, controlled.

The ball was worked around for 31 seconds and then Everett Adams, the man they call the "Goose," went up and it was over.

It was Everett the night before, too. The ex-Washington guard hit seven of 11 field goal attempts in the first half and finished the game with 24 points to lead the Rams past surprising San Jose.

San Jose was in the contest until the final minutes.

Modesto Loss Mars Perfect Ram Cage Exhibition Season

After completing 13 games with a perfect record, the Rams closed their exhibition schedule with a disastrous loss in the second round of the Modesto Tournament January 5.

The defending state champions moved swiftly past top-rated Hancock, 68-56, in the opener, but fell to keyed-up Stockton, 70-56, and took an early trip home.

The two-week loss of Randy Simms, who suffered a shoulder dislocation, could have meant the difference at Modesto.

CCSF 58, Sacramento 56

San Francisco trounced Sacramento by 32 points earlier in the year but had to hold off in the last minutes for this victory.

FOOTHILL TOURNAMENT

The Simms-less Rams moved guard Stan Fuelscher over to forward, and the ex-Lowellite, who had averaged a steady eight to nine points per game, went wild. In the opening 73-60 win over Long Beach he dropped in 22; he scored 25, 10 of them in the overtime, to lead the Rams to a 61-55 win over Foothill in the second game But in the championship game, December 22, it was Art Adams with 20 points who led the Rams to an easy 75-62 win over San Mateo. Foothill's Jack Gleason was the tourney's MVP. Art Adams, Everett Adams and Fuelscher, who got 14 points in the title game, were named to the All-Tourney team with San Mateo's Bob O'Donnell and Long Beach's Frank Roy.

CCSF 84, California Blues 71

Everett Adams dumped in 18 points in the first half, hitting seven of ten shots, and the Rams went on to the top the Blues, 84-71, December 14, in a contest that must have set some sort of record for number of fouls. The Blues came with five players and on agreement were allowed to continue after the fifth foul. Cal's Dennis Volion collected eight fouls, Jim Ashcraft six and 6-10 center Steve Belser five.

CCSF 45, San Jose State Frosh 39

Art Adams dumped in 14 points and Elton McGriff 12 to lead the Rams to a 45-39 win over the Spartans, December 12. Ex-St. Ignatius prep star Pete Newell, Jr., hit six points for the losers.

CCSF 72, USF Frosh 55

The fabulous USF Frosh, undefeated in six previous outings, jumped to a quick 8-0 lead and led at the half by two, but the keyed-up Rams roared back, completely dominated the boards and trounced the Dons, 72-55. McGriff and Art Adams dumped in 19 points, while ex-Sacred Heart prep star Russ Gumina bounced in 24 points for the losers.

CCSF 76, Marin 56

This was Scare Day. Early in the first half, Simms suffered the shoulder dislocation. The Rams, minus Everett Adams the first quarter and McGriff for three quarters (both arrived late), still took an easy 76-56 win from no-opposition Marin. Art Adams pumped in 23 points, 10 in the last quarter, and Everett Adams pushed in 18.—By D.K.

Cagers Invade Diablo Valley In Friday Tilt

By Fred Wales

With two tough games behind them, the championship Ram basketball team wades deeper into the league season Friday, when they take on the potentially dangerous Vikings of Diablo Valley at Concord.

Since the start of the season the Vikings have won seven of their first eight games, their only loss coming at the hands of the powerful San Jose State Frosh.

Veteran guard Sam Coston and center Mike Toner are the scoring and rebounding leaders, respectively. The 6-2 Coston attended Pittsburg High and in his senior year was voted Most Valuable Player. Last year he was an All-League selection as he led the team in scoring and was a standout on both offense and defense.

Forwards Rex Bankhead, 6-4, and Tom Strain, 6-1, are both good jumpers and shooters. Bankhead is among the top three scorers and is known for his outside jump-shot.

Following this game the Rams meet Oakland at 8 p.m. Friday, January 25, here, and at 8 p.m. Tuesday, January 29, take on Chabot here.

THE RAMS have played Stockton twice this year. They won the first and lost the second, and from the picture you can almost tell which game this one was. Big Elton McGriff (45) and Randy Simms (50) go high for the ball against Stockton's Calvin Jones (51) as Everett Adams (10) waits for a possible loose ball.

San Francisco won this game by seven points, 76-69, but a month later they met a keyed-up Stockton and suffered their first defeat of the year, 70-56, after 13 straight triumphs.

Spring Sports

Diedericksen Eyes Potentially Best Tennis Squad Since 1948 Season

With four veterans and two promising freshmen, the college's state championship tennis team should have its "best dual meet team since 1948," Coach Roy Diedericksen predicted.

Heading the list of returning veterans are Bob Siska, the number one player in singles and doubles, and Ed Jilka, a graduate of Lowell and a partner on the unbeaten Siska-Jilka doubles combination.

Also returning are number two man, Jack Kerns, from Washington High and member of the second doubles team, and Rich Anderson, ex-Lincoln High netter, also member of the second doubles team.

Veteran Brian Harty from St. Ignatius was sixth man singles and third doubles last year. Of last year's first six, only Rich Murray is not returning.

Gordon Miller from Washington High, second in the AAA singles matches championship last year, and Bob Murio, out of Lowell High, who finished third in the city's AAA singles last year, are the top prospects among the newcomers.

TRACK

Coach Lou Vasquez, who last year saw a four-year reign on the conference track throne ended, starts a rebuilding program centered around his returning broad jumpers.

The broad jump has given every indication of being the strongest position. Expected to return are Lon Brantley (last year's Big Eight Conference champion) and Jim Waterfield from Washington High. Vasquez also has high hopes for Leo Washington, All-City broad jumper from last year's Mission squad.

The mile and two-mile race appear to be strong with Ozzie Norris, Gene Plotkin and Steve Jackson leading the pack.

Last year's champion discus thrower, Alex Darnes, has been graduated, and Clarence Coleman, All-City discus champ from Mission, looks like a strong candidate to take his place.

Two former Washington High graduates, Claude Shipp and Harry Smith, are leading candidates in the sprints. Both are veterans.

All track candidates should sign up with Vasquez in the men's gymnasium before final examinations.

BASEBALL

With team practice to begin February 5 and the first preseason game schedule to begin March 2, the baseball team, under new head coach Sid Phelan, will attempt to improve upon last year's record.

That should be easy.

Last year's record was three wins and 11 losses.

Rich Nold, pitcher from Riordan High, and John Pierce, a veteran from last year, are expected to carry the pitching load, with assistance from Dave Barni, Galileo High All-City candidate, and Ron Bringle, All-City from Lincoln.

GOLF

Golf Coach Grover Klemmer reports that returning veterans will be very few, if any at all. The only definite returnee is Jim Roman. Other standouts from last year such as Dennis Drucker and John Steddln have not given indication they will compete this year.

All persons interested should sign up in the men's gymnasium before final examinations or during next semester's registration.

Tryouts for team positions will start February 6. The season's first practice match will be held March 1.

SWIMMING

With the spring semester fast approaching, the need for swimmers is again becoming a problem. All that remains of last year's team are Herman Fruchteniet, breast stroke; Chuck Greninger, free style; Mark Haskell, butterfly, and Jeff Higman, free style.

All interested students are requested to consult Coach Roy Burkhead in A-202 as soon as possible.

Ron Coleman Named To All-American Team

Ron Coleman, the Golden Gate Conference's Back-of-the-Year, added two more honors to his collection over the holidays.

The 5-8, 180-pound Ram back was selected to the Williamson Rating Service 33-man two-year college All-American team, and was named honorable mention All-American on the JC Grid Wire team.

Guard Dennis Drucker made the Williamson honorable mention team.

Alpha Phi Epsilon Wins Cage Title At Sports Night

Alpha Phi Epsilon won the intramural basketball championship by defeating Alpha Phi Omega, 55-50, last Wednesday during the Associated Men Students' Sports Night at the men's gymnasium.

Alpha Phi Epsilon, trailing 31-27 at the half, rallied on the sharp shooting of 5-4 John Giles and Marv Cunningham to win. Giles used an uncanny eye from the outside to tally 17 points for the winners, while Cunningham showed brilliant jumpshots and driving lay-ins for 16.

Giles also captured the trophy for season high scorer by dropping in 82 points for the season. Alpha Phi Omega's Russell Rege took second place with 80.

Ring-wise, the high spot of the evening was the 165-pound battle between Dave Lewis and Eldon Cherniss. Although sustaining a bloody nose in the second round, Lewis displayed a solid left jab and jolting rights to the body to pound out a split decision over Cherniss.

Lewis was voted the Best Boxer of the night. Cherniss, although defeated, went away with the trophy for the Fightingest Fighter.

In the 175-pound class, Art Shelton scored a TKO over Ron Carson when Carson couldn't answer the bell for the final round.

The only knockdown of the evening came in the third round of the first fight. Somir Arikat caught Fernando Esponda off balance with a right cross and Esponda slipped to the canvas. Esponda was ahead on points at the time and coasted to a split-decision win.

In the 135-pound weight, George York pounded out a split decision over Chuck Greenstone.

Bert Mageau used his longer reach and strong counterpunching to box his way to a unanimous decision over George Scott in the 142-pound clash.

Bobby Harris took a split decision over Paulo Fua in the 150-pounder.

Larry Wilderson displayed a good defense and a long left to outpoint Calvin Matthews for the 157-pound crown.

In the volleyball playoff, Hotel and Restaurant downed Alpha Kappa Rho, 21-13, for the league championship.

The 50-Mile Roller Skate

As depicted at the left, rally 'round the flagpole is the call for Dave Kleinberg, Guardsman sports editor, whose comely trainers, Lila Pobran (right) and Pam Mayo, pep him up for his precedent-setting attempt at a 50-mile skateathon.

Roaring off from the courtyard via roller skates today at 1 p.m., the sports editor said he'll be in top shape for his 50-mile in 20 hours trek.

Kleinberg, journalism's startling answer to the Call Of The New Frontier, maintained that he could do it as well as write about it—and do it the hard way, too.

In an exclusive interview, the nimble-footed writer said, "I haven't been on skates since I was eight years old."

However, tenacious Kleinberg is currently in rigorous training.

"My skateathon," he noted, "will begin at the college and continue through San Francisco's 49-mile scenic drive. It will end at the college—or in the hospital."

Kleinberg further intends to make his trek a sweeping success. He'll carry a broom to slow him down.

He chose the scenic drive area on which to skate because, "I would look pretty silly sprinting down the Bayshore Freeway."

His story will appear in next week's Guardsman.

Glamour Magazine Looking For Ten Best Dressed Coeds

Women interested in entering Glamour Magazine's Top Ten Best Dressed College Girls In America contest were told that this college's individual judging will take place Friday, Rosie Fang, chairman, announced today.

This is the first time Glamour is seeking City College's best-dressed coed.

Any woman may enter by submitting a picture of herself to Mary Golding, dean of women, in S-150. Judging will be determined not only by clothes worn by the aspirants, but by figure, posture, grooming, a clear understanding of her fashion type, a workable wardrobe plan and individuality in her use of colors and accessories, Miss Fang said.

The winner will be announced officially at the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea on March 28.

Entry forms will be sent to Glamour Magazine next week, following this Friday's college contest. The magazine staff will select a group of semifinalists and from these the Top Ten will be determined.

Semifinalists will receive honorable mention awards.

The young women who are finally chosen as Glamour's 1963 Top Ten will be photographed for the August issue of the magazine and will be down to New York in June as guests of the perlodical.

Although it is the seventh year the magazine has conducted this contest, it is the first time that a San Francisco college has been invited to participate in it.

Miss Fang has urged all women to consider entering the contest and mentioned that a display is currently on exhibit at the south end of Science Hall.

Mile Drive Nets 3303½ Dimes

Topping the 1962 contributions by nearly $100, the Phi Beta Delta sponsored Mile Of Dimes collected a total of $330.35, according to Fred Esponda, fraternity president.

The drive, held in conjunction with the March Of Dimes, exceeded expectations and was considered a great success.

In a congratulatory letter to Esponda, Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman stated, "Most important from the college's point of view is the valuable lesson the Phi Delts have experienced in performing such a worthwhile service."

Although the drive fell short of the figurative "Mile" goal, it is of note that if the collection were made in dimes and laid side by side they would stretch 405 feet.

The funds will be turned over to the March Of Dimes to further research on arthritis and birth defects. The national foundation, founded by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, has been responsible for the discovery of the Salk and Sabine polio immunizations.

The college drive held February 15 was preceded by a College Hour rally in which entertainment was supplied by night club satirist Vaughn Meader of First Family Album fame.

Judging by the response to the drive, many students heeded the words of Meader when he paraphrased another well known Meader mimic by saying, "Do not ask what the March Of Dimes can do for you, ask what you can do for the March Of Dimes."

Students Urged To File Open-Hour Form

Students who have not as yet filled out their Open Hour forms for appointments for fall preregistration were urged today by Walter McCloud, counselor, to consult their counselors.

For counselors to help students select classes, it is necessary for them to have a sufficient number of a student's free hours to arrange for an appointment, McCloud explained.

Students neglecting to submit these forms will not be permitted preprogramming or a registration number until the end of the semester, McCloud said, and they cannot be counseled until they file a preprogram form. The forms will be available in two weeks until June 1 at the counseling office, S-160.

Silva Sets Guardsman Publication Schedule

Remaining publication dates of The Guardsman for this semester were released recently by John Silva, chairman of the Publications Board.

The 12 remaining issues for this semester will appear on the following dates: March 6, March 13, March, 20, March 27, April 3, April 24, May 1, May 8, May 15, May 22, May 29 and June 5.

Distribution stations for The Guardsman were also announced by Silva.

There will be two in Cloud Hall, one in the library and one near the faculty offices. Issues will be distributed just inside the second story ramp entrance of the science building, and at the entrances of Smith Hall and Science Hall.

Alpha Phi Epsilon Wins IFC Award

Alpha Phi Epsilon won the Inter-Fraternity Council service award for outstanding contribution to the college. Presentation of the trophy to the fraternity's president, Hirshel Holley, was made by Fred Esponda, Phi Beta Delta president, at an open house held February 19 at Smith Hall.

Highlighting the open house and rushing, sponsored jointly by the Associated Men Students and IFC, was a movie showing the Giants' loss in the World Series.

John Thielen, AMS president, presided over the event. Among the speakers were Bruce Wilson, IFC rushing chairman, and Tom London, Alpha Kappa Rho president.

Hare Appears On Meet The Professor

By Boyd Burtnett

Meet The Professor, an American Broadcasting Company presentation, featured John Hare, life science instructor here, in a telecast last Sunday over KGO-TV.

Hare is the first biologist and the first instructor from City College to participate in the program.

Sunday's production re-created a classroom scene with Hare and some of his biological science 11B students. Concentrating on the personality and classroom technique of the instructor, the program presented a facet of biological study that is presently going on here.

Using the frog as the basic animal organism, four tables were set up to illustrate the areas of study involved.

The first table displayed a live frog with students studying its environmental adaptations and making observations from them.

Table number two was concerned with the primary dissection of the frog, with students studying the various positions of organs and muscles under low power magnification.

The third table contained the individual organs removed from the frog and laid out for closer inspection and separate study by the students.

Table number four was concerned with the microscopic inspection and examination of the tissues and cell structures of the frog.

Hare explained that these four processes would not actually be going on at the same time in actual classroom instruction. Rather, they would be stretched out over a period of time as the class progressed into the various phases.

According to Hare, the students who participated with him in the program received very little warning that they would be on camera. These were present students of his, actually involved in the process illustrated in the production.

KGO-TV taped the program here on February 11 and kept it under wraps until the more convenient time of Sunday's showing.

COO's Fourth Semiannual Dance To Kick Off Spring Semester's Club Activities

Club activities make their official debut Friday when the Council of Organizations sponsors its fourth semiannual "day and dance," COO President Vince Contreras said today.

Participating organizations in COO Day will have information booths set up in the courtyard between Science and Cloud Halls during College Hour. Purpose of the exhibits is to acquaint more students with the different clubs here and to attract new members.

These social, educational and service groups cater to a variety of interests and hold regular meetings on specified Fridays during College Hour.

Topping off the day's activities, a dance, Spring Fever, will be held from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in Smith Hall. Live music will be provided by the Diamonds, a popular music combo now appearing at a night club in Redwood City.

As an added attraction, a Twist contest will be conducted. According to Contreras, prizes will be awarded to the best Twisters.

Admission is free to Associated Student cardholders. Those having only a registration card will be charged 75 cents and $1 each for guests. One member of each couple must be a City College student.

"The event is either stag or drag," Contreras added, "and we are anticipating a good turnout for this kickoff dance."

Appropriate attire will be sport coat and tie for men and a dress and heels for women.

Saul Samuels, COO vice president, is handling arrangements for the dance.

VINCE CONTRERAS plans Twist contest for COO dance Friday.

Chinese Sponsor Sweetheart Ball

Members of the Chinese Students Club will sponsor their 28th annual Sweetheart Ball from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday, at the Longshoreman's Memorial Building, Fisherman's Wharf, Marcelline McDermott, club sponsor, announced last week.

Purpose of the ball, Miss McDermott said, is to raise scholarship funds, the proceeds of which will go toward four $50 scholarships, awarded each year.

Tickets for the ball, on sale for $3.75 a couple, are being sold by officers of the club, the queen candidates in Smith Hall and in C-266.

Dick Crest and his band will provide the entertainment, and there will be free parking. Dress is semiformal, and refreshments will be served.

President Jack Young, together with his vice president, Virginia Yim, are joint chairmen of the social committee and are doing the overall planning.

The social chairmen of the club, Ronald Cheng and Vincent Louie, are in charge of organization of music, prizes and general entertainment.

Treasurer is Fay Yee, Cindy Chu is the club's recording secretary and Sylvia Shue is the corresponding secretary. She will act as publicity agent for the club, in charge of releasing information pertaining to the ball to schools and colleges.

A Cappella Sings Faure's Requiem

The A Cappella Choir will present a chorale by Gabriel Faure during this Friday's College Hour in the campus theater, Galen Marshall, choir director who will conduct Faure's Requiem, announced today.

Accompanying the choir will be Warner Jepson. The choir, composed of 65 students, will feature Charlotte Mae Smith, soprano, and Robert Hawkins, baritone.

It is the first concert of the season for this group.

Faure composed this requiem in memory of his parents. It is different in that it is an individualistic piece of music, as it omits certain parts that are normal to a requiem and adds others that are not.

Marshall stressed the fact that this concert is not part of the regular concert series scheduled for College Hours this semester.

Other activities of this group include acting as host to the Northern California Junior College Music Education Solo Ensemble Festival, the Spring Concert and other local and Bay Area appearances.

Forum Sets Deadline For Copy Material

Contributions for Forum Magazine should be filed by Friday, April 19, Catherine Connolly, faculty adviser for Forum, announced last week.

The magazine, edited by students here, covers material in graphic arts, music, ceramics, art and creative writing.

Students enrolled here in Fall 1962 and/or Spring 1963 are eligible to contribute, Miss Connolly said.

Because of limited space, she added, manuscripts submitted should be limited to 1500 words, typed double-spaced on one side only.

Miss Connolly said that a staff will be organized soon and asked that material be typewritten on standard size paper. The magazine is expected to go to press in May and be ready for distribution in June.

Previously, Forum has been distributed without cost to Associated Students. To others the cost is 50 cents.

Further information may be obtained from Miss Connolly, C-331A.

Student Enlightenment, Benefit Main Goals Of Spring Guardsman

IT IS FITTING at this time that The Guardsman explain its semester plans and policy to its readers, the students and faculty of City College of San Francisco.

Already plans have been made to publish a series of five articles on student government. Written by the Managing Editor, the articles will explain and interpret the development and function of student government, past and present. The first article appears on Page 3 of this week's paper.

The need for these articles was made poignantly clear recently by the results of a survey conducted by the college's public relations class. According to the survey, the virtual majority of the college's students were totally ignorant of student government affairs. Because of this information, The Guardsman decided to take action and planned the publication of the aforementioned series.

The purpose of the articles is two-fold. First, they are designed to inform students. Second, and most important, they are designed to stimulate student curiosity and interest in campus activities. We believe these articles will accomplish these dual purposes.

To supplement the feature format of the series, The Guardsman is resuming publication of Club Cavalcade, a column featuring up-to-date information about the weekly activities of campus organizations. The purpose of Club Cavalcade is to serve as a timely addition to the series of articles and to disseminate news. This column also appears on Page 3 of this week's paper.

On Page 2 there appears another new column featuring a collegiate slant but accentuating the comic and tragic, the satiric and zany aspects of life in general. Written by the Feature Editor, the column is titled Avant Guardsman!

In addition to articles and columns relating to City College activities, there is also a column highlighting the major cultural events occurring at seven San Francisco and Bay Area colleges.

Titled Intercollegiate 7, the column features announcements of plays, lectures, exhibits, symphonies and movies, many of which are available to students here at discount prices. The purpose of Intercollegiate 7 is to inform students and faculty of the abundance of educational pleasures available to them.

Hence Intercollegiate 7, like the overall content of the spring semester Guardsman, is published for the enlightenment and benefit of the general student population.

And it is in accord with this point of view that The Guardsman maintain a nonpartisan editorial policy—a policy based on the credence that this is a college newspaper presenting news serving the best interests of the college.

What Dress Do You Consider Appropriate Campus Attire?

By Judy Carlson and John Miller

Bonnie Pates, freshman:
Students going to college should dress neatly and casually. For coeds, blouses, sweaters and skirts (not above the knees) are appropriate. Students are here to learn and not to put on a fashion show for their friends. Dress should be presentable but not too extravagant.

Steve Shea, freshman:
As far as I'm concerned, it's up to the individual, but I think he should go along with what the majority wears. I don't like to see men wearing white socks with suits, and those grubby beards are out. One other thing I think looks bad is a girl dressed all in black.

BONNIE PATES

"College students should always dress neatly and casually."

Gary Bernesque, sophomore:
Suits and ties, as well as jeans, aren't the right things to wear to college. Men should wear slacks. Some of their beards are nice looking, but others look unshaven. Tight sweaters are OK on a girl, but I don't like to see her skirts too short, and she should always wear socks.

Darlene O'Hara, freshman:
I don't like the dress standard out at San Francisco State. I can't see girls wearing rollers in their hair, or being allowed to wear bermudas or tight capris. They might be comfortable, but I think it gives the college a bad name. I'm happy with the way students dress here.

Dave Smith, freshman:
White levis are "in," but jeans are "out" for men, but dirty tennis shoes and loafers are good, too. I think a simple skirt and blouse look best on a girl and I'm in favor of the new hair styles. Anything not too extreme is appropriate, but I do like the "beatnik" style.

Sandy Alhadeff, freshman:
I can't see women wearing caprls to college because many of them aren't attractive in capris and, furthermore, they are not proper college wear. Leotards aren't appropriate, neither are spaghetti-strapped nor low-cut dresses. They cause too much attention.

Clemmie Thompson, sophomore:
Skirts, sweaters, nylons and low-heels or flats are appropriate college wear for the women. For the men, casual clothes are the best as long as they aren't tight-fitting or patched up. Trimmed goatees look all right on men, but beards are simply horrible.

Mike Shawlee, sophomore:
Dress should be up to one's own taste. For the women, short skirts are OK, but women shouldn't wear too much facial makeup. Suits, or the direct opposite, jeans, are OK for the men as long as they are neat. Anything which shows maturity in dress is fine for college.

Vaughn Can Do Without Jack; Jack Can Do Without Vaughn

By Dave Kleinberg

Vaughn Meader is a rich, young comedian, trying desperately to release himself from the image of President Kennedy.

His album, The First Family, is slowly creeping toward the five million mark, the biggest seller in history, but Meader, with the exception of the ad lib press conference, has stayed away from the Kennedy imitation in the night clubs.

VAUGHN MEADER

In his campus appearance February 15, in conjunction with the Mile March of Dimes, Meader made a believer out of 3000 students with sharp attacks and cracks on the current political scene. His political satire was perfectly timed, excellently delivered and well accepted.

("A 69-year-old socialite eloped with a 28-year-old man. That was her personal answer to medicare, and his personal reply to the President's physical fitness program . . . De Gaulle better bring England into the Common Market if he wants his picture back . . . Ever since I made this record, I've been followed by four secret agents. All Enrico Banducci's.)

"When you have a good joke, you tell it once," Meader explained. "You don't tell it three times. People have heard The First Family. They don't want to hear it again. That's why the one-night concerts didn't draw."

While pollshing his act during a four-month appearance at a Greenwich Village coffee house, Meader worked on an imitation of President Kennedy. It soon became the highlight of the act.

His manager, Buddy Allen, got him a recording engagement, and two weeks after the album had been released, more than 1.6 million copies had been sold.

"We didn't expect this when the album was released," Meader said. "You can only guess what was going to happen from what has happened. We figured if we had all the breaks, we'd sell half a million.

"We used our idea of good taste. After that, we didn't care."

Some have wondered why this type album was never done before. To this Meader replied, "With other Presidents, there wasn't as much to work with. In the Kennedy family there are many areas and facets to explore. The Kennedys are interesting whether you like them or not."

The Press Conference: The President of the United States.

"Yes, I would like to point out: We have been in trouble before. First there was Mussolini, but we Mussolinized him. And then there was Hitler and we Hitlerized him. And if Castro doesn't watch out, we'll . . .

"First question please: Canada? If you can't join them, lick them. Red China? Doesn't go good with blue drapes. The hungry i? I enjoy very much working for Mr. Hungry's club.

"The March of Dimes? Yes. Let me, ah, say this about that: Ask not what the March of Dimes can do for you, but what you can do for the March of Dimes."

Washington Grads Superior —In Numbers

Lincoln High School's "superiority" over Washington High in the number of its graduates attending college here, which was attained for the first time last spring, was shortlived, as Washington again copped the honors for the Fall 1962 semester.

At that time, 765 students from the Geary Boulevard high school were enrolled here, statistics compiled by the registrar's office show.

Lincoln moved to second place with 742 graduates enrolled here during Fall 1962. Galileo was third with 560, Lowell fourth with 501, Balboa fifth with 493, Polytechnic sixth with 347 and Mission seventh with 282.

Washington has often held this honor. In 1952 the total enrollment figure stood at 4657, with Washington taking first place with 262 strong.

Totaling a 6900 day-student enrollment figure for Fall 1962, private high schools in San Francisco forwarded 954 students, Alameda was represented by 156 students, and other California high schools had 835 students attending the college.

Out-of-state students numbered 783 and veterans 4.

With tremendous increases in enrollment, future statistics will no longer show 765 as "the winning number," for a much higher figure can be anticipated.

HOOTS from the Hill: The opening of the spring semester has not caught Foothill College in Los Altos Hills unprepared for coming social activities.

In addition to hosting Bob Newhart and Peter Nero in a recent concert presentation, Foothill has also played host to the San Francisco Symphony and the famed Stanford Chorale.

It is interesting to note here that these activities were financed entirely by student funds.

• • •

STATESIDE: The big thing at San Francisco State College this month was the student production of Kampus Kapers. The show, a tradition at the college, was produced and directed by drama student Richard Ramousy. Kapers is a variety show that lampoons most phases of student and faculty campus life.

In addition to the production of Kampus Kapers the drama department will present a production of Reynard The Fox. This play, which opens the spring semester Children's Theater, will be shown March 7 through March 9 at the Frederick Burke School at Font Boulevard.

• • •

MARIN NOTES: The College of Marin is reviving vintage movies for public viewing. The college will show a series of films that will include Birth Of A Nation, the Japanese award-winning film RashO-Mon, and an Academy Award nominee, An American In Paris. The film series is shown at 8 p.m. Saturdays on the college campus.

• • •

BEAR'S LAIR: The University of California, not to be outdone by a two-year college, has also contracted Peter Nero and Bob Newhart to appear on campus. This program is only a part of the regular series of guest lecturers and entertainers that are financed through the Associated Students.

• • •

SPARTAN ECHOES: San Jose State was recently host to the folk singing team of Peter Paul and Mary. This, too, was financed by funds supplied by the Associated Students.

• • •

FOGHORN SOUNDS: The University of San Francisco is currently showing a series of American show business memorabilia, which covers the period from the Gay Nineties through 1920. The display, which is housed in Gleeson Library, includes original manuscripts of Cole Porter's first musical, See America First.

ON HILL 29: Meanwhile, back at the ranch, the concert series offered here during College Hour on Fridays will have as guest soloist David Abel, concert violinist, on March 8.

Music And Comedy Come To Foothill

Avant Guardsman!

BUS RIDERS have commonly experienced a certain produce manufacturing advertisement with the words "The French Have a Word for It." Then the appropriate French name follows the description.

The same goes with this column, Avant Guardsman! In its true sense, the prefix "avant!" means before, ahead. It is therefore hoped the pun on the word Guardsman is sufficiently emphasized.

Actually, this column is the semester-long product of the present Editor in Chief, who is responsible for its introduction. In tipping him the Avant Guardsman chapeau, Christopher Wise is also included in this gesture.

Wise, who attended City College in 1960 and '61, majored in journalism and public relations. He was recently elected to the board of directors of the Bay Area Republican Alliance and appointed an associate member of the San Francisco Republican County Central Committee.

Also, in regard to the title of this column, (for those who might have thought City College had as Angry a Young Man as Britain's Osborne), the author is not a member of the Avant Garde Movement.

To start with a succession of extravagant lucubrations in an attempt to distract and (let's hope) entertain eager-to-learn fellow students, and for their benefit, here is a certainly "strange" word which will surely catch anyone's attention: Cottabus.

Sounds like a disease, or is it all Greek to us? As a matter of fact, it is a Greek word. Cottabus was a Greek game very popular at drinking bouts, imported from Sicily, and becoming more popular through the whole of Greece, especially at Athens, where to play well was a mark of good-breeding (French savoir-faire), and it did not go out of fashion until the 4th century, B.C.

The description of the game is much too long to be explained, but it has one thing still in common with today's taverns: the players used the game to discover their chances of success in love . . .

Curiosity is an individual desire to learn about things that do not necessarily concern one, and one example lies in the original selling price (in 1852) of Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin; 37½ cents was paid for a copy of the best seller in those days.

San Francisco, the next to the most beautiful city in the world (after Paris, naturaiiy) presents anachronistic features dignified by its past in the representation of a theatrical group, calling itself The Overplayers.

The group once performed at the well-known Spaghetti Factory in San Francisco's North Beach, that area known as the mecca of unconformists, neo and pseudo beatniks, eleemosynaries, et al. Basis for The Overplayers was La Commedia dell' Arte, a type of comedy developed in 16th century Italy, whence it spread to the rest of Europe.

The essential characteristic of the type is that it was based on a scenario outlined in advance, but the dialogue was improvised during performance.

And it still does, as proved by the Modern Jazz Quartet in a recently recorded album, entitled The Comedy (Atlantic 1390).

ISC Open House Tea Sunday

Event Serves As Orientation To Sororities

By Judy Carlson

This semester's Inter-Sorority Council tea and open house will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Women's City Club, 465 Post Street, Carole Rubino, ISC president, announced today.

"The purpose of the tea," Dean Mary Golding explained, "is for new women students to become acquainted with the active sorority members. It will serve primarily as an orientation to the sororities."

Registration for rushing a sorority began Monday and will last through Friday. "There are sorority girls signing up rushees from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day this week in Dean Golding's office, S-150," Miss Rubino said.

Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau are bringing homemade cookies to the tea, and Delta Sigma Tau and Delta Psi are supplying the punch. Flowers for decoration will be donated by Kappa Phi.

The introductory speech at the affair, to be delivered by Miss Rubino, will be followed by a discussion of grades by Margo Braghetta, ISC vice president and Phi Beta Rho president. Mimi Travis, president of Delta Psi, will explain service projects of the sororities and, later, Gloria Witherspoon, president of Delta Sigma Tau, will describe Pledge Days.

Claudia Vasquez, secretary of ISC and president of Kappa Phi, will explain the outfits prescribed by each sorority during pledging.

The receiving line will be composed of faculty sponsors Norma Carlisle, Katherine Hondius and Anne Travis from 2 to 2:45 p.m., and Marcelline McDermott and Miss Braghetta from 2:45 to 3:30 p.m. Noreen Smith and Miss Rubino step in at 3:30 and remain until 4:15 p.m., when sponsor Olga Perkins and Miss Witherspoon receive until 5 p.m.

Members of the hospitality and food service committees are Miss Hondius, Miss Vasquez, Miss Smith, Miss Rubino, Mrs. Perkins, Barbara Joseph, Miss Carlisle, Judie Smith, Miss McDermott and Kay Ilich.

Fireside dates for sorority members and rushees are set for next Tuesday and Sunday, March 10. The coffee preference is scheduled Sunday, March 24 and April 1, 2 and 3 are Pledge Days. The Inter-Sorority Council Ball and Presents will take place on May 3.

50 Organizations Compose Total COO Membership

By Francine Dubonnet

More than 50 clubs, fraternities and sororities are enrolled in the Council of Organizations and will meet during specified Friday College Hours this semester. Interested students are invited to join these organizations.

Athletic organizations this semester are Block SF (open to varsity block members) and the coed Recreation Association (open to Associated Student cardholders).

Campus religious organizations are offered in eight denominations, including Christian Science Organization, Deseret Club (Mormon), Hillel Foundation (Jewish), Lutheran Club, Newman Club (Catholic), Roger Williams Fellowship (Baptist), Wesley Fellowship (Methodist), Westminster Student Fellowship (Presbyterian), as well as interreligious Collegiate Christian Fellowship.

Four nationality clubs on campus are Chinese Students Club, Filipino Club, Hawaiian Club and International Relations Club.

Special interest clubs number seven, the Student California Teachers Association, Chess Club, Contemporary Affairs Forum, Folk and Square Dancing Group, Home Economics Club, Horticulture Society and Veterans Association.

Honor groups on campus are Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholarship society, and Alpha Phi Omega, men's service fraternity.

Professional groups are Broadcasters Club, Campus Police, Dental Assisting Society, Drama Club, Engineering Society, Forum, Hotel and Restaurant Society, Le Cercle Francais, Merchandising Club, A Cappella Choir, City College of San Francisco Band Association and Men's Glee Club.

Other professional clubs are Pick and Hammer (geology), Real Estate Club and Retail Floristry Club.

The seven campus fraternities are Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Phi Beta Delta and Zeta Phi Sigma.

The five sororities on campus are Delta Psi, Delta Sigma Tau, Kappa Phi, Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau.

Names of faculty advisers and the College Hour meeting rooms of these organizations are posted on campus bulletin boards and on the two College Hour slate boards which are placed next to Cloud Hall in the courtyard and next to the silver pole in Science Hall each Friday.

Foilers Prepare For Intercollege Play In March

The Amateur Fencers' League of America will conduct an "introductory" competition in the men's gymnasium at San Francisco State College Saturday at 2 p.m., Lene Johnson, fencing instructor here, announced today.

Seven of the ten fencers representing the college are Ronald Adler, John Buckley, Gary Cooper, Oscar Dinwiddie, Ello Hines, Charles Miller and Thomas Purvis.

"This will be one of the largest group representations of the college," Mrs. Johnson stated.

A competitive fencing team meets on Mondays and Wednesdays from 4 to 6 p.m. in the women's gymnasium, and a Recreation Association fencing club meets at 3 p.m. on Wednesdays.

The men fencers are working toward the Western Intercollegiate competition to be held on March 15, 16 and 17.

"The fencers hope to place in one of the first three top positions in the competitions," Mrs. Johnson stated.

A beginners' fencing class will meet on Mondays at 3 p.m. in the women's gymnasium.

Yesterday Hungarian Ferenz Marki, high ranking fencing instructor, conducted a master fencing class sponsored by the fencing club.

Fairmont To Host Spring Frosh Ball

With the final three offices of the Freshman Class filled, President Bob Roddick has announced that plans are now underway for the event of the semester, the Frosh Ball, to be held Friday, March 22, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel.

At a recent class meeting, appointment of committee heads for the Frosh Ball was made. Bids will be available at the silver pole, located in Science Hall near the registrar's office, and will be distributed to freshmen only the first two days.

Tally committee members will tie programs for the ball, the theme committee will "dream up" a novel idea, while the Cutest Couple committee will serve as judges and may aid in selecting couples who have not as yet signed up for the contest.

With the combined efforts of his officers and committees, Roddick hopes to make the Frosh Ball a night to be remembered and so will not be undertaking any further class activities until after this event.

Campus Police To Issue Citations Starting Friday

Enforcement of parking regulations on campus grounds will begin Friday with the issuing of citations for illegally parking cars, Campus Police Chief Tom Cain announced today.

Parking permits are being issued from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. in C-120 this week. Beginning next Friday, March 8, permits will be available only during College Hour. Students must present their Associated Student card, driver's license and car registration to secure a permit.

Cain also stated that the campus force is composed of 34 officers.

200 Brave Bad Weather At H&R Ground Breaking

By Robert Hacker

More than 200 students and members of the hotel and restaurant industry braved the rain and cold February 12 to participate in the official ground-breaking ceremonies for the new Statler wing to be added to Smith Hall, home of the college's H&R department.

The wing, expected to be completed in 10 months, is financed by a combination of $100,000 granted by the Statler Foundation and contingent upon $50,000 received from industry and private individuals.

This is the first time that any such group has had a successful fund-raising drive while relying mainly on industry for donations, David Schmitt, spokesman for the H&R department stated.

Besides providing space for an additional 25 students, the wing will also include a lecture-demonstration room, library and demonstration kitchen.

Schmitt said that the main problem now is that there "just isn't enough room."

"We have had students standing on tables and chairs during demonstrations," he said, "but with the new wing both teaching and learning will be easier."

The library will be open not only to all H&R students but will also be open to members of industry. "This should provide a greater exchange of ideas between students and leaders in the industry," Schmitt said.

The program, established in 1936, has trained thousands of students and, according to Willard E. Abel, president of the St. Francis Hotel Corporation, "San Francisco may be justly proud of having such a curriculum in the community."

In 1934 under the will of Ellsworth M. Statler, famous hotelman, the Statler Foundation was established, and has since made gifts to Cornell University and the Community College of New York.

Highlights of the ceremonies included the actual ground-breaking done by George D. Smith, chairman for the Hotel and Restaurant advisory board and for whom Smith Hall is named; a speech by Ward Arberry, secretary of the Statler Foundation, and a luncheon given in honor of the California Northern Hotel Association.

Others participating in the ground-breaking were P. Tremain Loud, president of the Hotel and Restaurant Foundation of City College; Harold Spears, superintendent of San Francisco public schools, and Louis Conlan, president of the college.

Student Government

3 Key Groups Form Base For AS System

(Editor's note: The following article, and those subsequent to this series, are published in an attempt to familiarize students with, and interest them in, the college's student government organization.)

By Herm Kilgerman

It is somewhat surprising that out of close to 6700 day students here only a mere handful is more than remotely acquainted with the governmental system of the Associated Students.

In discussing student government it might well be noted that the process is divided into three distinct parts. The first is composed of the elected officers which include the AS President and Vice President and certain members of cabinet.

Secondly, there is the Student Council, which serves as the official voting group within the AS. Finally, there is the cabinet, comprised of approximately 20 student leaders who may be popularly elected or appointed to their respective positions.

Student Council itself is composed of 15 elected and voting members. Included in this group is the AS Vice President and seven freshmen and seven sophomores. The Vice President is not only a voting member of council but is also a cabinet member.

Another distinction should be made between the AS and the student body. The former consists of some 3000 students semesterly possessing AS cards, while the latter includes students registered in the college.

Although elected as AS President, the leader of student government is actually a servant to the entire student body. The feeling here tends to be that if students are interested enough in their college and its government, they will join the AS.

Cabinet members serve as "lobbyists" or persons who work to influence legislation not only beneficial to their organizations but, in this instance, to the entire student body.

However, cabinet isn't the only so-called "lobbyist." All AS members can be considered in the same classification since they too have the privilege of attending meetings and introducing measures for consideration.

The council and cabinet—and other interested students—meet at noon Tuesdays and Thursdays in bungalow 6.

Next week: The AS Constitution.

3 Appointive AS Posts Open

Silver To Fill Cabinet Offices

Three appointive positions, Men's Athletic and Election Commissioners and the Parliamentarian, remain to be filled in Associated Student President Bill Silver's cabinet this spring.

Appointive offices and the persons holding each are Recording Secretary Sandy Yahres, Finance Committee Chairman Phyllis Webb, Corresponding Secretary Angela Soares, State Information Chairman Bill May, Alumni Liaison Officer Rich Gray and Student Card Sales Chairman Alan Poletti.

Others include Campus Affairs Coordinator Ruth Wimmer, Council of Organizations President Vince Contreras, Rally Commissioner Judy Shea, Inter-Fraternity Council President Keith Woolwine, Inter-Sorority Council President Carole Rubino and Publications Board Chairman John Silva.

The remainder are temporary Publicity Chairman Herm Kligerman, Recreation Association Chairman Sue Davis and Campus Police Chief Tom Cain.

Silver noted, in announcing the vacant positions, that there was no parliamentarian named last semester.

The 23-member cabinet meets with council at noon each Tuesday and Thursday in bungalow six. The cabinet members are direct representatives of the many different organizations here.

Individual students are also welcome to attend all council meetings.

Nominations Due For Council Seats

Nominations are still open for the offices of Sophomore and Freshman Class representatives, respectively, to Student Council, Associated Student President Bill Silver informed council last week.

Candidates for sophomore representative must have completed at least 28 and not more than 60 units of work with a 2.0 average, and must currently be enrolled in at least 12 units.

Candidates for the freshman seat must have completed at least 12 and not more than 27 units with a 2.0 and also must have at least 12 units of work in progress.

In other business, council unanimousiy approved Freshman Class President Bob Roddick's list of officers of the Freshman Class. They are Bruce Klein, vice president; Judy Beverly, corresponding secretary; Mary Ganakis, recording secretary; Roger Kaufman, treasurer; Henry Cassel, activity coordinator, and Maggie Huebner, publicity coordinator.

In reference to the Frosh Ball, Roddick announced that the theme for the event is Springtime Fantasy.

Inter-Fraternity Council President Keith Woolwine announced that the IFC will be sponsoring a blood drive in the near future and that IFC hopes to break the donation record of 452 pints of blood.

Campus Police Chief Thomas Cain announced that the attention of the force this semester will be focused not only on the parking problems of the college but also on the speeding regulations.

Cain emphasized that the speed limit on campus is ten miles per hour, adding that faculty as well as students are abusing these laws.

Variety Of Events Set For C-Hours

A variety of activities, including seven club meetings, three drama productions, seven concerts and three lectures, has been scheduled for the remaining 13 College Hours this semester, according to the official calendar of activities.

This Friday the highlight event will be Council of Organizations displays and a concert.

The schedule for the semester is as follows:

March 8, concert and club meetings; March 15, lecture; March 22, concert; March 29, club meetings and drama production.

April 5, double College Hour for the blood drive and a lecture; April 12, no College Hour, Easter vacation; April 19, club meetings; April 26, concert and club meetings; May 3, lecture; May 10, concert; May 17, drama production and club meetings.

May 24, concert, and May 31, club meetings and drama production.

June 7 and 14, no College Hour, final examinations.

Rams Back In League Race

Cagers Move Into First Place Tie With Oakland

By David Kleinberg

When Oakland's Thunderbirds edged the Rams just last week, it appeared the Golden Gate Conference basketball race was over.

Oakland, with a 59-54 victory on their home court, where they always seem to win, moved one game ahead of San Francisco, and with only three games left, it seemed unlikely the Rams would receive a second chance.

But just two days later, Oakland caught San Jose on a hot night and were upset by one point. The Rams responded the following night with a 64-52 win over Chabot to again deadlock the race.

Should the Rams and T-Birds win their remaining contests, a playoff on a neutral court will decide who will go to this year's state finals at Sacramento on March 7-9.

The Rams might have wrapped up the GGC crown by downing Oakland. They came very close to doing it.

On the shooting of steady Stan Fuelscher, the Rams led in all but the opening moments of the first half.

Everett Adams hit his first three shots to open the second half and after 6-8 center Elton McGriff scored two, the Rams led, 40-34.

Oakland, led by Charlie Luster, ran off eight straight points and that was the turning point. The game was tied at 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50 before Oakland took a 54-50 lead with four minutes left in the game.

McGriff, probably playing his best game of the year, made it 54-52 on a tip, but a pair of Oakland foul shots upped it to 56-52 with 1:20 left.

McGriff hit another short shot, and after Oakland missed a free throw, San Francisco controlled with 33 seconds, trailing by two. It seemed like the Rams would enter their fourth overtime in three games.

But it wasn't there.

Art Adams went skyward with 25 seconds left. The bucket refused to open. The ball solidly hit the front of the rim and bounced back into happy Oakland hands.

Against small Chabot last Friday the Rams, slightly flat after the Oakland loss and facing a team which had lost all 11 of its conference games, finally exploded early in the third quarter to quell any Chabot upset plans.

The Rams led 26-23 and a few minutes later were ahead, 47-27. McGriff, who probably dreams about playing teams whose tallest player stands only 6-3, hit 10 of 14 field goal attempts and led all scorers with 21 points, and rebounders with 12.

Stan Fuelscher hit 5 of 6 and scored 14, while Randy Simms, the big boardman from Balboa, scored 14 points and pulled in 11 rebounds.

California's Frosh, despite a 23-point performance by Everett Adams, handed the Rams a 62-57 defeat in a practice contest Saturday at Berkeley.

Basketballers Go Against Mateans In Season Finale

With 6-6 Bob O'Donnell leading the attack, the San Mateo Bulldogs will try for the third time to knock over the defending state champs in the season finale at 8 p.m. Friday on the Rams' court.

The Bulldogs are currently below the heap in standings, although they boast an upset victory over powerful Diablo Valley and reached the finals of the Foothill Tourney only to be dumped by the Rams.

O'Donnell leads the team in both rebounding and scoring. He has been deaf since birth but is considered one of the conference's better centers and was an All-Tourney choice at Foothill.

Frosh forward John Carmichael is reported to be the best shot on the team. He holds the Peninsula scoring record of 43 points in one game, which he set at Serra.

The record he broke was held by his present teammate Dennis France, who set the old record at Hillsdale. France is the Bulldog's No. 1 guard and also is known for his shooting and playmaking. Forward Mike Gilman, 6-3, is among the top 20 league scorers and 6-1 guard Ron Stademan is seldom far behind him in the scoring department.

In their first meeting with the Rams, San Mateo was edged, 46-41, in the last five minutes on four consecutive jumpers by Everett Adams.

Intramural Cage League Starts Action In March

Clubs, organizations and individuals who wish to enter the Associated Men Student intramural basketball competition, held in the men's gymnasium during week-day nights, can get ready for action soon.

The league will begin play early in March.

Entry petitions may be picked up at the Associated Student office, S-134, the dean of men's office, S-149, or the men's gymnasium.

Golfers Begin Preseason Play At Hamilton AFB

The college golf team will open its preseason schedule with matches against Hamilton Air Force Base on Friday at Sonoma and against San Mateo, perennial conference champion and state champion for the past two years, next Tuesday at the Peninsula college.

Returning veterans are Dennis Drucker, the number one man last year, and Jim Roman, an alternate last year. Prospects expected to bolster this year's team are Mike Selsnik, ex-Washington High star; Bruce Bair from Lincoln and James Green from Riordan, Coach Grover Klemmer stated.

In the Big Eight Conference last year the Rams finished in third place with a 4-2 record and third in the conference championships to qualify for the state championships, but illness hit the team and they were forced to withdraw.

As to the new Golden Gate Conference, Klemmer stated, "The conference should be as strong as last year with San Mateo favored to take the title. A few practice matches will give the team added experience and added improvement to get us ready for the conference matches."

Ram Nine Faces 'Blues' Saturday

City College's baseball team opens its preseason schedule against California's Blues Saturday at California, and conference action begins 12 days later when the Rams meet Chabot here.

In its infield the Rams have Joe Villavicencio, Lou Bevilacqua and Bill Gervasi returning to the squad. New talents are Ron Kunkle, All-City from Balboa, and Bob Bussanich from Galileo.

Tom Helper and Rich Farrell, a pair of promising infielders, are ticketed for more seasoning.

In the outfield, the Rams have experience in Dave Wormall, Moses Pryor and Jim Bisio. Other dependable workmen for the outfield include Walt Williams, All-City from Galileo, and Dave Hogan from Mission.

The Rams have a good catcher in Ron Giovanola, one of the 1962 phenoms from St. Ignatius, who could be the regular backstop.

Coach Sid Phelan feels that Ron Pringle from Balboa and Rich Nold of Riordan will key his starting pitching rotation.

Nold burst forth as a star in high school. He throws a good fast ball, and has poise as a well-seasoned veteran.

Modesto Meet Tests New Track Stars March 8

Ram spikers will be strengthened by a group of first year potential stars for its first outdoor meet of the season Friday, March 8, against Modesto and Stockton at Modesto, according to Coach Louis Vasquez.

Vasquez named Glen Diffenbaugh, Gene Plotkin, Ozzie Norris, Cal Nutting and Tom Gardener as among the strong throng of frosh runners. Pat Louis, Kelly Fee, Bob Hazzing, Clarence Coleman, Leo Washington and John Johnson were mentioned as a few promising men in field events.

Diffenbaugh, Plotkin and Gardener placed in the Golden Gate Invitational two weeks ago. First place in the two-mile fell to Diffenbaugh (10:38.6) while Plotkin (10:56.2) nabbed a one-point position. Gardener split a third place position with one of Foothill's runners.

Returning from the 1962 squad are Bob Hector, Lon Brantly, Pete Downing, Claude Shipp, Tim Power and Eric Nielsen. Both Hector and Brantly copped points for the Rams at the first meet.

"You'll have to realize that these performances really don't mean a whole lot, yet," Vasquez commented. "It was an indoor meet and awfully early in the season for us, to boot."

He added that even though he had high hopes for the first year men, anything could happen at this point in the game. "They just might not be able to hold their own in two-year college competition."

Weather could damage the hopes of the team, according to the head mentor. "A muddy track and head winds just don't build up the best times in the world," Vasquez smiled. "Of course, it's not going to aid the field events either."

Alex Darnes, who broke the national two-year college discus record last year with a throw of 173-4, has been graduated.

Netters In NorCal Battle

By Fred Wales

In quest of their second consecutive state championship, the Ram tennis team starts the 1963 season rolling with the Northern California Intercollegiate meet today through Saturday at the University of California campus.

The top-rated Rams will lock horns with freshmen from Stanford, California, San Jose State, San Francisco State and Sacramento State, along with Foothill, Oakland, San Mateo and other two-year college clubs.

Stanford is highly favored and UC isn't too far behind, but Ram Coach Roy Diederichsen believes that his team has the potential to top any of the two-year college entries and even scare a few of the four-year college freshmen at the same time.

First man on this powerhouse team is last year's tennis phenomenon, Bob Siska. The ex-Lincoln ace led the team through an undefeated league season, the Northern California Regionals and the state finals last year. Although upset by Ryder Getz in the finals of the singles, he teamed up with Ed Jilka to win the doubles crown.

The Rams edged Santa Monica, 7-6, for the state title.

Jilka, a former Lowell netter, is fighting to remain in the top six this year, despite the fact that he was one-half of the state doubles team a year ago.

Rich Anderson is another returning veteran of the state finals. Playing tennis for the first time in his life last year, the Lincoln High grad has advanced to fourth man on this year's team.

Another returning veteran, Jack Kerns, holds down fifth spot as he too is a state final veteran. Last year he teamed with Anderson to place sixth in the state doubles.

Second and third spots are held by two newcomers, Gordon Miller from Washington High and Bob Murio from Lowell. Miller, a two-sport athlete, was a defensive star on last year's championship soccer team. Prior to that he placed second in the All-City singles.

Last year's team was reported to have been the best since 1947, and all of the team's members have returned. Add to this two All-City newcomers and the formula is there for an almost invincible combination.

Intramural Cage League Starts Action In March

Clubs, organizations and individuals who wish to enter the Associated Men Student intramural basketball competition, held in the men's gymnasium during week-day nights, can get ready for action soon.

The league will begin play early in March.

Entry petitions may be picked up at the Associated Student office, S-134, the dean of men's office, S-149, or the men's gymnasium.

Burkhead Issues Plea For More Swimmers

Coach Roy Burkhead issued his annual plea for more swimmers today.

Only eight have signed up, four fewer than last season, and only one-third of the prescribed number of 25.

This could be an all-time low.

Burkhead's aquamen feature Jeff Higman, free style; Herm Fruchichtnick, breast stroke; Rick Grey, free style; Pete Nehrebecki, backstroke, and Mark Haskell, butterfly.

The first conference meet is against Oakland next Tuesday.

RAMBLINGS

Rams' Rally Talent Is Champ Material

By Dave Kleinberg

THEY SAY the ability to come from behind is one of the attributes of a champion.

If this is so, City College's mercurial cagers, battling for the Golden Gate Conference crown, are already some kind of champs.

The Rams have rallied from big deficits and have emerged the victor in so many close contests this year that it almost seems weird.

They've won games by two, four and five points, plus two victories in overtimes (against Foothill) and a double overtime (against Diablo Valley).

Everett (The Goose) Adams started the rally trend in the second contest when he culminated a nine-point comeback with a short jump shot to give the Rams a 39-37 win over Foothill in the last nine seconds. It was San Francisco's first lead since the opening five minutes. Randy Simms, 6-4 forward, scored from the corner to deadlock the contest just 40 seconds earlier.

San Francisco was beaten badly on the boards in the first half against Oakland, trailing by six. Oakland opened up a ten-point lead early in the second half, but the Rams, paced by center Elton McGriff, scored 12 straight points and won, 63-59.

Simms, who seems to get better with every game, led an attack that overcame a 10-point Contra Costa lead. With three minutes left and the contest deadlocked at 65-65, the Rams rolled off 10 straight to delight Coach Sid Phelan in the Rams' 75-65 win.

With San Mateo knocking within one point on several occasions, Everett Adams pushed in four straight field goals in the final five minutes in the college's 46-41 win.

The year's two most exciting contests probably took place in consecutive home games when the Rams met Foothill and Diablo Valley the second time around.

Foothill, chagrined at the first two-point loss, fought back from a three-point halftime defieit and tied the contest at 59-59 to second an overtime.

With less than a minute to play, Foothill, trailing 61-60, controlled, but Everett Adams stole the ball and scored; and after Stan Fuelscher, the quick-thinking, steady guard from Lowell, sank a foul shot, San Francisco was a 65-61 winner.

In the Rams' second meeting against Diablo Valley the regulation contest ended at 55-55. At 57-57, and with 15 seconds left, the Vikings' Sam Coston, who had hit 10 straight foul shots, missed the one-and-one.

The pass went to Ram forward Art Adams, who scored from the corner with four seconds left. Diablo Valley called time out, threw the ball into center Mickey Toner, who made a 35-foot shot at the buzzer to force a second overtime.

But Simms and Art Adams opened up in the second overtime and San Francisco's 20-point explosion was good for a 79-67 victory.

THE DESERTED SHACK, left, has undergone a somewhat ironic transition from a scene of controversy to a house of flowers. The Shack has been converted into a horticulture display center.

Shack 'Reopens' With Floral Display

Closed by gambling, struck by vandalism, and a bitter scene of controversy, the Shack is now a display room for flowers.

The building, open for three semesters (nearly) to students here, was a supplement to the cafeteria which was and is presently suffering from overcrowding. Candy and pop machines had been placed in the Shack, and plans included installation of a jukebox.

The first week of December saw the Shack closed to students, because a number of transient students were discovered gambling there in direct opposition to State Board of Education rules which forbid gambling on California campuses.

Prior to Christmas vacation, Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman announced that the Shack was once again open to students. However, during the vacation vandals broke in and ransacked the vending machines. The Shack was then closed and vending machines removed.

Presently serving as an exhibition room for horticulture students, the Shack is now available for club or student meetings or discussions, providing sufficient faculty supervision is present, Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, said.

As an exhibition room, the Shack now alleviates the cramped temporary quarters of the horticulture center.

Ground-breaking ceremonies will soon be held for the new horticulture center, which will be built in the large dirt parking area adjacent to Judson avenue.

Architect for the proposed center is Alex Woolworth, a former horticulture student here and presently a supervisor for the California Division of Highways.

Big Skate Is Stopped

Criminology Classes Receive Certification For Graduates By California Peace Officers

City College's criminology department was notified on February 6 that it had received certification by the Commission of Peace Officers' Standards and Training.

According to Thomas Cain, Campus Police chief, the commission's certification means that a graduate in criminology from City College will no longer be required to take part in the usual eight to 12 weeks of training required when joining a police force.

"Graduates will be able to be on the job in only one or two days after signing up," Cain said.

The college, one of the six so honored, was notified in a letter from the commission to Fred Fitzgerald, criminology department instructor.

Previously, the certification had been given only to four-year colleges.

Also, again this semester the college police force was granted a $500 scholarship, which will be awarded to deserving criminology students shortly after the first midterm period.

Two $50 Prizes Offered For Best College Hymn

Two merchandise orders of $50 each will be awarded to the students who write the best lyrics and melody, respectively, for a new college Alma Mater.

Student Council originated the idea, and the Council of Organizations, Recreation Association and Pep Band are each contributing part of the prize money.

A first contest will be held to select the best lyrics, and a second contest will be held to find the best melody for the lyrics.

Other prizes include a faculty parking permit and "open stack" privileges in the library.

Lyric entries submitted should be typed, double spaced on one side of an 8½ by 11 inch sheet of paper. Deadline for this entry is Friday, March 22. Gerald Mendes, sophomore member of council, said.

Additional information and entry forms can be obtained in Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman's office, S-148.

Judges for the first (lyrics) competition are Samuel Duff, English instructor; Catherine Connolly, English instructor and adviser to Forum magazine, and Galen Marshall, music instructor.

IFC Blood Drive Begins April 4

The college's annual blood drive, sponsored by the Inter-Fraternity Council, is scheduled for April 4 and 5 of this semester, Pete Montonen, IFC publicity chairman, announced last week.

Blood collected by the drive will be donated to the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank in the name of the donor, Montonen said.

Other colleges have similar drives, he added, but City College contributes more than any other institution on the Pacific Coast.

Last year the blood bank received 515 donations from the college, but the IFC hopes for an even better turnout this time.

IFC bases its hopes on statistics. In each consecutive drive, participation has been greater.

"We hope this year will be no different," Montonen said, "and we hope to set a record that everybody can be proud of."

Campus Patrolmen To Take Oath Soon

At the end of the first midterm period, a number of campus patrolmen will have passed a rigid six-week probation period and will be sworn in by an official of the San Francisco Police Department, Campus Police Chief Thomas Cain disclosed today.

Qualifications for the job of policeman include good health, a C average, height of 5-8, sophomore standing, age around 20, completion of the designated courses in criminology and the ability to pass a severe screening of which high standards are the key.

Campus police undergo a daily schedule which includes three hours of class and four hours of patrol.

Their duties cover the enforcement of parking regulations, supervision of dances, sports events and other college activities, and the direction of traffic.

The force includes Chief Cain and Deputy Chief Albert Mendoza; Jerry Shirinian, first sergeant; Rich Phillips, traffic sergeant, and 11 active patrolmen.

David Abel To Perform Here Friday

Washington Violinist's Program To Include Mozart And Ravel

By Jean Zeidler

EMINENT DAVID ABEL performs here during College Hour.

David Abel, eminent San Francisco violinist, will give a recital during College Hour Friday in the campus theater, Meyer Cahn, music instructor here, announced last week.

In addition to having been featured soloist in a national tour with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Stanislaw Skrowaczewski, Abel has been guest artist with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

Abel has also performed with orchestras in Boston, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Denver, Oklahoma City, Baltimore, Chicago and Honolulu.

At his recital here, his program will include Mozart's Sonata in B flat major and Ravel's Tzigane. Nathan Swartz will accompany.

Born in Washington state, Abel now lives in San Francisco. He received his violin training under Naoum Blinder, eminent violinist and concert-master of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

In San Francisco he made his professional debut at 14 with the Symphony Orchestra.

Now in his mid-twenties, Abel is widely known to radio and television audiences through appearances both on the East and West Coasts of the United States and Canada.

Critics have hailed him as "a young master of musical craft," "a violinist of tremendous artistry," and "first and foremost a musician."

After a recent recital in New York City The New York Herald Tribune reported, "Mr. Abel played in a suave, musicianly manner. His tone is warm and his technique extraordinary."

Equipped with two magnificent violins, one a rare 1753 Guadagnini valued at $10,000, and the other a 1734 Guarnerius valued at $25,000, Abel, with dedicated musicianship, rose to the top rank of young violinists.

Other programs in this semester's concert series are Robinne Comissiona dance recital March 22, Chamber Music Trio April 19, and the California String Quartet April 26.

Student programs include a Choral Concert May 10, Spring Choral Concert May 14, Spring Instrumental Concert May 24 and the Spring Concert May 28.

Enrollment Sets Spring Record

Figures released by Registrar Mary Jane Learnard show that enrollment has dropped more than 300 from last fall's record. This drop is characteristic of spring semester registration, Miss Learnard said.

Although below the college high mark, this semester stands as the record for spring enrollment. It eclipses the mark of 7767 set in Spring 1962.

A total of 6825 day students is enrolled as compared with last fall's 6900. In addition to this, 1532 students are registered for night classes. This brings the total to 8157, substantially below last semester's record 8500 plus.

The ratio of men to women students remains basically the same as that of last semester. Men led by approximately a two to one ratio. Men students enrolled number 4270 as compared with 2355 coeds.

Until Fall 1961 men outnumbered women by three to one. Development of technical programs in nursing, medical and dental assisting has marked the difference.

The only decrease this spring, compared with Spring 1962, is in the number enrolled in night classes.

College Standard Is Stringent On Disqualified

A fewer number of students, disqualified at San Francisco State and other Bay Area educational institutions, are transfering to City College this semester, John Brady, coordinator of student welfare, reported recently.

"I don't know the reason," Brady said. "Maybe the students are discovering that we have standards of our own to be upheld."

To illustrate these standards, he pointed out that in the spring semester of 1962, 761 persons received disqualification notices from the college. These were students who posted a grade point average of less than 1.5.

Of these 761 students, 477 were readmitted, provided that they adhered to certain conditions. One of these conditions was that they were to bring their grade point average up to 2.0, or "C" average.

According to Brady, two-thirds of the 477 students met the requirements and were taken off the probation list. Several became honor students.

"We feel that this two-thirds makes the effort of the re-admissions board worthwhile," he said.

Brady also cautioned that the figures did not mean that the college denied 284 students re-admission. Some of the students were already on probation when they received their disqualification notices, and others just failed to apply for re-admission.

Associated Student Card Sales Hit 1600

A total of 1600 Associated Student cards, as of the third week of this semester, has been sold, Alan Poletti, AS card sales chairman, announced last week.

As is customary, the AS card salesmen, numbering 20 this semester, strive toward being the top salesman. Bill May, last semester's AS president, is the top salesman as of February 28, Poletti reported.

Last year the blood bank received 515 donations from the college, but the IFC hopes for an even better turnout this time.

IFC bases its hopes on statistics. In each consecutive drive, participation has been greater.

"We hope this year will be no different," Montonen said, "and we hope to set a record that everybody can be proud of."

The AS cards sales center near the silver pole in Science Hall was scheduled to be moved to the student bank in Smith Hall last Monday.

Dave Otey, former AS card sales chairman, stated that aside from the fact that money is allocated to general campus use, students "should take serious note of the special and individual advantages contained in the purchasing of an AS card."

Posing the question of how far the dollar goes today, Otey referred to students purchasing AS cards to be eligible for campus parking permits.

It has been calculated that were the college to charge a fee of 25 cents per day for parking, as do many Bay Area colleges, students would pay $20 a semester for this facility.

Other special advantages include social events and entertainment in the form of at least two dances, two drama productions and the concert-lecture series.

Discount lists, Otey said, deserve special attention and are offered to students ranging from auto supplies to cleaning.

In addition to the present advantages, one new attraction has been offered this semester. Hal Monroe, district manager of the Herbert Rosener Company of Motion Picture Theaters, offered student reductions.

In a letter to the administration Monroe stated, "We at the Larkin, New Clay and Music Hall theaters, San Francisco, together with the Berkeley theater in Berkeley are initiating a new policy pertaining to students of Bay Area schools.

"Under our plan, and upon presentation of a student card, the student will be allowed to purchase a Student Privilege Card at the cost of 50 cents.

"All admissions thereafter, upon presentation of his or her Privilege Card, will be $1 instead of $1.40."

BILL MAY, last fall's AS president, pulled a switch and is this semester's top AS card salesman.

Campus Police Receive, Deserve Praise For 'A Job Well Done'

THE COMMISSION on Peace Officer Standards and Training recently presented full certification to the college's criminology department for its superior law enforcement program.

"This certification," explained Louis G. Conlan, college president, "serves to assure cities and counties and other agencies employing police and security personnel that the City College of San Francisco police training course meets the requirements established in the Peace Officer Standards and Training Curriculum of the Commission."

Morever, the commission's executive officer paid special tribute to Fred Fitzgerald for his outstanding work as head of the college's criminology department.

The Guardsman in turn pays special tribute to Tom Cain, Campus Police chief, and the officers under him and proudly presents to them another certificate called The Aid to Poor Souls Certificate.

The "poor souls" appellation pertains to the unfortunate recipients of parking citations. They are unfortunate because it is hardly conceivable that any intelligent person would risk receiving a citation when obeying parking regulations is so easily accomplished.

Consequently, we contend that these law violators are merely poor souls confused by a misguided sense of cooperation. And the Campus Police force is to be heartily congratulated for aiding these poor, pitiful, misguided souls.

Thus, the second certification serves to assure students and faculty that despite the poor souls, the Campus Police department meets the requirements hereby established in this newly created certificate—the requirement of maintaining an orderly, well coordinated campus.

Meeting this requirement is no mean task, but nevertheless one accomplished by the campus policeman, who first aids the souls who drive too fast; then he aids the ones who drive too slowly. Second, he aids the souls who park in the wrong parking lot, then the ones who park in the right parking lot when they should park in the left one. Finally, he supervises campus sports and social activities, and again he must be watchful of the poor souls. In short, he performs a necessary and vital service for the college.

Without his services traffic congestion, no doubt, would equal the cafeteria congestion. Without him, the rule could well be Survival Of The Fastest—the fastest drivers speeding into a campus parking lot, the slow ones creeping along Ocean avenue, searching vainly for a parking space. The strong go to class; the weak go to Park Emergency Hospital. And the poor souls go to the devil.

However, such isn't the case now and never will be as long as men like Fitzgerald, Cain, their officers and predecessors continue to work at the college.

The Aid to Poor Souls Certificate per se is nonexistent, but it is The Guardsman's way of saying, "Young gendarmes, a job well done." This statement is well verified by the certificate from the Commission of Peace Officer Standards and Training.

Intercollegiate 7 — Lawrence Of Arabia—A Stroke Of Genius

Today's column is by Boyd Burtnett

DESCRIBED as an Arabian horse opera, a masterpiece, a beautiful travelogue, and a stroke of genius, Lawrence Of Arabia has received ten Academy Award nominations.

The nominations are for best actor, best supporting actor, best direction, best cinematography, best musical score, best art direction (color), best film editing, best sound recording and best screenplay.

The picture tells of 20 months in the life of T. E. Lawrence, 20 months in which he was elevated to such a stature that he challenged the position of Lord Nelson as Britain's national hero.

Do not, however, go to the theater expecting to see a blond hero whose strength is of ten because his heart is pure. On the contrary, what will be seen is an unbiased portrait of a many-sided man.

It is a story of the man Lawrence, not his actions. He is portrayed as an idealist, strategist, sadist, possible masochist and an exhibitionist. The screenplay looks into the very depths of his soul.

Peter O'Toole does an excellent job of playing T. E. Lawrence. O'Toole is a newcomer to the screen and yet this one part has propelled him into the position of the most wanted actor in the motion picture industry today.

As the story begins, World War I is in progress. Most of the world is concerned only with the fighting in France, but Britain is engaged in a dirty little war with an ally of the Kaiser's, Turkey. The Turkish Ottoman Empire encompasses Arabia.

Lawrence is a map-making officer in Arabia who has the queer habit of extinguishing matches with his bare fingers.

Because of his knowledge of Arabic and his previous experience with the Arabs before the war as an archeologist, he is sent out into the desert to "survey the situation, nothing more."

Lawrence surveys the situation and leads the Arabs in open revolt against the Ottoman Empire. He is assisted there by three Arab chieftains who are played by Anthony Quinn, Alex Guinness and newcomer Omar Sharif.

As soon as the first desert scenes are revealed, it becomes apparent that the Academy Award for the best color cinematography has been cinched. There has never been anything to compare with it on a motion picture screen.

But the picture has its bad sides, also. It is long, and in some spots the story is not very fast moving. It is at times like these that one feels the extra money for a softer seat was necessary.

Most people agree that the production is too long, but nobody can offer any suggestions as to where cutting might take place. As far as it can be ascertained, it seems as though every scene is necessary in the overall telling of the story.

Where the El Rey theater now stands was once the site of a horse racing track. A street still rounds the theater which encompasses the same one mile distance that once clattered to the sounds of horsey-hoofs.

Would You Be Capable Of Enduring A 50-Mile Hike?

By Kent Mitchell and John Miller

Kathleen Kidd, freshman:
I couldn't complete the 50-mile hike because I haven't conditioned myself for it and, furthermore, I am not the "walking type." I think the concept is good, but those who attempt the walk should condition themselves somewhat first. It would be better to walk a mile a day for 50 days.

KATHLEEN KIDD
"It would be better to walk a mile a day for 50 days."

Barbara Barclay, freshman:
Yes, I think I could just for the heck of it. It would be something new and different to do, and would be fun with a large group of kids. At any rate it would be a trying experience and I'm sure I'd get a big kick out of trying it.

Marisa Ferrau, freshman:
It all depends on the immediate destination. If the hike were to wind up at an interesting locale, I probably could. In other words, there would have to be something to look forward to. However, there would have to be no set time limit and sufficient provisions.

Richard Dumas, sophomore:
Maybe I could, but I doubt if I'd ever try. It's too much of a waste of time, and there are too many better things to do. Life is too short to fill it with blisters. The aftermath of such an ordeal would be too much to bear. I guess I'm just plain lazy.

Charlene Richter, freshman:
If I were accompanied by a lot of friends, I imagine I could finish. It would probably take several days, but I would make it. However, walking is only one aspect of fitness; therefore, completion of a 50-mile hike does not prove physical ability.

Fred Tapley, freshman:
I have already attempted and completed about 40 miles. I was too tired and scared to complete the last 10 miles. Several cars just missed me, and I would never attempt it again. I now realize how worthless it is and would not suggest that anyone try it.

Maryanne Ducommun, freshman:
Yes, I think I could. However, I see no point to it, because it doesn't prove anything. These hikers think they're achieving something, yet all they get out of it are blisters and callouses; at least, that's what I hear. I don't think I want to attempt it.

Janice Meilach, freshman:
No, I don't think I'd ever finish, but I wish I could. I guess I'm getting weak in my old age. Actually, I think it's silly that all these people are attempting it. If they want to walk 50 miles that's fine; however, it shouldn't be so publicized.

College May Go International

Will Jai Alai, Mah Jongg Take Over Campus Sports?

By Dick Bullard

Is the sports program at this and other colleges suffering from lack of foresight in coming abreast of the times?

Is football becoming a farce? Is basketball becoming a game for giants only? Is badminton going to the birds?

These questions are pressing on the minds of sports-minded persons.

True, a few individuals are prominent in the global sports world, such as Sam Schwartz, renowned Jai Alai master now living in Tierra Del Fuego, and Sean Martinez, highly respected Mah Jongg player of Seymore, Indiana. These are but a few in our great number of sports aficionados.

What of the thousands who will grow to maturity and assume positions of responsibility in government, without any knowledge of kayak racing, dog sledding and llama riding?

There is some talk going around about introducing a few of the more familiar foreign sports to the athletic programs of U. S. colleges and universities. Bullfighting and English pubstyle dart throwing are among the favored choices at present.

In accordance with this pressing problem, a contest is currently being considered to determine the possibilities of introducing some of these foreign sports as a program to the college. Those interested in furthering the scope of the college in this endeavor are invited to drop off their choice of sport, written on an entry blank, with any member of the judging staff. The judges may be readily identified by the black armband with a gold Maltese Cross they will be wearing.

The rules are simple. Merely write your entry on the back of any denomination of U. S. currency. Any authentic foreign sport is acceptable. Entries will be judged on originality—and size of denomination.

The contest will be run on a weekly basis throughout the semester. The winners will receive, for their efforts, one coffee bean.

At semester's end, the bean-holders will vie for the grand prize. Each must submit an essay entitled, How I Utilized My Coffee Bean.

The author of the best essay will receive a week in beautiful Acapulco. The lucky soul will be furnished with a Mexican road map and a slightly used pair of roller skates. "Getting there is half the fun."

'Boys Will Be Boys'

Freshmen Run For Aspirins; Sophomores Run For Coeds

As a collegian progresses in age, he tends to increase his knowledge and form different impressions of things—at least that's what was implied in Robert Souter's Boys Will Be Boys (Esquire, 1939).

Does the Souter theory have basis almost a quarter century later? Well, students may judge for themselves in the following analysis of an average (?) freshman and sophomore here.

Although all entries are hypothetical, The Guardsman is confident that similar results would be noted in actual interviews.

Freshman

- Sue is a girl next door.
- An automobile is a luxury.
- Girls are a headache to an aspiring college student.
- Dates are fun after homework.
- Fraternity life is an extra curricular activity.
- Going to college is important in order to succeed later in life.
- Class-breaks are useful as study purposes.
- Instructors are here to teach students and guide them in the right direction.
- Father is a young man's best friend.
- Little brother is still young; he'll learn.

Sophomore

- Sue is a woman.
- A car is a necessity.
- Women are a headache worth having.
- Dates are fun at anytime.
- Fraternity life is a vital segment of college.
- Going to college is important in order to hold back the draft.
- Class-breaks are useful times to talk with friends.
- Answer censored – student is completing his eighth semester here.
- Father is the keeper of the family car and finances.
- That kid is too smart for his own good.

It might be interesting if freshmen here now would give their own opinions to each category in the above analysis and then, near the end of their college life, look back and see if their answers are the same—or even similar.

College life could make quite a difference. As Edwin Chapin, American clergyman-author, once wrote: "Ask not if a man has been through college but if college has been through the man."

Avant Guardsman!

IN THE GENERAL category of "Everybody - Should - Know - This-One," a few remarkably unusual anecdotes have made their appearance out of nowhere and are quite worthy of mention.

The first one is the number of men composing the smallest army in the world. The Republic of San Marino in Italy has only 11 men in its army, and, as one can see, no United Nations police action is needed there.

Another one, which has thrilled this columnist's French ancestry, is that the most expensive spiritueux is La Grande Fine Champagne Arbellot, presently on sale in Paris for 499 F ($144), of vintage 1794 . . . Even the Nine Worthies would bless this—no doubt—superior nectar.

For the benefit of erudite readers, the Nine Worthies was a group of illustrious men widely praised in medieval times. There were three Gentiles (Hector, Alexander the Great and Julius Caesar), three Hebrews (Joshua, David and Judas Maccabeus), and three Christians (King Arthur, Charlemagne and Godfrey of Bouillon).

Speaking of figures, that is, dates and prices, and not women's dimensions, another interesting fact is the Aztec system of numbers and measurement. The number one (1) was represented by a finger, 20 by a flag, 400 by hair and 8000 by a pouch.

Last semester, Ralph Sutton, a gifted jazz pianist (now playing at Eddie Condon's in New York City), performed here during College Hour, and jazz never had so many aficionados assaulting the theater where Sutton was appearing.

The same stampede was going on at the Blackhawk last month, where John "Dizzy" Gillespie was blowing each evening in his inimitable, unique style, and waitresses, clad in Dizzy's sweatshirts, distributed Dizzy-For-President buttons.

Well, for those funky cats, we digged two names, which should be quite familiar to them: Hugues Panassie and Andre Hodeir. Both men are French and considered two of the best contemporary jazz critics, ranking with Nat Hentoff, Leonard Feather, Ira Gitler and Ralph Gleason.

The last item for today deals with the weather: the coldest temperature ever recorded. The record low of -127°F was recorded at the Russian Antarctic outpost of Vostock on August 24, 1960.

The Avant Guardsman believes it to be a true statement from the Soviets, since one of its present reporters spent eight months in the Antarctic with the U. S. Naval Facility at McMurdo Sound.

Temperatures in the summer months of September to February were as low as -45°F, as it was on the morning he first set foot on the ice runway in September. By January, the thermometer rose to as much as 30°F, which makes it a balmy Riviera there, and quite a cool one here.

Welcome to San Francisco!!!

No Skates

Section 100 Foils '50-Mile Attempt

By David Kleinberg

I roller skated 50 feet in 20 seconds.

It started at 1 p.m. last Wednesday when I began my publicized attempt at a 50-mile skate in 20 hours from the college courtyard.

It came to a sudden and ignominious halt—only 20 seconds and 50 feet later.

All it took was section 100 of the San Francisco police code.

". . . roller skates shall be restricted on the sidewalk and in the streets of business districts."

Who would ever think there would be laws covering roller skates? Who would ever know about the law?

The Campus Police, that's who.

After two weeks preparation (one quart of orange juice, one quart of lemonade, four sandwiches and medical supplies were ready to go), the 49-mile scenic route test was terminated.

In practice, I had lapped the Laguna Honda schoolyard 100 times, an equivalent of more than 10 miles. I believe I could have made the 50 miles.

I don't believe there are any pogo stick laws.

Sadako Hino, Barbara Shattuck Win $100 Checks From Bank Of America

This year's Bank of America's business awards, based on scholarship, participation and leadership, were won last week by City College students Barbara Shattuck and Sadako Hino.

Miss Shattuck is a secretary major, and accounting is Miss Hino's field of study. Both coeds have maintained a minimum 3-point grade average.

The two women will join other award winners from Northern California, their parents and faculty representatives at an awards banquet to be held Thursday, Mareh 21, at the St. Francis Hotel.

Each year the Bank of America honors two outstanding students here majoring in business administration, banking, secretarial or clerical programs with checks of $100.

To win these awards, students must have completed a minimum of 24 units with a grade point average among the highest within their respective occupational field, according to provisions of the award committee.

They must also have participated successfully and shown effective leadership in various campus organizations. Special attention is paid to their activities concerning the business department organizations.

Winners are also expected to possess a personality appropriate to his occupational choice, especially the ability to get along with others, Dean Mary Golding explained.

Last year's winners were Gail Margolin, a secretarial major, and Alice Iyama, an accounting major.

The winners were chosen by the college's business faculty selection committee, composed of Harry Frustuck, Ruth Gavin, George Stewart, Ed Larson, Anka Ohman, Coordinator Louis Batmale and Dean Golding.

Scottish Rite To Award 4 Grants

The California Scottish Rite Foundation is offering four $150 to $200 scholarships to qualifying students this semester, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced last week.

Friday is the deadline for submitting applications, she said.

The foundation initiated the award of grants last semester by offering two grants and actually giving three.

Students who are United States citizens, graduates of San Francisco public high schools and who have limited financial resources are eligible.

Total family income, parents' vocational positions, and number of dependents determine the student's financial situation, Dean Golding explained, adding that applicants must have had superior grades in high school along with satisfactory results on the college entrance examination.

Additional information concerning requirements can be obtained in Dean Golding's office along with forms.

"We already have 12 applicants and we would like more," Dean Golding said, adding that a student is allowed to apply more than once even though he may have already been chosen for the grant.

Last semester's winners were Lawrence Attinger, Robert Bachman and Alan Poletti.

SF Policewoman Speaks At Newman Club Friday

By Francine Dubonnet

Genevieve Bayruther, policewoman with the fraud detail of the San Francisco Police Department, will be the guest speaker for the Newman Club Friday during College Hour in S-204, according to Burt Lauray, president of the club.

Miss Bayruther will discuss her experiences with the fraud detail, a topic chosen by the club. Sex and alcoholism among college students will also be points discussed in Miss Bayruther's speech.

Miss Bayruther has been on the police force 14 years, and has won one award for bravery.

A question and answer period will follow the speech.

A spring dance will be held Friday at 9 p.m. at St. Emydius' Parish Hall to which all students are welcome, Lauray said.

The International Relations Club plans to devote one College Hour each month to a discussion of a specific country. Foods, movies, displays and speakers representing the chosen country will be featured.

The club's newly elected officers are Geoffry Pindar, president; Faud Chahouia, vice president; Dave Lewis, treasurer; Olivia Lopez, secretary, and Clemencia Fajardo, historian.

Meeting Friday during College Hours in C-114, Chess Club members participate in the one-armed sport for brainy kinesthetics.

Presiding for the third consecutive semester, Oliver Shank explained that the club's aim is to promote and encourage chess playing.

Members are justly proud of freshman Roy Hoppe, who is of professional calibre and holds a Master's rating, which is only two steps below Grand Master.

Nominations Close For Council Seats

Nominations were closed for the offices of Sophomore and Freshman Class representatives to Student Council at last Thursday's council meeting.

The candidates for sophomore representative are Gwen Franklin, Rich Thomas and Mimi Travis. The candidates for freshman representative are Carol Alfonso and Judi Beverly. Voting for these offices will take place at council meeting tomorrow.

Council approved Sophomore Class President Mike Nevin's list of officers of the Sophomore Class. They are Kendra Stroeter, vice president; Bill Vandevort, treasurer, and Vince Contreras, publicity coordinator.

In other business, council allocated an additional $25 for the Sophomore Ball, since the rental rates for the room have increased. The ball is scheduled to be held at the Colonial Room at the St. Francis Hotel Friday, May 24.

Associated Student President Bill Silver appointed Bill May as Parliamentarian for this semester.

After the meeting there was a general discussion on the possibility of having College Hour moved to Thursdays from 11 a.m. to 12 noon next semester.

Some felt this move would enable more students to participate as no classes would be scheduled for this time.

Griffin's Illness Postpones Drama

Because of the unexpected illness of Michael Griffin, drama director, Bus Stop has been scheduled to replace Shakespeare's King John as the first production of the spring season, opening Friday, March 29, according to Robert Lasley, production director.

Griffin was admitted to the hospital on February 26 because of extreme nervous exhaustion. According to Lasley, he will remain there two weeks.

The cast is slated to give a free show at College Hour before opening night. The date and the scene to be performed from Bus Stop are not yet determined.

"This doesn't really delay King John," Lasley also stated, "but merely gives us the much needed time to get everything in the costume and sets department ready."

Tentative date for the Shakespearean production is now set for May 24. Admission to each play will be $1 without Associated Student card and free to cardholders.

Casting for both Bus Stop and King John was completed last month.

Student Council Passes Spring Budget Totaling $36,696.74

A final operating budget for the spring semester was passed in January by Student Council which allocates a total of $36,696.74 for Associated Student activities.

A slight increase was noted between the Spring 1962 and the Spring 1963 budgets. The Spring 1962 budget amounted to $34,728.23 and the increase over such a period of time is due to the growing enrollment at the college, according to Finance Chairman Phyllis Webb's report.

It can be seen that in the coeducational activities division of the budget, increase is consistent in almost all activities. The division of the budget covering women's activities follows much the same pattern.

In men's activites, especially the area covering sports, an increase is also shown.

The baseball budget, which previously stood at $1622.54, received an allocation of $2673.60.

Within the general budget area an increase was allocated to KCSF Broadcasters. The Spring 1962 allocation to the Broadcasters was $128.50, but this semester an amount of $474.50 was granted.

The division of the budget encompassing student-faculty relations also had a marked increase, with $622 having been allocated in Spring 1962, and $1187 allocated in the Spring 1963 budget.

The Campus Police also had an increase in allocation to their budget for this semester.

Student Government

AS Constitution Directs Student Leaders' Policy

(Editor's note: The following article, and those subsequent to this series, are published in an attempt to familiarize students with, and interest them in, the college's student government organization.)

By Herm Kligerman

A constitution is an integral part of any governmental system and so it is at the college, where student leaders determine policy based on Associated Student Constitution.

It encompasses ten specific sections concerned with every aspect of government besides enumerating duties of Student Council and the President's Cabinet members, elected or appointed.

The document begins by citing the name of the association as the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco, giving full privileges of the association to all AS members.

The constitution also includes provisions for scheduling elections and cites requirements for eligibility in AS government offices.

In regard to amendments, the document cites two ways in which an amendment can be sought.

The proposed amendment may be signed by 100 AS members and submitted to the Election Commissioner for placement on the ballot, or it may be brought before council, where a two thirds majority is needed to ratify it.

Proposed amendments, the constitution adds, shall be published in The Guardsman and/or placed at prominent locations on campus at least one week prior to the actual election.

The constitution even goes as far as to determine eligibility of athletes to receive awards in their respective sports.

The present document has been in operation since 1947. A special constitutional revision election was held in the fall of 1946.

A decade later, voters approved several other amendments which, among other things, gave the AS President veto power.

Just last semester, Student Council was voted the power to approve budget requests from campus organizations for the succeeding semester.

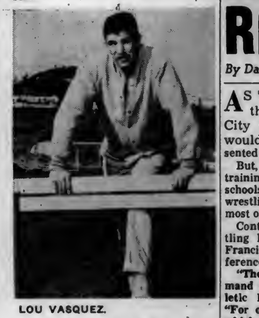
Before this amendment went into effect, council considered budgets at the beginning of each new semester, thus slowing down the business of campus groups.

Last semester in a special election, AS members voted that they alone should have the privilege of voting in general elections.

For those who wish a copy, the Constitution is available in the AS office, S-134.

Next week: How a motion comes before council.

Friday Last Day To File Petition For Graduation



The final day for students here to file petitions to graduate this semester is Friday, according to Mary Jane Learnard, college registrar. Forms are available in S-115.

Spikers Journey To Modesto For Three-Way Meet

With three weeks of rest and solid practice behind them, Ram trackmen head for Modesto Friday to test their early season strength in a triple meet with Stockton and Modesto Colleges.

The San Francisco team as a whole will be unproven up to this meet. Most of the unit will be composed of first year men with broad jumper Lon Brantley the core of this year's returnees. Brantley reached 24-1 last year, within seven inches of the Ram record.

"An interesting fact to note," coach Lou Vasquez commented, "is that Brantley jumped 23-2 in a nonscheduled, all-comers meet held on the Peninsula over Washington's Birthday holiday." The head mentor believes that Brantley shows signs of turning in better broad jump footage this season.

LOU VASQUEZ.

This meet will be a buildup to the Golden Gate Relays, which will be held in Kezar stadium Saturday, March 16. It will bring together track teams in the of the Golden Gate Conference for the first time.

According to Vasquez, College of San Mateo and Foothill Colleges will be the two strong teams. In the past two years San Francisco has taken top honors, but these relays were in competition with other colleges.

AMS Intramural Entries Due Friday

Intramural hoopsters should file their petitions no later than Friday for the Associated Men Student-sponsored intramural basketball tournament.

Petitions may be acquired at the silver pole, in Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S-148, or in the Associated Student office, S-134.

Competition will start next Tuesday and Wednesday in the women's gymnasium with games scheduled at 7:15 and 8:15 p.m., respectively. Appearing on Tuesday nights will be fraternity teams, and on Wednesday nights independent teams.

The following rules apply: members must have an Associated Student card; no one can be a member of the junior varsity or varsity basketball teams; no one can participate if he has earned a Block SF.

Teams must have at least five players on the court five minutes prior to game time.

The schedule and times will be posted next Monday in the men's gymnasium, AMS President John Theilen said.

Golf Team To Begin League Play March 16

Ram golfers tee off against an unknown quality when they meet the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs Friday at Santa Rosa in a practice match.

Intersquad matches have produced the following prospective starting lineup: Dennis Drucker, Earl Stewart, Mike Selsnik, Jim Roman and Bruce Bair.

The Rams meet always tough Oakland March 16 at Harding Park in the first Golden Gate Conference match.

Ram Nine Opens Against SF State Frosh Here Today

The Ram baseball nine opens its 1963 home campaign here against San Francisco State Frosh at 3 p.m. today.

Without any injuries to slow up the team, this could prove to be a banner year for the diamondmen, according to coach Sid Phelan. Rich Nold, graduate of Riordan, has been named as the key catcher for the unit. "Nold's high school record shows much potential," Phelan commented.

The Rams will have a short preseason schedule before they play their first league game here against Chabot College. Last year, while playing in a different league, City College's squad finished in last place with a 3-11 record. The squad was hampered by weak pitching and a lack of strong hitters.

Saturday, former Rams will be on hand to try their ability against the 1963 squad. This will be one of the few appearances made by the graduates, and a list of the alumni to be present is not available yet, according to Phelan.

Ron Kunkle and Bob Bussanich were mentioned by the head mentor as outstanding prospects. Kunkle copped a position on the All-City high school squad, and Bussanich had an outstanding high school career as a first baseman.

Ram Netters Begin Title Quest Against San Jose

BOB SISKA, winner of the Big Eight and Northern California tennis championships, returns for his second season. He won the state doubles title last year with Ed Jilka.

By Fred Wales

After merely whetting its thirst for another title with two practice victories, the defending state champion Ram tennis team will attempt to quench that thirst with a win in its conference opener against San Jose at 2:30 p.m. Friday on the Golden Gate Park courts.

It will be the first meeting of the two teams in league action. Last year San Jose placed third in the Coast Conference while the Rams were amassing a 7-0 record along with the conference, regional and state title in the now defunct Big Eight.

Although Ram coach Roy Diederichsen doesn't know too much about the San Jose team, he still believes "the Rams shouldn't lose a set."

Leading the attack against San Jose will be number one man Bob Siska, with Bob Murio number 2, Rick Anderson number 3, Gordon Miller number 4, Jack Kern number 5, and either Ed Jilka or Yet Louie number 6.

Since last week there has been a reshuffle in the top six. Newcomer Murio moved from number 3 man to number 2, followed closely up the ladder by Anderson, who moved from number 5 spot to number 3. All these moves came at the expense of former Washington High ace Miller, who fell from number 2 to number 4.

When coach Diederichsen was asked about the drop, he replied, "It's all rather temporary because of the balance of the team. They're all good, and the placings depend on how well they perform."

Adding to the confusion of the standings will be newcomer Yet Louie. Louie is a five-year Army man who took up tennis while stationed in the Philippines. By the time he completed his duty, he had captured the doubles crown of the Pacific Area for the Air Force along with the interservice championship in singles. Louie is a local man who was graduated from Galileo High School.

Preceding the San Jose City College meet, the Rams will match shots with the San Jose State Spartans at 3 p.m. Thursday in Golden Gate Park.

Because of the strength of this year's team and the record of last year's club, the Student Council has alloted funds for a swing down south during the Easter vacation.

Leaving here at 7 a.m. Wednesday, April 10, the team will travel to San Luis Obispo to take on California Polytechnic. The team will then proceed south to collide with last year's second-place team, Santa Monica. The Rams will face their toughest test when they meet the University of Southern California freshman team and possibly the varsity.

Rams Tie For League Title

RAMBLINGS

Conference To Lack A Wrestling Team—Us

By Dave Kleinberg

AS THE LARGEST college in the Golden Gate Conference, City College of San Francisco would be expected to be represented in every sport.

But, because of lack of facilities and training in the San Francisco high schools, City College does not have a wrestling or water polo program, as do most of the colleges in the conference.

Contra Costa will enter the wrestling league next year, leaving San Francisco the only college in the conference not represented in that sport.

"There hasn't been too much demand for a wrestling program," Athletic Director John Gaddy offered. "For one thing, the season overlaps, which means we would have to put another full-time man on it.

"We have a few wrestlers in the school, but otherwise there is no experience. San Francisco is one of the few school areas that does not teach wrestling."

The other sport is water polo, where the situation is even more bleak.

For many months, the need for more pools in San Francisco has been urgently expressed.

To begin a water polo program, City College would need its own pool. Water polo would have to be added to high school curriculum.

The insufficient number of pools in San Francisco has also injured the swimming program. The problem is most grave this year.

Coach Roy Burkhead cannot even enter athletes in some events because he does not have enough men to fill each spot.

The turnout for this year's squad was almost nothing. Up to one week ago, only eight had signed up. If something doesn't improve, City College might have to drop from competition.

* * *

CAESAR PINA and Garry DeLong, Ram soccer stars, were belatedly honored by making the 1962 All-American two-year college soccer team.

DeLong, who led the Rams to their fourth straight title in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, received the award for the second straight year.

* *

LARRY GADDY, son of Athletic Director Jack Gaddy, is making his own mark in the sports world. Young Gaddy, a senior at Drake High, was named Marin Athletic League player-of-the-week after a 31-point performance.

His coach describes him as "a tremendous defensive player" who blocks about six shots per game and averages about 10 rebounds.

Cabrillo College To Host Modern Dance Symposium

A modern dance symposium will be held from 9 a.m. to 12 noon Saturday at Cabrillo College gymnasium, to be followed by a Stanford "Orchesis" concert at 1 p.m.

Students interested in attending this event must make arrangements with Lene Johnson in the women's gymnasium this week.

Inga Weiss-Lepnis, instructor of modern dance at Stanford University, will give a master lesson at the symposium, and the concert to follow will be held in the Little Theater there.

Associated Student cardholders can join the Recreation Association sports' clubs, which meet at 3 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, by signing lists in the women's gymnasium.

San Francisco, Oakland End Conference Season At 11-3

By David Kleinberg

With a dazzling display of offensive power, City College's Rams propelled themselves into a Golden Gate Conference title deadlock with Oakland by racking up 185 points in a pair of crucial wins last week.

They broke every Ram scoring record in Tuesday's 109-86 mutilation over Contra Costa and dumped San Mateo, 76-57, last Friday to finish the season with 11 wins and three losses.

Everyone enjoyed a field day against Contra Costa. Both clubs raced up and down the court in professional basketball fashion, but the records got beat the most.

The college scoring record fell at the end of the third quarter when Ram reserve forward Mac Smith, who hit six of seven shots in his brief appearance, scored on a short jumper to give the Rams an 86-58 advantage.

The Rams, who won the state basketball tournament last year, crossed the 100 mark with more than five minutes to play in the game when Weston Hatch put one through from 10 feet.

Hatch and Smith personally took care of the Rams' final ten points.

Big Elton McGriff hit six of 11 shots and scored all 12 points while sparking the Rams to a 54-30 halftime bulge. The Comets were never in the contest.

Art Adams shot 17 times in the second half and led Ram scorers with 24 points, but Stan Fuelscher, the coin collector from Lowell, was right behind with 21 (he made seven of seven free throw attempts), as was Everett Adams with 23 (the Goose made 11 of 16 from the floor).

Comet Roosevelt Robinson scored 33 points and All-Conference guard LeRoy Walker scored 28, 24 of them in the second half.

Against San Mateo, the Rams took an early lead behind the deadeye shooting of Randy Simms and McGriff and pulled away at a slow methodical pace.

Only early in the fourth quarter did the Bulldogs (6-8) threaten. From a 16-point deficit they pulled within nine, but Art Adams made six consecutive foul shots sandwiched around a McGriff field goal, and the Rams were home safe before a crowd of 850.

Art Adams led the scorers with 21 points, but McGriff and Simms, both with 18, were close behind. Fuelscher scored eight points, dropping his average per game to 9.8—the only Ram starter not hitting in double figures.

Counting preseason contests, the Rams' record is 24-5.

Swimmers To Meet San Jose March 15

With one of its smallest teams in history, the Ram swimming team will take on San Jose Thursday, March 15.

San Jose, boasting as many swimmers turning in its club as the Rams do to theirs, has a powerful and well-balanced team, according to coach Roy Burkhead. Each team has eight returnees.

"With a small and thinly spread squad, we hope to develop shape for next season and not put too much stress on this year's attempts at winning," Burkhead stated.

RA To Attend Asilomar Conference Friday

By Francine Dubonnet

The second three-day Pacific Southwest Regional Athletic and Recreation Federation of College Women conference will be held Friday at Asilomar conference grounds, Frances Galloway, Recreation Association adviser, announced yesterday.

Representing the college will be a delegation of six women RA members and two faculty advisers. Sue Davis, RA president, will be accompanied by Joyce Holeman, Fran Richardson, Sue Williams, Ruth Wimmer and Carol Wong.

Sponsors and faculty advisers to attend the conference are Galloway and Elizabeth Wirth.

To discuss problems in campus organizations, to hear distinguished speakers, to meet new friends and to renew old acquaintances will be the purposes of the conference, which has been themed Follow The Fun.

Thirty-nine conference member colleges and universities will be represented at the conference. Each conference committee is sponsored by a college or university.

The regional conference provides an opportunity for women from various parts of the Pacific Southwest Region to come together in order to share views, make plans, discuss and learn about recreational programs for women on many campuses in different sections of the region, Miss Galloway said.

Section meetings will be held Friday night and all day Saturday for the discussions.

A guest speaker will highlight the Saturday morning session and will set the tone for the remainder of the conference.

"One of the features that the participants enjoy very much is the discussion and the question and answer sessions which follow the address of the guest speaker," Miss Galloway stated.

The purpose of Athletic and Regional Federation of College Women, as stated at the 1961 conference, is "to further athletic interests and activities for girls and women according to the highest and soundest standards of sports and recreation.

"The federation strives to increase consciousness of its purpose during and after college," Miss Galloway explained.

In order to attain this purpose, the athletic conference has adopted a 12-point platform concerned with the betterment of women's sports.

Saturday night a banquet will be given by Chico State College, to be followed with entertainment by Humboldt State College students.

IFC Steps Up Preparations For Annual Blood Drive

By Boyd Burtnett

The Inter-Fraternity Council has stepped up its plans for the annual blood drive now scheduled for April 4 and 5, Pete Montonen, IFC publicity chairman, reported recently.

The IFC is attempting to attract some big names in the entertainment world as well as city officials for promotional purposes, he said.

To alleviate some of the difficulties that arose last year when some 125 prospective donors had to be turned away because they were ineligible, Montonen reminded students that if they wish to donate and are under 21 years of age, they must have their parents' consent.

Students, however, are not the only persons who are eligible to donate. Registered faculty members, civil service employees of the college, or members of the City College of San Francisco Alumni Association are also allowed to give.

The blood donated will go into the college's Blood Bank account, and any donor may make one withdrawal from there within one year of the donation. This withdrawal is for an unlimited amount for the donor or members of his immediate family or a maximum of eight pints for any person of his choosing who needs blood.

For additional promotion, the IFC states that it plans a car parade from the Ferry building to the college with each fraternity and sorority represented. This event is tentatively scheduled for Monday, April 1.

Also, a pre-blood drive rally is scheduled for Friday, March 29, and Montonen said that they hoped to attract a leading San Francisco political leader for promotional activities.

In past blood drives the IFC has always broken the preceding record, and Montonen stated that IFC hopes the pattern does not change.

Photography Department Seeks Coed Models

Models are being sought by two students in the photography department here for experience in portrait work, illustrations and advertising.

Interested coeds may receive more information by calling at the photography office, C-126, between 12 noon and 3 p.m. today or tomorrow. Bill Gebhardt and Mike Del Prete are the pair organizing this project.

All work will be conducted on campus in a fully equipped photolab. There is no money involved, and models may choose their own schedule. Compensation is given coeds through prints of photographs taken of themselves.

"We haven't set any prerequisites for the models," Gebhardt stated. The project is intended to benefit the whole department.

Sororities To Hold Coffee Preferences

Each of the five sororities on campus will hold a coffee preference hour Sunday, March 24, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., Dean Mary Golding announced yesterday.

Coffee preferences will be held in the homes of sorority members, enabling rushees to express their preference for a particular sorority.

The 42 rushees have been divided into two groups, and each will attend from two to three of the 20-minute coffee preferences. Group one will attend from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. and group two from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

On Monday, March 25, each rushee will express her sorority preference in writing in Dean Golding's office. March 27, sorority members will prepare invitations for rushees who have made the required 2.5 grade average in at least 12 units of study.

Refreshments will be served by rushees at the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea Thursday, March 28. On March 29, rushees will pick up their invitations from the individual sororities and, during College Hour, attend a short orientation meeting in S-205.

Lithographic Technical Foundation Holds Printers' Forum At College

More than 300 Northern California printers attended a two-day Lithographic Technical Foundation practice forum at the college last week.

The group met last Friday and Saturday in the campus theater and were greeted by college President Louis G. Conlan. Luncheon was served by the hotel and restaurant department.

This was the first time that such a program was held on this campus.

Asked about the purpose of the forum, Bill Svabek, graphic arts instructor here, stated, "Technology has been advanced so much in the last couple of years that such an event was necessary in order to inform more printers in the area of the facilities at their disposal."

Among matters discussed were the process of making halftones, color measurement and masking, paper and ink troubles on a press, surface and deep-etch platemaking, use of the web offset press, handling of plates and distinguishing light and color.

Research specialists attending the forum were Michael Bruno, Frank Preucil and Paul Hartzuch.

Advanced graphic arts students here were invited to attend the forum.

"Those who were present were doubly benefited since many employers were also here and were able to see how far students have progressed in preparation for actual entrance into the commercial printing field," Svabek added.

Early employment was one of the possibilities, Svabek noted, for students who attended the forum and became acquainted with employers.

"Graphic arts is the second largest industry in San Francisco today—second only to foods," Svabek commented.

Between sessions the group toured the entire campus and viewed the many features of the college.

The foundation, sponsor of the forum, is actually an international research organization, members of which write technical material and do considerable research into different facets of the printing business.

Former Student Joins Photo Faculty

Honor Grad To Teach Lensmen

THE MAN behind the camera, Ken Molino.
—Guardsman photo by Ron Turner.

Former honor student here, Alpha Gamma Sigma president and speaker in the 1953 commencement, Kenneth Molino has returned to join the faculty as a part-time instructor in photojournalism.

Molino, a photography major, gained practical experience in photo-journalism during his enrollment here working as photographer, feature editor and then assistant managing editor of The Guardsman.

After graduation in 1953, Molino went to work as reporter-photographer for one year on the Mill Valley Record and for five years as photographer for the San Rafael Independent-Journal, where he developed color photography.

Four years ago Molino opened his own business in San Rafael. He has since covered material in commercial photography, including industrial, architectural and feature assignments in free-lancing, working for Sunset, Time, New York Sunday News and Harper's Magazine.

Among his many jobs are photographs for renowned sculptor Benny Bufano, Johnson Motors and pictures of the Winter Olympics in Squaw Valley. Furthermore, he has been closely associated with a series of radio and television programs performed here at City College.

Molino, who has taught at an adult school in Marin county for four years, said he enjoys working here and that he is "glad to be back."

Molino Tells View Of 'Mugs'

In an exclusive interview with The Guardsman last week, Molino expressed his views on the presently cooperative venture of photographers and reporters, pointing out the faults and deficiencies of the photographs appearing in the newspaper.

However, as he further commented on that topic, he also hoped to administer new policies in regard to better and more imaginative photographs, in lieu of the usual mug shots, as seen in the dailies or on The Line-Up.

While here, Molino worked in public relations for the photography department and the college educational television programs, Come To Order and Know Yourself Better, both shown in 15-week series over KPIX-TV. Henry Leff, radio-television instructor here, was producer of the series.

Molino was graduated from St. Peter High School and is a veteran of four years in the navy.

Cain Sets Campus Police Standards

Practicing severe discipline and meeting rigid standards mark Campus Police Chief Thomas Cain's policies for this semester.

"In some semesters the Campus Police have been lax in discipline and scholastic effort. This semester the organization will be well disciplined within the ranks and will be run explicitly on an academic basis," Cain disclosed.

"Anyone not maintaining a C average or higher or who fails in class performance will be severely criticized and ultimately penalized. Campus Police will at all times act as officers, and if they fail to do so they will be disqualified from the force.

"I intend," Cain emphasized, "with the help of my officers, to build an image and tradition in the Campus Police. I hope to raise the morale and make it difficult for anyone in future semesters to join our force unless they meet these requirements."

Cain emphasized the following:

- The Campus Police department maintains unquestionable authority on campus 24 hours a day, whether in uniform or not.
- Their immediate jurisdiction includes those streets adjacent to the campus as well as college property.
- In the future, any pedestrian jaywalking or not heeding an officer's signals will be cited without hesitation.
- This semester emphasis on stricter enforcement of speeding on Phelan and Judson avenues will be put into effect.

Fairmont's Terrace Room Site Of Freshman Ball March 22

The Cutest Couple will be feted at the Frosh Ball, slated from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday, March 22, in the Terrace Room of the Hotel Fairmont, according to Judi Beverly, corresponding secretary of the Freshman Class and committee head of the Cutest Couple contest.

Bids for the dance and contest entries will be available at the silver pole in Science Hall starting next Monday during all class hours. The first two days will be open to freshmen only, the remaining days bids will be available to all Associated Students on a first-come basis, Miss Beverly stated.

The only stipulation for contestants is that one member of the entering couple be of freshman status. Names, addresses and phone numbers of each party and dates should be submitted when signing up in the AS office, S-134.

Springtime Fantasy, the theme of the Frosh Ball, is expected to inspire a majority of colorful gowns. It is to be a semiformal affair for couples only, featuring music by the Sal Vance orchestra.

Because of a budget shortage this semester, Miss Beverly explained, the tallies will be combined with the bids with a listing of officers, sponsors, patrons and patronesses listed on the back. This card will be used for admission and then may be retained by the holder.

Highlighting the ball will be the presentation of miniature trophies to the Cutest Couple.

Additional prizes will include a bouquet of roses and complimentary dinner tickets for two for the winning couple, a bouquet of carnations and dinner tickets will be given for second place and a lei of carnations and theater tickets for third place.

UC Professor To Speak During C-Hour Friday

Arthur Rosenfeld, physics professor at the University of California, will be guest speaker during College Hour Friday in the theater, Irving Witt, coordinator of the College Hour lecture series, announced recently.

Rosenfeld is also connected with UC's radiation laboratory.

A Physicist's View Of International Tensions will be Rosenfeld's main topic.

Old Problems Plague Cafeteria

Vintage problems of the cafeteria, which are no less prevalent this semester than in years past, are expected to increase at a rate commensurate with increasing enrollment, Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser, commented in a recent interview.

However, the cafeteria extension should at least slow the problem to a mild furor, he surmised.

Nevertheless, the new addition, which is expected to push the maximum capacity to near 600, will insure that existing problems will become no greater in proportion to the student body, Elworthy concluded hopefully.

Barring major setbacks, the extension will be ready for use in 1964.

"The Shack and such other innovations are a thing of the past, and banished from the consideration of the administration forever," Elworthy said regretfully, "and standard cafeteria problems at peak hours—standing in aisles and doorways, three students on two chairs, visitors, non-eaters and constant incorrect use of exits plague us endlessly."

Soph Class To Schedule Sports Competition With Faculty

Arrangements are being made for a sophomore-faculty basketball and volleyball competition as part of the soph class activities for the spring semester, Mike Nevin, class president, said.

A tentative date for the competition is April 19 during College Hour.

Nevin, a second semester student, said that a basketball game between the men's faculty and the sophomore men students, as well as a volleyball game between the women's faculty and sophomore coeds have been scheduled for College Hour at this tentative date.

All sophomore students interested in taking part in the competition were urged by Nevin to submit their names to him in the Associated Student office, S-134, not later than three weeks in advance of the game.

The Sophomore Ball will be held May 24 in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel. Nevin said that a nine-piece orchestra directed by Sal Carson has been contracted for the occasion.

All sophomores are invited to attend a class meeting during College Hour Friday in S-311, when the Sophomore Class officers, under the leadership of Nevin, will inform interested students of the appointment of members of the various committees.

Plans are in the making for an award to be presented by the Sophomore Class to the outstanding athlete from the class who has maintained the highest grade-point average.

Plans now call for the trophy to be presented at the semiannual awards banquet scheduled in June, and the advice of the coaching staff will help determine the most eligible athlete, Nevin stated.

Lucille Lesser Scholarship Goes To McDonald

The faculty committee on awards and loans awarded one of the two annual Lucille Lesser scholarships to Wayne McDonald last Monday.

McDonald, an outstanding student, is a graduate of Mission High School and is majoring in premedicine.

The scholarship, presented to two men students annually, amounts to $1500 each and extends over a period of four years. The funds are distributed on the basis of the student having a superior record in high school and attending four semesters here.

The student must also plan to transfer to a four-year college or university, must be a citizen, and is required to appear before the members of the faculty committee on awards and loans.

Applications for this scholarship may be filed in S-148 or S-150. The deadline for next semester application is April 5, Dean Mary Golding said.

The scholarship, awarded last semester to Hamilton Wong, an engineering student, and established in memory of the donor's wife, was first presented to the college last spring.

The total scholarship fund of $33,000 is to be expended over an 11-year period. Two awards are made annually, one during the fall and one during the spring semester. The scholarship fund has been enlarged by $3000 rather than the original sum announced.

Initial winners of the scholarship were Herbert Sewott, Washington High graduate, and Alexander Teschin from Lowell High School.

Four Sweaters — Strong Enough To Move Furniture

German-Born Huebner 'Would Like To Write'

By Jean Zeidler

America has often been called the melting pot of nations, and not only is this recognizable in every big city from coast to coast but in college as well.

This college has had and presently has students from England, France, Germany, Mexico, Africa and a host of other nations from every part of the globe.

On the whole, American students are curious, for students are students the world over, and they inquire as to the past experiences of their foreign-born pals.

One such foreign student who has a considerable varied background is Jochen Peter Huebner, a first semester student.

Huebner was born in Aachen, Southern Germany, 26 years ago, and at the age of 3 moved to Hannover with his family.

In 1942, Huebner, together with all the children from the industrial centers of Germany, was evacuated to a town called Goerlitz, where he lived with his grandparents.

It was there that he received his formal schooling and in 1954 moved back to Hannover in Northern Germany. For the following three years Huebner took up an apprenticeship as an insurance clerk in Hannover.

Huebner's ambitions have always been to travel extensively and to see the world, and accordingly, he then joined the Merchant Marine and worked as a cabin boy, earning 45 marks a month.

His seagoing job lasted for six months, taking him to North Africa and all European ports of call along the Mediterranean Sea.

"I experienced a feeling of apathy in Alexandria because I was taken for an English sailor. They weren't too popular after the Suez crisis," Huebner explained.

"Although I earned only 45 marks a month, the equivalent of $11.01 in American money, and put in 11 to 12 hours of work a day, it was definitely worthwhile," he added.

After this pattern of work, Huebner received boat fare, in the form of a student loan, for transportation from the Canadian government. In Canada he held jobs taking him from Vancouver to Montreal, from Toronto to New Brunswick and even Quebec.

In those cities he worked as a bus boy, a short order cook, a furniture mover and a sleeping-car porter.

Huebner, slight of stature, talked of his job as a furniture mover. "I had to wear three or four sweaters to give the appearance of being strong enough to move furniture. That plan worked out pretty well."

From Canada, Huebner extended his travels to Mexico where he stayed a short time, and then in 1960 toured the United States for four months, finally settling in Miami. There he changed his status from visitor to immigrant.

New York was Huebner's next stop, where he worked as a waiter, but before departing for the West Coast he stayed in Philadelphia for a short time, working at a country club.

His next stop was Pebble Beach in Monterey, and in 1961 he moved to San Francisco, working at other part-time jobs and entering City College this semester.

"I would like to write," Huebner said, "and I have much personal experience with which to work. However, I must have the tools of language to express this desire and to ultimately materialize my ambitions."

Education Is Food For The Mind—Starvation Is Stupid

A SAGE MAN OF LETTERS once noted that the majority of us spend most of our lifetime unlearning the follies or expiating the mistakes of our youth. The lucidity of this epigram is best illustrated by the image of 761 students here disqualified last spring semester because of scholastic deficiencies.

The image projected by those disqualified is one of shameful misfortune that could ultimately develop into bitter regret. Such an image is far too common these days and is strangely illogical, almost ludicrous—like a man languishing from malnutrition in a culinary paradise because peeling an avocado or frying a filet mignon is too time consuming.

Similarly, young Americans live in an educational paradise, free for them to discover and explore, to question and examine. Here, there is no need for them to err through ignorance because knowledge is so easily attainable.

For example, in San Francisco and the Bay Area there are more than ten colleges and universities, public and private. There are numerous trade, professional and high schools, open days and nights, for student convenience.

Moreover, the colleges maintain personnel placement services available to students desiring part-time employment. Nevertheless, some young men and women still will be doomed to wander aimlessly in blank states of ignorance.

And ignorance like knowledge has a cumulative effect—it grows with age. For instance, let's return to the culinary paradise and assume that after several years of mere subsistence, its undernourished inhabitant decides to peel an avocado and fry a filet.

Now, however, because of vitamin deficiencies his teeth fell out, and he contracted an eye disease; consequently he couldn't differentiate between a filet and a piece of cardboard! And even if his sense of perception were better, by this time his frail muscles would be incapable of lifting a frying pan. Similar are the results of educational deficiencies.

To atone completely for one's educational lack, while not impossible, is highly improbable. Just as that undernourished little man could recondition his flagging muscles, so could the poorly schooled individual resume his education. However, the little man will never recover his teeth, nor will the college returner ever recapture the early periods of his life.

In any event, isn't it logical to take advantage of educational opportunities now, when the mind is receptive, free from entangling obligations and responsibilities?

In reference to the 761 disqualified students, it is hoped that they will realize that time is of the essence and that the sage epigram of spending most of one's lifetime expiating one's mistakes will not be applicable to them.

Avant Guardsman!

A CENTURY AGO, an English naturalist, Charles R. Darwin, originated the theory of evolution by natural selection.

This theory holds that all species of plants and animals have developed from earlier forms by hereditary transmission of slight variations in successive generations, those forms surviving which are best adapted to the environment (natural selection and survival of the fittest).

Man is therefore an animal, and animal he shall stay. However, he possesses a few qualities (ability to have conceptual thoughts, to speak, to laugh, unique breathing, nervous and blood systems, ability to reproduce at any time and for a longer gestation period), that definitely differentiate him from primates, fishes and animals.

Still, nobody is perfect. And this generalization can well be illustrated with La Ligne Maginot.

La Ligne Maginot (named after Andre Maginot, the French Minister of War) was a heavily fortified, reinforced concrete and steel wall of pillboxes and tank traps, built by the French during the late 20's and early 30's in the Alsace-Lorraine provinces of Eastern France facing the Rhine river and Germany.

One must remember that France had been defeated in 1870 by the Prussians, under the command of Chancellor Otto Bismarck, but took its revenge after World War I. The Ligne was designed to stop the invader, which would undoubtedly be Germany, and as it had been previously in 1870 and 1914, the attack would come directly from across the Rhine.

When the Nazis grew stronger by 1933, it was decided they would be stopped by the construction of a heavily armed line in case of aggression.

And then the fun began . . . Architects, engineers and the rest of the French bureaucracy built such a colossal defense line that it was declared impenetrable, and France waited for the aggressor . . . which never came from across the Rhine—as anticipated—but from Belgium, well behind the fortifications then useless.

And more, the French guns could only pivot and point to certain prearranged angles of shooting—up to 180 degrees—prohibiting them to shoot at the enemy coming from the other 180 degrees.

And there was the Big Bertha, the biggest cannon ever built by the Germans, mounted on rails and firing at Paris from the forest of Compiegne, a distance of over 50 miles. The Big Bertha firing crew had to be transferred after every ten shots or so, as the men's ear drums could not support the violent shocks any longer.

After ten shots also, the big cannon had to be dismantled and sent back to the foundry to be rebarreled.

Human folly? "That is the question," aurait dit Shakespeare.

We have a few more memento mori for this issue, and here they are.

In Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde, a particular seven-line stanza is used, called the rime royal. This stanza is usually of iambic pentameter, riming ababbce. The name was conferred because of its use by James I of Scotland in Chaucer's poem, The Kingis Quair (1423).

For our future architects and surveyors, we ask them to take a lesson in Roman road-making. Everyone agrees that the Romans were the masters in ancient road-making, done especially for military purposes. The first Roman high-road ever built—and still in use—was the Via Appia, built in 312 B.C. to join Rome to Capua, and afterward continued as far as Brundisium.

The one-way street was originated by the Roman emperor, Hadrian, about 1800 years ago. He also conceived the idea of the white line to divide two-way streets and highways.

For the grand finale, we would like to sit down and relax to Hector Berlioz's Symphonie Fantastique, composed in 1830-32, a tribute to Berlioz's love for the Shakespearean actress, Henrietta Smithson, whom he had first seen on stage in Paris in 1827, when he was 24 years old . . .

Cherchez la femme, c'est necessaire.

This week, the Avant Guardsman chapeau is tipped to Lester On, Spartan Daily editor of Fall 1962, who recently won an honorable mention certificate in the Monsignor Walter J. Tappe competition for excellence in college journalism.

On, who was a member of The Guardsman staff in 1960, transferred to San Jose State College in 1961.

What Were You Doing At This Time Last Year?

Jajah Soehardi, sophomore:

My husband is the Vice Consul from Indonesia and I was following him around the world. I am majoring in the hotel and restaurant department because I think it is an interesting field and because my father owned a restaurant in Indonesia.

Allan Chalmers, sophomore:

Last year at this time I was sort of hibernating. I worked at Hunters Point repairing, overhauling and servicing teletype machines. It was diversified work, and I would travel around the Bay Area or to Fresno to deliver the machines. It was interesting; I saw a lot.

Clara Dunham, sophomore:

A year ago I was up to my elbows with diapers. My day was all baby duties. My newest baby was only three months, and my other was beginning to take its first steps. Busy as I was, I'd spend a lot of my time thinking of going back to college and considering the subjects I would take.

Jack Ibrahim Aspol, sophomore:

Last March, I was on my way to the United States from France. I flew to New York first, and then right on to San Francisco. It was a sad occasion leaving Paris and all my friends, but I was excited about coming here and looked forward to going to college.

JAJAH SOEHARDI

"My husband, vice consul from Indonesia, and I were traveling around the world."

Ernest Taliaferro, sophomore:

I was still in the Air Force back in 1962. I was just living—getting a regular pay check and keeping my nose stuck to the grindstone. At lunch I'd go down to the non-commissioned officers club and have a gabfest. Things were usually pretty lively down there.

Jean Chung, freshman:

I started out on my own last year. I came to the United States from Tahiti, and had to begin doing everything for myself — cooking, washing, everything. I was able to understand English, but I couldn't speak it too well so I went to Benjamin Franklin adult school to study the language.

Herbert Manor, sophomore:

I had dropped out of City College and had begun working at the shipyard. I was an apprentice electrician and put in a good day's work. I did a lot of wiring and at lunch I would sit on the deck looking out at the skyline—wishing I were back in college.

Erlinda Albano, freshman:

Last year in the Philippines I worked at the Philippine Tobacco Government Administration during the day and went to college at night. I already had my B.A. degree in foreign service, but I took additional courses for elementary teaching before coming to America.

STATESIDE: San Francisco State College will open its seventh annual opera season with a presentation of Rimski-Korsakov's Le Coq D'or, starting March 22.

The opera has not been produced in San Francisco since 1955. The presentation of the fantasy-drama will be directed by Rue Knapp, the musical score by Luis Huber, and Wendall Otey will direct the college Symphony Orchestra.

MARIN NOTES: College of Marin in Kentfield is currently hosting an art exhibit of faculty works. The exhibition will continue through March 27.

HOOTS FROM THE HILL: Foothill College in Los Altos Hills is beginning a series of art films that will be shown on campus. The series starts Friday night with Street Scene.

The producer of the picture, Jordan Belsen, will discuss the production series.

FOGHORN SOUNDS: The University of San Francisco is also hosting a series of art films on campus. Curse Of The Cat People, a sophisticated horror drama, will be offered Sunday. Admission is 50 cents.

SPARTAN ECHOES: San Jose State College is presenting its season's drama production this week, Brigadoon. Individual tickets may be obtained at the creative arts box office.

In addition to this attraction the college was also visited by the Walter Keanes, who have gained fame for their pictures of wide-eyed children.

JAGUAR'S ROAR: San Jose City College, not to be outdone by a "state" college, was entertained last week by Hal Holbrook, who has gained fame as the impersonator of the literary wit, Mark Twain.

CARDINAL'S TRILL: Stanford University featured Luboshuta and Nemenoff, duo pianists, in a concert last

SF State To Perform Korsakov's Opera

Monday. Presented through the auspices of the department of music, this was another student-planned activity.

The drama department has also sponsored an appearance of Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans in a Shakespeare reading.

G-Staff Radiant Over Bizarre Trays

Salmon, yellow and gray were added as brighteners to a previously drab-colored Guardsman office last week in the form of decorator steel desk trays.

The three-sided Cole steel desk trays, from Stevenson & Sons, established in the office furniture business in San Francisco since 1925 and located at Second and Mission streets, are being used by a radiant staff—and how! One problem did arise. What color should be used for what purpose?

Since all material turned in for publication is typewritten on yellow copy paper, it was quickly decided not to use the yellow tray as the news outlet.

As it turned out, the yellow tray went to the faculty adviser—with no particular motive in mind. The editor in chief won the gray tray—resembling his mood when copy is not available at deadline time.

The salmon-colored tray went for news. That way it can readily be noticed whether copy and deadline have met.

Regular Business Transactions Lead To 'Pandemonium' During Meeting Of Student Council

By Patty Smith

Pandemonium reigned at last Thursday's Student Council meeting. Amid the general confusion, elections were held for the single office of Sophomore Class representative to council and the two offices of Freshman Class representative.

Nominations were reopened for the office of Freshman Class representative to council when Mimi Travis, who had previously been nominated for the office of sophomore representative, was nominated for the freshman seat. Carol Alfonso withdrew.

Council then proceeded to the selection of the Sophomore Class representative, and Rich Thomas, president of the Freshman Class last year, was elected.

Returning to the election of Freshman Class representatives, Judi Beverly and Miss Travis were elected.

In other business, members of council spent 16 minutes debating the wording of the resolution concerning the proposed change in the day and time for College Hour.

The resolution stated, "The Associated Students of City College of San Francisco go on record as in unanimous support of the plan to move College Hour to 11 a.m. on Thursdays." This motion, stating "unanimous" support, carried 9-2-1.

After a lengthy debate, the word "unanimous" was removed from the minutes, and the motion was amended. As time was running out, debate on whether the words "Student Council" should be substituted for "Associated Students" was closed, and the motion was tabled until this week.

Four committees were formed by AS President Bill Silver. Tony Taormina is head of the constitution revisions committee. Sue Padilla heads promotions, signs and posters and Jim Stern is the chairman of the Student-Faculty Relations committee. Joel Cohen heads the high school public relations committee.

Turning to other matters, council allocated $800 to the college's championship basketball team so that it could attend the state finals.

Council unanimously approved Associated Women Student President Imogene Walker's list of officers of the AWS. They are Ruth Wimmer, vice president; Marilyn Kuhn, recording secretary; Wanda Lee, corresponding secretary, and Nettie Cook, historian.

The contestants, from all over the country, who are selected by Glamour as the Ten Best Dressed, will be flown to New York in June as guests of the magazine and will have their pictures published in the August issue.

In addition to this announcement at the tea, the Inter-Sorority Council will present its semiannual award to the freshman coed who has obtained the highest grade-point average during her first semester at the college.

Models for the fashion show are Sandra Deer, Rosie Fang, Lydea French, Kathleen Gaffney, Judith Gall, Gwendolyn Humphrey, Mara Merritt, Suzie Ng, Sandra Profile, Patricia Smith, Rosemary Turk, Paulette Walti, Phyllis Webb and Ruth Wimmer.

Coast Guard To Recruit Potential Officers Today

The United States Coast Guard will send Lieutenant Commander Ellen M. Sorensen to the college today to discuss the Coast Guard Officer Candidate School with men interested in joining.

Miss Sorensen will be available for consultation in S-147 from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The program is open to qualified men who are at least 20 years and 8 months of age and under 27 years of age at the time of application. The Officer Qualification Test may be taken within four months of obtaining a degree.

14 Candidates In Glamour Contest To Model At Show

Fourteen candidates for the best dressed coed on campus will model at the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea to be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Thursday, March 28, in Smith Hall, Imogene Walker, AWS president, announced today.

Highlight of the afternoon will be the formal announcement of the college's entrant in Glamour Magazine's Best Dressed Coed On Campus contest.

The local winner's picture will be sent to Glamour Magazine headquarters. Judges there will determine the ten national winners.

Judging is to be based on apparel, figure, posture, grooming, clear understanding of her fashion type, a workable wardrobe plan and individuality in her use of colors and accessories, Miss Walker said.

IRC Plans Field Trip March 21 To Sacramento

Jointly sponsored by the San Francisco Rotary Club and the local chapter of the American Red Cross, a student field trip to Sacramento is planned Thursday, March 21, according to International Relations Club sponsor Joseph Jacobsen.

A bus will leave San Francisco at 8 a.m., and upon arrival the group will attend the legislative session and meet Governor Edmund G. Brown.

The group will meet for luncheon at the Miramar Hotel, adjacent to the Capitol, and before returning to San Francisco will also tour Sutter's Fort.

The deadline for signing up for this trip is Friday, since the Rotary Club must be notified as to the number of students going. Students may reserve seats on the bus by calling at Jacobsen's office, S-155.

A second trip is scheduled for April 5, which will be to the PGE nuclear power plant near Livermore and the steam plant at Pittsburg. This trip is restricted to engineering students only.

Job Seekers Face Worst Situation In 23 Years

Part-time job seekers are at present up against one of the most depressing employment situations in 23 years, Joseph Amori, placement director here, stated recently.

However, Amori advised job hopefuls not to give up, as jobs usually appear more frequently around the Easter season.

More than 1500 students have applied for part-time work this semester. Two hundred drop-outs have requested full time, and 50 evening students are also searching for full-time employment.

Although summer is several months away, indications show that job opportunities will be greater in restaurants, summer camps, resorts and in building and ground maintenance. Arts and crafts instructors, as well as those with a background in music, are especially in demand, Amori said.

Not many job opportunities are expected in the San Francisco area, Amori emphasized, except for students who excel in clerical skills, such as typing and shorthand, and can operate office machines.

Amori stressed the fact that there is a trend for more and more education needed in order to find a job.

"There is an abundance of full-time jobs for qualified persons, especially accountants, typists, stenographers and sales persons," Amori revealed. He also added that the salaries, for the most part, are excellent. He commented that without proper education the outlook for a good paying job is quite poor.

Students interested in employment for the present and for the summer may apply in S-188 Monday through Friday between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Publications Board Lists Poster Rules

Regulations governing the posting of on-campus organization publicity posters were emphasized today by John Silva, editor of The Guardsman and chairman of the Publications Board.

Posters should be accurate, in good taste, neat and with correct spelling. Size is limited to 18 by 24 inches, and all essential information should be included, board regulations state.

Mimeographed or typewritten sheets will not be approved, and a maximum of six posters is permitted for each event.

Posters must be approved by Silva, who may be consulted in S-304 on Wednesdays and Thursdays from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Student Government

Constitution Makes Possible Participation By Individuals

(Editor's note: The following article, and those subsequent to this series, are published in an attempt to familiarize students with, and interest them in, the college's student government organization.)

By Herm Kligerman

Defined as a formal proposition in a deliberative assembly, a motion is the one way students here can place a measure before Student Council for consideration and approval.

Any Associated Student member may propose a motion, but only one of the 14 elected council members may bring it to the floor at a meeting.

The first step for an individual to take is to interest a council member in his cause. However, no motion will come before council until a council representative looks thoroughly into the matter.

Suppose the originator of a motion doesn't know anyone on council? The best move in this case would be for that person to attend a council meeting, get acquainted with several councilmen and then talk to one about his proposition.

It is best to interest several in a cause, since it will take more than one person's vote to approve a motion.

If a councilman deems a proposition worthwhile, he will introduce it at a forthcoming council meeting under the general heading of "new business." There it will be thrashed around by both council and cabinet members.

The Associated Student president presides and has the power to curtail discussion at any time and call for a vote.

Several things can happen to a proposed motion.

Amidst discussion, it could be tabled until a future date or until further investigation is made. The motion may also be referred to committee, members of which are appointed by the AS president.

Fate of a motion may also be determined in a vote—the most common of all methods. Only council members have the right to vote, and a simple majority is needed for a measure to pass.

It is always wise for the originator of a motion to be at the council meeting when his proposition is discussed. He should be prepared to face a sometimes rigorous period of questioning.

No motion contrary to the AS Constitution, detrimental to the college in any way or beneficial only to a select few will be considered.

An amendment is needed to revise any part of the existing constitution. Methods of proposing such an item were outlined in these columns last week.

To gain first-hand knowledge of how council operates, students are always welcome to attend its meetings at noon Tuesday and Thursday in bungalow 6.

Next week: A council meeting.

Waiting For The Bus

Robert Lasley (left), production director, goes over the script of Bus Stop with Leigh French and Joe Lacey, who appear in the lead roles in William Inge's play, which opens a two-weekend run Friday, March 29, in the campus theater.

The comedy replaces the Shakespearean drama, King John, which is now planned as the thespians' second major production this semester.

Several scenes from Bus Stop will be performed during a special 10 to 10:40 a.m. College Hour showing on that morning, Lasley said.

The full performance will begin that evening and be repeated Saturday, March 30, and April 5 and 6. Admission is free to Associated Student cardholders; general admission is $1.

Casting for the production was completed last week, and rehearsals are going along on schedule. In reference to drama director Michael Griffin's recent illness, Lasley commented that Griffin "is getting along well and should be released from the hospital within a week."—Guardsman photo by Bill Gebhardt.

Campus Organizations Urge Students To Attend Meetings

By Francine Dubonnet

A real interest in the learnings from the Holy Bible is the prerequisite for membership in the college's Collegiate Christian Fellowship, according to Douglas Hammend, vice president of the organization. All students are invited to attend meetings Friday during College Hour in C-201 for additional information.

The Roger Williams Baptist Fellowship has several "interesting and thought-provoking meetings planned for the semester's College Hours," Karin Poggi, president of the fellowship, announced.

Guest speakers, plays, panel discussions and movies, one of which will be concerned with mixed marriages, are scheduled for the meetings. All Baptists and other interested students are invited to attend Fridays during College Hour in A-212.

The Newman Club will have a communion breakfast at 10 a.m. Sunday at St. Emydius' Church and Parish Hall on Jules avenue.

Weather permitting, the Filipino Club is planning a pot-luck dinner-barbecue from 3 to 11:30 p.m. Saturday, March 23, at President Mark Guiang's home.

Only active members of the Filipino Club may attend this social. Dress will be casual and there is no admission charge, according to Guiang.

James McConnell, former sponsor of Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity, was presented with a desk clock trophy in behalf of the fraternity by members Robert Donald, Hershel Hallie and Charles Williamson March 1.

McConnell sponsored the fraternity for seven years. Francisco Nardi is the new sponsor of the men's group.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will hold its Ugly-Man-on-Campus week during the week from April 22 to 26. Proceeds will go toward a scholarship for the fraternity.

The Real Estate and Insurance Club has scheduled speakers from real estate and insurance companies for this semester's major activity.

Jules Saxe, president of Saxe Realty, was guest speaker for the club last Friday. "Saxe has been cooperating with the club since it was first formed three years ago," Saul Samuels, president of the club, said.

The Student California Teachers Association had as guest speakers on March 8 Richard Axen and Robert Moore. Both are instructors in secondary and elementary education, respectively, at San Francisco State College. Axen and Moore discussed elementary and secondary credential requirements.

Purpose of International Relations Club meetings this semester will be to acquaint students with the culture of foreign countries. All students are invited to attend meetings in C-258.

Whitby Requests Student Choice Of C-Hour Films

Jack A. Whitby, director of audio-visual aids while Madison Devlin is on sabbatical leave, announced last week that college students here will be able to select their own films for this semester's College Hour film series.

He asked students to study the film list below and select, by checking, 14 films they would choose to see during the College Hour film series.

Upon making the selection, students are further requested to deposit the checked list in the Associated Men Student suggestion box.

The AMS suggestion box is situated across from the silver pole in Science Hall. Students are welcome to submit any constructive recommendations about college policy to the box.

John Theilen, AMS president, has promised consideration to every tangible suggestion received. "We also welcome pet peeves of the students," Theilen said, adding, "Through this we can determine what students dislike the most and then try to rectify the situation."

The new director of audio-visual comes to the college with a background in teaching and commercial experience.

Teaching positions include Reedley High School and Reedley Junior College. Commercial experience for the World War II veteran includes operation of a photography business and association with a production firm.

Listed below are the films for selection:

1. Jascha Heifetz: First Violin Or An Artist ☐
2. Louis Pasteur: Man Of Science ☐
3. Marian Anderson: Concerto On Film ☐
4. Mozart And His Music ☐
5. Rafael Mendez: The Trumpet ☐
6. Schubert And His Music ☐
7. Siam ☐
8. Golden Twenties ☐
9. The Significant Years ☐
10. True Story Of The Civil War ☐
11. America's Cup Races ☐
12. Europe Without Frontiers ☐
13. Seven Cities Of Antarctica ☐
14. Ancient Peru ☐
15. Beethoven And His Music ☐
16. Brahms And His Music ☐
17. Conspiracy In Kyoto ☐
18. Degas: Master Of Motion ☐
19. Disaster, 1906 ☐
20. Exploring The Satellite ☐

Rams Place Third In State Tourney

Cagers Fall To San Diego In Second Round, 63-57; Fresno Captures Crown

By David Kleinberg

SACRAMENTO — With Stan Fuelscher finally releasing the shooting trigger and Randy Simms dropping buckets in with ease, the Rams grabbed third place in the state basketball tournament Saturday when only their pride was at stake.

San Francisco's dreams of a second consecutive state crown were smashed by a nightmare named San Diego, which dealt the Rams a 63-57 loss after trailing much of the semifinal contest Friday.

Fuelscher, so much of a team player that he sometimes passes up good shots in order to find someone with a better chance, started firing in the final game, and showed he could hit them.

He scored San Francisco's first five points, hit the bucket at 14-13 to give the Rams their never-to-be-lost lead and finished with 18 points in the 81-69 dumping of Vallejo and the third-place trophy. He hit seven of ten field goal attempts.

RIOT

Fresno College, which survived a wild riot with the Vallejo rooting section and players the night before in a contest that was called off 40 seconds early to prevent further incidents, won the state championship with a close 76-69 thriller over San Diego.

Simms, against Vallejo, was something to see, especially in the first half. The 6-4 forward and Fuelscher scored the Rams' first 18 points before 6-8 Elton McGriff made it 20-14 with 9:30 gone. Simms scored 17 of his 25 points in the first half, mostly on 10- to 15-foot jumpers.

Vallejo forward Frank Mixon scored 18 of his 27 points in the second half, but the closest the losers came was at 72-62 with two minutes to go.

THE GOOSE

Everett (The Goose) Adams, who retains a poker face no matter what happens on the court, played brilliantly in the Thursday opening 73-60 victory over Palomar and equally as well in the losing effort to San Diego.

Tournament officials considered his 15-point effort against Palomar, his 24 against San Diego and 14 against Vallejo as worthy of an All-Tournament selection, the only Ram to place.

If nothing else, the Goose is a crowd pleaser. There are very few ballplayers who put as high an arch on their shot as Everett does, and when they starting going in, it really looks pretty. They were going in, and the crowd loved it.

Against San Diego the Goose got little help. It was one of those games where everything goes wrong. The Rams got beat on the boards, they got beat in the shooting, and what might have made the difference in both departments was Art Adams, who sat out more than 15 minutes of action.

ART ADAMS

Art's knee, injured in Modesto over two months ago, was aggravated severely and his condition was compounded by a cold. Art, who averaged 13.1 points per game in the Golden Gate Conference, scored only four.

Nevertheless, the Rams led through most of the first half, as much as six points at 16-10 before losing the lead at 26-24 when S. D. guard Dick Barkett hit his fifth field goal attempt in a matter of four minutes.

From a 28-26 halftime deficit, the Rams rallied ahead at 35-30. They looked solid when Everett Adams hit a long jumper to make it 38-34 with 14:28 left, but six minutes and 11 straight S. D. points and the Rams trailed 45-38. It was all over.

ELTON McGRIFF

Against Palomar, McGriff looked like the best center in the state. The big man from Texas scored S. F.'s first eight points and gave them the lead they never lost in the second half when he stuffed a shot to make it 40-38.

The Rams trailed by as much as 20-8 in the first half, but started a slow creep on S. D. that guard Ken Scalmanini finally caught at 35-35 with 27 seconds left in the half. Scalmanini, a sub, pushed through 11 points.

McGriff, who led both teams with 11 rebounds, was all over the backboard. He was getting lay ups, tip ins and occasionally a 10-foot jumper to finish with 21 points.

The Guard... The Center

EVERETT ADAMS (left), one of the coolest men under pressure, was the club's leading scorer during conference play. He averaged 13.3 points per contest. Elton McGriff (45) averaged 12.1 points per contest, and his 137 rebounds were 23 more than his closest competitor, Randy Simms.

Fencers To Compete In Western Conference Meet This Weekend

Four college fencers will compete, starting at 9 a.m. Friday and Saturday, in the Western Intercollegiate Fencing Conference at San Francisco State College men's gymnasium.

Harry Jorgensen, captain; Ronald Adler, Oscar Dinwiddie and Gary Cooper, alternate, will fence with the electrical foil weapons during the conference.

"The fencers hope to place in one of the top three positions of this championship conference," Lene Johnson, vice president of the conference and fencing instructor here, stated today.

All fencers attending two-year and four-year colleges and universities located west of the Rocky Mountains have been invited to attend the competition.

Awards to be issued include a perpetual trophy for the college in first place for each weapon, medals for the top three fencers for each weapon, a cup to the outstanding fencer of the conference as a whole and a certificate to the All-Western team.

Cooper placed third in the Amateur Fencers League of America "introductory" competition at San Francisco State College March 2.

Saturday there will also be a Recreation Association sports day at Santa Rosa Junior College. Upcoming sports days are March 23 at Hartnell College and March 30 at Cabrillo College.

The semiannual RA volleyball sports night and diffner with San Mateo is now scheduled for April 25.

Managers of the RA volleyball club, Frank Rodopoulos and Margaret Jacobs, plan to have Saturday sports days with other colleges and Thursday competition with local high schools.

Intramural Basketball Entries Are Closed

Final entries in the Associated Men Student Intramural Basketball League were received last Friday by AMS President John Theilen, who is presently working on the semester's schedule.

Friday was the deadline, and no further entries will be accepted, Theilen said.

Two divisions will be going, the fraternity and independent leagues. Both league schedules will be posted in the window in the men's gymnasium. The fraternities and independents will play Tuesday and Wednesday nights, respectively, at 7:15 and 8:15 p.m. in the men's and women's gymnasiums.

"Don't forget, you must have an AS card with you," Theilen emphasized.

Training Ends; Baseballers Open Season Monday

By Pete Franklin

The Ram baseball squad is in its final and most rigorous days of training, readying for the season opener against Chabot next Monday.

The club boasts pitchers Rich Noid, of recent Riordan fame, and Ron Bringle, All-City junk thrower from Balboa, but beyond these, pitching lacks experience. Other moundsmen include Jack Burgett, Bob Greenburg, Jack Horner and former outfielders Dave Wormell and Ray Delpogetti.

The infield is in the good hands of Ron Kunkle, a Ram pitching veteran, Rich Farrell, Lou Bevilacqua, Butch Bussanich, with Gus Gervasi and Lon Hitchcock in reserve.

Jim Bisio, formerly with Sacred Heart, Clarence Jenkins and powerhouse Walt Williams roam the outfield with speedster Dave Hogan in the wings.

Catching chores have been assigned to Pete Giovanola, a good man from St. Ignatius.

The Rams, not a speedy club but one that plays well as a team, should finish the season in the first division, coach Larry Lawson predicts.

San Jose appears to be a strong hitting club and should be in contention. Oakland, Chabot and Contra Costa are expected to fight for second division placing.

The Rams, trailing 3-1 in the eighth, crashed their way to a 5-2 victory over California's Blues March 2. Williams blasted a high, outside pitch for a three-run homer and Jenkins singled home the insurance run.

Noid went the distance on the hill for City College, and Giovanola had a good day with two singles in four trips.

Netters In Initial Meet With Vikings Friday At Concord

After two close losses to the powerful Stanford Frosh, the Ram netters will clash with Diablo Valley at 2:30 p.m. Friday, on the Concord municipal courts.

This will be the first meeting of the two clubs, and the Vikings should fall easily because of the inexperience of their team.

In their practice opener, the Rams easily rolled past Santa Rosa by 7-0. Two weeks ago they found the going harder when they settled for second place in the Northern California tennis meet at Berkeley.

Playing without team leader Bob Siska, the Rams were edged 10-8 by Stanford but still managed to top both University of California and Foothill.

In a rematch with the Stanford Braves last Tuesday, the Rams were again nipped 5-4. The results of this one saw Siska go down to top-seeded John Beste, 6-3, 6-4; Rich Anderson lose to Tom Maxeiner, 3-6, 8-6, 6-3, and Bob Murio, playing with a bad shoulder, fall, 6-3, 7-5, to Ron Bennett.

Gordon Miller defeated Ron Bennett, 8-6, 6-2; Jack Kern lost to Bill Ciano, 6-3, 4-6, 6-2, and Ed Jilka topped Gordon Law, 6-2, 6-2.

In doubles, Siska-Kern lost, 6-3, 6-4; Miller-Jilka won, 6-4, 7-5, and Murio-Anderson won, 6-2, 6-2.

Following the match, Stanford coach Bob Renker said that the Rams were the only ones in the area who could have defeated his team—and he was relieved that they didn't.

The team takes on Santa Clara at Golden Gate Park tomorrow and the Cal Frosh Monday, there, in two practice matches.

Trackmen Look Strong For Kezar Relays Saturday

Because the college is loaded with quick long distance runners, the Ram trackmen stand a good chance for success in Saturday's Golden Gate relays at Kezar.

From the highly rated cross-country squad, coach Lou Vasquez has runners Ozzie Norris, Gene Plotkin, Tim Power and Phil Dancel. Added long distance strength has come from Clarence Coleman, who has turned in a 1:57 for the 880 this year; Bob Hector, who doubles in the hurdles; Jim O'Toole and Glen Diffenbaugh, who could be the plum of them all.

For the league season, which opens against Oakland and Contra Costa in a triangular meet March 22, Vasquez rates his club a little bit better than last year's second place finishing squad in the Big Eight.

The sprints are a question mark. Claude Shipp, a Washington High grad and a quick-moving football halfback, has a 10.1 for the 100 already this year and could go lower.

Barry Noss and Tom Gardner, both from Washington, will probably enter the 100 and 220.

Hector, from Tamalpais, has turned in 15.3 for the 120 high hurdles.

John Johnson from Polytechnic has high jumped 6-2 and is capable of 6-4 or 6-5, but big help could come if Art Adams, star forward of the basketball team, finds his sore knee will permit a season of track.

In the shot, the Rams' Pat Lewis (Lincoln) and Pete Downing (St. Ignatius) should go more than 50 feet before the year is out.

Golfers Gunning For Thunderbirds In Friday Match

After tuneup losses to Hamilton Air Force Base and College of San Mateo, Ram golfers go gunning for traditional rival Oakland this Friday at Harding Park in the college's Golden Gate Conference opener.

The Rams will be out for revenge when they meet Oakland with the tee-off scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

In the practice match against Hamilton March 1, the Rams lost 32½-16½. Golfers who performed well in that meet were Dennis Drucker, who shot a 77, and Jim Roman and Mike Selsnik shooting 84's.

The Rams met defending state champion San Mateo minus number one man Drucker. The Bulldogs won, although no official scores were kept. Leading the Rams were Mike Selsnik, who shot an 84, with Rich Orme and Bruce Bair shooting in the 80's.

In the Big Eight Conference last year, the Rams finished third with a 4-2 record, while the Oakland Thunderbirds finished second with a 5-1 record. The Rams lost a cliffhanger to the Thunderbirds last year by a score of 15½-14½.

Using their first string sparingly, the Rams lost to the Ram alumni team, 8-6, over the weekend.

Swimmers Take On San Jose

With two meets completed and with some idea of the conference competition, coach Roy Burkhead's swimmers prepare to meet San Jose Friday.

The team, although defeated twice, did well despite overwhelming odds.

In the postponed meet with Stockton March 1, City College lost 67-25, but carried three firsts, three seconds and one third. The college had seven swimmers to Stockton's 23.

In more recent action, Oakland downed the Rams, 54-37, the college taking four firsts, four seconds and two thirds.

Rick Grey turned a smooth 2:13 for a first in the 200-yard free style, and 58.1 to win the 100 free, while Mark Haskell and Jeff Higman pulled second and third in the 50-yard free. Haskell showed strength as a butterfly man in closing a tight second, 2:39.5.

Fred Wales, after only a three-day workout, displayed good form in a quick 1:00.4 for third in the 100-yard free style.

Tilden Hansen took first in the 500 free style with a solid 6:57, while Herm Fruchtenicht's 2:52.1 was only good enough for a second in the 200-yard breast stroke.

Wales, Higman, Haskell and Grey teamed to complete their day by producing a 4:03 and a first in the 400 free style relay.

And She Dances

Tickets For SF Spring Opera To Be Available At College

Tickets for nine performances of the spring opera season of San Francisco will be made available through a box office to be established here on or about April 15, James Billwiller, assistant dean of instruction, pointed out recently.

The institution is aimed at serving students in purchasing opera tickets at popular prices.

The program for the spring season includes six Tuesday, one Friday and two Saturday performances. Opening with Offenbach's Tales Of Hoffmann, Tuesday, April 30, the schedule for the remaining season is as follows:

Friday, May 3, a repeat of Tales Of Hoffmann; Tuesday, May 7, Verdi's Rigoletto; Tuesday, May 14, Mozart's Magic Flute; Tuesday, May 21, Donizetti's Don Pasquale; Saturday, May 25, The Magic Flute; Tuesday, May 28, Puccini's Madame Butterfly.

Tuesday, June 4, lists a two-part presentation, combining Ravel's Spanish Hour and Bartok's Bluebeard's Castle. Last on the program, Saturday, June 8, is Madame Butterfly.

All productions, except Verdi's Rigoletto and Puccini's Madame Butterfly which are to be performed in Italian, will be in English.

Dean Billwiller indicated that a reasonable student participation will be required in order to proceed with plans for this box office service.

Box office site will be decided soon, he said.

Debaters Meet In C-221 At C-Hour

An attempt is currently being made to reactivate the college debating team; which has been disbanded since 1956, Dorothy Aswaq, instructor here, said yesterday.

A meeting of interested students will be held during College Hour Friday in C-221.

Since the semester has already begun, it will be impossible to hold any intercollegiate debates, but trial debates will be held during College Hour during the remainder of the semester, Mrs. Aswaq said.

She will conduct and serve as adviser to the debate team when it is formed. Mrs. Aswaq, a cadet teacher in the speech department, has taken graduate work at Stanford University.

Mrs. Aswaq also teaches at the American Academy of Asian Studies, where she gives instruction in Urdu, the official language of Pakistan.

SF Craftsmen Donate Graphic Art Publications

A collection of graphic arts publications was recently donated by the San Francisco Club of Printing House Craftsmen to the college library, John F. Gerstung, acting dean of instruction, announced this week.

Bound volumes of the Graphic Arts Monthly are now available in the library's periodical room and are classified in the catalog.

Major Rescheduling Of C-Hour Up Before Faculty Association

A major change in the time for College Hour may go into effect next fall, probably pending Faculty Association response this week, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, announced today.

The change would eliminate the present 40-minute Friday morning class schedule which inserts a College Hour between 9 and 10 o'clock classes.

Instead, College Hour would be 11 a.m. to 12 noon Thursdays, and no lecture classes would be scheduled that hour. Laboratory classes, however, listed from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. would not be interrupted, Luckmann said.

He added that all 90-minute lecture classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays would start 45 minutes earlier than they do at present.

The Faculty Association response is expected in its regular College Hour meeting Friday.

Student Council members have already voted support of the change and at present are interviewing students to determine general views concerning the proposed change.

Speaking of the proposal in general, Luckmann said that by Friday it is expected that the administrative staff, Associated Student organizations, the Faculty Association executive committee and the Faculty Association Student Relations Committee will have indicated approval of the change.

He added that no serious opposition has been presented so far.

"It is obvious, of course," Luckmann said, "that not so many students are on campus on Thursdays as on Fridays (the present College Hour day), but those sufficiently interested in College Hour activities will make the effort to attend them."

He also said that advocates of the new plan believe students should be allotted a full hour for campus activities. The Friday College Hour class schedule now in effect from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. cuts each class and College Hour itself to 40 minutes.

Another change anticipated here next semester concerns class bells.

Starting in summer session, hours from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. will be sounded by a simulated carillon, broadcast from a speaker system to be mounted on the roof of Science Hall.

Car Parade, Band To Highlight IFC Annual Blood Drive

The Inter-Fraternity Council is presenting a trophy to the organization that donates the most blood in its annual drive scheduled for April 4 and 5, Keith Woolwine, IFC president, announced yesterday.

For each pint of blood donated by an IFC member, two points will be awarded to his respective organization. An organization whose donor is outside the IFC will receive one point, and the organization amassing the most points will collect the trophy.

The trophy is just one of the promotional activities of the IFC. The council's publicity chairman, Pete Montonen, has announced that a car parade is planned for Monday, April 1.

The parade will start at the corner of Market and Embarcadaro and proceed on a preplanned route to the college. The San Francisco Police Department will supervise the event.

Another event scheduled by the IFC is the appearance of a night club musical group called Ricky and the Red Top, and two cocktail waitresses, Dorothy Lowe and Marie Trisolino, Montonen also added.

All are presently employed at Pierr's, a North Beach cabaret at 546 Broadway. Miss Lowe is also a first semester student, majoring in chemistry here.

Administration Forms New Honor List Of Top Students

Regular publication of an honor list of top students is being initiated by the administration, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, announced last week.

To accomplish this, the "honor list" now being assembled will contain the names and majors of all students maintaining a 3.5 or better average, and will be published at the end of each midterm period.

A final list will be announced at the beginning of each semester with the names of the previous semester's top students.

The only other requirement is that students are currently enrolled in 12 or more units.

As it is now, Alpha Gamma Sigma is the only campus organization giving recognition to student ability, but Luckmann noted those who have an A minus average many times can not take part in AGS affairs because they are either working or studying.

Students are eligible for AGS if they maintain a 3.0 grade average and carry 12 units.

A total of 298 students is eligible for AGS membership this semester. Their names were published in The Guardsman March 6.

Stanford, the University of California and many other colleges publish similar lists.

Students who make the honor list will have this fact noted on their permanent records.

5 Enter College's Alma Mater Race

Five entries have been submitted for the Alma Mater contest to date, Gerald Mendes, sophomore councilman who proposed the contest at a recent council meeting, said yesterday.

A $50 award has been offered to the student writing the winning lyrics. The Student Council originated the idea, and the prize money is being contributed by the Council of Organizations, the Recreation Association and the Pep Band.

Deadline for entry is Friday. Entry forms and additional information can be obtained in the office of Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman in S-148.

The award, in the form of a merchadise order, is redeemable at the Ramporium, Mendes said.

A second contest will be held for the best Alma Mater melody.

Cutest Couple Contest Top Feature Of Frosh Ball

Selection of the Cutest Couple will highlight the semiannual Frosh Ball Friday, according to Judi Beverly, Cutest Couple contest committee chairman.

Site of the ball is the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel, with the dance scheduled from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight.

As an additional feature, awards to top Associated Student card salesmen will be made, Alan Poletti, sales chairman, said today.

Dance bids are available in S-117, only to Associated Student card owners whose guests must accompany them at the dance admission area, Bob Roddick, Freshman Class president, stipulated.

Freshman representatives are on hand in the AS office, S-134, to sign up Cutest Couple candidates. Entrants must have an AS card, and freshman standing is required of one member of the participating team. The winning twosome will be judged on how they "look together."

Prizes for first place will be miniature trophies donated by Phi Beta Rho and Alpha Sigma Delta, two dozen roses from Phi Beta Delta, a crown from Alpha Kappa Rho, and reservations for two at the Sheraton-Palace dinner theater.

Second-place couple will receive a bouquet of carnations contributed by Alpha Phi Epsilon and dinner for two at the Four Seas restaurant, donated by Larry Wong, hotel and restaurant department placement director.

A lei of carnations from Phi Beta Delta and two tickets for Lawrence Of Arabia will be awarded the third-place team.

Class sponsors Mary Perry, counselor, and Edward Rogers, engineering and physics instructor, will act as judges along with Sue Fitzpatrick, AS vice president.

Other members of the faculty expected to be present are Dean Mary Golding, Dean Ralph Hillsman, Roy Walker, art department; Catherine Shorb, business; Wilbur Russell, engineering, and William Culver, French and drama departments.

Miss Beverly remarked that the affair has "come a long way" since the first so-called Frosh Ball of 1936, an afternoon stag affair, to the present posh soiree held in a leading hotel where attire is suits and ties for men and cocktail dresses for women.

Miss Beverly complimented the committee heads Bruce Klein, theme (Springtime Fantasy), Henry Cassel and Roger Kaufman, bids and tallies, Maggie Huebner, publicity, and Mary Ganakis, invitations, for their cooperation and team work in planning "an evening long to be remembered."

Miss Beverly added that photographers Helen and Paul Sommer will be at the ball for those who wish to purchase a memento of this date.

Resumption Of Debate Team Would Benefit All Enrollees

PLANS are currently being formulated to reestablish a college debating team which could be part of next semester's academic curriculum. Working toward the resumption of the course is an energetic cadet teacher, Dorothy Aswaq, from the University of California.

Her rousing enthusiasm for this program is highly commendable, and it is hoped that students here will take this opportunity to further their education by participating in the proposed program. It would indeed be a pity if, because of insufficient student response, this lively new course were to be shelved before it was actually established.

Prior to 1956 there was a debating curriculum at the college, a successful curriculum whose enrollees won numerous awards and received considerable recognition. However, student interest gradually diminished, and the course was discontinued.

Resumption of the program would be a boon to every one of its enrollees who would participate in one of the most challenging, scintillating and enlightening skills in the world today — the skill of debate.

Few other means of intellectual expression rivet the attention and challenge the imagination of educated persons as does the canny logic of skilled debaters. These students of keen-witted reasoning must instantaneously ferret out from the mind's varied body of knowledge the precise bit of information needed to confute their opponents.

However, confuting one's opponents is not the basis on which we maintain the program be resumed. The reason for reinstatement is the belief that through organized discussion classes, logical reasoning will triumph over impulsive conjecture.

Fatuous assumption and prejudicial gibberish will be repudiated by references to facts. Knowledge attained from the debater's other college courses will be utilized to substantiate these facts. In short, the course will consist of a potpourri of interrelated ideas contributed by each enrollee and benefiting each.

It is on the grounds of this free exchange of ideas that we urge all students to consider participating in this program. Further details concerning the course can be obtained in C-333F.

Colleges Tighten Requirements

A NEW PROGRAM creating more stringent state college entrance requirements starting in the Fall of 1965 was recently approved by the State College Trustees in Sacramento. Furthermore, another new program designed to restrict all two-year college freshmen from transferring to state colleges after two semesters is scheduled for approval.

Presently, students here may atone for high school grade and credit deficiencies by maintaining a 30-unit, three-point grade average during their first two semesters at the college, after which they may transfer to a state college. However, pending trustee approval, in the future all students here may be required to complete a full 60-unit curriculum before entering a state college.

The new program, scheduled for Fall 1965, maintains that only the upper 33 per cent of high school graduates will be permitted attendance at state colleges; previously, 44 per cent were permitted. Purpose of the program is to promote student attendance at two-year colleges.

According to these facts it is obvious that the two-year college is not merely an advanced finishing school; it is a virtual university extension college, an integral part of a higher education.

It facilitates student completion of lower division work parallel to the four-year institution to which he may transfer. And it facilitates the thorough satisfaction of these general education requirements by supplying the student with a solid background on which to base his upper division or postgraduate work.

The program also increases the possibility for more persons to attend college by minimizing the cost of a higher education. This is true because many persons cannot afford the added cost of attending an out-of-town college for four years and consequently conclude their education as sophomores.

Yet, by attending a two-year college at virtually no cost, they may transfer to a state college as juniors, thereby completing their schooling.

Thus we conclude that California's Master Plan for Higher Education is a good plan for more extensive education for more persons at a nominal cost.

What College Happiness Is

As the old saying goes, good things come in small packages. Charles M. Schultz proved it last Christmas with his undersized book, Happiness Is A Warm Puppy. In his own way, Schultz lets adults in on some of the happinesses of childhood.

College life has its happinesses, too. Here are some that might apply. . .

Happiness is remembering that the 8 o'clock is tomorrow morning, not this morning . . . a three-day weekend . . . someone you like sitting next to you in class . . . a ride to the campus . . . a friend at the flagpole . . . a sunny day . . . an interesting lecture course . . .

Happiness is also a ride up from the gymnasium . . . a seat in the cafeteria . . . an early registration number . . . light books . . . a four-point average . . . an umbrella in the rain . . . becoming 21 . . . friends . . . a good joke . . . no homework . . . a double College Hour . . . and last but not least—no hills.

Instructors: How Did You Prepare For Your Midterms?

By Kent Mitchell

Eugene Mead, social science:

I always tried to keep up with the work so I didn't have to cram, and, as a rule, tried to get a good night's sleep. I usually read over the text three times. The first time I read it over extensively, next I would underline the important parts, and finally, I went over the main points.

EUGENE MEAD
"I kept up with the work by getting a good night's sleep."

Mary Perry, counselor:

As a student in preparing for an exam, I always went over class notes, reading them and the prescribed text extensively. Cramming is definitely out—a good night's sleep is the best thing before an exam. Extra class assignments are important and should be reviewed.

Eugene Swann, economics:

I tried to get the basic outline or framework of the topic down first. After this was completed I concentrated on the details and put the two together. Details without any relationship to a superstructure are meaningless and difficult to remember.

Catherine Connolly, English:

It is important to begin by taking class notes and keeping up with them. I kept up with the work at hand so I could relax the night before the test and avoid cramming. It is best to have the material in a structure so it is clear and precise and can be remembered easily.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of men:

I used three methods in studying for midterms. As a physical education major I would meet with fellow majors and we would conduct our own study sessions. In my other courses I reviewed the text and my own class notes. Phi Bete notes were also helpful.

Marcelline McDermott, English:

I kept up with the prescribed work throughout the semester and studied by reviewing the important points I had underlined. I never crammed except for one occasion. The one time I did cram I had an exam in English at 8 a.m., and I fell asleep during the test.

Egbert Bris, English:

The idea of cramming has become a college tradition, but generally I kept away from it. I found I was better prepared by keeping up with the work and then bearing down about a week before the exam. I tried to get to bed early the night before the exam so I would be fresh and relaxed in the morning.

Catherine Shorb, business:

I went over all my class notes and the assigned text. I tried to figure out from the teacher's emphasis what the test would be on. I tried to keep up with the work and avoided cramming. By doing this I was relaxed and went into the test in a good frame of mind.

ON THE FARM: Stanford University will present the Yale Russian Concert Friday at 8:30 p.m. in the Memorial Auditorium. Admission is $1.50 general and $1 for students. The concert is sponsored by the Associated Student Committee for Fine Arts.

In addition to the choral concert an exhibition of Renaissance books and manuscripts will be shown in the university main library. The exhibit is entitled Movable Type — New Era In Civilization.

FOGHORN SOUNDS: University of San Francisco is continuing its film festival this week. Admission to the series, which includes several Academy Award winners, is 50 cents. The series will contiaue through May. Movies are shown at 8:30 p.m. and are sponsored by the Associated Students.

Good Grief! Charlie Brown Roams Campus

From AARON to ZUSSMAN, the college roster contains all the names of students registered here.

A popular pastime utilizing this academic roll call is to hunt for famous names among the lists.

In the roster of City College there are ten KENNEDYS, with one named JOHN and another named ROBERT. Also included are two students named CASTRO, one named MARX and another named MACMILLAN.

It might prove to be interesting to note that none of the above mentioned students is presently participating in student government activities.

Well-known names in the entertainment world like GARY COOPER, JAMES DEAN, JOHN IRELAND and ROBERT TAYLOR are in the roster, but it is not known if any of these students are in drama classes.

Two other students with well-known monikers registered here are TOM DOOLEY and CHARLIE BROWN.

Smith and Jones are amply represented at City College, with the SMITHS numbering 61 and the JONES numbering 32.

However, this is San Francisco, not the United States, and the most common name at the college is WONG. Seventy-one students are carrying this name around on their registration cards.

Second place honors for the most common name at college goes to those students named LEE, all 69 of them. Finally, SMITH runs a close third.

It has been said that the highest honor in the roster is the student with the longest name. This is the student who has trouble because the dotted line is never long enough and misspelling is frequent.

Therefore, all of the applause (and frustrations) goes to one Ingle Li CHRISTOFFERSEEN, with a name containing 14 letters.

Symbolle of the college mascot, the Redwood Ram was placed in his present position in front of Smith Hall on January 3, 1956.

Avant Guardsman!

FRANCE'S highest decoration, La Legion D'Honneur, is in trouble.

President Charles de Gaulle recently signed a decree modifying the code of the decoration. No longer will the ribbon go to the "old timers," nor to the expectants of an automatic promotion to a higher rate nor to nominations resulting from cloak-and-dagger "shady deals."

Once again, because of the nonchalant slowness of the French bureaucracy, it took almost four years to draw up the decree.

Formed by the Fifth Republic in 1958, the Constitution has authorized Le Grand Charles to decide this reform without the approval of La Chambre des Deputes. This is one of the rarest instances that has not provoked any criticism whatsoever—as yet.

La Legion D'Honneur has always produced spirited, cherished passions continuously arising in a Frenchman's heart, but ever since Napoleon Bonaparte founded the Legion in 1802 for recognition of distinguished military or civil service, the honorary ribbon has been devaluated even faster than the franc itself . . .

In 1852, a decree permitting holders of the decoration to pass it on to their heirs was abolished; in 1900, a deputy proposed not to decorate civilians any longer because of excessive abuse which resulted from them; today, La Legion D'Honneur has regained its much abused reputation.

Eligibility for the renowned ribbon is primarily given to the privileged military; officers of the active army with 20 years of continuous service are automatically registered. For the reservists, almost extraordinary exploits are needed for the coveted award.

For the civil service, seniority is the principal factor. With 20 years of service also, one has a very good chance to see himself decorated.

The third method was Politics. Until the Fifth Republic, shrewd aspirants could always "arrange" transactions with deputies of the House. Perseverance was the word, and some spent nice little sums of money on dinners, banquets, flowers and lavitations, usually ending in failure . . .

Today, three applications are received daily and we must add between 20 to 26 other demands for ex-presidents, ex-premiers and ex-deputies.

Exclusions are rare. They can only be pronounced either by Le Grand Maitre or the Board of the Order—as it was in the case of novelist Emile Zola after his famous "J'accuse" editorial supporting Alfred Dreyfus in the daily newspaper, L'Aurore.

Zola was struck from the Order and another novelist-critic, Anatole France, symbolically returned his own cross in support of Zola's ordeal.

Another novelist, Stendhal, once declared that "the width of the ribbon was directly proportioned to the foolishness of its wearer."

Today's Avant Guardsman chapeau is tipped to Bob Pacini and Tom Kennedy, journalism majors at San Jose State College.

Pacini, who attended City College in 1960-'61, was feature editor and editor in chief of The Guardsman, and is now editor in chief of San Jose's Spartan Daily.

Kennedy also attended City College in 1960-'61 and was sports editor of The Guardsman. He recently was the recipient of a monetary award given by Sigma Delta Chi, national men's professional journalism fraternity.

Council Talks Of Changes In AS Constitution

By Patty Smith

In an informal discussion after last Thursday's Student Council meeting, Tony Taormina, head of the Constitution Revisions Committee, discussed with council and cabinet members the possibility of changing requirements governing election of council members.

At present the constitution states that council shall be composed of 14 voting members, the Associated Student vice president, and a chairman, the AS president. Seven of these members shall be from the Sophomore Class and seven shall be from the Freshman Class.

Taormina suggested that council be composed of three members of the Sophomore Class, three members of the Freshman Class, six representatives from Council of Organizations, one representative from Inter-Fraternity Council and one from Inter-Sorority Council.

A general discussion followed and opinion was sharply divided. Some felt that this would be a good idea, enabling more interested students to participate actively in student government, and allowing a better representation of all students.

Others felt that this proposal would be a bad idea, allowing too much representation to members of organizations and not enough to students at large.

In other business, council allocated $25 to the Associated Women Students, enabling the AWS to buy pins to present to semifinalists in the Best-Dressed Coed on Campus contest at the fashion show and tea set for Thursday, March 28, in Smith Hall.

Council also approved President Sue Davis' list of Recreation Association officers.

April 1 Deadline For Entries In Design Contest

Students participating in the Fourth Annual Collegiate Packaging Design contest must file entries by Monday, April 1, William Davis, instructor of advertising design and commercial art, announced recently.

The contest, which is sponsored by the St. Regis Paper Company, is divided into four categories, a bag design for a lawn fertilizer, a bread package design, a folding carton design and construction for a package of candy, and a corrugated container design for a shipping container for 24 one-pound packages of food.

Students here, under the supervision of Davis, will enter only in the candy and bag design contest.

In addition to the packaging design, students must furnish the company a brand name and be able to write suitable promotional copy, Davis said.

The winners will receive an all-expense trip to Chicago for the award presentation ceremony. Awards include a total of $6100 and 48 medals.

The contest is open to all students, but those who wish to participate in the bread package and folding carton design competitions can apply to 100 South Wacker Drive, Chicago 6, Illinois.

There is no limit as to the number of designs submitted, and students may enter in any of the four categories, Davis said.

Further information and entry blanks are available in S-344 or S-316.

SF State Hosts April Art Show

Bay Area colleges are sponsoring a contemporary arts festival at San Francisco State College from 12:15 to 4 p.m. Friday, April 26. Students from the Bay Area colleges are to compete in a poetry reading session.

Each college will be represented by three students, and each student will be allotted ten minutes to read his poem, Catherine Connolly, English instructor, noted today. A faculty panel has been selected to determine the winner from the contestants.

Students interested in participating should submit their poetry and light verse to Miss Connolly in C-331A.

Student Government

Council Conducts Weekly Meetings By Rules Of Order

(Editor's note: The following article, and those subsequent to this series, are published in an attempt to familiarize students with, and interest them in, the college's student government organization.)

By Herm Kligerman

ASSOCIATED Student leaders here set aside two hours each week to attend meetings of Student Council.

These meetings, held from 12 noon to 1 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday in bungalow 6, are presided over by the AS president (this semester Bill Silver), and conducted in accordance with Roberts' Rules of Order.

Each council representative is expected to have in his possession a copy of the aforementioned book.

One solid bang of the gavel by the president officially begins each meeting. The AS recording secretary (Sandy Yahraes) follows with the reading of the roll.

The president then goes through the formality of asking for the assembly's pleasure on the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting. Cabinet reports immediately follow.

Again, the roll is called. Once a person's name is called, he may give a report on his group's activities or, if no report is available, say just that.

Falling into the category of cabinet reports is everything from the Social Committee events, or those of the Freshman Class to plans by the Election Commissioner.

Special cabinet reports, concerned with high school public relations, constitutional revision, and the like, are also called for by the president.

By this time, the "hour" is about half over.

After the multitude of brief reports, "old business" is considered. Depending on circumstances (whether anything has been held over from a previous meeting) this area can be completed without discussion or with considerable discussion.

Whatever happens here has been proposed by a member of council.

New discussions and motions are heard under the heading of "new business." Again, a councilman must initiate any business under this heading; however, as it is with "old business," cabinet members may speak on issues if they so desire.

The AS president may curtail discussion on matters only with approval by two-thirds of council. This statement is true, although contradictory to something published here last week.

Announcements are called for prior to formal adjournment of the meeting. Here, heads of represented groups are recognized by raising their hands and are able to announce the activities of their groups.

Once this is completed, someone inevitably raises his hand and moves for an adjournment. A vote is taken and invariably the matter passes with no dissenting votes.

During the last few weeks of each semester, budget proposals predominate at council meetings. Last semester, AS members here voted to give council the authority to approve budgets for the succeeding semester.

Each councilman is given two or three requests to study before presentation to the entire body for ratification.

Next week: Fifth and final article in this series—there is a lighter side to student government.

AWS Completes Plans For Tea, Fashion Show

Final arrangements for the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea were completed last week by AWS President Imogene Walker and her committee chairmen.

The tea is set for Thursday, March 28, in Smith Hall.

All women students and instructors here plus 30 coeds from each high school in the city have been invited.

Models for the fashion show have been chosen in conjunction with the Best Dressed Coed Contest, also sponsored by AWS.

A representative from the City of Paris will be fashion coordinator at the show. Sue Fitzpatrick and Marilyn Kuhn are in charge of entertainment, while Rosie Fang and Ruth Wimmer are the student fashion coordinators. Judy Carlson is publicity chairman.

Hospitality committee will be handled by Marlene Marcelli and Arlene Krauss. Entertainment chairmen are Betty Thorpe and Kathy Pellen, programs will be distributed by Diane Shirley, Barbara Gavertz will handle photography, and Mimi Travis is in charge of cleanup.

Carole Rubino and Margo Braghetta are in charge of serving tea.

Other committee chairmen are registration, Joan Lee; models, Noreen Segequist; invitations, Nancy Ireland and Wanda Lee; decorations, Glory Mendes, and coat check, Helen Zeucher. Set-up is handled by Sue Davis and Gloria Witherspoon.

Bus Stop Opens In Theater March 29

Bus Stop, a three-act comedy starring Leigh French and Joe "Buck" Lacey, will begin a two-week engagement in the theater Friday, March 29, Robert Lasley, director of the production, announced yesterday.

The play concerns two main characters, Bo and Cherie. Bo, a cowboy, owns a large ranch in Montana, and has fallen in love with Cherie and abducts her, inteading to take her back to his ranch. However, the bus in which they are traveling becomes snowbound in Kansas, and it is at this bus stop that the action of the play takes place.

After opening night, the production will be performed March 30, April 5 and 6. Admission is free to Associated Student cardholders; general admission is $1.

Sets and costumes for the play were designed by Alonzo, who has also done work for the Actor's Workshop.

CJCSGA Meeting Saturday

May, Fuller To Run Workshops At Conference

With two local delegates heading workshops, the 35th semiannual, and final, Northern Regional California Junior College Student Government Association conference will be held Saturday at Foothill College, Associated Student President Bill Silver announced today.

Bill May, last semester's AS president, will head the campus communications workshop, and Jim Fuller, Associated Men Student president last semester, will lead the campus activities workshop. May is also State Information chairman.

At last semester's meet, Fuller led the athletic workshop. During the same conference, Silver was chairman of the campus organizations and activities shop.

A reorganization plan, adopted last semester at the state meeting, which goes into effect next fall, calls for a division of eight regional conferences rather than the current three. City College will participate in area six with eight other colleges.

Silver leads a delegation of 20 student leaders to this weekend's meeting in Los Altos Hills. Student Government Adviser Sherm Elworthy will accompany the group.

Four discussion classifications, each divided into three sections, make up the conference. The general divisions are campus activities, attitudes, communications and organization.

Next month, delegates from this college will attend the state conference in Disneyland between April 19 and April 20. Representatives to this meeting will be chosen on the basis of their participation in the regional gathering, Silver explained.

Regarding the reorganization of two-year colleges, Silver praised the new plan, since it will "give us an opportunity to get more business accomplished at the area level and with a smaller group."

City College has already been notified that it will host the first area conference next October. Nine colleges, including Cabrillo, San Mateo, Monterey Peninsula, Foothill, Hartnell, Menlo, San Benito and San Jose City, will attend.—By H.K.

CHAIRMEN OF WORKSHOPS at the meeting, Bill May (left), heads campus communications while Jim Fuller heads campus activities.

Artist Concert Series Presents Dance Recital During C-Hour

Robinne Comissiona will be featured in a dance recital during College Hour Friday in the campus theater as the third artist in this semester's Artist-Concert Series, Meyer Cahn, coordinator of the series, announced this week.

Mrs. Comissiona, Rumanian born, studied and began her career in Bucharest as a member and soloist of various Rumanian ensembles, notably the ballet of the Rumanian State Opera.

In 1959, she and her husband, the outstanding conductor Sergiu Comissiona, emigrated to Israel where she immediately joined the ballet of the National Opera.

At present, when not on tour, Mrs. Comissiona heads her own dance studio in Haifa.

The art of Mrs. Comissiona represents a fusion of three elements: classical ballet, free dance and pantomime. Every dance on her program is her own choreographic creation.

The Jerusalem Post has this to say about her in its April 4, 1960, edition: "Mrs. Comissiona has a charming choreographic imagination . . . she arouses sympathy with her grotesque dances . . . Her fragment from Mikhail Jora's ballet At The Market and her Vagabond were real treats . . ."

Mrs. Comissiona is scheduled to dance ten numbers in Friday's recital. Among these are Three Waltzes by Schubert, The Vagabond by Debussy and seven excerpts from Children's Scenes by Schumann.

Lory Wallfisch is scheduled to accompany Mrs. Comissiona at the piano.

Future Teachers To Hear Talk On Credentialing

John A. Frisk, former student here, is scheduled to speak before the Student California Teachers Association Friday, March 29, in C-269, according to Tom Miles, president of the group.

He will discuss changes in teaching credentials in addition to other pertinent subjects.

The lecture is to be informal and a question and answer period will follow the talk. All students desiring a career in teaching are invited.

• Recreation Association members have scheduled council meetings during College Hour on Fridays, March 29, April 19, April 26, May 17 and May 31, according to Sue Davis, RA president this semester.

The Pacific Southwest Regional Athletic and Recreation Federation of College Women conference held recently was "very beneficial" to the five RA members and two sponsors who attended it," Miss Davis remarked.

• The Real Estate and Insurance Club viewed a movie, The House Hunter, at its club meeting last Friday. The movie, supplied by the San Francisco Real Estate Board, contained information "not only for real estate majors but for all prospective real estate buyers," Saul Samuels, club president, stated.

• A Bible study class for the Collegiate Christian Fellowship meets in bungalow 6 Fridays between 11:40 a.m. and 12:20 p.m. Recently, the fellowship and its members studied portions of the Gospel according to Saint Luke, Douglas Hammend, fellowship president, announced.

• The Roger Williams Baptists Fellowship has several "interesting and thought-provoking meetings planned this semester," Karin Poggi, club president, said.

All Baptists and any other interested students are invited to attend meetings during College Hours in A-212.

• The Newman Club will hold a regular business meeting, highlighted with a talk by a "special guest" during College Hour Friday, March 29, in S-204. All students are invited.

Suggestion Box Reveals Student Campus 'Gripes'

Among the many entries in the Associated Men Student suggestion box, located in Science Hall, is a suggestion that something be done about speeding around Cloud Circle and the loud, disturbing maintenance bells in the library, John Theilen, AMS president, stated recently.

Theilen added that at the last Council of Organizations convention, complaints about fast driving around Cloud Circle were heard and promptly turned over to the Campus Police for study and possible solution.

It has been hinted by the administration and the Campus Police that humps may be installed to prevent speeding.

"The suggestions in regard to having the maintenance bells removed from the library," Theilen said, "are now being handled by the Student California Teachers Association, which must first seek the backing of COO before the solution can be submitted to the administration for consideration."

Everyone Triumphs In Netters' Easy 7 To 0 Blanking Of Vikings

By David Kleinberg

CONCORD—With what Roy Diederichsen boldly calls his "best balanced team ever," City College's netters effortlessly demolished Diablo Valley, 7-0, Friday in a Golden Gate Conference meet.

Limber Bob Siska, one of the top rated player in Northern California, hardly broke into a sweat while winning the number one singles and teaming with Ed Jilka to take the top doubles.

Siska, far from in top shape and still having some faulting difficulties, sept past DV's Bob Wood, 6-1, 6-0, and with Jilka trounced Fred Castagna and Wood, 6-1, 6-1.

First League Win

It was the first conference win for the Rams in one try (the opener against San Jose was rained out), while the Vikings were taking loss number two.

City College, with virtually the same team that brought the college its first state tennis title last year, is expected to run into its toughest league competition in the last conference match against highly regarded San Mateo.

Viking head coach Doug Smith, who was similarly trounced by San Mateo in Diablo's opener, said, "Your club is better. This is because you have all-around depth. But I think it will be a good match between your number one man (Siska) and San Mateo's (Henry Kamakana)."

Bob Murio's Victory

Number two man Bob Murio controlled Louis Esposito to the tune of 6-1, 6-3, and teamed with diminutive Rich Anderson to collect the other doubles win, a 6-0, 6-0 blanking of Esposito and Mel Wylie.

In a day that Diablo Valley failed to capture one set, ex-Lowellite Jilka, one-half of the state winning doubles team, coasted past Charles Brisbin, 6-3, 6-0.

Anderson, who never played tennis until his senior year at Lincoln, downed Castagna, 6-1, 6-1, and Jack Kern took Cliff Cullings, 6-0, 6-1.

Diederichsen's Powerhouse

"Our number three man last year (Rich Murray) wouldn't have made the team this year," Diederichsen said. "This is the best balanced team we've ever had."

Murio reached the AAA semis last year at Lowell before failing to Washington's Gordon Miller (now a Ram, who did not make the Diablo Valley trip). Murio needs more net work and could use work on his serve, according to Diederichsen.

But Murio has already passed veterans Kern, Jilka and Anderson in the singles. Miller, who just missed winning last year's AAA final when he fell to Jan Kucera, now at California, is the number four man.

San Jose, Chabot Next

Mixing preseason with league play, the Rams meet San Jose State's Frosh tomorrow at San Jose for the second time this year. The Rams blanked SJS, 9-0, in the first meeting.

Siska did not compete in the last SJS Frosh-CCSF meet.

New Chabot College, with its first tennis team, enters Golden Gate Park 2:30 this Friday to battle the locals in a contest that should run similar to last weekend's results.

League Opener Sets Rams Against Comets, T-Birds

The Ram track team meets Contra Costa and Oakland at Kezar in its first conference encounter at 3 p.m. Friday.

The squad is counting on the abilities of Claude Shipp, college veteran; Tom Gardiner and Hal Franklin for sprints; Tim Power, Jim O'Toole and Cal Nutting in the 440; Pete Giachetti the 880, and in the mile and two-mile Gene Plotkin, Jack Snyder, Glen Diffenbaugh and Ozzie Norris, also a quartermiler and 880 man.

In field events, hopefuls are shotmen Pete Downing, Bob Kucich and Pat Lewis, who also heaves the discus. The pole vault features Lee Fee, and in broad jump, Leo Washington and triple-threat Lon Brantley show prowess.

Brantley, who also sprints and high jumps, has broadjumped 23-11½ at Modesto, only an inch and a half off his last season mark of 24-1. "On a good day, Brantley could very well go 25 feet," Vasquez said.

Against Modesto, the Rams won with 83 points. Modesto scored 43, Stockton 25. Bob Hector won the 120 high hurdles in 15.5, but has run 15.3 this year.

"The times at the Modesto meet were disappointing, and I know we can do better," Vasquez said. "The weather was cold, and maybe that had something to do with it."

The conference is tight this season, with Modesto and Foothill carrying strong squads and Contra Costa boasting the highest potential team in its history. There are no weak teams in the league, Rams included. San Francisco is expected to be a contender and intends to have several individuals in the Northern California meet.

Golf Team Meets Chabot In Second League Encounter

After a resounding 27-3 practice win over the Santa Rosa Bear Cubs, the Ram golfers wade deeper into Golden Gate Conference action Friday against the Chabot College Gladiators in their second conference outing.

Despite heavy rain and the loss through eligibility of top prospect Earl Stewart for the season, Coach Grover Klemmer's men came through in fine style against Santa Rosa.

Leading the way for the Rams were medalist Jim Roman, who shot an 81 in the rain, Dennis Drucker and Richard Orme who shot 82's, Mike Selsnik firing an 84 and Larry Amos with 92 to round out the first five.

A practice match against College of Marin is slated for Monday at Sharps' Park with the tee-off scheduled for 1 p.m. The Rams and Marin tied last year 7½-7½ when Roman shot an 80 and Drucker an 84 to lead the way.

Baseballers Meet Gladiators Friday In Second League Tilt At Chabot

With yesterday's season opener against Chabot College in the record books, the Ram nine continues on the road today against the University of San Francisco Frosh in a nonconference game.

Sid Phelan's horsehiders, carrying a 2-1 preseason record, will resume their conference tour against Chabot Friday at Chabot.

The Rams then return home to face the Oakland nine March 29.

The club has shown great promise of late by defeating University of California, 5-3, and San Francisco State Frosh, 8-5. Rich Farrell emerged the hero of the State duel, blasting two triples while going 4 for 4. Lou Bevilacqua hit 4 for 5, Butch Bussanich 2 for 4 with a two-run round-tripper, and ever-deadly Walt Williams was also 2 for 4.

Ronnie Bringle calmly went the distance for the college, serving an array of junk that State hitters were unable to fathom.

In their only failing quest, Phelan's warriors were edged, 8-6, by the club's alumni. Jack Horner pitched five innings, giving up only three runs.

Ray Daipogetti, who took the loss, was trounced for five more tallies in his 1¾-inning relief stint, leaving the final 2½ to Rich Nold.

Rich Farrell's grand slam in the fifth was not enough to put the Rams up on the "old men," even with Walt Williams' 2 for 3, two RBI effort.

Chabot, the college's first conference rival, was downed 8-5 by Stanford but now has the distinction of having scored the greatest number of runs against the Braves.

Last year's club, under the guidance of Lee Eisan, who has since retired from coaching, won only three league contests out of 11 in the old Big Eight Conference.

RA Plans Alumni Night Tomorrow

An alumni - Recreation Association volleyball sports night will be held at 7 p.m. tomorrow in the women's gymnasium.

"The alumni has challenged the RA volleyball teams as it does each year," Laurine Bergin, volleyball instructor, announced. Two games out of three will be played to determine the winner.

Following the games, a social get-together will be held. At this time the challengers and the RA volleyball players will be served refreshments.

Tentatively scheduled is a sports day to be held Saturday at Hartnell College. A fencing sports day will be held March 30 with Cabrillo College.

Students interested in participating in these RA sports days activities may sign up in the women's gymnasium.

15 Teams Enter AMS Cage Loop

A total of 15 teams entered this semester's Associated Men Student intramural basketball competition, AMS President John Theilen announced yesterday.

Nine independent and six fraternity teams will compete in the tournament in the men's and women's gymnasiums at 7:15 and 8:15 p.m. Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Results of the first week's action in the fraternity league saw Alpha Sigma Delta defeat Alpha Kappa Rho, 27-11. High-point man was Tom London with seven points for Alpha Kappa Rho. Gamma Phi Ypsilon forfeited to Zeta Phi Sigma.

Independent league action was halted when a schedule mixup found the gymnasium in use Wednesday.

In this week's independent action, the Hawaiian Bla's will meet the Turnbull's Blues at 7:15 p.m. in the men's gymnasium; the Newman Club meets the Filipino Club at 8:15, men's gymnasium; the Divine Ones meet the Untouchables at 7:15, women's gymnasium, and Hotel & Restaurant meet the Red Sox at 8:15, women's gymnasium. Brothers Five have a bye.

Rescheduling Pits Rams Against Jaguar Mermen

After being outmanned in their season opener, the Ram swimmers received a brief stay last Friday when a meet with San Jose was postponed until today because of scheduling difficulty in the new conference.

San Jose coach Walt Robinson disclosed that he had scheduled two meets for last Friday, unaware of the Ram encounter.

Ram coach Roy Burkhead admitted that the postponement was helpful to him.

San Jose boasts a 15-man team with good speed and depth in each event.

Following the Jaguar meet, the Rams invade Concord for their best shot at a victory. Chabot, a new college, also has a small team.

'Starting Five Good Prospects'—Phelan

Coach Sid Phelan, who guided the Rams to a third place in the state basketball tournament, is confident all of his starting five are strong four-year college prospects.

"I don't know any of them who couldn't help a four-year club," Phelan suggested.

"(Elton) McGriff is the strongest two-year college rebounder on the Coast. Randy (Simms) developed and his beautiful scoring touch should be back next season, but the others will be gone.

McGriff, Simms and Everett Adams have completed their eligibility, while Fuelscher is expected to enter California next semester.

The Rams, with a scoring attack that was as completely balanced as possible, tied for the Golden Gate championship, ripped Oakland in the playoff and grabbed third in the state tourney by topping Vallejo, 81-69.

"The high point of the season was the playoff against Oakland," Phelan confirmed. "The team just put everything together; rebounding, shooting and defense. That was the game they were capable of playing. No team in the state could have beaten them that night.

"Our game against Oakland was one of the finest any team of mine has played, and almost matched the effort of the 1962 state champions in downing Citrus."

But Phelan did say the two teams couldn't be compared. "The teams played completely different opponents. There's no basis for comparison. One team had a job to do and succeeded. The other team came close.

"Personnelwise, this was the strongest team I've had here. The kids went out and did the best they could."

The Rams finished the season with 26 wins and seven losses.

Coleman Utah Bound; 'Bulldogs Must Fall'

By Dave Kleinberg

RON COLEMAN, the Rams' All-American halfback and Golden Gate Conference back of the year, is headed toward the University of Utah and some more football.

• • •

SIGN ON BLACKBOARD in the Ram dressing room prior to the San Mateo-San Francisco basketball game: "San Mateo must fall in 20 minutes—Cassius Clay."

• • •

ATHLETIC DIRECTOR John Gaddy recalls the story of how the 1946 football club lost its undefeated season. In the old days, when the Rams played their contests at Kezar Stadium, Long Beach was the first opponent of the year. The players arrived at Kezar, and as game time approached, the equipment, which was being sent over by a truck, didn't arrive.

Lee Eisan, the head coach, was worried and went out looking for the equipment. Meanwhile, the driver, who had been lost in Twin Peaks, showed up. The team, without a head coach, fell behind 7-0 before Eisan returned and lost the contest, 7-6—the only loss of the year.

• • •

TENNIS COACH Roy Diederichsen has been holding his number one ace, Bob Siska, out of several preseason contests. The reason? Simple: Siska, one of the top players in Northern California, doesn't need the practice, whereas Diederichsen uses the spot to give someone else a chance—insurance for later.

Diederichsen used the same policy with Siska last year. "Only once did it backfire. Last year, I didn't use him against USF, and we lost. It won't happen this year."

• • •

SID PHELAN has been involved in four conference basketball playoffs, and San Francisco's 75-57 win over Oakland made it four successes.

• • •

BASEBALL COACH Larry Lawson, who's been handling the chores while Sid Phelan has been on basketball, is enthusiastic about his club's chances this year, despite last year's 3-11 mark. With players the caliber of Walt Williams, Rich Nold, Bob Bussanich and others, Lawson's optimism may be valid.

It appears the baseball team will have two head coaches. Lawson and Phelan will work together, a la last year's Chicago Cubs. Lawson says, "Two heads are better than one."

• • •

STAN FUELSCHER, the basketball team's stable guard, will enter California next semester on an athletic scholarship.

At California, 6-2 Fuelscher will figure well into the basketball system. He seldom made a ball control error, never takes a bad shot and was the club's third leading rebounder—highly unusual for a guard.

Faculty Gives Nod To C-Hour Change For Next Semester

Faculty Association approval of the change in time and day for College Hour was voiced in an association meeting last Friday.

The change in scheduling will go into effect next semester, and Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, explained, "Fall, 1963, will provide the test period for the change, and the administration will be listening for evaluation of the plan when it is first in operation."

The change will schedule College Hour from 11 a.m. to 12 noon Thursdays, and no lecture classes are to be held at that hour. Laboratory classes, however, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. will not be interrupted.

The main reason for the change is twofold. It is felt that students should be alloted one full hour for campus activities, and also that classes should not be interrupted as they presently are on Fridays.

A number of questions were raised during the meeting.

One concerned the fear that the features of the present College Hour might be eliminated. Response was that the hour-long College Hour will instead enhance these features.

Another query raised concerned the misunderstanding of the effect of Tuesday-Thursday scheduled hours. It was explained that 90-minute lecture classes on these days will start 45 minutes earlier than they do at present.

The question of laboratory schedules was brought up. Laboratory schedules could be established on the basis of 8 a.m. to 11 a.m., 12 noon to 3 p.m., and 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Luckmann explained that this schedule is not, however, being imposed but would be most desirable.

Luckmann added also that instead of having a Tuesday-Thursday schedule, a Tuesday-Friday pattern would be established next semester.

Council Rescinds C-Hour Support, Approves RAMS

By Patty Smith

Two major issues concerning the resolutions regarding the proposed change in the day and time of College Hour and the approval of the new RAMS political party, respectively, were the main order of business at last Thursday's Student Council meeting.

A motion to rescind the resolution previously passed by council, stating that "The Associated Students of City College of San Francisco go on record as in support of the plan to move College Hour to 11 a.m. on Thursdays," was presented to council for discussion and vote.

Those in favor of rescinding the resolution stated that council members had not had an opportunity to conduct a random polling of students before the matter was brought up for a vote.

Those who stood in favor of the resolution said that council members were representing the students and theoretically knew how they felt.

Debate was closed, and council voted to rescind the resolution, 9-1-2.

In regard to the second major issue of the day, Rich Thomas made a motion that council accept Council of Organizations' recommendation to give on-campus recognition to the new RAMS political party as an official organization.

There was much discussion on the subject because of the fact that some council members had not seen the constitution of the RAMS and were not familiar with its platform. After several questions were clarified by COO President Vince Contreras, council accepted the resolution, 8-1-3.

'Hazing' Stunt Marks Blood Drive Start

Car Parade Set For Monday To Aid IFC-Sponsored Event

What was once a useful form of fraternity hazing has now become the annual Inter-Fraternity Council blood drive.

Several years ago, before any and all forms of hazing were outlawed by the state of California, pledges, before initiation into the various fraternities about campus, were required to give one pint of whole blood to the blood bank.

In each consecutive year since, Tau Chi Sigma first sponsored the drive in 1956, the now IFC-sponsored blood drive has bettered its own record in number of pints of whole blood delivered to the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank.

This year's blood drive is scheduled for Thursday, April 4, and Friday, April 5. Dean Ralph Hillsman reported that a double College Hour is scheduled for April 5 to give all students a chance to donate.

Pete Montonen, IFC publicity chairman, added that a car parade is planned next Monday to help promote the drive.

The parade, composed of a certain number of cars from each fraternity and sorority, will begin at the intersection of Market street and the Embarcadero and terminate at Phelan avenue.

Entertainment at a drive rally will be provided by a North Beach group called Ricky and the Red Tops plus two cocktail waitresses, Dorothy Lowe and Marie Trisolino. Montonen said that the group will perform during the double College Hour of April 5.

Montonen reminded students that if they are under 21 years of age and wish to donate blood, they must first secure a parent's written permission.

The pints donated will go into the college's account at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, and any donor may make one withdrawal from there within one year of donation.

This withdrawal is for an unlimited amount for the donor or member of his immediate family or a maximum of eight pints for any person of his choosing who needs blood.—By B.B.

Ground Breaking Starts Building Of Floral Center

Ground-breaking ceremonies were held yesterday for the college's forthcoming $413,000 horticulture center.

The old horticulture center fell victim last semester to freeway extension from the Alemany cutoff to Ocean avenue.

The new center will include a flower shop with the most modern working facilities, three greenhouses and two lath houses, Harry Nelson, horticulture instructor, said.

Small model gardens are planned, he added, to give homeowners ideas for their own gardens. Another facet of the program is soil experimentation, aimed to benefit the public as well as professional horticulturists. An arboretum will provide a place to study commonly grown plants and their reactions to various soil treatments.

The horticulture department is a two-year program, although some students continue their studies at a four-year college. The plans for the new center were designed by a former horticulture student, Alex Woolworth, now a supervisor with the California Division of Highways.

In a recent retail floristry display contest, Terri Slaight received a $300 first prize for her floral design. Other winners included Gloria Citti and Allan Aldrich, who received second and third place awards, respectively.

The students were judged by local florists and the first place award was donated by the San Joaquin Valley Florists Association. Next Saturday Miss Slaight will show her arrangements at the Hall of Flowers in Golden Gate Park.

The show will consist of demonstrations and floral arrangements to be sponsored by the San Francisco Garden Club.

William Inge's Bus Stop Opens Friday In Theater

Bus Stop, a romantic comedy by playwright William Inge, will begin at 8 p.m. Friday in the college theater.

Scenes from the play will be performed during College Hour Friday to give students and faculty members an idea of what the play concerns. Highpoint of the reading will be a "torch song," sung by Leigh French, who plays the leading role of Cherie.

The leading players in Bus Stop are Joe "Buck" Lacey, who plays Bo, a rodeo cowboy, and Brenda Goldstein, a 17-year-old coed who has the role of a 39-year-old cafe owner.

Bo and Cherie are passengers on a bus headed for Kansas City. Bo, who owns a ranch in Montana, is determined to win the love of Cherie—by one means or another. The result is pure chaos.

Bus Stop originally opened in New York in 1955 with Kim Stanley playing the leading role. In the motion picture version, a then virtually unknown actress came to fame, and the late Marilyn Monroe was nominated for an Academy Award.

Inge has written many plays for stage and motion pictures. Among them are Shot In The Dark, Come Back Little Sheba and Picnic, a motion picture which starred William Holden.

The sets for the production were designed and executed by Alonzo, who has done set design work for professional theater companies in San Francisco.

Alonzo also has designed several posters for the play. Costumes were made by Kitty Condon, also in charge of the show's publicity.

Airlines To Hold Job Interviews

An airlines conference is scheduled to be held next Wednesday for all women students interested in either airline stewardess employment or information, Joseph A. Amori, director of placement, announced last week.

Glen Pearson, United Airlines stewardess specialist, will speak at the meeting to be held in C-245 at 9 a.m. Films on the training and activities of a stewardess will also be shown.

In the fields of placement and employment, he announced that the eighth annual Business - Engineering Recruitment Day has been set for May 8.

At this time representatives from the Bay Area's leading businesses will speak to the college's prospective graduates on training programs in fields of business.

Graduates interested in attending this program were requested by Amori to report to the college placement center, S-188.

Sororities Invite 42 Spring Rushees

Inter-Sorority Council members today sent invitations to spring rushees interested in pledging one of the five campus sororities, Carole Rubino, ISC president, announced yesterday.

The 42 rushees who have maintained at least a 2.5 average in 12 units of study attended a coffee preference last Sunday, designed to enable them to express preference for a particular sorority, Miss Rubino explained.

On Friday they will make their final choice, in writing to Dean Mary Golding.

Pledge Days are next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Forum Magazine Needs Material For Publication

Forum, City College magazine which appears each spring semester, is accepting material for publication until Friday, April 26, Catherine Connolly, adviser to the magazine, said yesterday.

Contributions in any literary form may be submitted. Short stories, one-act plays, essays not over 1500 words (serious or humorous), evaluation of books, institutions, politicians, articles of current interest, poetry and light verse are examples of materials to be published.

Manuscripts should be on standard size paper and should be typed double-spaced, and material may be submitted to the Forum office, C-331A, Miss Connolly stated.

"Get it off your desk and onto ours," she added. "Our deadline is in the not-too-distant future, and the amount of material so far is short of our goal.

"The only reward is to see your literary attempts published, and for the beginning writer that is usually enough of an incentive," she emphasized.

Lost And Found Melodrama

Born Loser—No Girl, No Glasses

By Dick Bullard

The bifocals bounced from purse to pocket, and the syllabus slipped hither and yon.

These things, in condensed form, exemplify the erratic behavior of students concerning the delivery of "found" articles to their rightful resting places.

The bifocal incident included the time-honored dramatis personae, the boy and girl.

In this case, however, boy loses glasses, girl finds glasses, girl gets boy's name from glass case, girl calls boy. This is the end of the line for this duet.

Girl neglects to leave name and neglects to leave glasses in Lost and Found department. Hence, boy never meets girl and, incidentally, never gets glasses back.

The slipping syllabus was another noteworthy caper. The book, having slipped from a student's notes, proceeded to get itself lost. Being a rather unique folio, it had no replacements in the bookstore.

The situation forced the owner of said syllabus to be faced with the possibility of dropping the course.

In desperation the student haunted the Lost and Found department for ten days. On the 11th day a student brought in the vagabound manual. He had ". . . been meaning to do it for a week."

These little melodramas could be avoided if students would turn in lost articles to the proper rooms, S-149, C-303 or A-201, promptly upon finding them.

Students who wish to reclaim lost articles may cut considerable red tape by proceeding directly to the office of Ruth Hoburg, C-303. All vagrant paraphernalia eventually come to rest at this address.

Fang, Gaffney, Walti In Glamour Finals

Winners To Be Named At Fashion Show Tomorrow

San Francisco is a cosmopolitan city, and the women of this city have always been noted for their well-groomed appearance. The 12 young women chosen as semifinalists for best dressed coed on campus are certainly no exception to this rule.

These poised, attractive young women, who will model in the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea tomorrow afternoon in Smith Hall, have a variety of interests, and all are enthusiastic about their future plans.

Three of the models in the show are City College finalists in the best dressed coed on campus contest being held here in conjunction with Glamour Magazine's nationwide competition to select the ten best dressed coeds on American campuses.

The three local finalists are Rosie Fang, Kathleen Gaffney and Paulette Walti.

Announcement of the winner will be made during the show and tea. The picture of the winning coed will be sent to Glamour Magazine headquarters in New York. Judges there will determine the ten best dressed coeds in America.

Finalists in the nationwide contest will be photographed for the August issue of the magazine and be flown to New York City as guest of the periodical.

Semifinalists will receive honorable mention certificates.

This has been the first year that City College has been invited to participate in the competition.

Miss Fang, a tall slender foreign student, is a graduate of Diocesan Girls School in Hong Kong. She is preparing for a career in commercial art and, after graduation, will either go on to a professional school for further study or begin working in her chosen field.

A sophomore majoring in accounting, Miss Gaffney expects to graduate this semester and transfer to the University of California. The slender, poised coed hopes for a career in tax law.

The third finalist, Miss Walti, is a graduate of Presentation High School. The petite blonde, whose favorite color is red and who prefers simple, clear-cut styles, is a business major and plans to go to work after graduation. She enjoys taking part in fashion shows.

Nine other contest coeds will model in tomorrow's show. Biographical information and names of each follow in succeeding paragraphs.

Sandy Deer, a petite 19-year-old sophomore majoring in political science, plans to transfer to San Francisco State after completing studies here. Miss Deer, a graduate of Presentation High School, has studied ballet for seven years and hopes for a choreographic career.

Dark-haired, dark-eyed Leigh French, majoring in broadcasting, plans to transfer to San Francisco State. A graduate of Warwick High School in Newport News, Virginia, Miss French is interested in drama and will appear in one of the lead roles in William Inge's play, Bus Stop, opening here Friday night.

Judi Gall, a petite, attractive blonde, is majoring in general education and plans to transfer to San Francisco State after graduating next February. She is a graduate of Lincoln High School and her main hobby is art.

Mara Merritt, a dark-eyed brunette, is a graduate of Convent of the Sacred Heart. A freshman, majoring in merchandising, she plans a career in the fashion world. In addition to being a student, Miss Merritt is a free-lance model and a modern jazz dancer.

Sandy Profili, a honey blonde, is an education major and plans to go to San Francisco State after graduation. A Washington High School graduate, Miss Profili, who loves outdoor sports, plans to teach in elementary school.

Another graduate of Convent of the Sacred Heart is pretty Patty Smith, a sophomore journalism major. Miss Smith plans to transfer to San Francisco State after completing her studies here.

Tall, blonde Rosemary Turk, a graduate of Presentation High School, is a secretarial major and, after graduation, hopes for a career as a legal secretary.

Smiling Phyllis Webb, a tall brunette, prefers pastel shades and dresses "to suit her mood and the occasion." A graduate of Balboa High School, she is majoring in public relations and elementary education and plans to transfer to San Jose State College.

Ruth Wimmer, a brunette music major who prefers simple sophisticated styles, plans to transfer to the University of California, and after graduation wants to teach music theory in the elementary grades.

An accomplished pianist, Miss Wimmer is a graduate of St. John's High School.

The oldest legal fraternity in existence is Phi Delta Phi, which was founded at the University of Michigan in 1869.

Brawny Bears Flee Underdog Rams In Soccer Conference

LIKE a monstrous golden bear that is periodically pricked by the delicate horns of a little lost ram, the University of California and an almighty soccer league recently excluded City College from official competition in all-university league games.

The burly Bears apparently believe that at California soccer is a major Herculean sport only to be enjoyed by them and other four-year colleges which they consider worthy of their esteemed recognition.

The lowly Rams, however, were the only two-year college represented in that league and the team that won or tied for the title in the last four years. During these four years, though, the college has not competed in the National Collegiate Athletic Association regionals because of the NCAA's outdated rule prohibiting two-year colleges from entering national competition.

Then, with one eye on the rule book and the other on their league standings, the confident Bears refused to play the college in Fall 1962 because "playing a two-year college jeopardizes the California soccer program." It also jeopardizes the majestic Bears. Nevertheless, the gracious Californians "permitted" the college to play against other four-year institutions.

Now, however, at a recent NCAA meeting, the league decided to exclude the lowly Rams from all Northern California Intercollegiate soccer competition and formed a second league in which only two-year colleges may compete. Displaying further generosity, the understanding league also formed an Open League in which humble two-year clubs may compete with the peerless Californians and other four-year college teams.

Still not allowing the bourgeois too firm a stronghold, the Californians will not recognize the results of the Open League games, nor will the NCAA. Neither will the two-year college league. Then what is the purpose of the Open League? It couldn't possibly be a Golden Bear token of appensement. No, it could hardly be that!

A more likely purpose for the league is to serve as a brawny Bear training program. After all, where else can they find such excellent teachers as the lowly Rams from whom to learn as well as sharpen their almighty claws?

Amateur Psychologists Take To Highways With '63 License Plates

Amateur psychologists are having a field day on California highways this year.

Using the new 1963 license plates, these aspiring Freudians are trying to determine the personality of the owner of the car through his tag number.

The new tag numbers, as were the old ones, are composed of a combination of three letters and three numbers.

Now take the owner of a green Ford that was in the campus parking lot the other day. His license plate number was JFK 438 and he had a faded NIXON sticker on the bumper. He is automatically classified as the "indecisive" type.

Also there is a frustrated pool shark on The Guardsman staff, so naturally his number is CUE 199.

A few people can still remember the "good ole days" when California plates were mostly numbers.

Then, instead of the educated game of psychoanalysis, people played a proletarian game called poker.

Eagerly their eyes scanned the roadways looking for two pairs, three of a kind, or a straight. In case of a tie, the most expensive car held the winning hand.

San Francisco game experts are now busily engaged in the task of devising new games for the license plates. Some under study are called Causeway Cribbage, Bayshore Black Jack and Bay Bridge.

It will not be long before California drivers will again be able to drive with one eye on the rear mirror and the other eye watching license plates on passing cars, waiting for the combination that will give them a winning hand.

Avant Guardsman!

FAMOUS DATES and events forever continue in man's history; 732, 800, 1492, 1776, 1815, 1914, are only tracks left by a cart on a muddy road soon dried by the sun and eroded by nature, leaving faded memories on wrinkled faces, hearts, hands and bodies.

There was the occupation of the Ruhr. On January 11, 1923, the French and Belgians extended their occupation to this most important industrial district of Germany including the enormous Krupp's Works at Essen, in order to enforce delivery of goods, chiefly iron, steel and coal as reparations, on which Germany had defaulted.

The French and Belgian violation of the peace terms led to sabotage and guerrilla warfare by the German population, and the British and Americans disassociated themselves from this action, which disrupted the whole of Germany's economic life. The occupation of the Ruhr lasted until July, 1925.

And there was the end of Prohibition in the United States on December 5, 1933. No law was ever so unpopular in the U. S. or so constantly violated as the Eighteenth Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, which had imposed prohibition of alcoholic drinks since July, 1919.

Bootlegging and illicit distilling led to robbery and violence. Even respectable citizens defied the law. On its repeal, people reached out eagerly for a sample from the first wine train to arrive in New York, with a cargo of 75,000 gallons from the Italian Swiss Colony vineyards in Asti, California.

And there was the Hindenburg disaster at the U. S. Naval Air Station in Lakehurst, New Jersey, on May 6, 1937. The giant airship, the biggest ever built (803 feet long), was attempting to moor in a thunderstorm after her 21st Atlantic crossing.

Suddenly, flames burst from her tail; she began to buckle in the middle and fell to the ground. Surprisingly, it was still possible for 65 of the 100 passengers and crew members to jump out, but 35 lost their lives. The fire was probably caused by a flash of lightning igniting the hydrogen gas.

And there was the world's first photograph, taken in 1826. Nicephore Niepce succeeded after many years of experimenting in taking a photograph in the camera obscura. The picture was taken from his workroom at his country house, near Chalon-sur-Saone, and was taken in the summer of 1826 on a polished pewter plate coated with bitumen of Judea.

The exposure lasted about eight hours. Niepce brought the photograph from nature, and some other heliographs which were copies of engravings, to England in 1827, in a fruitless attempt to interest the Royal Society in his invention. Two years later he entered into partnership with L. J. M. Daguerre, who in 1839 made public the first practicable process of photography—the daguerreotype.

And then there was Fiume, Hungary's only seaport which, after the collapse of Austria-Hungary, had voted for union with Italy, but at the Paris conference President Wilson refused Italy permission to accept the union.

On September 11 and 12, 1919, Gabriele d'Annunzio, the airman-poet, with a group of volunteers defied the Italian government and seized Fiume. D'Annunzio made himself Regent and reigned like a Renaissance prince for 15 months until dislodged by bombardment by an Italian warship.

What Was Your Reaction The First Time You Gave Blood?

By Kent Mitchell

Bill Gebhardt, sophomore:

My first reaction when I give blood is to the nurse administering the "treatment." If she is attractive, I could lie there all day and give pints of blood with no trouble. I have given to the blood drive since I've been here, and this year will be no different.

Jerry Twomey, sophomore:

I was a little leery about it at first, but afterward I felt fine. I guess everyone has a natural fear of it at first. Last year was the second time I've donated at college, and the sixth time altogether. I certainly plan to donate again this year.

BILL GEBHARDT
"My first reaction is to the nurse administering the treatment . . ."

Kenneth Meltz, counselor:

At first I had a certain amount of unfounded apprehension, but I overcame this. I think the benefits one derives from voluntarily giving blood far outweigh the first feeling of fear. Up to the present time I have given blood four times, and I plan to donate this year.

Actually, I never had the chance to donate blood last year. I wanted to, but I had undergone an operation within a year's time of the blood drive, and therefore rules wouldn't permit me to give. This year all the girls in our sorority are planning to donate.

Sherm Elworthy, English instructor:

I think that donating blood should be done by everyone who is capable of doing so. Besides being an act of charity, it is also a medical necessity. I've donated every year at the college, and many times before and during the war. I'll donate this year.

Barbara Bergk, sophomore:

It made me feel that I was doing a service to the community and to the people involved. I felt I was helping somebody else and not just doing something for my own personal gain. I plan to contribute again this year if I can obtain my guardian's consent.

Beverly Bergk, sophomore:

I had a very sincere feeling that I was helping someone else who was in need of blood. It is a great feeling to know you're doing something for somebody else's benefit. With my guardian's authorization, I'll donate this year.

Keith Woolwine, sophomore:

I couldn't contribute last year because I had had "mono" within a year's time of the blood drive, and wasn't allowed to. This year I am president of the IFC and consequently head of the blood drive. Being in this position, I will definitely donate this year.

AWS Hosts Semiannual Fashion Show, Tea Here Tomorrow

Glamour Through A Looking Glass, the semiannual Associated Women Student fashion show and tea, will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. tomorrow in Smith Hall.

Approximately 800 guests are expected to be present at the affair, including women instructors, high senior coeds from local high schools, as well as women students here, Dean Mary Golding said today.

"It's a formal affair," Dean Golding added.

Highlight of the program will be the announcement of the Best Dressed Coed on campus. Paulette Walti, Rosie Fang and Kathleen Gaffney are the three finalists for the title.

One from this trio will win a trophy and a chance to compete in Glamour Magazine's nationwide contest for Ten Best Dressed Coeds in America.

Mrs. Edward Matzger, a member of the Board of Education, will present the Glamour contest awards.

The nationwide winners will have their pictures taken for the August issue of the magazine. Semifinalists in the competition will receive honorable mention awards.

The 11 other AWS models tomorrow are Sanda Deer, Lydea French, Judith Gall, Gwendolyn Humphrey, Mara Merritt, Suzie Ng, Sandra Profili, Patricia Smith, Rosemary Turk, Ruth Wimmer and Phyllis Webb.

Fashions have been provided by the City of Paris department store.

At midpoint in the show Lynn Goodrich, a sophomore here, will sing the hit song from Flower Drum Song, I Enjoy Being A Girl.

GLAMOUR THROUGH A SHIMMERING LOOKING GLASS, and not through a shattered side-view mirror as depicted here, is the theme for the AWS fashion show and tea tomorrow. Officers "admiring" the cracked mirror are, from left, Marilyn Kuhn, recording secretary; Wanda Lee, corresponding secretary, and Imogene Walker, president.

Business Majors Eligible For 10 RIS Scholarships

A business scholarship trust foundation expects to award at least ten scholarships, including initial and second-year grants, of $100 each to sophomore men enrolled in a business oriented program of study, Dean of Women Mary Golding disclosed today.

The foundation, R.I.S., Inc., takes its name from the initials of its founder's belief of the "Right of the Individual to create and Sell his ideas and products."

An application, including an official transcript of the applicant's college and high school record, should be submitted to Dean Golding's office before next Monday.

The scholarships are to be awarded on the basis of the applicant's need and promise of success.

The only limitation in eligibility is that the student must be a sophomore man. The duration of the award is one year; however, applicants may reapply for a second year, Dean Golding said.

Marine Corps Seeking Prospective Airmen

United States Marine Corps jet pilot Captain John L. Thatcher will be on campus from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. today to interview men who desire to go into Marine aviation after the completion of two years of college.

He will administer aptitude tests to those interested in becoming members of the 187-year-old fighting corps.

ISC TO PRESENT AWARD

The Inter-Sorority Council will present its semiannual scholarship to the freshman coed who obtained the highest grade-point average during the first midterm period, at tomorrow's AWS fashion show and tea.

The award is in the form of a gold book, and is currently on display in the library lobby.

The second portion of entertainment will feature a takeoff on President Kennedy's physical fitness program.

Certificates will be given to the 11 semifinalists and pins will be given them at the coming Feminine Fling.

Faculty members Naomi Rattner, Anka Ohman, Dora Garabaldi and Noreen Smith will have the honor of pouring tea for the fashion show. The receiving line will include AWS officers and Sue Fitzpatrick, vice president of the Associated Students.

In preparation for this tea, the fountain section of the cafeteria will close at 12:30 p.m. tomorrow.

College Offers Students Nearly 50 Scholarships And Awards

By Sherri Jones

Nearly 50 scholarships and awards are available to outstanding students here this semester, Dean Mary Golding revealed today.

Applicants for these scholarships are expected to submit a personal letter and an application to Dean Mary Golding or Dean Ralph Hillsman no later than Monday, April 15.

The letter, of not less than 200 nor more than 500 words, should contain the students' ambitions, needs, work experience and activities both in and out of college, Dean Golding outlined. Application forms are available in Dean Golding's office, S-150.

Scholarships available are as follows:

- The Academy of Art scholarship is awarded to an art major to continue professional training.
- A third-semester music major who has demonstrated outstanding leadership and scholarship is eligible for the Flossita Badger Memorial scholarship in music.
- Two $50 awards to a man and woman student are made possible through the Archibald J. Cloud Fund, established in the memory of the college's first president.
- Alpha Phi Omega offers two scholarships of between $75 and $125 each to a man and woman student active in student affairs.
- Two scholarships of $150 each are available to outstanding women graduates of San Francisco public high schools as a memorial to former superintendent of schools James Denman.
- Proceeds from the annual Chinese Club Sweetheart Ball, sponsored by the Chinese Students' Club here, are used to provide scholarships of $50 each to four or more Chinese students.
- Six scholarships memorializing Allee Eastwood, renowned botanist and horticulturist, and granted to students in the ornamental horticulture program, are made possible through the San Francisco Garden Club and the Central and Peninsula chapters of the California Nurserymen's Association.
- The graduating class scholarships of $50 each are provided for one man and one woman through donations contributed by members of the 1962 graduating class.
- Two scholarships to worthy native San Franciscans of Chinese ancestry are made possible through a grant of $250 from the Square and Circle Chinese Business Women's Association.
- The San Francisco chapter, number one, of the International Footprinters Association, offer two scholarships of $250 each to criminology majors.
- The Mary Roberts Scott Memorial scholarship of $50 is awarded to a woman biology major.
- Sixteen scholarships ranging from $100 to $500 are offered students majoring in hotel and restaurant operation or food preparation by the Hotel and Restaurant Foundation. Funds are obtained through an initial contribution of $25,000 made by the late Harvey M. Toy, prominent San Francisco hotelman, and from more than a dozen other organizations and persons.
- The Florence Louis scholarship and the Edith Pence scholarship also provide scholastic awards for deserving women students.
- The Wall Street Journal will present an outstanding graduating business major with a silver medal and a year's subscription to the periodical.

Any student meeting qualifications for the grants may apply.

San Jose State To Sponsor Summer Course In AFROTC

By Boyd Burtnett

San Jose State College has instituted a program wherein a two-year college transfer student can qualify himself academically during one summer to apply for the advanced course of the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps.

In the past, two-year college students transfering to San Jose State or any other AFROTC institution have not been eligible to partiepate in the training program.

According to San Jose State College officials, the course will be a six-week session, from June 24 until August 2, or a four-week course from August 5 to August 30.

The six-week course will be one hour daily in class and one hour daily in leadership training. The four-week course will be one and one-half hours in class and one and one-half hours in leadership training.

In addition, both courses require that the cadet register for a two or three-unit course each session in humanities, social science, physical or natural science, mathematics or foreign language.

The University of California offers a similar course for the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps.

At the present time, students from City College are attending AFROTC lectures at San Francisco State College in order to continue in advaneed training when they transfer to a four-year institution.

Further information about the summer sessions can be obtained by writing Professor of Air Science, AFROTC Detachment 45, San Jose State College, San Jose, California.

Voice Festival Scheduled In Theater April 19

A solo and ensemble voice festival is the theme for the meeting of the Northern California Junior College Music Educators Association in the college theater on Friday, April 19, Galen Marshall, choral director, announced today.

The concert is to follow a banquet in Smith Hall. Ten Northern California two-year colleges are to be represented when the concert starts at 7:30 p.m.

Marshall indicated that City College is to be represented by the chamber choir performing four Slavic folk songs by Bela Bartok, and four soloists whose selections range from Italian arias to German art songs.

First soloist from the college scheduled to perform is Charlotte Smith, soprano, whose selection is O Del Mio Dolche Ardor, an Italian aria by Gluek.

Baritone Robert Johnston will sing Mit Myrthen Und Rosen, a German art song by Robert Schumann. Third soloist is Lynn Goodrich with Bach's My Heart Ever Faithful. Robert Hawkins is to conclude with Brahms' Von Ewiger Liebe, Marshall said.

Attendance is open to all persons free of charge, Marshall added.

COO Sets Problems Meet April 16 In Smith Hall

Council of Organizations will sponsor its annual problems convention Tuesday, April 16, in Smith Hall, Vince Contreras, COO president, announced last week.

All on-campus groups have been invited to submit lists of problems for consideration at the meeting. Deadline for submission of these "gripes" is next Tuesday at the COO meeting in bungalow 6.

All students here are invited to the convention, Contreras added. Free refreshments will be served.

The original date set for the problems convention was April 2; however, it was in conflict with too many other scheduled activities.

Student Government

Not All Work— AS Leaders Have Fun Too

(Editor's note: Following is the final article in the student government series. Beginning next week, The Guardsman will analyze another subject.)

By Herm Kilgerman

Student government activities aren't restricted to weekly meetings of Student Council.

Each semester, several delegates appointed by the Associated Student president attend conferences of the California Junior College Student Government Association. There is one northern regional meet, composed of some 26 colleges, and one statewide gathering to which 65 to 67 colleges send delegates.

The purpose of these meetings is to pool resources and to try to propose solutions to problems which face certain colleges in the area.*

City College has always played a major role in the conferences. Several of its proposals, including one that encouraged other colleges to sponsor an annual blood drive, have unanimously been passed by the association in recent years.

The most recent northern regional conference was held last Saturday at Foothill College in Los Altos Hills. Delegates will attend the state meeting in Disneyland next month.

Toward the conclusion of each semester, Student Council honors an outstanding student and instruetor here on the merit of their service to the AS during the preceding semester. Nominations come from either cabinet or council members, but only council may vote.

Winners are honored at a Student Council dinner held just prior to the beginning of finals. A plaque is presented each recipient.

Also at this affair each member of Student Council and cabinet is given a service award certificate and Rams' head lapel pin, in recognition of his service to the campus and active participation in student government.

Furthermore, both council and cabinet are requested by the AS president to attend as many social activities as possible during each semester.

This encompasses everything from the Frosh and Soph Balls to athletic events.

It is hoped that the past 50 or so inches of newspaper copy has been beneficial to the entire student body here and that it has prompted more students to become interested in their student government system to the extent that they will actively partiepate.

Meetings of Student Counell are held at noon each Tuesday and Thursday in bungalow six. All are invited.

Club Cavalcade: COO Okays Constitution Of RAMS Party

Council of Organizations last week approved the constitution of the RAMS party, thus paving the way for on-campus status.

The RAMS stand for Representation and Action for the Majority of Students, and have opened membership to "any regularly enrolled student who is in agreement with the ideas and purposes set forth by the organization in its constitution."

The new group was granted full recognition by Student Counell.

- Another new group, the Ski Club, has submitted its constitution to COO for approval. Purpose of the new organization is to encourage the sport of skiing among college students.
- Still another newly formed club is in the process of planning coming activities. The Veterans Club, open to anyone who has served at least one year in any branch of the armed forces, meets during College Hour Fridays in A-201.
- Newly elected offieers of the Dental Assisting Society are President Carole Mar, Vice President Gayle Wilson, Secretary Ann Wells, Treasurer Betty Chin and COO Representative Sue Rykin.

The society's purpose is to promote dental health on the campus by working closely with the San Francisco Dental Assistants Association.

- Speaking before the Student California Teachers Association during College Hour Friday in C-269, John A. Frisk, former student here, will discuss the student-teacher relationship in the classroom.

Spring Photos In Cloud Hall Gallery

An exhibition of spring photographs, taken by students and faculty members in previous semesters, is ready for display in the Cloud Hall Gallery, Emmett Smith, photography instructor, announced yesterday.

Typical spring scenes—flowers, trees and children—make up the majority of the collection.

"The displays serve three purposes," Smith stated. "First, the photography students are given a chance to exhibit their work and have it appreciated.

"Second, the pictures give inspiration and instruction to aspiring photographers. Finally, they give pleasure to the student body and faculty members."

Future gallery plans include one-man and group showings from the Professional Photographers of Northern California. Later, Smith said he hopes to feature one-man shows.

Rams Dropped From Soccer Loop

Vol. 56, No. 5 WEDNESDAY, MARCH 27, 1963 Page 4

Adams All-League

Everett Adams, the little man who is big under pressure, added another honor to his 1963 list when he was named to the Golden Gate Conference's first club basketball team.

The Rams, conference winner and third in the state tourney, placed 6-8 center Elton McGriff and forward Art Adams on the second team.

Everett Adams, the 5-10 playmaking guard, was named to the Foothill All-Tournament team, the State All-Tournament team and was the leading Ram scorer in conference play.

McGriff, a 1962 Big Eight Conference all-league selection, was the leading rebounder, while Art Adams ranked high among the scorers.

Jack Gleason (Foothill), Taft Jackson (Oakland), Mickey Toner (Diablo Valley) and Leroy Walker (Contra Costa) completed the first team. Walker was a repeat.

Sam Coston (Diablo Valley), Henry Rapp (San Jose) and Russ White (Oakland) rounded out the second club.

California, League Deliver The Crushing Coup De Grace

By David Kleinberg

A two-year campaign by the University of California to eliminate City College from the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference became an ugly reality when the league voted at a recent meeting to drop City College.

Relying on the excuse that "soccer is a major sport at California and to continue playing a two-year college would jeopardize our program," California, after a series of actions, rallied enough support at the recent meeting to deal the final and crushing blow.

City College, a David among a league sprinkled with Goliaths, was the only two-year institution in the six-team league, but, nevertheless, had won or tied for the NCISC title for the last four years.

The premeditated oust did not leave the Rams without a 1963 schedule. The NCISC carefully designed a five-team two-year college league composed of San Mateo, Monterey, Diablo Valley, Menlo and San Francisco.

San Francisco will retain its opportunity to meet the four-year colleges, but only in contests that will not count in either league standings.

It was two years ago that California found soccer a major sport. Cal's "magnanimous" offer to "let" San Francisco play the four-year universities on a practice basis was promptly rejected by Ram coach Roy Diederichsen.

California brought the City College issue up at the league meeting last year, but the league voted to keep the status quo until further study could be secured. California willingly announced it would not play San Francisco, and took the forfeit as a loss in the league standings last September.

At the recent meeting, college Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman once again reiterated the administration's view. The administration held that City College, as a patriarch of the 27-year-old conference, had flowered the league through the years. It was in vain.

In other quarters, some felt the league decision was made because a consistent two-year college winner makes for "poor prestige."

"They never said anything when they beat us," one Ram coach put it.

California's Side In The Soccer Boot

California was in favor of dropping City College from the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference to keep its athletic program consistent, Cal Athletic Director Pete Newell told The Guardsman yesterday.

"It's an unfortunate situation," Newell said. "It's not a question of ability. San Francisco year in and year out has waxed our ears out. It's just a case of consistency.

"Five years ago the NCAA recognized soccer as a major sport. You have to conduct yourself as a major sport does. It's a position we don't enjoy, but it's one we have to take. You can't have one sport conducted one way and another differently.

"I don't know of another college as strong in a sport as City College is in soccer."

When asked why California continues to meet Foothill in swimming, considered a major sport, Newell explained that all competition with Foothill is on a non-league basis.

On California's policy not to play two-year college teams, many have asked why the Bears continue competition against Foothill in swimming, considered a major sport.

Concerning the future, Diederichsen surmised, "Not playing in the big league takes a lot of enthusiasm out of it. We've built up a really good soccer program.

"It's like taking the Yankees and putting them in the Sally League."

Diederichsen believes the soccer program can't help but decline a little. A lot of players came to City College because of the chance to compete in the NCISC.

Against the two-year colleges in 1963, Diederichsen is sure there will not be any problems. "I'm not belittling the other clubs," the veteran mentor said, "but it's going to take several years to catch up to our play."

Rain Postpones Chabot-Ram Baseball

College Meets Oakland Friday

The Ram baseballers avoided a long trip to San Leandro and kept their small undefeated record clean when the rain came and washed out Friday's scheduled contest against Chabot's new Gladiators.

The game most probably will be rescheduled for the Easter week.

With a practice bout at San Francisco State today and conference games against Oakland Friday and Contra Costa next Tuesday, the Rams are in for a busy week.

Behind a brilliant pitching performance by Rich Nold, the Rams made it one in a row with a 5-1 win over Chabot in the Golden Gate Conference opener March 19.

Thirteen Gladiators struck out against the fireballing Nold, who scattered eight hits over nine innings.

Nold's over-all performance was nearly impeceable, his only slip coming in the fifth when the losers combined three singles to ruin the winner's shutout bid.

It was a pitcher's game. The defense played errorless ball, and the hitters displayed sufficient—though not outstanding—power.

Russ Kunkle's two singles in four trips tallied three runs, enough for the win, even without Butch Bussanich's one-run triple.

Highly sought Walt Williams, a hard-hitting left fielder, scored the other insurance run and picked up two hits in four trips.

Rich Farrell, the Rams' leading long ball hitter, did not have a great day, but did double (the only extra base hit of the contest) in four trips. Dave Hogan, Lou Bevilacqua and Pete Giovanola collected singles.

In a practice contest March 20, USF Frosh squeezed by the San Francisco Rams, 3-2.

Pitching chores were delegated equally among Joe Dalpogetti, touched for two runs; Jack Burgett, credited with the loss after surrendering a one-run gift in the fourth, and Jack Horner, who pitched three innings of shutout ball.

Defending Tennis Champions Clash With Comets Friday

Proceeding along its winning ways, the defending state champion Ram tennis team, with a 2-0 conference record, will journey across the bay to match shots with promising Contra Costa at 2:30 p.m. Friday on the Nichol Park courts.

The Comets boast a strong team with the addition of newcomer Dennis Lang. Lang oustcd last year's team leader Roger Liske and currently is reputed to be the rookie to watch in the future. With Liske, Contra Costa will be strong in the doubles.

Although the Comets are tough, Ram coach Roy Diederichsen believes "they shouldn't give us any trouble." The Rams are deep seven strong, while Contra Costa has but two sure dependables.

Diederichsen was more than satisfied with the way the team has been performing, but commented that Bob Siska, the team leader, hasn't been up to par. However, he is confident that Siska will be back to normal for the tough meets after Easter.

The placings are beginning to level off, the only exception being the sixth man. The present one to five men are Siska, Bob Murio, Rich Anderson, Gordon Miller and Jack Kern.

The Rams trounced the Cal Frosh, 7-2, March 18 at Berkeley. In singles Jan Kuccra (Cal) downed Siska, 7-9, 6-0, 6-3; Murio topped Don Adolphson (C), 6-4, 7-5; Anderson took Gene Cantie (C), 3-6, 6-3, 6-2; Miller beat Bob McGuire, 6-0, 9-7; Kern stopped Rick Peterson (C), 6-2, 6-0, and Ed Jilka whipped Scott Canchois (C), 6-3, 6-0.

The Bears will try for revenge in next Monday's match against the Rams in Golden Gate Park.

Rams To Gator 'Glades' To Flex Fencing Blades

City College's fencers will take a short trip over to San Francisco State to battle in an intercollegiate multiple meet at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Last Saturday the Recreation Association had a sports day at Hartnell College, and another one is scheduled this Saturday at Cabrillo College.

Golfers Battle Perennial Champion Bulldogs Friday

By John Arberry

Riding the momentum of a smashing 28-2 win over arch-rival Oakland in the college's first Golden Gate Conference match, the Ram golfers tangle with powerful San Mateo this Friday at Burlingame with the tee-off set for 1:30 p.m.

In the romp over the Thunderbirds, Dennis Drucker led the way by shooting a 77, followed by veteran John Steddin's 78 and Jim Roman's 81, with Bruce Bair and Mike Selsnik firing 85 and 86, respectively, to round out the first five.

San Mateo, perennial conference champion of the old Big Eight Conference and state champion for the past two years, topped the Rams in a practice match earlier this year.

The Bulldogs present a classy and formidable team, which includes Tom Brigham, a veteran from San Mateo's state championship team of last year and the California two-year college tournament medalist.

Returnee Dick Lotz, the current California amateur champion, was the number one man for the Bulldogs last year. Third place is held by Bob Snyder, 1962 Peninsula league medalist.

Rounding out the starting five for the Bulldogs are Jeff Baker, number four man, who played golf as a freshman at Oregon State before transferring, and Mark Moritz, the number six man for the Bulldogs last year, who was most valuable golfer at Hillsdale in 1961.

Tracksters Meet Jaguars, Vikings

The Ram spikers, shot down twice by rain and cancellations, "plan" to appear at San Jose Friday to meet Diablo Valley and San Jose.

Diablo Valley seems to be sulking in the doldrums of mediocrity with times and distances somewhat shy of Ram marks, while San Jose displays more formidable characteristics.

While miler Gene Plotkin of the Rams, a 4:37.4 man, should find competition from San Jose's Bob Nelson's 4:28.0 ability, Phil Daneel, two-mile Ram, pushing 10:20, will have even greater problems with the Jaguars' Ron Seuresic, who bids lower by a full minute.

Bob Hector, hurdler, with 15:3 for the highs and 21:8 for the lows, seems to be the only Ram track man who can breathe easily at San Jose. Ozzie Norris may find that a 51.3-440 is a little short of Jaguar Rich Noel's 47.6, just as Claude Shipp, ex-Ram grid backfield ace, may have trouble overshadowing Bill Corina's 9.7 in the 100 with his 10.2. Shipp could pull a surprise, though.

In the field, however, San Jose has virtually no contenders of great stature, and Lon Brantley, Ram ace in the hole, is a walkaway in the broad jump, boasting a 23-11½, two feet better than San Jose's best offer.

The rained-out Golden Gate Relays, scheduled March 16 at Foothill's "all-weather" track, has been reset for Easter week.

Brown Stars In Intra Cage Play

In last week's intramural competition in the independent league, the Divine Ones whipped the Untouchables, 63-48, as sharpshooter Wharton Brown dumped in 20 points.

Hotel & Restaurant hoopster Mark White scored 23 as H&R downed the Red Sox, 45-38. The Turnbull's Blues took one from the Hawaiian Bla's, 34-27. Steve Hart was high man for the Blues with eight points. The Newman Club skipped by the Filipino Club, 46-27.

In tonight's action the Brothers Five meet the Filipino Club at 7:15 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, the Hawaiian Bla's meet the Untouchables at 8:15 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, the Newman Club takes on the Red Sox at 7:15 in the women's gymnasium, and the Divine Ones try Hotel & Restaurant at 8:15, women's gymnasium.

In fraternity league competition Alpha Sigma Delta meets Zeta Phi Sigma at 7:15 p.m., and Beta Tau takes on Alpha Kappa Rho at 8:15 p.m. next Tuesday.

Rams To Try Bulldogs In Swim Meet Friday

The Ram swimmers will face their toughest opponent thus far when they take on powerful San Mateo Friday at the Mills High School pool.

The Bulldogs rolled over failing San Jose, 58-37, in their conference opener and are picked for second place behind powerful Foothill.

With free styler Ed West and backstroker Harvey Gilmore the only returning veterans, San Mateo was luckily endowed with a strong crew of rookie free stylers.

Mayor Backs College Blood Drive

Proclamation Hails April 1 To 5 As 'Blood Days' In SF

By Herm Kilgerman

Mayor George Christopher praised the college and its annual Inter-Fraternity Council-sponsored blood drive by proclaiming this week as "Blood Days" in San Francisco.

The mayor issued the decree during brief ceremonies held in his City Hall office last Wednesday.

In attendance were Beverly and Barbara Bergk, IFC President Keith Woolwine, Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman and nurse Matilda Gall of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank.

The Bergk sisters, 19-year-old identical twins in their fourth semester here, were present not only to add glamour but as students who have donated blood in the college's drive last year and who plan to donate again this year.

Woolwine accepted the proclamation on behalf of the college and the council of which he is president.

In issuing the decree, Mayor Christopher commented that he "hopes the citizens of San Franeisco become aware of the outstanding deed City College is undertaking and that this year's blood drive exceeds those of previous years."

He personally urged all capable of contributing blood to do so this week. "This drive shouldn't stop at the college level, however," he added. "All San Franciseans should feel it their duty to donate to the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank since one never knows when a desperate need may arise."

Full Text Of The Mayor's March 27 Proclamation

WHEREAS, The City College of San Francisco has received such excellent recognition redounding to the credit not only of the college but also to the City of San Francisco; and

WHEREAS, This recognition has resulted from the enthusiasm of the Inter-Fraternity Council and the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco in conjunction with the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank of the San Francisco Medical Society during their annual blood drive; and

WHEREAS, The City College of San Francisco has donated more credits through the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank of the San Francisco Medical Society than any other college in the State of California:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, George Christopher, mayor of the City and County of San Francisco, wish to commend for their efforts, the Inter-Fraternity Council and the Associated Students of the City College of San Francisco, and do hereby proclaim April 1 to 5, 1963, as "BLOOD DAYS" in San Francisco; and I do further express my confidence that the City College of San Francisco will continue to present as fine an image to this community as it has in the past.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the City and County of San Francisco to be affixed this 27th day of March, 1963.

Ricky's Red Tops, Mary Michaels At Double C-Hour Rally

By Boyd Burtnett

A double College Hour at 10 a.m. Friday will highlight Inter-Fraternity Council's annual blood drive, college officials announced yesterday.

The blood drive is scheduled here for two days, tomorrow, April, 4 and Friday, April 5, and the blood bank will set up its apparatus for donations in C-249 from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. both days.

A College Hour rally is to be held in the men's gymnasium.

Entertainment Friday will be provided by Ricky and the Red Tops, a band from a North Beach nightspot called Pierre's, and Mary Michaels from the hungry i. Also, two cocktail waitresses from Pierre's will be present.

Also slated to appear are folk singers The Town Criers.

Last Monday was the scene of a car parade sponsored by the IFC to launch "Blood Days." A selected number of cars from each fraternity and sorority on campus paraded from the intersection of Market and Embarcadero to City College to advertise the drive.

Blood donated during the drive will go into the City College account at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, and a donor may draw an unlimited amount on this account for himself or any member of his immediate family. Also, he may draw up to eight pints for any person of his choosing who needs blood.

The IFC again reminded persons under 21 that if they wish to donate blood, they must first secure the permission of their parents or legal guardian.

For convenience, The Guardsman has printed a parental permission form on page 3 for all prospective donors under 21.

The Irwin Memorial makes certain exceptions to the rule cited above. A married person between 18 and 21 need not have the parents' permission and the same rule applies for a divorcee.

For persons planning to donate, the Irwin Memorial has published the following hints: A low fat meal should be eaten within four hours before giving blood and donors should weigh a minimum of 110 pounds.

Acceptance of borderline cases in the donation of blood will be left to the discretion of the attending physician.

Today Last Date To Drop Class Without Penalty

The last day to withdraw from a class without penalty is today, according to Registrar Mary Jane Learnard.

Students must see their counselors, obtain the required forms, get the necessary signatures and file the completed form in the registrar's office.

Urrea, Greenberg 'Cutest' At Ball

Mercedes Urrea and Bob Greenberg were selected as the cutest couple at the semiannual Frosh Ball March 22.

Miss Urrea, a second semester student here, received a first-place ribbon from Delta Psi sorortiy, a gold crown donated by Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity and two dozen red roses, courtesy of Phi Beta Delta fraternity.

The couple was also presented with tickets to the Sheraton-Palace Garden Court for both dinner and show. This prize was contributed by the Hawaiian Club, the Newman Club and Alpha Phi Omega fraternity.

Runners-up in the contest were Eleanor Ramos and Chris Manuel, and Rown Hoffman and Phyllis Thompson.

Frosh Class President Bob Roddick termed the affair "highly successful" and estimated that between 350 and 400 students were in attendance during the "peak hours" of the ball.

Rosie Fang Named Best Dressed Coed

Rosie Fang, a commercial art major here, was selected as this college's best dressed coed.

The announcement was made at last Thursday's Associated Women Student fashion show and tea. Miss Fang, originally, was in competition with 12 contestants. The field was narrowed to three finalists two weeks ago.

Miss Fang will have her picture sent east to the headquarters of Glamour Magazine, sponsor of a nationwide contest to select the ten best dressed coeds on American campuses.

If she is selected as one of the "top ten" her picture will appear in the August issue of the periodical. She will also receive a free trip to New York.

Semifinalists in the national competition receive honorable mention certificates.

Runners-up in the contest were Kathleen Gaffney and Paulette Walti.

ROSIE FANG, contest winner.

ISC Trophy Goes To Miss Balala

The Inter-Sorority Counell presented Nicollette Balala with its semiannual scholarship trophy at the Associated Women Student fashion show and tea last Thursday.

The trophy is presented to the freshman coed who earned the highest grade point average during the first midterm period.

The winner is a graduate of Lincoln High School and has maintained a 3.5 average during her first midterm period at the college.

The freshman attributed her success to "study, study, study." She is a criminology major and plans to attend University of California after graduation.

When pointed out to Miss Balala that Washington High graduates had won the award for the four previous semesters, she commented, "Lincoln will do it from now on."

Previous winners of the award include Marina Popoff, Spring 1961; Kathryn A. Kafadian, Fall 1961; Karen Kriete, Spring 1962, and Jan Meilach, Fall 1962.

DECREEING APRIL 1 TO 5 AS BLOOD DAYS, Mayor George Christopher issues a proclamation to the college. On hand at the ceremony were City College coed twins Barbara (left) and Beverly Bergk.

Accepting the decree on behalf of the college was Inter-Fraternity Council President Keith Woolwine. The mayor said, "I . . . commend for their efforts, the Inter-Fraternity Council and the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco . . ."—Guardsman photo by Ed Hee.

Donors Respond To Disaster; Prior Donation Is Insurance

HOVERING between life and death in a San Francisco hospital was pretty 8-year-old Ana Rosa; 50 per cent of her little body was pitifully scorched.

As she lay there, totally incapacitated, the search began.

To treat the little girl, doctors needed supplies of special blood, the blood of former burn victims, containing a substance that could save little Ana's life.

All major communications media went to work in an attempt to locate prospective donors.

Then the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank in San Francisco issued an appeal to all former burn victims. Immediately, hundreds of helpful people responded.

And little Ana received the blood so desperately needed for her treatment.

Today little Ana Rosa is about 10 years old; she can use her hands; she can walk—all because someone gave. The special service given this little girl is available to students and faculty here and to more than 1,200,000 other people in eight counties. To serve all these people, the blood bank needs donors—people donating blood before they or their immediate family need it.

The advance deposit plan has several advantages. First, it is of special advantage to the donor because he may give blood now when he wants to rather than later when he may have to. For instance, if no one had contributed blood prior to the recent San Jose explosion, the disaster victims' families would have been compelled to donate immediately, and if there had been an insufficient blood supply, many more victims could have died.

Second, before use, blood must be processed, analyzed and typed according to suitability for transfusion purposes. All tests are meticulously performed by two technologists, and the results are cross-checked to eliminate any chance of error. Since in most cases blood is needed immediately, it is therefore advantageous if not necessary to have a reserve supply.

Third, contributing regularly insures the donor of the best possible health protection for him and his family. Specifically, the donor is able to withdraw his deposit from the blood bank as easily as he may withdraw a check from his checking account. And just as checks may be sent to anyone anywhere, so may withdrawals from the blood bank.

Perhaps the most urgent need for donations is in the field of open heart surgery. The number of these operations performed is increasing with amazing rapidity. From ten such operations performed in one year in 1956, there were 16 to 18 performed per week in 1962. And most of the blood is obtained from donors recruited especially for open heart surgery cases.

Donor recruitment and donation are the only ways supplies can be maintained for the massive demands made upon the blood bank. Tomorrow and Friday are the days reserved for City College to help meet these demands. Through the cooperation and teamwork of all campus fraternities and Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman, all students and faculty here will be able to donate for their own protection and for the protection of their loved ones. Since students under 21 must have written parental permission to donate blood, The Guardsman has published on page 3 a permission form which may be submitted in the office of the dean of men.

Perhaps some persons donate blood primarily for the protection and insurance they themselves will gain.

However, there is another side to the coin. He who voluntarily donates enjoys the satisfaction of knowing that his donation, while in itself self-insurance, is in actuality thoroughly selfless.

Remember. Because someone gave, little Ana Rosa is alive today.

Daddy Rabbit Hooked On Grass

Baby Rabbit Finds Fame, Fortune With Multi-Colored Chicken Eggs

By Boyd Burtnett

One of the greatest questions ever to plague mankind is, "Who is the Easter Bunny? Where did he come from?"

The whole world is aware, of course, that the Easter Bunny is the furry little creature who delivers the multi-colored eggs on the lawns of all homes on Easter morning.

What the world did not know until now was the birthplace of the Easter Bunny, what kind of a childhood he had, and how he happened to enter his unique profession.

His real name is Yodar Hodgekiss, and he was born on the wrong side of the hutch in a large midwestern city in the United States. He had a very unhappy childhood and at the tender age of three had to quit school to help support the family.

Yodar's father was a junkie who was hooked on alfalfa and who beat his wife. One of the reasons young Yodar quit school was because his father was netted by the police in an alfalfa raid and had to spend a little time in the stir.

Yodar's mother was a gentle doe who did her best to keep her family provided for in the slums of a big city. She had come from a good family but had fallen for the wrong buck in her younger, more wilder years.

And then came that big moment in history.

Having resigned himself to a life of hard work and poverty, Yodar took a job cleaning chicken coops at night. Indeed, this was strange work for a rabbit, but when one is starving, one cannot be choosey.

As he was sweeping out one day he noticed an egg which had been thrown out of a nest by a hen. Earlier, a parakeet had come in to paint the coop and had spilled some red, white and blue paint on the egg.

Yodar had inherited his mother's love of beautiful works of art and so he picked up the egg to take it home and show to her.

Now it so happens that it was Easter morning when Yodar found the egg, and as he was carrying it home in his paws he was walking through a rich section of town. The sound of a sobbing child reached his large pointed ears.

Being a curious rabbit he stopped and listened to a crying boy tell his father how sad he was because it was just Easter rather than Christmas and he wasn't getting any presents.

As the anguished father listened he noticed Yodar with the colored egg. He walked over and slipped the rabbit a five spot, told him to keep his mouth shut and went to hide the egg so his son could look for it.

All of a sudden Yodar found himself in business. It was a hard struggle when the next Easter rolled around, but when it did he was there with more and better eggs.

Now young Yodar is the symbol of free enterprise and the American way of life. He runs a world-wide business and only has to work one day out of the year. The rest of the time he relaxes in his penthutch on top of the Empire State building.

Yodar's father? Well, he took the cure and is now working for his son as a dye specialist, each year developing new colors for the eggs.

But do not think the problems of the Easter Bunny are over. Someone in Washington has noticed that he has a monopoly on the Easter egg business and the Attorney General is getting ready to file the Sherman Anti-trust Act against him.

How Many Hours A Day Do You Devote To Your Studies?

By Kent Mitchell

VICKIE RUIZ
"I usually study about three to four hours a night."

Vickie Ruiz, freshman:
I usually study about three to four hours a night; however, not all at one time. I'll study for a while and then stop to do something else. This breaks up the time and makes it easier to study. I spend about an hour and a half on English alone.

Bob Mott, sophomore:
When I have a test I study about two hours—that is at least enough time so that I know what I'm doing at test time. If I don't have a test I just do the prescribed assignment and studying. I spend most time on economics, as that is my most difficult course.

Elliot Sevier, freshman:
On the average I spend about two and a half hours a day. However, if I have a test the next day I spend more time studying. The majority of my time is spent on advanced algebra, as math is my favorite subject. I usually study at home, but get more done at the library.

Sandy Castelli, sophomore:
I spend two to three hours a night on homework—sometimes more, but not very often. I devote most of my time to English because that's my most difficult course and I enjoy it—the most. Occasionally I go to the college library during the day and study.

Tony Taormina, sophomore:
I spend about three hours a day on homework, but I break it up into two hour and a half schedules. Because my hardest courses are English I-A and French, I spend most of my time on them. I think written work is more enjoyable than studying and do it first.

Victor Wong, sophomore:
I spend three to four hours a night studying, but I try to break it up into prescribed shifts. I set a certain amount of time for each course. I concentrate on studying first and then do my written work. If I have a test, I study for that first of all.

Stephanie Serao, freshman:
Usually about two hours a night, however, I split it up into half-hour intervals. I spend a good deal of time doing stenography. I enjoy doing it because it's "busy work" and keeps up my interest. I do a great deal of my homework in the library after classes.

Karen Henderson, freshman:
I spend about two and a half hours on homework, but I break it up into half-hour periods. I always study at home and concentrate mainly on English and math. Because I work after school I have a minimum amount of time in which to do my homework.

Fred Tapley, freshman:
During the week days I spend about two hours a night. This is all the time I have because I work. On the weekends I have more time and get more studying done. My hardest courses are English and math, so I spend more time on them. I'd rather do written work than study.

Bernadette Barclay, freshman:
On the average I spend about three hours a night studying, and I always do it after dinner. However, the temptation of television and the telephone is pretty great at home, so sometimes I study in the library after school. I concentrate mainly on English.

Avant Guardsman!

WHENEVER particular people congregate—as one of America's leading whiskey manufacturers claims—it is time for social drinking and gathering, and one topic in the conversation is apt to steal the whole show.

A certain idiomatic expression is the basis for this performance and experience: Remember when . . . ?

Oh, yes! We have it heard all too often sometimes and still, the expression is the ultimate card drawn out of the deck that will always save a boring or dull conversation of a party.

For instance, take La Belle Epoque. The 1890's in Paris were a decade of elegance and perception, a heady mixture of high intellect and frivolous vivacity. Wit, so soon to be dulled, flowed faster than wine in the salons of the hostesses, in the theater, in the fashionable boulevard restaurants and nightclubs and in the country chateaux of the beau monde.

As effervescent as champagne, but also stained uglily as the celebrated Alfred Dreyfus case and sundry social and economical problems, the Mauve Decade, as it is sometimes called, had an array of fantastic extravaganzas.

There was Comte Boniface de Castellane, who acquired $15 million when he married Anna Gould, but refused to allow their first son to be named after her father because the latter was a "thief." "And yet," Anna wanly observed, "you don't mind taking the money of a thief."

And there was playwright Tristan Bernard, perhaps the last of the great boulevardiers, whom Sacha Guitry called "Paris' best-loved and fullest-bearded wit."

Bernard, once offered a formula to would-be dramatists that will be remembered in history. "Write any sort of play as long as the subject amuses you. But if you burn Moscow or upset thrones, do so because the little blonde no longer loves her husband on account of the dark young man who lives on the third floor of one of the houses you intend to burn."

And there was Sarah Bernhardt, who was idolized; when notified of the first act curtain the call-boy would knock on her door and say, "Madame, it will be 8 o'clock when it suits you."

Sarah Bernhardt was the theater and the theater was Paris. She belonged to the French public as completely and inviolably as the Eiffel tower.

And there was the artist Forain, whose patience expired when he heard a tiresome woman declare that she would shoot herself when she began to show signs of age, Forain tersely said, "Fire!"

Again, there was the night at Maxim's when the farce writer Georges Feydeau was served a lobster which was minus one claw and, after complaining to the waiter, was informed that lobsters are combative beasts and sometimes fight each other in the tank. "Ah?" said Feydeau, "then take this away and bring me a victor."

Another one of the wits was Alphonse Allais. A playwright of bright, somewhat offbeat comedies, he was once asked by a cultivated-looking group to address them on the subject of the theater.

He opened his address with "Ladies and Gentlemen, I have been asked to talk to you about the theater, but I am afraid the subject will make you sad. Shakespeare is dead, Moliere is dead, Racine is dead, Marivaux is dead . . . and I am not feeling too well myself."

Lastly, we'll mention Alfred Capus. Myopic, smartly grotesque, Capus was the image of a caricature who once declared that women keep a special corner of their memories for sins they have never committed . . .

The Pride Of Pierre's

Chemistry Major Doubles As Night Club Waitress

When an English instructor decides to go on the town, he is apt either to start—or end up—in San Francisco's North Beach.

While in that neighborhood, he will surely be attracted to Pierre's, a nightclub at 546 Broadway—either by the noise or by a curvaceous pulchritudinous blonde cocktail waitress.

The instructor was Terry Kilpatrick and the girl, Dorothy "Dee" Lowe.

It all started a month ago when Kilpatrick, touring the area, was attracted to Pierre's and to his amazement, recognized Miss Lowe, one of the two cocktail waitresses, as one of his students!

DOROTHY "DEE" LOWE

Miss Lowe (otherwise known as Sarah Coed by her friends), is a 23-year-old blue-eyed beauty of Brigitte Bardot's dimensions (36-22-35), excitingly clad in black or red leotards, wearing a blonde wig on weekends and her naturally curly red hair on other days.

Born in Texas but soon moving to Southern California, Miss Lowe was graduated from Redlands High School in 1958 and then came to the big city of San Francisco a year later. Right away, she found a job in an insurance company and another part-time employment at Squaw Valley as a cocktail waitress.

However, she soon grew tired of the jobs and learned from a friend, Marie Trisolino, a waitress at Pierre's, that her employers, Maurice Bessiere and Dick Boyd, were looking for another waitress. She rapidly took the offer.

That was six months ago. "I like the club very much because of the atmosphere, and the pay is good," she commented, "and the band players are really a bunch of nice guys."

One of the things she learned when she took the job was how to guard against "fresh" customers. "There is always the usual number of fresh characters at the club and the first thing I learned was how to handle them," she said, but refused to divulge the methods she uses.

While at Pierre's, Miss Lowe also longed to return to school and so decided to attend City College, where she is now in her first semester, majoring in chemistry.

Of this unusual chemistry major decision, she explained that "when I was in high school I was interested in this subject, and although everyone tried to talk me out of it, I stuck with it and I like it very much so far."

Her only complaints about the college is—everyone's—concerning the many hills one has to climb many times during the day.

However, when she appeared for her first classes last January, over four years since her graduation, she declared that "I felt really self-conscious and I thought for sure someone would hand me a cane or a wheelchair. Since then, I have had opportunities to see a lot of students older than I am," she confidently said.

"I am carrying only eight units, and it's not that hard to study with this amount, but I lose a lot of time, spending approximately ten hours on the Municipal Railway and only eight in classes. The good thing about it, though, is that I get a chance to study while on the bus."

Working five nights at week at Pierre's, she gets along with the ruckus quite well. Although the club is dimly lighted, the band blaring, customers shouting, whistling and twisting, Miss Lowe commented, "After a while you don't notice the noise anymore and become more or less immune to it."

Miss Lowe is scheduled to appear with Miss Trisolino and with Ricky and the Red Tops Quartet, in conjunction with the Inter-Fraternity Council's blood drive Friday.

Pam Washburn In Miss SF Finals

Coed Contestant Here 'Dazzled But Happy'

"State College has four women entered in the annual Miss San Francisco beauty contest and, therefore, students there feel that they have cornered the city's most beautiful women and are almost sure of success," said the beautiful brunette coed with a short nervous laugh.

"And at City College they don't even know that we also have one entered," she added reassuringly.

It all started two months ago when Pam Washburn received a letter from the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce inviting her to enter the annual Miss San Francisco beauty pageant. Dazzled, bewitched, but happy, she rapidly accepted the offer and formally entered the contest. "It was kind of a challenge," she added, smiling.

Bewildered by being chosen by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, she soon found out that "someone" had submitted her name for the pageant, "probably a girl friend at State," she said.

First, there was the critical eye of the judges in the first preliminary judging among 38 women. Another preliminary judging was then held, this time with only 16 women.

By the time the third and final judging—the real one—is made to choose its lucky winner from the eight finalists, Miss Washburn may have been selected from among 62 contestants.

The three preliminary judgings were based on a personality contest, in which common knowledge was tested and opinion questions were asked; a talent presentation (her hobbies are piano and photography modeling), in which she sang and danced; and a swim suit competition, for which she is well proportioned—although she refuses to divulge her dimensions.

She has never entered any beauty contests whatsoever and her nervousness—as well as her mother's—is continually part of her since she signed up for the pageant.

A publicity-shy beauty, Miss Washburn felt that "I didn't want any publicity because I am a bad loser and didn't want to let everybody know that I was in the contest until I was a finalist."

A member of Beta Tau sorority since she entered City College, Miss Washburn hopes that every one of her sorority sisters will be present at the pageant to support her, and confidently added that "my chances are just as good as anyone's else."

Miss Washburn, aged 19, is a native San Franciscan majoring in elementary education. She was graduated from Lowell High School in 1961 and entered City College in the same year.

The pageant is to be held at the Jack Tar Hotel starting at 8 p.m. Saturday. Tickets are available at the catering and sales office of the hotel and at the Junior Chamber of Commerce for $2.50 and $3.00.

Prizes to the winners are a trip to Honolulu by commercial airline and cash scholarships. In addition, there are numerous other prizes donated by some of the city's department stores and private firms, in the form of diamond rings, sweaters, skirts, dresses and other feminine attire.

RAMS Campaign For Campus Betterment

By Herm Kilgerman

As the letters of its name implies, the RAMS stand for Representation and Action for the Majority of Students, Vince Contreras, the party's originator and charter president, revealed this week.

"We are not merely a political party," Contreras emphasized. "The RAMS will strive to improve conditions both in student government and the college, as a whole, while also trying to stir up more student participation in local activities," he added.

Although the RAMS supported candidates in last semester's Associated Student elections, it was not an on-campus group. Only two weeks ago did Council of Organizations and Student Council approve its constitution, thus paving the way for on-campus status.

Any registered student at the college, an AS cardholder or not, is invited to join the group. "It isn't necessary for members to have a desire to run for AS office," Contreras emphasized.

"We just want members who are interested in improving the way of life on campus," he said.

Meetings are held during College Hours Friday in S-311. Faculty advisers to the group are Sherm Elworthy and Gerald Mullin.

All members of the party will have a voice in business transactions. "Our philosophy is based on the pleasure of the majority of students and not just on a few officers," Contreras said.

"The welfare of the college and its student body precedes any individual gain," he added.

Those who attend regular meetings of the RAMS and take an active participation in its activities will receive points. In turn, this recognition will be entered on his permanent transcript.

Asked whether the RAMS were in favor of the emergence of an opposition party, Contreras commented that the group is neither in favor of nor against such a move. "We'll just wait and see what happens," he remarked.

Regardless of what might develop, the RAMS plan to hold their own open nominating convention at the end of the semester.

When confronted with the rumor that the RAMS, as a party, is attempting to establish another political dynasty such as the Students' Representatives Party allegedly had on campus at one time, Contreras could only emphatically deny this, stating that it "definitely is not the intention of the party."

Furthermore, Contreras made it clear that the RAMS do not intend to become the "mother" for any smaller parties. "Other parties that may emerge will be on their own," he declared.

Regarding the issue of a change in College Hour next semester, Contreras stated that members of the party will poll students here as to their feeling toward the revision. Whether this will accomplish anything tangible is still questionable, however.

"Members of the RAMS will constantly work toward the betterment of the campus. We welcome suggestions from students, also," Contreras emphasized, adding that the group is not a "one-shot item" but will continue indefinitely on campus.

In Contreras' cabinet this semester are Rich Hess, vice president; Janet Sisk, recording secretary; LaVon Heath, corresponding secretary; Pete Friedman, treasurer, and Rich Thomas, party whip whose duties will be to represent the party at meetings of Student Counceil and COO.

Ricky's—Strictly A Show Band

Group Stresses Variety—Rock, Twist, Jazz

By Michel Janicot

Ricky and the Red Tops, a combo currently appearing at Pierre's nightclub at 546 Broadway street, is scheduled to perform here Friday during the double College Hour in conjunction with the annual Inter-Fraternity Council blood drive.

Tony Katsaras, drummer and trumpeter, heads the combo with Ricky Morrison, organist and accordionist, as originator of the group's name. Jerry Martini, blowing saxophone and playing drums and piano as well, and Albert Lewis, playing guitar, saxophone and harmonica, complete the quartet.

The group joined six months ago to play music for popular appeal.

All are San Franciscans with the exception of Morrison, who hails from the windy city of Chicago. Both Katsaras and Martini attended Balboa High School, and Lewis Commerce High. Martini also attended City College in 1959-'60 but quit to devote his time exclusively to the quartet.

Morrison has a wide experience in the field of music. He has played with Gene "Jug" Ammons, Teddy Edwards, Dexter Gordon, the unforgettable Charlie "Yardbird" Parker and Frank Sinatra's orchestra at the Dunes Hotel in Las Vegas.

He has also performed at the now defunct International Settlement, in the New Orleans' Mardi Gras and in Chicago. He got his starts at Jimbo's Bop City, the Say When club (the old Casbah) and played every Thursday on KGO radio.

Only last year Martini, Katsaras and Lewis performed at KYA and KEWB radio stations "hops" with Bobby Freeman and other rock-and-roll artists. Also, two years ago they gave a performance at the Fox theater in a show entitled Saints And Sinners.

The group has appeared mainly in the Bay Area, although it has gone as far south as Santa Cruz. The quartet has been playing at Pierre's for the past five months.

The quartet plays only "variety music, and our group is strictly a show band, which means that we only play rock-and-roll, twist and popular jazz," leader Katsaras commented.

"As for the club, we all agree that we like the place tremendously. This place is the rendezvous of local athletes. The club does not have a door or cover charge and no minimum of drinks is required, which makes it very popular and attracts customers continuously," he added.

As for beret-wearing Morrison, he feels that "the group is the best I have been playing with for the last five years."

For its scheduled appearance Friday the quartet will also show a short color film of the group in action.

Also scheduled to appear with the quartet are Dorothy Lowe and Marie Trisolino, both cocktail waitresses at Pierre's. Miss Lowe is currently attending City College as a chemistry major. Both waitresses will wear costumes expressly designed for the performance by couturiere Margo St. James.

No one today should complain about having to run from Science Hall down to one of the gymnasiums for their next class because in 1939 classes were meeting in 22 locations, many widely separated.

Silver Heads Delegation To CJCSGA Meet At Disneyland

This semester's California Junior College Student Government Association State Conference is scheduled to take place April 18, 19 and 20 at Disneyland, Bill Silver, Associated Student president, announced last week.

Delegates to the conference from the college are Silver, AS Vice President Sue Fitzpatrick, Clemmie Thompson, Phyllis Webb and Vince Contreras.

Silver will join delegates from other two-year colleges in a president's workshop, at which time student government at the college and state levels will be discussed. Laws and regulations related to student government will be another topic in this aspect of the conference.

Designated to the campus activities workshop will be Miss Fitzpatriek, who will take part in a conference pertaining to obstacles and resources for successful campus activities.

Miss Thompson will be the representative at the campus attitudes workshop, where one of the major subjects for discussion will be resources for developing positive campus attitudes.

Another facet of the conference will be campus communications workshop. Present plans for discussion include resources for developing effective campus communications, and Miss Webb will be the college's delegate to this section at the conference.

At the campus organizations workshop Contreras will take part in talks concerning obstacles and resources for developing effective campus organizations.

The delegates, together with Student Government Adviser Sherm Elworthy, will fly to Southern California and will be joined by delegates from 73 other California two-year colleges.

Bill May, last semester's delegate to the president's workshop, will accompany the five as State Information Chairman.

Contreras Defends RAMS Constitution At Council Meet

By Patty Smith

Admonitions flew and tempers were aroused at last Tuesday's Student Counceil meeting when a member moved to reconsider acceptance of Counell of Organizations' recommendation to give on-campus recognition to the RAMS.

Voting was called for after Associated Students President Bill Silver admonished counell that second voting should not be neecssary. RAMS President Vince Contreras then angrily answered charges that the RAMS constitution was against the constitution of the college, and the motion was rejected, 5-8-0.

The top AS card salesmen, announced by Alan Poletti, card sales chairman, are Bill May in first place, Jerry Mendes second and Phyllis Webb third.

James Spence, director of admissions from the State University of New York was guest at last Thursday's meeting.

The prevalent topic during the discussion was that of financial standing as a reason for students attending a two-year college instead of a university or four-year college.

Philippine Consul To Speak At IRC Social Saturday

By Francine Dubonnet

Philippine Consul General Jose Moreno will be guest speaker at an International Relations Club social, beginning at 8 p.m. Saturday at the YMCA on Geary Boulevard, according to club President Godfrey Pinder.

This occasion is the first of a series of presentations concerning foreign countries that the club will offer during the semester. One week each month a different country will be featured.

Students will wear costumes characteristic of their country, and will discuss its cultural and political status in addition to serving foods characteristic of their homeland.

A dance will follow this Saturday's presentation. Refreshments will be served by the YMCA, cosponsors of the event. Admission is $1, Pinder added.

• The Real Estate and Insurance Club is making a donation to the Heart Fund in memory of its former departmental adviser, Jules Saxe, who died March 12.

Saxe was a member of the college's Real Estate Advisory Board, a member of the local, state and national Real Estate Board and president of Saxe Realty in San Francisco.

"Saxe had been cooperating with the club since it was first formed," Saui Samuels, president, stated.

Friday during College Hour the club will present a representative from the General Adjustment Bureau to diseuss bureau careers. All are invited to attend the meeting in C-202.

• Reverend G. K. Davis is speaking on the subject, Is Christ In The Old Testament? for the Collegiate Christian Fellowship. This is a four-part series which will end April 26. The next three lectures will be held Fridays during College Hour in C-201.

Silver Francis Drake Site Of IFC Dance

To celebrate the end of the blood drive and honor fraternity pledges, the Inter-Fraternity Council is sponsoring a dance at the Sir Francis Drake Hotel Saturday, according to Keith Woolwine, IFC president.

At Last will be the theme of the 9 p.m. to midnight affair, which marks the end of IFC's Pledge Week, Woolwine added.

Highlight of the affair will be the presentation of trophies by Woolwine to the first three organizations achieving the highest number of donations in this year's blood drive. Selection will be made on a point system basis.

Music will be provided by the Walt Tolleson Band, with additional entertainment by a singing group from Alpha Phi Epsilon.

Cocktail dresses for women and suits and ties for men will be proper attire for the dance, Woolwine said.

Tickets cost $2.50 a couple and may be obtained at the office of Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman, S-149, or may be bought from any fraternity representative around campus.

Lasley Stricken; Bus Stop In Final Two Performances

Robert Lasley, who was directing the current drama production, Bus Stop, was stricken with a mild heart attack last week while at home.

According to Michael Griffin, drama director, he was confined to the hospital.

Griffin, who was also hospitalized earlier in the semester for illness, will take over the direction of the play, which will close this weekend, April 5 and 6, in the college theater with the curtain at 8 p.m. both nights.

Last Wednesday night more than 100 students attended a dress rehearsal of the play. The students, from the city's junior and senior high schools, saw the play without charge.

Bus Stop stars Leigh French and Joe Lacey in the leading roles. Admission to the play will be free to Associated Student cardholders and $1 general admission.

The play was written by William Inge, a renowned playwright who has also written motion picture and play scripts, among them Picnic, Come Back Little Sheba and A Shot In The Dark.

The sets for Bus Stop were designed by Alonzo, who has also done professional set design work with little theaters in the city, including the Actor's Workshop.

Kitty Condon designed the costumes for the play and was in charge of publicity.

Three Day Easter Break Due For Students Here

Easter vacation will draw students away from the college for a three-day break beginning next Wednesday and continuing through the following weekend.

Classes will resume Monday, April 15.

The Guardsman, taking advantage of the vacation, will cease publication until Wednesday, April 24.

A little historical background on the holiday of Easter reveals that the name comes from that of the Teutonic goddess, Eostre or Eastre.

Fraternity Plans UMOC Contest For April 22-26

Steve Christ, former president of Alpha Phi Omega, announced today that candidates for the Ugly Man On Campus contest are needed, and that fraternities, sororities and clubs are invited to submit entries to the Associated Student office, S-134.

The contest is sponsored each spring semester by Alpha Phi Omega, and last year's contest was won by a candidate from Alpha Kappa Rho. Christ said that the contestants are to be assisted by the drama department (with makeup) if they are not ugly enough.

On Monday, April 22, voting stands are to be set up in the cafeteria and at the silver pole in Seience Hall. Penny contributions in containers under the picture of each candidate will determine the winner.

The proceeds from the contest are donated to the Scholarship Committee, and last year were responsible for two $100 scholarships awarded to students at the college.

The UMOC winner will be announced at College Hour Friday, April 26, and a trophy will be awarded to the club which sponsored the winner.

A dance was scheduled for Friday night, April 26, as a climax of UMOC week, but it was cancelled because of a heavy social calendar.

Lloyd Winston—College's 49er

Lloyd Winston, a student here, has an interesting occupation.

He is a professoinal football player for the San Francisco 49ers.

And what's more, the speedy 6-2, 220-pounder has been a member of that elite and famous football group known as the "taxicab" squad.

A professional football team is allowed to carry an active roster of 33 players, but most clubs in the National Football League employ extras to step in in emergencies.

They never get in any games until they are reactiviated but, nevertheless, are paid a full salary.

Winston, who played ball at Santa Monica City College and at the University of Southern California, signed as a free agent with the Dallas Cowboys in 1962.

Two games before the league season opened Winston was dropped. The 49ers immediately got in contact, signed him, but the Merced, California reared lad wasn't activated until the last two contests of the season.

"(Coach Red) Hickey told me a few weeks ago that the films showed I can block and catch the ball," Winston said. "Red said he would probably move me to the tight back."

The 49ers are hurting for tight backs. Bill Kilmer, who played the position, is doubtful after suffering a leg break in a recent car accident.

"When on the taxi squad," Winston said, "I still had to practice with the team, go to the meetings and do everything else the club did.

SAN FRANCISCO 49ER LLOYD WINSTON, a student here, returns kickoff 18 yards against the Cleveland Browns last December. Ernest Green (48) and Jim Houston (82) help make the stop.

"If someone gets injured, or the club loses three or four in a row, they may take a chance on me."

Winston saw little action in the last two contests, but said the times he was hit he didn't find it any harder than the tackles received in college. But he did add he thought it would prove different in the future.

"In pro ball the players are bigger, faster, and there's specialization in every position," Winston said.

"I think I have a good chance to make the club this year."

Winston is carrying nine units here, making up grade points. He will transfer to San Francisco State to pick up a degree in accounting.

Rain Stops—Spikers Grab Six Firsts, Romp Over San Jose, Diablo Valley

By Pete Franklin

The Ram spikers, finally able to find time between rainouts to have a track meet, downed Diablo Valley, 95-27, and San Jose, 72-50, in a walkaway last Friday night at Foothill J. C. track.

In the triangle score, City College finished with 74, San Jose 57, Diablo Valley 21.

The meet, originally to be held at San Jose Friday afternoon, was moved to Foothill's all-weather track on the off-chance of rain.

The Golden Gate Relays March 16 and the triangle meet among City College, Contra Costa and Oakland March 22 were rained out.

San Francisco took six firsts, six seconds and eight thirds, two third place ties and a second place deadlock.

In the 100, Tom Gardiner of the Rams ran 10.0 for a first ahead of San Jose's Corina at 10.1. Gardiner made it a double win with a 22.2 in the 220. Corina and Ram Claude Shipp split second place, each with 22.5.

San Francisco's Tim Power ran a 51.1 to best the 440 with Prewitt and Langdon of San Jose showing 52.3 and 52.6 second and third place form, while in the 880, San Jose's Nowgl and Bannington, 1:55.4 and 1:55.6, respectively, overshadowed Ram Ozzie Norris' 1:57.7 bid for the event.

Nowgl's 4:20 mile, the best in the conference over the weekend, beat Gene Plotkin's 4:23.7. Plotkin's two-mile time of 9:52.6 was also edged 9:49.2 by Sullivan of the Jaguars.

The Rams took first, second and third in the 120 high hurdles. Bob Hector got 15.4, Tom Piggee 15.8, and basketballer Andy Woods 16.4. City College completed the hurdle domination with a second and third in the 220 lows, with Piggee 25.6 and Hector 25.9 behind Diablo Valley's Art Miller, who ran 24.4.

Ram Lon Brantley won the broad jump with a leap of 23-6.

Ram pole-vaulters Lee Fee and Eric Neilsen, both with 11-6, were a foot off the winning mark of Diablo's Mike Brunnelle's 12-6. Puckett of San Jose went 12-0. Ram discus marks were slightly closer to first place as Pat Lewis heaved 137-9, and Pat Coleman tossed 130-5, behind Jaguar Linsley's 140-11½.

Lewis evened his duel with Linsley by beating his 41-6 shot-put effort with a lob of 47-9.

San Francisco took the mile relay by only eight-tenths of a second over San Jose. Times were San Francsico 3:26.2, San Jose 3:27.0, Diablo Valley 3:33.2.

Weather willing, the Rams will face Chabot and San Mateo tomorrow at San Mateo.

Close Cage Tilt? Divine Ones Rip H&R, 63 To 27

In the third week of intramural competition, the Divine Ones trounced Hotel & Restaurant, 63-27, in what was supposed to have been a close game in the women's gymnasium.

In other independent league action the Brothers Five edged the Filipino Club, 54-51. The Untouchables took one from the Hawaiian Bla's, 39-36, with the Bla's Mike Davis dumping 24 points. The Newman Club downed the Red Sox, 52-40.

In the fraternity league Gamma Phi Ypsilon took one from Beta Tau, 36-13, as Dave Wormel scored 18. Zeta Phi Sigma downed Alpha Kappa Rho, 42-25. Tom London's 23 points for the Rhos wasn't enough for the losers.

In tonight's action the Turnbull's Blues meet the Untouchables at 7:15 in the men's gymnasium, the Brothers Five meet the Red Sox at 8:15 in the men's gymnasium, the Hawaiian Bla's meet Hotel & Restaurant at 7:15, women's gymnasium, and the Newman Club meets the Divine Ones at 8:15, women's gymnasium.

In fraternity action next Tuesday Alpha Sigma Delta meets Zeta Phi Sigma at 7:15 p.m., and Alpha Kappa Rho meets Beta Tau at 8:15 p.m.

Mermen Meet Foothill Friday

With a long overdue win behind them, Ram swimmers will meet the nation's number one two-year college team when they travel to Mills High School pool to meet phenomenal Foothill Friday.

The Rams won their first meet of the season by easily downing Chabot, 56-38. Rich Grey led the Rams with firsts in the 200 free, 100 free, and anchored the 400-yard free relay. Jeff Higman took the 50 free, and Mark Haskell outiasted his opponent in the 200 fly.

The preceding week the Rams were beaten by San Jose in a close contest that went to the Jaguars on a disqualification. Grey was also a standout in this one, taking the 200 and 100, and anchoring the free relay with a 52.9.

Haskell also registered his best time in the relay with a 55.1. Newcomer Dave Stone was discovered as a diver and placed a close second in the event.

Netters Take On Rival Oakland

Kern, Murio, Anderson Lead Ram Team In Golden Gate Park Match

With half the season elapsed, the conference-leading Ram tennis team will take on arch rival Oakland at 2:30 p.m. Friday on the Golden Gate Park courts.

Although the Thunderbirds finished a close second behind the Rams last year, the loss of powerhouse Tom Edlefsen and his counterparts has left them hurting.

With only five men playing, the Rams easily rolled past the San Jose State Frosh, 7-2, before the Chabot match was rained out. With Bob Siska taking a rest, the Rams, also minus Ed Jilka who failed to show because he had to work, were forced to concede two matches.

Fast-moving Rich Anderson took over the chores of first man and narrowly defeated La Fever, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2. Bob Murio in the second position downed Kraft, 8-6, 6-4. Jack Kern, moving up to third place, bested Spence, 6-1, 6-1. Gordon Miller breezed past Coupe, 6-0, 6-1. Rookie Yet Louie, moved to fifth spot, easily won over Hendricks, 6-0, 6-1. The sixth match was forfeited.

In doubles Anderson and Murio went three sets to take La Fever-Kraft; 6-1, 2-6, 6-3; Miller and Kern won in two, 6-3, 6-4; the third was forfeited.

The Rams will meet powerful University of San Francisco Frosh Monday in a tough practice match at Golden Gate Park.

Coach Roy Diederichsen announced rather reluctantly that the big swing down south during Eastern vacation has been cancelled because of the lack of opposition.

The USC Frosh team was forced to cancel its match with the Rams because of a rule about limited matches for frosh teams. Santa Monica also was unable to meet the Rams because of a practice trip.

RA Group Dances In Concert Thursday

The Recreation Association modern dance group will perform in a modern dance concert at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the George Washington High School auditorium.

The RA volleyballers plan to have Thursday afternoon matches with four local high schools. These matches are scheduled for the end of this semester.

Next month the RA folk and modern dance clubs tentatively plan to sponsor a combined symposium showing the work and talent in the clubs. The symposium will also feature Swedish gymnastics.

This is "the first time that the RA club will sponsor this type of a symposium," Lene Johnson, modern dance instructor, stated.

"It is new and it will be exciting in its presentation because of the three different fields of talent to be exhibited," Mrs. Johnson added.

The RA fencing club hosted the Intercollegiate Interscholastic Fencing conference last Saturday. John Buckley and Charles Miller were two fencing students in charge of the conference. Fencers Ronald Adler, Gary Cooper, Oscar Dinwiddie and Harry Jorgensen competed in this conference.

Golfers To Meet Owls At Harding

After a close 15½-14½ Golden Gate Conference win over Chabot, the Ram golfers prime themselves for the tough Foothill Owls this Friday at Playing in the face of a driving rain and a furious wind, the Ram golfers fought the Gladiators and the elements to register a tough and hard-earned victory.

Despite these disadvantages, the Klemmermen performed well with Dennis Drucker leading the way by firing a 78, followed closely by Jim Roman's good 79, John Steddin's 81, with Rich Orme and Mike Selsnik firing 84 and 85, respectively.

Owl golfers had a 3-4 mark in 1962, their best in three years.

Using mostly reserves, the Ram golfers walloped College of Marin, 23-7, in a practice match. Selsnik set the pace by firing an 82.

Soccermen Too Good For Their Own Good

CALIFORNIA'S appeasement plan, the open soccer league in which City College would be permitted to compete against the four-year universities on a practice basis, also appears in a precarious position.

City College, a founder of the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, was dropped because Cal rallied enough of the other four-year colleges to its thesis that soccer is a major sport, and major sport programs don't permit competition on league basis with two-year colleges.

San Francisco's chances of meeting the four-year universities on practice basis now appears nil after the college was notified by the University of San Francisco that it would not meet City College at all.

We now quote from a September 26, 1962, issue of The Guardsman when California refused to play City College in league play and took a forfeit:

"With two returning All-Americans and the California victory safely tucked away, a fourth consecutive championship for the Rams is not completely out of question. The only thing is: Could it drive City College out of the league?"

It apparently has.

* * *

FREE STYLES Fred Wales and breast stroker Herm Fruchtenicht both placed a 10 cent bet with teammate Mark Haskell that City College would win its recent meet against San Jose City College.

In a close meet where every point counts, City College breezed across first in the 400-yard medley relay for what appeared to be a crucial seven points.

But Haskell, swimming the 100-yard butterfly, unintentionally failed to touch with both hands parallel at the end of the pool, and the 440 win was disqualified. His bet was won.

San Jose won, 56-39.

TOM PIGGEE, star halfback-fullback for the Rams in 1960-61, has reenrolled after a year of night classes. The 180-pounder, who once gained 211 yards in 13 carries in one game, has used up his grid eligibility, much to the chagrin of grid coach Dutch Elston.

But the former Poly hurdles champ has a year of track eligibility. Getting back into condition after a long layoff, Piggee should now start to help the club.

Besides the hurdles, coach Lou Vasquez says Piggee could turn out to be the team's second broad jumper, and may even help in the pole vault.

Piggee tied a Modesto back for Big Eight Conference Back-of-the-Year in 1961.

Apathy Cancels Commencement Plans; Conlan Asks Assembly

Lack of attendance and interest has cancelled formal June commencement ceremonies, college President Louis G. Conlan revealed last week.

Tentative plans, however, call for a commencement assembly for prospective graduates. Conlan mentioned the College Hour of Friday, May 31, as a possible time to hold this event, but said nothing is definite.

Conlan termed the assembly approach to commencement as "possibly a more desirable and effective means of honoring graduates."

Faculty and full graduate participation will be urged when and if such an event is held.

The college has held regular commencement exercises for the past 27 years. Last year, for the first time, ceremonies were conducted on campus in the college stadium. About 150 of 491 graduates attended.

"I have always strived to schedule formal commencements here, but in view of recent response by the graduates, the only alternative is to cancel this year's ceremonies," Conlan stated, adding that he does not consider the action uncommon for a two-year college.

Conlan cited work conflicts, family vacations and other personal matters as the main reasons for nonattendance of graduates at commencement.

"Of equal importance to the Associate in Arts degree each graduate receives is the college's certificate of completion from the graduate's individual major, which aids him in job placement," Conlan remarked.

"This has been a great asset to graduates in the past," he added.

The president inserted a note of irony when he noted that many students have approached the administration with requests that commencement be continued here but, in turn, stating that they themselves would not be able to attend the ceremonies.

Announcement of a definite assembly date is expected soon.

IFC Drive Nets 322 Pints Of Blood; 168 Disqualified From Donating

By Boyd Burtnett

The Inter-Fraternity Council's annual blood drive, held April 4 and 5, netted 322 pints of blood to be donated to the City College account at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank.

Twenty-two campus organizations participated in the drive. Beta Tau was the top contributing fraternity with 52 pints accredited to its members. Second place was taken by the Faculty Association with 44 pints.

Third, fourth and fifth places went to Phi Beta Delta, Alpha Sigma Delta and Alpha Phi Epsilon, respectively.

A total of 168 persons wishing to donate had to be disqualified by attending physician from the Irwin Memorial for various reasons, among them lack of minimum weight, recent illness or recent innoculations.

Persons who donated blood may now draw from the Irwin Memorial an unlimited number of pints for themselves and members of their immediate family, or up to eight pints for any person of their choosing who needs blood.

George Christopher, mayor of San Francisco, got things moving for the drive by proclaiming the period of April 1 to April 5 as "Blood Days" in the city and urged everybody to participate.

The mayor presented the proclamation to Keith Woolwine, IFC president, shortly before the drive started.

At the college, a double College Hour was held April 5 to promote the drive, and entertainment was provided by Marie Michaels, a singer presently at the hungry i, and Ricky and His Red Tops, a dance band from a North Beach nightspot called Pierre's.

An IFC - sponsored car parade launched "Blood Days" on April 1. Selected cars belonging to members of fraternities and sororities here gathered at the intersection of Market and Embarcadero and paraded to Phelan avenue in front of the college.

However, despite all of the participation by the various groups, both at the college and in the city, the IFC failed to better its own record of 388 pints of blood donated last year. This is the first time since the initiation of the annual blood drive that the previous year's mark was not beaten.

However, according to Dean Ralph Hillsman, one of the reasons for decrease in number of pints donated is because the Irwin Memorial has tightened its qualifications for donors. Had those disqualified been accepted, the total would have reached 490.

"We had twice as many rejections this year as we did for the previous year," he said.

Also, Dean Hillsman reported that an additional 15 pints of blood has been received through pledges made during the drive.

KEITH WOOLWINE, IFC president, accepted Mayor's Blood Drive proclamation.

Bachtold Plays Lead Role In Next Drama Production

Ken Bachtold will play the lead role in the next and final drama production of this semester, Shakespeare's King John, slated to begin in the theater May 24 and continue for three other performances, Michael Griffin, drama director, announced this week.

Other casting put Tom Purvis in the role of the bastard son, Philip of Falconridge, and Sandra Lundwell as Constance.

A few parts are still open for this play, and Griffin advised interested students to consult him.

Hawaiian Club Hosts Lei Day Dance Friday In Smith Hall

Lei Day In Hawaii is to be the theme of the Hawaiian Club's dance, scheduled from 8 p.m. until midnight Friday in Smith Hall, Pat Meria, the club's publicity chairman, reported last week.

Highlighting the evening will be the announcement of the winner of the college's highly publicized Ugly Man On Campus contest.

This week is UMOC Week, and the contest, sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, is in full swing, according to the voting stands in the cafeteria and at the silver pole in Science Hall.

All contestants were chosen by their respective clubs, fraternities and sororities.

Their participation in the contest helps set up scholarships, which will come out of the proceeds from the penny-a-vote contribution. Voting is scheduled to end Friday.

Some of the contestants who were not "ugly enough" have been assisted by makeup specialists in the drama department.

Admission to the affair is $2.25 a couple, and bids may be picked up at the silver pole or from any Hawaiian Club member.

"At least one person of the couple should be a student of City College," Miss Meria said, and "he should possess a registration card."

A "lucky couple" will be chosen at the dance and these two will receive as a door prize a nine-foot eight-inch surfboard and a $25 gift certificate.

Hawaiian and Tahitian dancers will perform, and music will be provided by Sal Vance and his group. Dress for the affair is to be Hawaiian, including muumuus and "aloha" shirts.

The Hawaiian Club is an organization consisting of students from Hawaii who are interested in getting together and exchanging ideas, Miss Meria said. Any person who wishes to join may do so by consulting her or David Harris, the club's president.

This is to be the Hawaiian Club's first dance. In the past they have usually held an annual luau, a giant Hawaiian style ceremonial dinner.

Miss Meria, while adding that flowers will be the main decoration, expressed hope for a successful dance.

Contributions To Forum Magazine Due This Friday

In conjunction with the announcement that this Friday is the deadline for contribution of material to Forum magazine, Catherine Connolly, faculty adviser, stated that Rena Kitch has been selected this year's editor while Anthony Joseph is the advertising manager.

Material for the magazine may be submitted to Miss Connolly's office, C-331A.

Produced annually for 27 years, "Forum represents an effort to infuse an ounce of creative thinking into the mores of a generation suffering from the apathy of regimentation," Miss Connolly stated.

Forum will be available on or before June 3 in the Ramporium at 50 cents a copy or free to Associated Student cardholders.

William Eckert, graphic arts instructor, is assisting with art for Forum, and his students are designing posters and spot illustrations and competing for cover design honors.

Forum Club membership is open to all students. Advantages include listening to tape and live readings of one's own and the works of others, with critical review related for improvement. Members also obtain copy for Forum and work at selecting, editing, assembling and evaluating material suitable for publication.

Horticulturists Enter Exhibit In Oakland Show

Students of the horticulture department here are currently participating in the annual California Spring and Garden Show in Oakland, which closes Sunday.

Valley Of The Giants is the overall theme of this year's exhibition, in the Exposition Building and Outdoor Gardens of Oakland.

Students of the horticulture department here planned as their exhibit a garden which represents an arrangement of semitropical plants and specimen, covering 800 square feet.

"To estimate from the praise we have already received for our present display, we have a good chance to add a few more prizes to our collection," Harry Nelson, horticulture instructor here, said of the college's entry.

In the past the college has received several awards for excellence in design, horticulture merit and excellence of themes.

Tickets for the exposition are available from the Garden Show headquarters at 920 Fallon street, Oakland. Tickets are $1 when purchased in advance and $1.50 at the exhibit.

Schools Week Sees Open House Daily

Public Schools Week, which ends Friday, will be treated in a different respect at the college this year, Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, announced today.

There will be open house here daily through Friday, but it will not be supervised or formal, Anderson explained.

Except for displays created by advertising art students, there will be no special exhibits for the public.

Anderson welcomed parents to the campus but "we don't want to make things any different from that of the ordinary college day," he said.

Tomorrow, the annual Education-Business Day program will coincide with Public Schools Week observance, when representatives of industry and business will be guests of the college.

David Kleinberg Wins $500 Press Scholarship

David Kleinberg, Guardsman sports editor, last semester's All-American Editor in Chief and Chronicle copy boy, is the second City College winner of San Francisco journalism's Late Watch scholarship of $500.

The award was presented last Saturday night at a Press and Union League Club banquet.

The Late Watch, an organization of veteran San Francisco newspaper personnel, offers the scholarships annually in memory of the city's distinguished editor and publisher, Edmond D. Coblentz.

Last year's award went to Robert Hacker, Guardsman news editor and present staff writer.

The awards are made to students employed in copy boy positions by a local newspaper and majoring in journalism at the college level.

String Quartet Appears Friday With Selected Classical Music

A performance by the California String Quartet, which is being sponsored by the Musician's Union, will be given during College Hour Friday, Meyer Cahn, music instructor here, announced last week.

Violinists are Felix Khuner and David Schneider. Viola artist is Detlev Olshausen, and cellist is Detlev Anders.

The only professional string quartet in the Bay Area, the group was formed by Felix Khuner in 1946. Khuner was formerly a member of the famous Kolisch Quartet.

In yearly concerts the quartet has given the first local performance of many works, especially modern works by composers such as Mendelssohn, Reger, Schoenberg and Webern.

The program will include movements from the following works: Mozart's Quartet in B Flat, K.458 (The Hunt); Beethoven's Quartet in F, Opus 59, Number 1; Schubert's Quartet in A Minor, and Brahms' Quartet in B Flat, Opus 67.

In a message accompanying informational material about the California String Quartet, the Musician's Union stated:

"The music for this occasion is provided by the cooperation of Local Number 6 of the American Federation of Musicians, AFL-CIO, through a grant from the recording industries' trust funds.

"The recording industries' trust funds are an extension of a program of public service originated by the recording and transcription funds of the American Federation of Musicians, AFL-CIO."

ACP Awards Fall Guardsman 31st All-American Rating

The Guardsman added one more award to its walls yesterday when the Associated Collegiate Press honored the college newspaper with its 31st All-American rating.

Rated on superior performance, it was the second consecutive top award and was one of nine top awards in the nation, three of them to two-year college papers. The Guardsman has been an ACP member for 43 semesters.

The award was based on the Fall 1962 volume.

The judges, newspapermen operating from ACP headquarters at the University of Minnesota, rated The Guardsman superior in four of 23 categories.

The sports department was given three superiors—coverage, writing and display. The feature page's speech and interview stories received the other superior.

David Kleinberg, present sports editor, was last semester's editor-in-chief. John Silva, the present editor-in-chief, was the news editor, John Muller the managing editor, and Bob Hacker, who received "good job" commendation for his section, was the staff editor.

Herm Kligerman, now managing editor, was assistant managing editor.

"The award we received," Kleinberg stated, "says All-American, The Guardsman. It wasn't the work of any one person. It was, to quote that bad cliche, a team effort."

Joan Nourse is the faculty adviser.

IN THE STYLE BEFITTING an All-American winner, David Kleinberg, Guardsman sports editor, takes a break from his hectic editorial duties.

H&R Students Get Scholarships

The semiannual presentation of Hotel and Restaurant scholarships under the auspices of the H&R Scholarship Committee, took place last month in Smith Hall.

A total of $3300, comprised of six $500 and one $300 grant, was awarded to seven outstanding H&R students.

Kay Sera and George Campbell received the $500 Harvey M. Toy second and third semester grants, respectively, and the Toy Chef scholarship went to Brennan Polley.

The three remaining $500 allotments were a Borden's Dairy Delivery Co. grant to Wayne Giliette, a E. B. Golia scholarship received by Wolfgang Bood, and a General Foods Corporation grant to Roy Piccinini.

Goro Fukumitsu received a Western Hotel's scholarship of $300. The H. M. Toy fourth semester grants, each $250 yearly, were not awarded.

The H&R department will participate in a culinary exposition in Chicago May 8, according to Pierre Coste, executive chef.

New Campus Political Party Could Form Another Dynasty

A NEW POLITICAL PARTY was recently established on campus, a party under the leadership of Vince Contreras, Council of Organizations' president, who maintains, "Our philosophy is based on the pleasure of the majority of students and not just on a few officers."

The acronym, RAMS, is the party name, standing for Representation and Action for the Majority of Students.

This is the first on-campus political organization since Spring 1962. At that time the college's partisan system was abolished because of an alleged two-year political dynasty. Since the abolition, nominating conventions were open to all Associated Student members, regardless of their political affiliations.

Now, however, because of this new organization, political affiliation is of consequence despite Contreras' contention that the RAMS will serve the majority. The party can serve the majority only if the majority backs the RAMS, and if they do, then another political dynasty has been established.

However, it is understood that it is not the RAMS' purpose to encourage such an establishment.

Nevertheless, the inadvertent instigation of another political dynasty is inevitable, because an individual or group could hardly compete against this organized party under the leadership of veteran campus politicians.

It is not the RAMS nor its policy nor, in fact, the reorganization of a partisan system that we oppose, but we are against a one-party system on campus.

However, it is Associated Student President Bill Silver's belief that because of the existence of the RAMS, another campus party will be established. According to this, it is quite possible that Silver and his cabinet approved the new party on the premise that it would create rumors of a new dynasty, thereby stimulating the AS to form another party to counteract any possible dynasties.

If this was council's plan, it was a good one, and it might work. However, there is one variable: if another party is not initiated, then what will occur? The RAMS then will be the only party on campus, a fate similar to having all national political candidates running on the same ticket.

In accordance with this, council should have not allowed the RAMS on campus UNTIL an opposing party was established.

Wet Hair Plagues Local Coeds

Physics Students Have Solution—Beat The Rain By Running Faster

By Barbara McQuaid

The optimist dons sunglasses. The pessimist carries an umbrella. The hardy take a short cut across the front lawn. The frail take a balling bucket to the reservoir parking lot.

The wet season reigns as the intelligentsia of the college devise ingenious methods of coping with the "damp" atmosphere. Inventions spring up like flowers in a desert of knee-high flowers.

A chemistry notebook, opened to a smudged How To Make H_2O, jauntily rides up the hill from Smith Hall on a blonde coiffure. A white leather MG top bumps along to the bookstore. The top does not house a 500 horse motor but protects five clumping men.

Although the "wearin' of the green" is reserved for March 17, one patriotic Irishman has been "encompassed" in that color for a week.

This crafty man created a green jug to protect his red locks from the "mild precipitation" and forgot how to get the masterpiece off. Now he is also protected from the sun, exams and his girl friend.

The lucky owner of a huge black umbrella shuttles the otherwise unprotected from Cloud to Science Hall and has a going business. A huge straw purse completely envelopes a young lady's head as she stumbles toward the library; thus she answers unimaginative, slightly wet critics who ask, "What do you do with such a monstrosity?"

Then there are those physics majors. Using accumulated knowledge, these devotees of the slide rule have devised a law that conquers the elements. Rain takes 5/10ths seconds to fall; therefore, if the gymnasium can be reached in 4/10ths seconds, dryness is assured.

This news of a scientific breakthrough does not seem to console students trampled along the cement path.

Baby blue and olive green parkas, frozen stiff on the hills of Squaw Valley, quickly thaw on the mountains of the college while protecting their owners. Three coeds squeeze under two brightly colored umbrellas.

Of course, the middie one does get a little annoyed and a little soaked when the umbrellas are made temporarily to part company by predicted "gentle breezes."

A tall brown-haired man, his short-sleeved shirt getting wetter by the minute, leans against the entrance to Cloud Hall. He dreamily gazes into the eyes of a coatless coed, whose long blonde hair whips freely in the wind, whose mascara washes down her shining face. No parkas are worn, no green jugs are in sight. Not noticing the storm, they stand.

Perhaps the young coupie has found the most effective protection, and maybe those physics students should look into the matter.

What Do You Think Of The New College Hour Proposal?

Colleen Kearns, freshman:
I like College Hour as it is now. It ends the week appropriately. I foresee much conflict when it is switched to Thursday because of the alterations in class scheduling and general confusion of some students who have become used to the Friday schedule.

COLLEEN KEARNS
"I like College Hour on Fridays because it ends the week appropriately."

Lesley Quast, freshman:
I am in utter confusion about the change in College Hour, even though I've read all the material that has been published about it. Furthermore, I have no real opinion on it since I think College Hour—on any day—is a waste of time and of no real benefit to the students.

Maria Vargas, freshman:
The way it is presently I like very much because it gives students something to look forward to at the end of the week. After five days of classes, one can use an extra hour of relaxation or to catch up with studying. The new change might make that difference.

Howard Hare, sophomore:
The proposed change in College Hour is not going to affect me at all and won't make any difference whatsoever, as I do not participate in any social activities anyway. I don't think the change will hurt too many students. Working at the library keeps me busy enough.

Marilyn Tashjian, freshman:
I don't think the present College Hour schedule should be changed because students are used to this extra hour on Fridays, cutting classes to 40 minutes instead of 50. With the new schedule, all classes will be a uniform 50 minutes. I don't think they will like this.

Basil Provas, freshman:
As far as I am concerned, College Hour should be abolished completely. I can very well do without it. In the second place, College Hour interferes with my studies. The only good thing about it is that it cuts classes to 10 minutes less.

Catherine Martin, freshman:
Presently, the College Hour schedule suits me fine, and I don't think the change is going to be very well liked among students. Furthermore, I have an 8 o'clock class and with the new change, I will have to come to college one hour earlier, and I can't quite get up that early.

George Baffico, geography instructor:
These extracurricular activities now offered during College Hour should be emphasized even more strongly. The college's administration is showing great consideration by planning this change. We just hope it will be less disturbing than it is now—but I can't make any predictions.

The Sound Of Music

Tricky Steps, Clumsy Stumbles Mark Typical Folk Dance Class

The sound of music echoes in the large cavernous studio . . . pairs of feet go through intricate steps, stumble, begin again . . . laughter reverberates . . . another folk dancing class here has begun.

Procedure sometimes varies, but usually students line up in alphabetical order for roll call, then pair off, ready to begin.

Right away one small problem arises. With the women outnumbering the men six to one, it is slightly obvious that some of the coeds are going to have to be "fellows for the day."

This matter attended to, dancers form a large circle waiting for the music. The first strains wafting across the room are usually greeted with cries of "Oh no, not again," or "Good grief, I've never heard this before;" (you can always tell who has been cutting class) or "This one I actually like."

With these vocal opinions still hanging in the air, dancers whirl off. Soon distressed cries of "No, no, no!" are heard, and the instructor flies across the room to straighten out some poor hapless soul whose two left feet are going in the right direction.

After this speedy little number, instructor and students alike feel like collapsing on the floor, but there are still 17 and a half minutes left and time for a few more Israeli mixers, Scotch tarantellas, Serbian folk dances and English rounds.

Finally the bell sounds and the students run or weakly stagger, as the case may be, out the doors and down the stairs.

Ceramic Class Is Relaxation?

Competing with physical education classes as a means of keeping students in top physical shape through regular use of body muscles is, believe it or not, work in the college's "expressionistic" ceramics department.

This fact, Roy Walker, art instructor here, contends to be true since students "use their bodies in an agile and rhythmic manner while enrolled in the course."

The college's ceramics department, housed in the arts building, has one of the best physical facilities in the country. "We probably also keep the neatest setup in existence today," Walker remarked.

Walker recently won a $50 prize from the Western Ceramics Association for a majolica decorated bowl. To students unfamiliar with ceramics terms, majolica is an early Italian design pattern.

Currently, Walker is displaying his work at Humboldt State College.

Avant Guardsman!

SOMETIMES one hears of unbelievable and incredible creatures and animals, and one's imagination then starts to unfold into magic lands and mystifying arcana. This is classified in the category of The Strangest Things In The World.

For instance there was the Dodo. The Dodo was a large, pigeon-like flightless bird, which was abundant on Mauritius and neighboring islands in the Indian Ocean during the 17th century.

It became a symbol—first of stupidity and later of extinction. In its restricted environment it had known no serious enemies prior to the coming of Man. It showed no fear of Man, and, because of its clumsy movements, was easy to catch and slaughter, but its flesh was tough and tasteless, even for sailors who had gone for months without fresh meat. Dutch navigators called it "the nauseating fowl."

And there are the Toucans of Barro Colorado Island, the Smithsonian Institution's tropical reserve in Gatun Lake, Panama Canal Zone. These big-billed birds hold fencing tournaments with their formidable beaks but seem careful not to hurt one another.

These fencing Toucans are among the more conspicuous birds of the islands, particularly because of their call—a shrill, frog-like cree, which is repeated over and over again and can be heard half a mile away. The call is most frequent in the morning and late in the afternoon, but it stops abruptly at sunset . . .

And there are the monster clams of Polynesia. Largest of all shellfish, the two halves weigh as much as 500 pounds. The flesh is eaten raw by natives. The interior of the shell is like polished marble. Such shells frequently are used as founts for holy water in European churches. And such a large one has attracted much attention in the church of St. Sulpice in Paris.

And there are some other oyster oddities. For example, an oyster can change its sex several times during its life. A single Pacific Coast oyster produces approximately 10,000,000,000 descendants a year. If all survived in five generations they would constitute a mass eight times the size of the world.

And there is the only known place in the world where trees have rectangular trunks. These trees are members of the cottonwood family, and saplings are now being grown at the University of Florida to find out if they retain their squareness in a different environment. It is believed, however, that the shape is probably due to some unknown but purely local condition. These trees are found a few miles north of the Panama Canal Zone in "the valley of square trees."

And then there is a flower that opens only by moonlight in Venezuela. It is an ivory-like, velvety orchid which depends entirely on nocturnal butterflies to sip its nectar while pollenization takes place. The plant is one of 800 species of Venezuelan orchids.

And then there is one of the most unusual of all luminous creatures, an insect larva, which is found by farmers ploughing through damp soil in Brazil and Uruguay. It is a reddish-brown little worm with rows of green lights on both sides and a vivid red lamp on both ends.

Male adults have only feebie yellow lights. The larvae are extremely vicious little creatures, predators on white grubs which infest the soil.

'These Sharks DON'T Bite With Their Teeth, Dear, Because . . .'

They Get Dissected In Biology Here

Although it might be construed as an attempt to make swimming safe at Ocean Beach, the 100 sharks purchased annually figure significantly in the college's biology program.

In fact, these sharks couldn't hurt anyone. They're just the little variety —27 inches long and weighing from five to ten pounds.

They come to the college at $2.50 each, dead and shot with a color solution to make the veins stand out.

Each student receives his personal shark; he paints his name on it. It is encased in formaldehyde and used from day to day. By the end of the semester, the sharks have been dissected and mutilated.

The grotesque sight and smell are enough to stop the average student from mixing with the slimy, sharp-toothed character, but John Earl, life science instructor, finds most students have little complaint once they get started.

Earl says the sharks are caught in nets off San Francisco Bay and are purchased from the H. A. Dahl Co. in Berkeley.

When midterm tests roll around, students are required to identify sections and parts of the Squalus (the shark's technical name).

"The students are not supposed to take the sharks out of class," Earl acknowledged. "But once in a while a student will take his home to study, just as you would take a book.

"We get objections, though, especially when they take the street car or bus home—with the smell and all. The sharks have a terrible smell. People get the impression we're killing animals here."

The college also purchases dead rats, for all the rat lovers. And Earl says there are a lot of rat fans out there in education land.

"For one thing, the sharks are very oily, and secondly, as said before, they stink. Also, the rats are not as difficult to work with."

What happens when a student loses his shark? Say he leaves it on the bus —and it ends up as next month's Muni Shark Of The Month.

"If a student loses his shark, he'd better go out fishing," Earl snapped. "The budget can only afford one shark per student."—By D.K.

College Plans Survey To Determine Interest In Founding Of Circle K Club

A poll is expected on campus soon in behalf of the Kiwanis Club to determine interest in establishment of a Circle K Club.

At a luncheon here recently, prominent members of the Kiwanis Club met with President Louis G. Conlan and Dean Ralph Hillsman to elucidate the advantages of Circle K membership to college men.

The Kiwanians are business and professional men with the common interest of civic service and improvements. Their motto, We Build, pertains to justice, liberty and democracy, and their practice is the maintenance and furtherance of ethical standards in public and private relations.

"Responsibility, the key to freedom," is the 1963 theme.

Circle K is the college level of Kiwanis and promotes an interest in developing leadership for the future through experience in cooperation with the college administration, club and sports activities, scholarships, tutoring, blood donor and fund-raising drives.

Membership is open to men students with a 3.3 grade average, and interested persons may register in Dean Hillsman's office. Students preparing for professional careers may benefit especially from this association, Kiwanians believe.

Eugene Lorton, San Francisco Kiwanian, enumerated the opportunities afforded Circle K members making the transition into the business world and extended invitations to join Kiwanis members in their weekly luncheons.

Civic interests that are sponsored by the Kiwanis Club are the Youth Guidance Center, where they are campaigning with training films to help curb school drop-outs, and the Children's Hospital, to which they have awarded sums of money for surgical equipment.—By M.L.

Pistol Team Sets Competitions Through July

Pistol matches at the Richmond Rod and Gun Club on May 14 and July 9, and the Oakland Rod and Gun Club on June 2 top the schedule for the college's pistol team.

Earlier this semester the pistol team, under the supervision of coach Fred P. Fitzgerald, won five first place team trophies in the sharpshooter and expert classes. The team shoots with .22, .38 and .45 caliber pistols.

Sponsored by the Associated Students, the pistol team fires against the Sixth U. S. Army and various civilian club teams and has a record for consistent first place performance.

Members of the pistol team are recruited from the Campus Police and the criminology department.

Team members include Fred Fitzgerald, coach; Al Palmer, captain of the expert team; Bob Mulhall, captain of the sharpshooter team; James Olson, Ralph Brown, Jerald Shirinian, Sherwood Zammit, Ron Wilson, James Dean, Bob Gerstenkorn, William Wilson and Walter Bowsher.

The team competed in the California State Pistol championship at Ft. Ord on April 3, 4 and 5. Results of this match haven't been announced.

The collection, composed of the best work of photography students in the last 15 years, went on display last Monday.

The photos have survived the severe criticisms of the last 15 years, Emmett Smith, photography instructor here, said. "They cover all subjects, with special emphasis on design, characterization and experimental techniques," he commented.

Showing Of Classics is on exhibit at the north end of the third floor, Cloud Hall.

Smith said the present collection may be followed by some candid shots of students.

ACCION Director Speaks At C-Hour

George Humphreys, Western Regional director for ACCION, a privately financed program for community development, will discuss the program here during College Hour Friday in S-100.

ACCION stands for Americans For Community Cooperation In Other Nations.

Purpose of Humphreys' appearance is to interest students in and recruit volunteers for work in underdeveloped Latin American areas for a period of 18 months at a time.

The next departure will be in June and the application deadline is approaching. A selection board will be established in Berkeley.

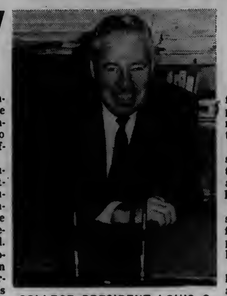
There are no set qualifications for the program, considered a "private peace corps." Participants receive full subsistence pay, including round trip transportation and insurance.

Conlan—'Academics First'

Tension Standard May Be Raised

By Herm Kilgerman

Warning that tightening of the "tension standard" is inevitable, college President Louis G. Conlan, in an interview last week, advised students to concentrate the majority of their efforts on academic studies.



However, Conlan remarked that students should not discount the importance of participation in extracurricular activities by seeking a fuller academic education or more intensive preparation in a technical program before entrance into the outside world.

Conlan foresees in the not-too-distant future a rise in the "tension standard" to a 2.0 grade point average instead of the present 1.5 basis for continued enrollment.

"This means that students will have to maintain at least a C average in their studies to remain in college," Conlan revealed. At present, only students who maintain a D, or 1.5, grade average are eligible for disqualification.

"There will be no room for students who go to college to eat their lunch and waste time," Conlan added.

As an example, Conlan further predicted that by 1966 the college's daytime enrollment will increase by some 2000 to 8500 students. This will not include evening classes, but the president does not anticipate any substantial enrollment increase in this area.

COLLEGE PRESIDENT LOUIS G. CONLAN foresees a tightening of the "tension standard" here in the near future.

To cope with the anticipated record enrollment, a new building will be necessary, Conlan said. Plans call for the erection of an administration building which will house all administrative functions.

Sharp Increase In Enrollment Seen

Conlan, who first joined the college faculty in 1935 as a business law and physical education instructor, has not noticed too much change in the attitude of students throughout the years.

"The college must maintain its high standards, and students should realize that rules imposed by this institution are applicable to other colleges," Conlan stated.

"Problems will multiply in coming semesters, and students, as well as faculty and administrators, must be prepared to cope with them adequately," he added.

"At present," Conlan continued, "we have probably the best counselling and testing program of any two-year college in California. Consequently, we are able to handle anything that might develop."

He further stated that more extensive efforts will be made to improve the generai appearance of the college. "The terrain around the campus makes it difficult for adequate maintenance, but with proper landscaping the college will eventually become more attractive and functional," he explained.

Serving as president of the college for the past 14 years, Conlan cited active participation in athletics and the student government program as highly beneficial to an aspiring collegian.

"I am entirely pleased with both fields but feel that more students should avail themselves of the many opportunities offered by the programs," Conlan emphasized.

Between 1935 and 1940, Conlan, himself, coached the college's football team as well as the first championship basketball team.

"It would be impossible for a student to be successful in college, work on the outside and participate in all the extracurricular activities offered here. A happy medium must be reached, but I cannot overemphasize that students should not become lax in studies in order to take part in other functions," Conlan added.

Student Council Declares War, Arms With SNAROL

By Patty Smith

SOS now stands for "Stamp Out Snails"—at least here on campus.

Snails are unslightly and grotesque. Snails surprise and shock visitors to the campus. Snails eat grass and shrubs.

These reasons for the elimination of snails were made at last Thursday's Student Council meeting by council member Rich Thomas in a motion calling for students to support the move to stamp out snails on campus.

This motion passed, but not without much discussion. Some felt that although snails are unsightly, they are even more unsightly when squashed. Others felt this would be a good idea.

Judi Beverly said, "Stamping out snails would create even a bigger mess." Jerry Mendes suggested that students carry a box of SNAROL with them at all times.

Joel Cohen ended the discussion by saying that this was the stupidest motion he had ever heard, that council was going back to the days of junior high school and that snails were the responsibility of the gardeners.

Thomas said that students need not literally STAMP out snails but rather should use their own discretion as to what means they wish to use to rid the campus of the slimy mollusks.

Acting President Imogene Walker broke a tie and the motion passed.

COO Sponsors Annual Carnival, Dance May 10

Council of Organizations will sponsor its annual spring festival from 7:30 p.m. to midnight Friday, May 10, in Smith Hall, Vince Contreras, COO president, announced this week.

The event will include a carnival and dance. Refreshments will also be served. Admission will be charged students only if they do not have an Associated Student card, Contreras said.

Some of the proceeds from the affair are expected to go to the Peace Corps in Colombia, where former students here are working.

Hoover School Principal Speaks To SCTA Friday

Compiled by Francine Dubonnet

Walter S. Nolan, principal of Herbert Hoover Junior High School, will speak on administrative aspects of education to the Student California Teachers Association during College Hour Friday in C-269, Tom Miles, group president, announced.

All interested students are invited to attend.

• The last lecture of a four-part series concerning Christ in the Old Testament will be given by Reverend Gordon K. Davis of San Francisco Neighborhood Church to the Collegiate Christian Fellowship during College Hour Friday in C-201.

• Upcoming Recreation Association council meetings will be held during College Hour this Friday and on May 17 and May 31, in C-221.

• On Friday, April 19, the Newman Club had Val King, columnist of The Monitor, a Catholic Archdiocese newspaper, who spoke on The Vital Dimension. The club also held a Twiflight Time dance that night.

• Alpha Gamma Sigma members will discuss study habits during a College Hour meeting Friday in S-214. William Richardson, faculty sponsor of the scholastic honor society, has invited all students to attend this gathering.

• Plans are now being formulated by the newly formed Ski Club. On the agenda for members will be at least two trips to the Reno area, according to sponsor Lewis Mottley.

The club currently has about 30 members and welcomes students interested in the sport of skiing. Purpose of the group is to "create interest in skiing, initiate ski trips and improve skiing abilities," Mottley said.

Regular meetings of the Ski Club are held during College Hour Fridays in C-213.

Access To College's Priceless Mural Depends On Supervision

AFTER 20 YEARS, in 1961 the famed Diego Rivera mural, a gift to the colleges, found a home—on the east wall of the arts building theater lobby. A portion of the 22-foot high, 75-foot long fresco is depicted here.

For two decades one of the most famous murals by the late Mexican artist, Diego Rivera, Marriage Of The Artistic Expression Of The North And South On This Continent, lay hidden from view, encased in a protective shed near the men's gymnasium on this campus.

Then in 1961, when the arts building here was completed, the fresco found the home it now adorns—the east wall of the theater lobby.

Yet this "biggest and best" Rivera, a priceless property of City College, hangs on the theater wall, open to student view only when adequate supervision is available, such as during theater productions or while classes are conducted in the theater itself.

The main reason for the mural's seclusion, according to Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management here, is that adequate supervision is not always available to protect against the possibility of vandalism.

Although it has never been formally appraised, the mural, while being moved here, was insured for $50,000 with Lloyd's of London. It is now insurable for a reported $125,000, but artistically it is described as priceless.

Insofar as vandalism is concerned, however, Anderson explained that there is less worry over students here defacing the fresco than over outsiders who may wander through the campus.

The history of the mural dates back to 1938 when Rivera was contracted to paint it as part of the arts-in-progress function of the Golden Gate International Exposition, which saw the mural completed and then on display at the San Francisco-sponsored World's Fair on Treasure Island.

Twenty-two feet high, 75 feet long and composed in ten separate panels, the mural was presented to the college when the fair closed.

With no facilities at that time to mount the mural, it was packed in protective covering and stored near the men's gymnasium.

In 1958, when the arts building was in the planning stage, there were those in the city who went on record in opposition to a Rivera work becoming one of the college's art treasures. There were others, equally vocal, who praised it as a masterpiece, literally Rivera's "biggest and best," as he himself had described it.

In the controversy that developed, however, the city's Board of Education preserved the Rivera mural for the college by assisting in making provision for mounting it in the theater lobby when plans were being drawn for the theater arts building.

Part of the controversy was because Rivera was considered responsible for bringing Trotzky to Mexico. Later he broke from such association, stating that "Communist revolution leads only to totalitarian dictatorship."

Weekend Action

Net Title Decided Friday; Mermen Steal League 3rd

By David Kleinberg

FOOTHILL (Friday, April 19) — In matches interrupted four times by rain, City College's netters ripped apart Foothill's Owls, 6-1, to set up a head-on-head clash with College of San Mateo for the Golden Gate Conference title Friday.

The two clubs, carrying identical undefeated records of 6-0, meet in the last match of the season at 2:30 p.m. in Golden Gate Park with an exciting secondary attraction—the league's top two ranked men, the Rams' Bobby Siska and CSM's Henry Kamakana.

Siska, for the first time this season, may have slipped into the underdog role after taking his 1963 initial GGC beating, when the Owls' Horst Ritter upset the 20-year-old lefthander in two quickies, 6-3, 6-3.

The German kept Siska off balance with accurately placed backhands to collect the only Foothill win of the rainy day.

The remaining Ram four, almost equal in strength, combined talents to quell Owl title hopes and reduce the losers' record to 4-2.

Little but talented Rich Anderson had the most difficulty, rallying back from a 4-5 deficit in the first set to win 7-5, then beat Owl Doug Voffbrink, 6-4, in the second set to wrap it up.

No. 2 man Bob Murio took Kelly Moss, 6-3, 6-4, while Gordon Miller had an easy time with George Hawkes, 6-1, 6-1. But Murio and Miller were not through for the day.

In doubles, they played more than two hours before defeating Foothill's Voffbrink and Hawkes in three long sets, 7-5, 3-6, 9-7; and Siska and aggressive Ed Jilka stopped Ritter and Moss, 9-7, 6-2.

Jack Kern, who was dropped from second to fifth man this year when Miller and Murio joined the club from Washington and Lowell, whipped Jerry Kilvorn, 6-4, 6-0.

SAN JOSE (Saturday, April 20)—Dead last after the first day of competition, the Rams splashed back and overtook San Jose, Chabot and San Mateo to capture a surprising third in the Golden Gate Conference swimming championships.

As expected, Foothill, possibly the best two-year club in the nation, won the title with an overwhelming 247½ points, but failed in its quest to break several national marks in the cold, rainy two-day meet.

Oakland, a powerhouse in the old Big Eight, took second with 50, then came the sneaky Rams with 35½.

After six events on Friday, the Rams had accumulated only six points. Even that was disappointment. The Rams' only once-beaten medley relay of Chuck Greninger, Herm Fruchtenicht, Mark Haskell and Fred Wales settled for fourth with a slow 4:39.0.

Ram diver Dave Stone started the comeback Saturday by executing one perfect dive after another to take fourth in the three-meter competition with 157.75 points.

In the next event, Haskell went out fast and held on for a 2:40.7 clocking and a third in the 200 fly.

Fruchtenicht followed with a fifth in the 200 breast with a 2:42.4.

Rich Gray took over and recorded a nice 2:01.3 for a third in the 200 free. Gray returned with a fourth in the 100 in 54.5.

Fruchtenicht kept the ball rolling by placing third in the 100 breast stroke with 1:11.1.

Greninger accounted for an important point as he placed sixth in the 1650-yard free with a 22:10.7. In the 100 fly, the Rams' Gray (1:00.7) and Haskell finished fifth and sixth.

The 400 free relay proved to be a rarity as Higman, Wales, Haskell and Gray clipped off 3:52.1 to Oakland's 3:52.2, but the T-Birds were awarded third place by the judges.

The Rams will appear in the NorCal championships this Friday at Visalia.

Muddy Field Hurts Track Team's Hopes

By Dave Kleinberg

A COLLEGE decision three years ago to forget about the installation of an all-weather track here has received its most serious kickback this year.

With recent inclement weather, coach Lou Vasquez has had an extremely difficult time whipping his club into top form. They had two postponements in March, and downpours on practice days have had an even worse effect.

The college track, in the first place, is in horrible condition. Kezar stadium is the location for all home college meets. The college doesn't even attempt to schedule meets here.

On a rainy day, practice on the college track is impossible.

When work began on the track in 1959, the athletic department was asked what kind of a track it wanted. The answer was an all-weather track, a track made of rubberized asphalt, which requires little maintenance and is built to last. Foothill College has this type track. It has been in constant use.

The all-weather track was still in the experimental stage and expensive. The college then decided to proceed with a standard track.

As one Ram coach put it, "We got this thing, and we can't use it."

IN LAST YEAR'S state tennis championships, the Rams trailed Santa Monica, going into the final match of the day—the doubles.

A victory in the doubles (Bob Siska had already been upset in the singles final) would give San Francisco a one-point win, but Santa Monica wasn't about to let it happen.

Wayne Collett, one-half of the Santa Monica tandem, talked with Bob Bigman, a recent transfer from San Francisco, who was versed on the Ram abilities.

Collett wanted to know about the Rams' Ed Jilka. Santa Monica knew about Siska. Did Jilka have any weaknesses?

Bigman told Collett that Jilka had no overhand.

Jilka probably has the best overhand on the squad and sometimes resembles a wildman at the net.

It took Santa Monica one set to find out. "He just murdered them," coach Roy Diederichsen offered. "They kept trying the lobs, and Jilka kept smashing it down their throats."

The scores were 6-4, 6-3.

RA 'Traditional' On Tap Thursday

City College's traditional "feud and feed" volleyball sports night will be held with the College of Marin at 5 p.m. tomorrow in the women's gymnasium.

At 5 p.m. toss-up games will be played for practice.

A chicken dinner, prepared by Maude Reidy, custodian and caretaker of the women's gymnasium, will be served. Following the dinner a round robin tournament will be played.

The College of Marin will host a co-educational sports day this Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in its college gymnasium in Kentfield.

RA needs a tennis tandem for the mixed doubles competitions for the sports day.

Archery, bowling, tennis and volleyball are the four sports on the agenda. After registration at 8:30 a.m., coffee and doughnuts will be served. At 9 a.m. the sports activities will begin.

On Wednesday, May 1, the RA folk dancing club will host a folk dancing evening for its alumni and present RA members.

Baseballers Take On Lowly Vikings In Comeback Attempt

The Ram baseball club, which had its championship hopes refined out in last Saturday's double-header with league-leading San Mateo, will try to salvage something when the Rams clash with San Jose City College Friday, and with Diablo Valley next Tuesday.

The horsehiders had little rest during the Easter interim, and emerged from the holiday with a 3-2 seasonal total. The club shows a win and a loss on conference charts for the period. City College topped Oakland, 8-4, but the Rams were shut out by Contra Costa, 4-0.

In nonconference action, the Rams stopped the University of San Francisco Frosh, 3-1, and bombed San Francisco State's Frosh, 11-1. At the Easter week break the standings were:

	W	L	GB		W	L	GB
San Mateo	5	1	...	Oakland	2	3	2½
Foothill	3	1	1	Chabot	2	3	2½
San Francisco	3	2	1½	Contra Costa	1	4	3½
San Jose	3	2	1½	Diablo Valley	1	4	3½

"Rich Nold (3-0) is one of the best pitchers in the league, and Ronnie Bringle is long overdue for a win," coach Larry Lawson said.

The Rams' big hitting came in their most recent contest when they beat State's Frosh, 11-1. Slugger Walt Williams went an amazing six for seven.

"San Jose is good and Foothill is powerful, but Diablo Valley is weaker. That's the best way I size up the rest of the season," Lawson said.

Bringle took the loss in the Contra Costa opener, with the team committing six errors and collecting only two hits. Clarence Jenkins doubled for the only threat but was left on base.

Bringle hopes to even the score in the second game with Contra Costa, which was postponed because of rain.

Golfers Squeak By Owls, 16-14; San Jose Is Next

After a hard-fought 16-14 win over the tough Foothill Owls, the Ram golfers go hunting for the Jaguars of San Jose City College at Almaden Friday in an attempt to strengthen their hold on second place in the Golden Gate Conference race.

Despite heavy rain, the Klemmermen played their best match of the season against Foothill. The scoring for the Rams was well balanced with Dennis Drucker, John Steddin and Mike Selsnik all firing 76's, while Jim Roman shot 79. John Bruggers lead the Owls with a 75.

Playing the long, narrow and difficult Burlingame Country Club course, the Rams were no match for defending state champion San Mateo and lost to the Bulldogs, 25½-4½, but rebounded handsomely in the Foothill match to anchor second place in the standings with a 3-1 record.

In the match against San Mateo, Drucker shot a 78 while Steddin, Roman, Selsnik and Rich Orme shot in the 80's. The loss of Steddin through ineligibility will weaken the team considerably.

Intramural Teams On Scoring Spree

Associated Men Student intramural basketball play resumed last week with one of the highest scoring games thus far this season.

With the help of Hershell Hollie's 19 points, the Divine Ones soundly defeated the Brothers Five, 78-26, in the independent league.

Alpha Phi Epsilon romped over Alpha Kappa Rho, 70-18, and Zeta Phi Sigma downed Beta Tau, 52-14, in the fraternity league.

Independent play also saw the Turnbulls' Blues edge out Hotel & Restaurant, 27-26, and the Newman Club defeat the Hawaiian Bla's, 42-20.

In independent action tonight it's Red Sox vs. Divine Ones, Untouchables vs. Newman Club, Filipino Club vs. Hawaiian Bla's, and Turnbulls' Blues vs. Brothers Five.

Spikers Head For NorCal Relays

Lou Vasquez and his spikers are scheduled for an appearance in the Northern California relays at Foothill's all-weather track next Saturday. Most of the two-year colleges in the Golden Gate Conference are expected to appear.

The Rams came away from their Easter vacation triangular meet against San Mateo and Chabot with a split.

San Mateo downed City College, 81-41, while the Rams destroyed Chabot, 104-17. The triangle score was San Mateo 90, San Francisco 55, Chabot 6.

"We fell off our pace against San Mateo, and the times were the worst this season," Vasquez said.

The Rams took three firsts, and the only Ram outstanding marks were Ozzie Norris' 1:57.7 in the 880, and Lon Brantley's broad jump effort of 22-11.

Once In Bleachers—Now On Courts

GUARDSMAN PHOTOGRAPHER Herbert Slodounik perched himself behind a cyclone fence to capture this excellent shot of precocious Rich Anderson.

"I just started playing tennis with friends, invested in a racquet and kept on playing."

This is the formula Rich Anderson used to elevate himself from spectator to No. 3 man on the Ram tennis team.

During the summer of 1960, Anderson started playing tennis with a group of friends, and before the summer had ended was easily beating all his original opponents. By playing whenever possible, he added experience to innate talent.

In Spring 1961, Anderson went out for tennis at Lincoln and at season's end was number four man. He entered the college in Fall 1961, and fell into the hands of coach Roy Diederichsen. Anderson credits Diederichsen with "taking me when I was not very good and really helping me."

With adequate coaching added to his natural ability, he held fifth spot on the championship Ram squad last year.

Last summer, while at a tournament in Sacramento, the 18-year-old was invited to spend two weeks with Bill Beale, a retired tennis coach. Watching Anderson's every move, Beale gave him pointers on how to make his forehand more effective and corrected minor faults in his backhand.

This season he has moved from number four man to number three, ranking with newcomer Bob Murio, and is strong in doubles. He is ranked 17th in Northern California, and came within one point of upsetting John Beste from Stanford in the Cal Invitational.

On March 10, he captured the city-wide tournament at Golden Gate Park in doubles, teamed with Erich Van Dillen.

When asked if he ever thought of quitting, Anderson admitted that once he started he was hooked and would never give it up.

—By F.W.

ANDERSON, a Lincoln graduate, moves back to control this shot. He is 17th ranked in Northern California and will be a key man in the state championships this year.

AS Nomination Convention Scheduled Monday

By Herm Kligerman

Nominations for Fall 1963 Associated Student officers will be accepted at an open nominating convention set for two sessions, one from 2 to 5 p.m., and another from 7 to 10 p.m. next Monday in Smith Hall, Election Commissioner Tony Taormina announced this week.

Petitions for office will be distributed at the convention and be available through next week in the AS office, S-134. The deadline for filing the forms is Monday, May 13, according to Taormina.

Each candidate, in addition to being an AS member himself, must have his petition signed by 15 other AS cardholders.

Nominations will be accepted at each session with a summary of what had occurred earlier presented during the evening meeting. The assembly will also be asked to approve the nominations as a whole, Taormina added.

Taormina will preside at the convention with assistance from this semester's AS President Bill Silver.

All campus organizations are urged to be represented at this third semi-annual convention. These groups, through its representative, are eligible to nominate officers, but Taormina emphasized that "any student may put a name on the ballot."

A special section of Smith Hall will be reserved for "students-at-large."

The person nominating a candidate is expected to give a 30-second description of his qualifications. The candidate, or a proxy, is also expected to present a brief speech in his own behalf.

"I urge all potential candidates to attend at least one session," Taormina remarked, adding that he hopes to make the affair "more formal than in the past."

The newly organized RAMS party is expected to hold its own nominating meeting prior to next week's open convention. Its recommendations for fall semester officers will be included among other nominations made at the general meeting.

Any student may petition to run for any AS office following the convention, but he must secure an official form from Taormina and return it, properly filled out, by the specified deadline Monday, May 18.

Contested offices are those of AS president, vice president, Associated Men Student president, Associated Women Student president, Freshman Class president and Sophomore Class president.

Also to be filled are seven freshman seats and seven sophomore seats, respectively, on council.

"Everyone is qualified for some position," Taormina said, adding, "No one office is more important than another."

According to the Constitution of the Associated Students of the college, qualifications for each AS position are as follows:

"The president and vice president shall have completed at least 42 and not more than 60 units prior to taking office, with an overall grade point average of 2.3.

"The AMS and AWS president shall have completed at least 30 and not more than 60 units, with an overall grade point average of 2.2, prior to taking office.

"The Sophomore Class president shall have completed at least 28 and not more than 60 units, prior to taking office.

"The Freshman Class president shall have completed at least 14 and not more than 27½ units prior to taking office."

The same qualifications prevail for respective class council members.

AS elections are scheduled for Tuesday, May 21, and Wednesday, May 22.

Sir Francis Drake Site Of ISC Cotillion Friday

The Inter-Sorority Council will present its Spring Cotillion ball from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday in the Empire Room of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel.

The Cotillion is held each spring semester to present the sorority pledges. The actual ceremonies will be short this semester, because of the unusually small pledge class of 16, Carole Rubino, ISC president, said.

Tickets are now on sale for $2 per couple. They may be purchased either at the student bank in Smith Hall or in Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150. Because there is a limited supply of tickets they will be sold on a first-come first-served basis, Miss Rubino emphasized, adding that no tickets will be sold at the door.

Dress for the affair will be semi-formal, dark suits and ties for the men and cocktail dresses for the women.

Corsages will be worn by sorority members. Miss Rubino explained that each sorority will be recognized by its respective flower.

Music for the traditional affair will be supplied by Sal Vance's dance band. There will also be special entertainment provided by the sororities.

The equivalent of the Spring Cotillion is the Fall Presents, held to introduce the fall pledges.

Sorority presidents and their respective sponsors are, for Delta Psi, Mimi Travis and Marion McDermott; for Delta Sigma Tau, Gloria Witherspoon and Olga Perkins; for Kappa Phi, Claudia Vasquez and Katherine Hondrias; for Phi Beta Rho, Margo Braghetta and Norma Carlisle, and for Theta Tau, Miss Rubino and Norene Smith.

Fifty Teams To Participate In Recruitment Day

Fifty teams, representing business, industry and government, from five Bay Area counties will participate in the eighth annual engineering-business recruitment day next Wednesday.

Two hundred prospective graduates from 35 training programs will assemble, planning full-time positions, Joseph A. Amori, placement director and recruitment day chairman, said.

Recruitment day, Amori explained, was initiated eight years ago "to expedite the process of uniting the graduate and employer on a mutual basis."

The policy brings to the campus scientific, technical and business representatives.

Prospective employers will conduct personal interviews with the June, 1963, and February, 1964, graduates.

Thirty electronic majors and 27 secretarial majors lead the total of 200 prospective graduates from the eight engineering technological programs and the 25 programs in business and allied fields.

Accounting, advertising art and photography follow with the greatest number of graduates.

The program starts at 8 a.m. in Smith Hall with the traditional orientation breakfast, at which Amori will outline details of operation.

Representing the Ampex Corporation of Redwood City, Joseph Metzger, vice president for personnel and industrial relations, will speak on "utilization of two-year technicians in business, industry and government."

The college placement center serves as the coordinating force in the recruitment program.

Amori explained that recruitment day is the culmination of two years of work centered around students, counselors, administration and instruction.

College Hour Film Titles Will Be Posted In C-239

Titles of films for the rest of this semester's College Hour series will not be available for prior announcement, according to audio-visual aids instructor Jack Whitby.

Titles of the films are to be posted in C-239 on Tuesdays prior to the College Hour showing in S-136.

A film list for the second half of the semester was submitted too late for the college to obtain the films chosen.

Forum Through 27 Years

Content Reflects Literary Trend

By Chris Welzig

Twenty-seven years ago, in 1936, a discussion club conceived the idea of a magazine in which students here could see their creative writing efforts published.

Forum Magazine thus saw its creation and in time became a traditional part of the college.

The magazine was founded and developed under the guidance of the late Dorothy Mercer, pioneer English instructor, and this year celebrates its 28th publication under the direction of Catherine Connolly, now faculty adviser to Forum.

A review of the 27 magazines shows that yearly literary contributions reflect not only the American public's attitude during each period but also the trend of American literature during such periods.

In the magazine's first publication (with the country still in the throes of the depression), a view of the American's desolate, Skidrow approach to life was evident.

With the rise of Bohemianism in the early '50's, the magazine assumed an off-beat tone which has continued somewhat through present publications.

The close of the Second World War brought hordes of veterans back to college campuses, and their presence was felt in the "blood and guts" stories published in Forum.

For example, in the 1946 Forum Summer Night by J. A. Kershaw began with the line, "The moon is full to rottenness."

Other years have seen a preponderance of romantically tainted literature offered to Forum editorial panels for consideration and publication.

The 1963 version of Forum comes out in June, and with it, another reflection of trends in American literature.

Luckmann Reveals Plans For Informal Commencement

An informal commencement assembly has been officially scheduled for Friday, May 31, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, announced yesterday.

On that day all prospective graduates will gather in the college theater instead of attending their 10 a.m. classes. (This will be from 10:50 to 11:30 a.m. because of the College Hour schedule.)

Attendance at the ceremonies will be regarded as regular 10 o'clock class attendance, and nonattendance will be regarded as an absence from a regularly scheduled class, Luckmann said.

The administration cancelled the formal ceremonies this year because of lack of interest and attendance during past exercises. Last year only 150 of 809 graduates attended. (The 809 included both Fall 1961 and Spring 1962 graduates.)

Luckmann stated that the previous commencement program will remain relatively the same. Presentation of awards, along with a program by the orchestra and choir will be included in the ceremonies.

Plans are also being made to telecast the exercises over closed circuit television.

Luckmann noted that normal college attire will be acceptable dress for the exercises.

College President Louis G. Conlan stated that he does not consider it uncommon for a two-year college to hold informal ceremonies. Work conflicts, family vacations and other personal matters seem to be the main reason for nonattendance, he said.

All prospective graduates will receive postcards telling them of the administration plans, Luckmann explained.

Student Council Approves Motion Calling For Special Vote On Open AS Elections

Student Council, its goal to open future Associated Student elections to all registered students, last week approved a motion calling for a special election Friday, May 10.

Purpose of the election will be to decide whether to retain or delete Article IX, paragraph 3, of the Constitution of the Associated Students of City College of San Francisco which reads:

"A member of the Associated Students may have the full privileges of electing student officers for the forthcoming semester."

This same issue prompted a similar special election last semester. At that time, AS cardholders voted to retain the paragraph, and the AS voting that semester was limited to AS members.

Council member Rich Thomas brought the issue to light again last week. Student Council vote on the proposal was six for, none opposed with five abstentions. Since the motion needed a two-thirds majority to pass, AS President Bill Silver cast the deciding vote in favor of the amendment and special election.

Tony Taormina, election commissioner, stated that open elections would be beneficial to the college and "especially to clubs and organizations here."

Only AS cardholders may vote in the special election. A two-thirds majority of those casting ballots is needed for the motion to pass or fail.

Students will be asked to vote "yes" if they want the paragraph in question deleted, or "no" if they want it retained.

Polls will be set up at the silver pole in Science Hall, at the entrance to the library and at the entrance to the fountain section of the cafeteria.

AS Card Holders To Vote On Proposed Amendment

Associated Student cardholders will vote either to retain or delete a proposed amendment from the Constitution of the AS of the college on Friday, May 10. The amendment reads as follows:

"WHEREAS, in the past election the Associated Student officers have only represented a small per cent of the student body, and

"WHEREAS, non-Associated Student cardholders should have a voice in their college's governmental organization,

"THEREFORE, let it be resolved that Article IX, Paragraph 3, of the By-laws in the Associated Student Constitution be deleted in order to allow all students to participate in the Associated Student elections."

Campus Police Add 17 Recruits To Present Force

The college's Campus Police force was supplemented by the swearing in of 17 recruits April 17.

The additional forces will help crack down on recent car thefts from the campus, Tom Cain, Campus Police chief, stated today.

The past month has seen an increase in theft of valuables from parked cars, and even the cars have been stolen in several cases, Cain said, as he offered the following advice to the Associated Students at the college:

"After you park your car, take the few extra seconds necessary to roll up your windows, close the wind wings and lock your doors.

"If you must leave books and clothing inside the car, use your trunk or glove compartment or place them under the seat.

"Cooperate with the Campus Police by reporting suspicious persons lingering around the parking lots."

Cain stated that, what with the additions to the Campus Police, the parking lot thievery should suffer a sharp decline.

Cain also added that at recent California State Pistol Championship competition at Fort Ord, the campus pistol team took third place in the .22 and .38 national matches and placed fourth in the .45 match.

Hourly Carillons To Replace Buzzers In Fall Semester

Simulated carillons, which will ring from the roof of Science Hall, will replace the present buzzer system by next semester, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, explained yesterday.

"The system will strike a more collegiate tone on campus," Luckmann emphasized.

Although a typical carillon strikes the quarter-hour, the system planned for the college provides a chime announcing the hour, followed by the carillon striking the hours from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Currently, the buzzers are gauged to ring on the hour and ten minutes afterward; however, the carillon system, operating on a timed tape recording principle, eliminates the second buzzer, now common to City College and the local high schools.

Buzzers used to call the custodians and announce the time to craft workers will be maintained.

All the equipment is available and the simulated carillons will be installed in time for the fall semester.

Trends On Campus Reflect Changing College Program Of Scholastic Betterment

SIMILAR to the 55 semesters that preceded this one, several new interests and trends were established on campus during the last three months. Some were successful, like the establishment of the College Hour debating program. Others were not; they were launched, progressed slowly, floundered and failed, then were reactivated, like the college's Alma Mater contest.

Those who succeeded probably created another college tradition like the blood drive. Those who failed probably profited from their mistakes and may be relieved that their oversights will not be duplicated by future generations of students.

To analyze these trends and interests, they must be divided into two groups—academic and extracurricular.

EMPHASIS ON BETTER GRADES

Academically, there has been a definite emphasis on better grades. This emphasis was marked by last month's initiation of a new honors list. Comprised of names of students maintaining a 3.5 or higher grade average, the list not only recognizes top student ability, it also is an added incentive for the attainment of better grades.

Its very existence is a poignant example of the college administration's attitude toward a more academically geared collegiate population.

Louis G. Conlan, college president, recently emphasized this viewpoint. He said, "There will be no more room for students who go to college to eat their lunches and waste time . . . It would be impossible for a student to be successful in college, work on the outside and participate in all the extracurricular activities offered here.

STUDIES TAKE PRECEDENT

"A happy medium must be reached, but I cannot overemphasize that students should not become lax in studies in order to take part in other functions."

This point of view is illustrated by the functions of the Kiwanis Club that is currently attempting to establish its group on campus. Alhough the club is primarily interested in sports activities, tutoring, scholarships, blood donor and fund raising drives, it still requires its members to maintain a 3.3 grade average; this group maintains the "happy medium" which Conlan emphasized.

FACULTY APPROVAL OF C-HOUR CHANGE

The trend toward this emphasis on scholarship was again stressed last month when the Faculty Association approved the change in College Hour time and day for next semester.

Currently, College Hour begins Friday at 10 a.m. and concludes at 10:40 a.m., resulting in a ten minute loss from each class scheduled from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. However, next semester College Hour is slated for 11 a.m. Thursdays; its duration will be 60 minutes, and there will be no loss of class time, because no classes will be scheduled for that 11 o'clock hour.

The key point here is that under the new plan no class time will be sacrificed for extracurricular activities—a point that leads to the topic of nonacademic campus activities.

EDUCATION TEMPERED WITH ENTERTAINMENT, PHILANTHROPY

Conlan's contention that extracurricular functions should not take precedence over studies, and the Faculty Association's plan that maintains a maximum class schedule, strike the key note for this semester's extracurricular theme: education tempered with entertainment and philanthropy.

With few exceptions, present campus activities are geared more toward the didactic than ever before. New college organizations have a sounder basis of rapport than ever before. Social activities seem to ramify from an academic and philanthropic center, not vice versa. For instance, the new Circle K club requires its members to maintain a 3.3 grade average.

C-HOUR EVENTS COINCIDE WITH CLASS WORK

And most College Hour events this semester have been extensions of class work. Each Friday there seemed to have been a greater myriad of concerts, educational movies and lectures than ever before.

March 8, for example, David Abel, noted San Francisco violinist, performed here—a boon to music students. March 22 a film on real estate was shown here—beneficial to real estate majors. April 26 Walter S. Nolan, principal of Herbert Hoover Junior High School, lectured here—advantageous to aspiring school teachers.

NUCLEUS OF SCHOLASTICISM

Concerning campus social events, most all profits derived from fraternal and club dances and activities are now used for scholarships and donations to deserving individuals. Some of the proceeds from Council of Organizations' May 10 spring festival will be donated to the Peace Corps, and Alpha Phi Omega's zany Ugly Man On Campus contest is designed to earn a profit which will be donated to the Scholarship Committee.

From these trends and interests stems the corollary that faculty and administrative policy stresses the academics, and that major steps were made to channel more students toward scholastic accomplishments. As a result, during the last three months student activities have revolved around a nucleus of scholastics.

'Slay Your Own Dragon, Lady!'

Secret Society Strives For Final Death Of Chivalry

By Boyd Burtnett

The outcry from American womanhood today is that there is no more chivalry left in the world.

"Chivalry" is used here in the same sense as St. George slaying dragons to protect maidens and Sir Walter Raleigh spreading out his cloak to keep the feet of a queen dry.

True, this does not happen anymore very often.

But a band of brave men has advanced a theory upon this subject. This band will have to remain nameless to protect its members from their wives, sweethearts, mothers, and other forms of women they might encounter in the course of their daily life.

A spokesman for this organization has summed up the theory in one statement. "Women are not exposed to chivalry anymore because they no longer rate it."

He went on to say that chivalry was nothing more than courtesies extended to the female sex in that they were considered inferior to men. There was a time when even women believed in this basic postulate, and therefore accepted these courtesies like a dog accepts a pat on the head.

But that feeling did not last long. Soon women proclaimed themselves not only better than originally supposed, but actually claimed themselves equal to men in all respects.

With this last statement the spokesman paused and giggled to himself as if he had unleashed a gigantic joke. Then he continued.

Today men are in fierce competition with women, and yet the fair sex still expects its "pat on the head." The spokesman said that he and his compatriots see no reason why they should be the instruments of their own destruction and so they have declared war.

From their underground meeting place, this secret society has advanced the following set of rules to bring about the final death of chivalry:

1. Hold the door open for a lady, and at the proper time let it swing back into her face.

2. When taking women on a date, be certain to enrich the customary box of candy with a liberal supply of cayenne pepper.

3. When an argument as to a lady's honor is in progress, always take the side of the antagonist.

4. Let the women slay their own dragons.

And with that the spokesman slipped into his trench coat, pulled his hat down over his eyes, and stepped out into the street to perform his dirty yet necessary tasks.

Help Wanted: Embalmer Job Presently Open

Yuri Popenoff was looking for a job. Any job would do. Last year he had gotten a job as a "chicken plucker," but that was only seasonal and he was soon out of work.

Yuri pondered for a moment. The job as "chicken plucker" had been a good job, and it had prepared him for his next job as "animal embalmer." This had really been a great job. It was one with a future.

All day long Yuri would work away in the carpentry shop making caskets for people's "dear departed" pets. In the evening he would arrange the little bodies, their furry little paws across their chests for that last "trip to the great beyond."

Despite these interesting jobs, Yuri found himself yearning for one that would be peaceful and quiet. A job where he would not have to talk with people. For Yuri was very antisocial.

As before, Yuri went to the college placement office and was immediately given a lead. Yuri was to be a morgue attendant at a San Francisco hospital. The pay was good, with room for advancement. But, he was warned, that this was no job for "dead weight."

And so Yuri got his wish. He has a job where he doesn't have to talk with people. All day long he sits in the dim, dark recesses of the basement singing Time On My Hands, I Ain't Got Nobody, or whistling the first movement of Beethoven's Death March.

However, if you should not want a job like Yuri's and are seeking summer employment, the placement office is the place to go. Located in S-184, a variety of jobs await the qualified. Anything from morgue attendant to counseling at summer camps are a few of the jobs that await the qualified student or the student with specialized skills. Who knows? You, too, can be a chicken plucker or a morgue attendant . . .

Avant Guardsman!

AMERICANS are very proud of their country, as well as their washing machines, television sets and . . . their presidents and more recently, their wives.

The presidents of the United States are subjects of continuous popular interest and scholarly research. About these 34 men, countless books have been published—individual and collective biographies, academic studies, political analyses and pictorial histories.

And yet abundant facts characteristic of these presidents still remain unknown to a good majority of the American people.

Considering presidents' death statistics, for instance, no president died in the month of May, but seven of the 34 died in July. Two presidents, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, died on the same day, July 4, 1826.

There is also General Grant's literary career, in which one of the best-paying books of its time and still high on the all-time list, was his Memoirs. Royalties amounted to an estimated $500,000. Grant himself never saw the book in type, as he died four days after he had completed the manuscript. The book was published in 1885.

Or compare the nicknames and sobriquets of the presidents: James Buchanan — the only bachelor president — was called Old Buck; John Adams was Old Sink or Swim; Lincoln, Grand Wrestler; Chester Arthur (noted for his refinement in clothing) was America's First Gentleman (later Prince Arthur) and Franklin D. Roosevelt was simply That Man In The White House.

What about the last words of the presidents? Madison: "I always talk better lying down." Whiskey-soaked Grant: "Water!" Benjamin Harrison: "Are the doctors here? Doctor . . . my lungs." Franklin Roosevelt: "I have a terrific headache."

Concerning the presidents' sports and hobbies, some were real enthusiasts, some participated mildly. "Teddy" Roosevelt practiced jujitsu, Coolidge pitched hay, Garfield played billiards, while Hayes played croquet and Hoover tossed the medicine ball.

As for the presidents' musical accomplishments, very few had mnsical training and few had the ability to play musical instruments. Jefferson and Tyler played the violin, Truman the piano and Coolidge the harmonica (keep cool, man). Harding played the alto horn and the cornet as a young man (when he wasn't gambling).

Another interesting fact to note is Andrew Jackson's famed talent as a duelist. History records a duel in which Jackson killed his opponent, Charles Dickinson, one of the best pistol shots in the United States. Dickinson, it seems, had made some derogatory remarks about Mrs. Jackson, which resulted in Jackson's invitation to a duel.

They met on May 30, 1806, at Harrison's Mills (Ky.). They stood 24 fect apart with pistols pointed downward and at the signal, Dickinson fired first, breaking some of Jackson's ribs and grazing his breastbone. Jackson, without flinching, maintained his position and fired. His shot proved mortal.

And finally, on November 7, 1876, a gang of thieves and counterfeiters broke into Lincoln's tomb at Springfield, Illinois, tore open the sarcophagus and partially pulled out the Lincoln casket. They intended to cart the casket by wagon, bury it in the sand dunes of Indiana and demand $2,000,000 for its return.

A Pinkerton detective to whom they had confided their plans agreed to help them. Instead, he notified the Secret Service, worked with the conspirators and gave the signal which enabled the Secret Service to make the arrests.

What Is Your Major; Why Did You Choose This Field?

By Kent Mitchell

Sandy Castelli, freshman:

My major is airline stewardess training. I chose this because of the many interesting and fascinating experiences in this field. I love to travel and while doing this I also have the opportunity to learn the ways and languages of peoples in foreign countries.

SANDY CASTELLI

"My major is airline stewardess, and I chose this because I love to travel."

Edmund Turner, sophomore:

Science is my major. I decided to take this because it is an interesting field and has always fascinated me. The field of science is never-ending, and there is always something more to learn. You also work with the realization that everything you do benefits mankind.

James McNeil, freshman:

Political science has always interested me so I decided to major in it. Political science concerns many phases of business and law, and therefore gives me an insight in either field that I choose to enter. I plan to go to law school upon graduation.

Louise Dominique, freshman:

Dental assisting is my major. I'm taking this for the simple reason that someday I want to do this kind of work. Although this occupation doesn't offer the rewards and self-satisfaction that being a dentist or doctor does, it is the next best thing to it.

Judy Scott, sophomore:

I elected to take English for my major. I have always done well in it and I never lose interest. English is one of the most useful subjects there is, and there is always the opportunity to learn something new about the language. I hope to teach English in grammar school.

Bob Dunn, sophomore:

I decided to take physical education for my major because I would like to be a teacher. This is an interesting field to teach and also enables me to coach athletic teams. Some people think that it's just a knowledge of sports, while actually it's more involved.

Tom Grant, freshman:

Business administration. I'm taking this because of the many variations of business operations and phases it offers. Although primarily dealing with accounting, it gives me a chance to learn the different aspects of business administration and office management.

Joyce Richter, sophomore:

I plan to major in psychology and minor in education. I chose this major because, before marriage, I would like to go into the field of public relations, and after marriage I plan to return to school for a year to get my teaching credentials.

Students Discuss Five Main Topics At Annual COO Problems Convention

Students had a chance to voice their opinions on campus difficulties at the third annual Council of Organizations Problems Convention held in Smith Hall on April 16.

Those present discussed and made suggestions on the following five topics: provision of more quiet study space, how to increase student participation in elections, how to improve campus appearance, working toward a more orderly social calendar, and better communication between student leaders and the student body as a whole.

Dean Mary Goiding, Dean Raiph Hillsman and Student Government Adviser Sherm Elworthy were the faculty members present to listen to the criticisms and suggestions offered by anyone who wished to do so.

COO Chairman Vince Contreras said the purpose of the convention was not just to critiize but to offer constructive suggestions as to how campus problems can be alleviated.

One major note of optimism was voiced at the meet. The new Student Union is expected to open in the spring semester of 1964.

The old "student union," The Shack, was closed last semester because of gambling and vandalism. The building is presently being used for meetings by groups with responsible supervision.

Some major suggestions were made to alleviate supposed campus problems at the convention. Contreras said administration and student government leaders will give these consideration and do something about them if they feel there is a need.

It was proposed that a new vending machine be installed on campus on a trial basis, to see if it would pay for itself. This machine would dispense soup, fresh fruit, orange juice and the like.

A proposition that the library should open at 7:30 a.m., a half hour earlier than at present, to give early arriving students a place to study, is being considered.

In connection with the library, it was suggested that instructors who make library assignments vary them occasionally, because certain books and catalogue cards are subject to excessive wear through constant use.

A new student "circulation" plan for the busy hours in the cafeteria was put forward.

The plan calls for making the north door an entrance and the southwest doors an exit. Under the present setup, the plan said, students using the fountain portion of the cafeteria must enter the southwest doors and walk to the north end of Smith Hall to secure a seat and then return to the fountain to get their food.

It was also suggested that a delegation be sent to a Faculty Association meeting to ask instructors to cooperate with the broadcasters of the campus radio station, KCSF, by quieting the class during the morning broadcasts.

Considered the most important proposition put forward at the convention was one to section off a portion of the reservoir to be used by students for pay parking. In addition, the Associated Students would allocate enough money to the Campus Police force to maintain the new section.

At the same time, it was suggested, the police officer in charge of the proposed parking lot would provide security for all cars in the reservoir subject to vandalism and theft.

Just what portion of the reservoir was to be sectioned off for pay-parking and what fee was to be levied was not discussed. Half of the reservoir belongs to Riordan High School to be used for parking purposes.—By B.B.

Merchandising Club Shows Men's Fashions On May 17

A men's fashion show will be presented during College Hour Friday, May 17, in the theater, Raymond Cognasso, Merchandising Club officer, stated today.

Roos-Atkins Men's Stores, in cooperation with the college Merchandising Club and with the aid of other campus organizations, will participate in the show. It will be open to the general public, and students are especially invited to attend, Cognasso said.

He explained that approximately 40 outfits will be exhibited by 18 models. The models will be from various campus clubs and organizations.

The attire to be displayed will range from suits to beach wear. A good deal of casual collegiate wear will be shown. "It is hoped that the wide variety of outfits and styles will reach the interest of a vast number of students," Cognasso stated.

The fashion show will also be a contest. Models will compete against one another for one of three first spots. The model judged best will receive a $20 award; the second prize is $10, and the third prize is $5.

Monique Benoit, San Francisco Chronicle columnist, will describe each outfit.

"Last year we had a men's fashion show which was quite successful but may have been remiss in publicity," Cognasso stated. This year the Merchandising Club hopes to extend extensive publicity through announcements, press and posters.

Choral Concert Set For May 10

College Hour Friday, May 10, will see the annual Choral Concert performed in the theater, under supervision of music instructors Galen Marshall and Richard Fenner.

The concert will feature four groups: the A Cappella Choir, Chamber Choir, Women's Choir and Men's Glee.

Classical and semiclassical works will be featured on the program.

In addition to the College Hour performance, the choral groups will offer a more extensive program on Tuesday, May 14, in the college theater. The concert is scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. and conclude at 10 p.m., Marshall said.

In Trenton, New Jersey, it is against the law to play a harmonica on the city streets on Sunday, without a special permit.

'Emphasis On Curriculum For Prospective Grads'—Luckmann

By Herm Kligerman

Purpose of the college's division of instruction is to make certain that the curriculum offered here is adequately preparing students for further progress after graduation, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of the division, stated in a recent interview.

Luckmann, himself, is directly concerned with the liberal arts and professional fields, which encompass courses from laboratory sciences through journalism to the nurse-training program.

Additional departmental duties are divided among four others, including coordinator Louis Batmale, Dean William Mayo and acting Deans James Billwiller and John Gerstung. In his association with the division of instruction, Batmale is coordinator of technical-terminal education.

"Some of the more popular courses offered here are political science, life and physical sciences and the humanities," Luckmann commented.

"I have been especially interested in the television-radio broadcasting field as an aid to future classroom instruction," he added. Another "pet" of his is the college's audio-visual aids program.

In discussing the administrative setup here at present, Luckmann remarked that the ratio of administrative staff to faculty members is low. He declined, however, to comment on the ideal situation.

Besides presiding over the division of instruction, Luckmann is in charge of the cadet teacher program. In this, he is responsible for the practical preparation of students for two-year college teaching credentials.

LLOYD D. LUCKMANN, coordinator of the division of instruction here, heads a five-man team responsible for curriculum.

Prior to joining the City College faculty in 1935, Luckmann taught at the University of San Francisco for three years. Here, he was a political science and speech instructor until he was promoted to assistant to the president in 1946.

Luckmann has been coordinator of the division of instruction since 1953.

Council Approves First Budget; 29 Still Remain

Student Council took the first step on the long road of passing budgets when it allocated $577.70 to the cross-country track team last Thursday.

The original request by the cross-country team was $615.70; thus the council members saved $38 for future use.

To date, 23 of the 29 budgets have been submitted to council for approval. The amount requested for these comes to $39,943.86. With assets totaling only $37,000, this leaves council with $2056.14 to divide among the six not yet submitted budgets.

Bill Silver, Associated Student president, warned council members, "Unless we cut requests we are going to wind up quite a bit short."

Although budgets were of major importance, council still found time to consider the S.O.S.—stamp out snails—resolution. The motion to rid the campus of these mollusks was passed by council during the previous week's meeting, but last week Silver decided to veto the motion to squash snails.

Al Mendoza, Campus Police officer, reported that from 10 a.m. to noon a campus officer will be stationed on Phelan avenue to aid students in the crosswalks during these peak traffic hours.—By R.H.

Veterans' Home Honors College For Blood Donations

A special certificate of merit from the Veterans Home of California was awarded to the college last week for donating 42 pints of blood to the institution's Napa Valley hospital.

Colonel Stanley F. Dunmire, veterans home commandant and World War I veteran, said that the certificate is the only one ever awarded a two-year college, and it is a token of the hospital's recognition of meritorious services given to America's disabled veterans.

Presented by the colonel, the certificate was accepted by Keith Woolwine, Inter-Fraternity Council president.

On hand at last week's presentation ceremony held in the college president's office were Ralph Hillsman, dean of men; Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management; Woolwine and Dunmire.

Another honor was bestowed the college eight days before the drive when Mayor George Christopher presented a proclamation to the college and decreed April 1 to 5 as "Blood Days" in San Francisco.

'Who's Been Knocking On My Door?'

"WHO'S BEEN KNOCKING ON MY DOOR" seems to be the question asked by the Earl of Penbroke (Alonzo Gonzalez) to the Duke of Austria (Dale Altauter) in this scene from rehearsals of King John, the next and final drama production scheduled this semester.

The Shakespearean drama, directed by Michael Griffin, will open a two-weekend run Friday, May 24, in the theater.

Ken Bachtold is cast in the leading role, with Tom Purvis playing the bastard son, Philip of Falconridge, and Sandra Lundwell as Constance.

The play, following the opening night performance, will be performed Saturday, May 25; Friday, May 31, and Saturday, June 1. Admission is free to Associated Student cardholders while general admission is $1.

Rally, Car Parade To Kick Off COO Spring Extravaganza

A rally and car parade are scheduled for College Hour Friday, May 10, to start Council of Organizations' annual spring festival slated that night in Smith Hall, COO Chairman Vince Contreras stated today.

The event, which will feature a carnival and dance, will begin at 7:30 p.m. and continue to 11 p.m.

The rally will feature entertainment by campus groups, and after the car parade, three trophies will be presented for those cars displaying the most originality.

Contreras expects at least 25 organizations to petition for booths, and three trophies will be awarded to those booths judged outstanding.

The concessions will be set up in the main section of the cafeteria and an informal dance in the fountain section will highlight the evening.

While Associated Student cardholders will be admitted free, other City College students will be charged 25 cents upon presentation of their green registration card, contreras added. An admission fee of 50 cents will be collected from anyone else attending, he added.

Last year a percentage of the profit from the booths was donated to the Peace Corps; however, no immediate plans for this year's proceeds have been discussed, Contreras said.

Last year, money was donated to the Peace Corps unit in Colombia, where former student Jerry McMahon is working.

McMahon has since written to the college administration discussing the unit and expressing appreciation for the COO festival's contribution.

Engineering Instructors Join National Institute

Wallace A. Seilman and Desider Slavoj, faculty members in the engineering department here, recently were awarded places in the National Science Foundation Geometrics Institute.

The two faculty members were chosen from some 100 applicants.

Seilman and Slavoj are to join the Institute in July and August at the University of Washington at Seattle.

Urban Renewal Topic Of C-Hour Talk In Theater

Compiled by Francine Dubonnet

Justin Herman, chairman of the San Francisco Redevelopment Agency, will speak on Urban Renewal during College Hour Friday in the theater.

This lecture is sponsored by the Student-Faculty Relations Committee. Phil Robbins, student member of the committee, has invited students and faculty members to attend the lecture.

- The Engineering Society has meetings planned for College Hour on Friday, May 17 and 31, in S-100. All members are urged to attend.
- Recreation Association members will meet in C-221 during College Hour on Friday, May 17 and 31. President Sue Davis invites all interested students to attend.
- Associated Men Student President John Theilen invited students to consult with him or his officers if they have any questions concerning AMS activities, or are not fully aware of certain activities the AMS may be conducting.

John Giles is AMS vice president and Bill May is the activity coordinator.

- Bible study classes for the Collegiate Christian Fellowship here are held each Friday between 11:40 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. in bungalow six, and from 12 noon to 1 p.m. Tuesday in bungalow five. All interested students are invited.

Linkmen Face Diablo Valley In Conference Finale Friday

By John Arberry

Unable to hold down the rising Comets of Contra Costa College, the Ram golfers lost an 18½-11½ decision to bring their Golden Gate Conference record to 3-2, and they face Diablo Valley this Friday in the last conference match of the season.

Greatly contributing to the Contra Costa win was the loss of second-ranked veteran John Steddin because of ineligibility. Jim Roman shot a 76 with Mike Selsnik and Dennis Drucker firing 78's. The Comets were led by medalist Hans Jansen, who fired a 75 at Richmond Country Club.

Friday's match at Harding Park has a 1:30 p.m. teeoff.

The Vikings, sporting a 1-1-1 conference record, presents a veteran team of sophomores, with only one freshman on the roster.

Mike McMevin, the freshman, was voted "All-League" at Acaianes High School in 1962. Vikings Mike Callahan and Dan Clinker were captains at Antioch High.

Richmond Country Club will be the site of the conference tournament Friday. All the teams will compete to determine the placing of the individual players.

San Mateo's Bulldogs will be heavily favored to win the championship. Led by Dick Lotz, the current California amateur champion, and a powerful supporting cast, the perennial champions of the old Big Eight Conference should be tough to beat.

Foothill's Owls could be contenders, while the Rams are hoping for third in the championships.

San Jose's Jaguars won their first conference match of the season with a 19-1 victory over the Rams on the Almedan course Friday.

Dennis Drucker carted an 80, the leading Ram scorer.

RAMBLINGS

By Dave Kleinberg

GIANT Jack Sanford probably echoed the sentiments of the major of his National League contemporaries when he vowed recently to "hang on to the bail for 10 minutes between pitches if they get on me."

Sanford, of course, was referring to the balk rule, which states a pitcher must come to a one-second pause from the stretch position.

With no warning, National League umpires this year have clamped down vigorously on the balk rule for the first time since it was put in the books 13 years ago.

In 812 games last year only 48 balks were called, and in little less than a month's play of 1963, the National League passed htat mark and went into the stratosphere of 70 plus.

Someone figured out if umpires continue at the present rate, more than 700 balks will be called before the NFL opens its football season.

It could not continue at that pace without disturbing the players and the fans beyond the talking stage.

Two items have remained a mystery, and should be explained by league President Warren Giles.

Giles has said he did not ask for more strict enforcement of the rule. How can this be true? Less than five balks have been called in the American League. There had to be a direction or agreement by someone to begin strict enforcement.

The National League should not hide. The players and fans should be told who ordered, how long it is going to continue and why it was ordered.

One of the possibilities suggested is this, (reported in Sports Illustrated): At the end of last season, L. A. manager Walt Alston asked much attention to opposing balks because the Dodgers have men that steal bases. If pitchers take a longer stop before delivering the ball or even if they're just worried about stopping long enough to avoid being penalized, it becomes easier for runners to get a jump and steal the bases.

But Maury Wills proved crime does pay by stealing a record 104 bases to sever that argument.

Since no public complaint started this umpire balk-call derby, the fans have a right to know what the league is doing.

It's becoming more and more difficult to tell whether the umpires are yelling "Play ball!" or "Play balk!"

Italian Dancers Host RA Alumni

Recreation Association folk dancers will hold an alumni dinner today sponsored by instructor Mona Furgis.

An Italian cuisine and folk dancing are to be presented by students Sharon Winter, Orianda DaCosta and Rich Canigha.

RA members will attend a sports day from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday at Foothill College in Los Altos Hills.

Events included are badminton, men's volleyball, coed softball, tennis, recreational swimming and trampoline.

The RA plans an archery booth with competition matches to be held here during a festival Friday. Marlin Galloway, physical education instructor here, stated, "Some very special prizes are to be awarded to the match winners."

RA folk dancers will be attending a concert of dances from East Europe and the Balkans at 8 p.m. Sunday, May 5. The concert will feature Rusali Folk Ensemble and Ensemble Narodni Igraci Sokoli in the International House at University of California campus in Berkeley, Mrs. Galloway said.

Netters Garrote Bulldogs To Win League Crown—Siska-Jilka Lose

Ed Jilka and Bob Siska suffered their first doubles defeat in two years but it came long after the Rams had settled the issue of the Golden Gate Conference tennis championship with the College of San Mateo last Friday.

In the last league match of the year and with both the San Mateo and San Francisco supporting perfect 6-0 records, the Rams settled the question by sweeping all five singles under sunshine (for a change) at Golden Gate Park. They won the match, 6-1.

The Rams, called the college's "best team ever" by their own coach Roy Diederichsen, have conquered but one hill. The next mountain is the Golden Gate Conference meet at Foothill Friday and Saturday.

Jilka and Siska, the brilliant doubles team which last year swept through the Big Eight Conference season undefeated and went on to capture the Conference, Northern California and state crowns, went down to a quick and painful defeat, 6-4, 6-4, to CSM's tandem of Hawaiian Henry Kamakana and Bill Davis, a 19-year-old sophomore from Burlingame High.

Jilka, the wildman at the net when his overhead is working effectively, had an off day. He had considerable problems returning service and volleying.

Ram No. 1 man, Bob Siska, had little difficulty getting past the highly regarded Kamakana, 6-4, 6-4.

The 20-year-old lefthander broke Kamakana's service at 4-4 in the first set, and went on to victory, and in the second set both broke each other's service before Siska broke again at 4-4.

Ram Bob Murio did not see action in doubles for a change but took San Mateo's Davis in the singles, 6-3, 7-5.

Gorden Miller, who combined with Rich Anderson to defeat the Bulldogs' John Reed and Dave Hecomovich, 6-1, 6-2, in doubles, won his singles contest, defeating Reed, 9-7, 8-6, in the closest match of a day that saw not one contest go more than two sets.

Anderson beat Hecomovich in singles, 6-4, 6-2, and No. 5 man Jack Kern defeated Bulldog Bob Balsley, 6-0, 6-1.

Diederichsen, who has coached a total of six consecutive championships in tennis and soccer over the last couple of years, went out on the limb again by predicting a Ram first in the GGC meet, with Siska reaching the finals.

Mermen Journey To Foothill For State Competition

Following up their surprising third place finish in the Golden Gate Conference meet, the Ram swim team will venture into the aquatic arena at Foothill College this weekend for the annual state meet.

Last week the aquateers took to the road to compete in the Northern California championship meet at Visalia. Spreading their five men around the Rams entered a free relay with Jeff Higman, Fred Wales, Mark Haskell and Rich Gray, and a stocked medley relay with Haskell, backstroke; Gray, fly; Herm Fruchtenicht, breast stroke, and Wales, free.

In individual events, the Rams will enter their outstanding rookie Gray in the 200 free and the 100 fly. Gray placed third in the conference meet with a blazing 2:01.3 and fifth in the fly with a 1:00.7.

Haskell will match endurance in the 200 fly after his conference third with a 2:40.7 clocking. Fruchtenicht will try the 100 and 200 breast as he, too, was a third placer in the conference with a 1:11.1 time for the 100 breast.

All the times in the conference meet were from two to four seconds off the times capable because of the rain and cold weather. More than 20 colleges will enter their best swimmers to try to make life miserable for coach Roy Burkhead and his five spoilers this weekend.

Powerful Foothill will be definite favorites to capture the state crown, with possibie competition coming from Stockton and Los Angeles Valley.

Baseballers Back In Race, Tangle With Diablo Valley

After a four-game marathon against two of the league's toughest teams—San Mateo and San Jose—the Ram baseball club comes right back with a tough two-game set this week. The Ram nine face the Bulldogs today and Diablo Valley Friday in league games.

San Francisco went into last week's stretch with a 3-2 season record, and promptly put down San Mateo, 2-1, and San Jose, 6-5.

Both games were cliff-hangers.

City College beat the Bulldogs in the bottom of the ninth when Butch Bussanick and Walt Williams combined a double and a single for the winning run. Rich Nold was the winning pitcher, going the full nine.

In the San Jose tilt, tempers were hot as the lead changed hands five times in the 11-inning, 3-hour, 50-minute fiasco. But the Rams finally emerged victorious.

City College took an early lead, 2-0, then suddenly found itself behind, 4-2, regained possession, 5-4, only to be tied, 5-5, when the ill-reputed balk rule was enforced on Ram junk-man Ronnie Bringuel.

Bringuel, however, had the last say in the matter when he trotted home with the winning tally, unearned yet, in the 11th. He walked to open the inning, was bunted to second, from where he scored on an error.

"Our hitting is nothing fantastic, but it gets us by," said coach Larry Lawson.

Williams remains the Rams' leading stick-man with an average of three hits per game in the last five contests. In the San Jose game, Williams claimed four of the nine Ram hits.

In other recent action, the San Franciscans swept past St. Mary's varsity, 6-2, Joe Dalpogetti the winning pitcher. They edged Vallejo, 3-2, Dalpogetti's ninth inning relief work saving the win for Jack Burgett.

Block SF Schedules Awards Presentation

The semiannual Block SF Society's awards banquet, which honors all spring sports participants, will be held at 6 p.m. Monday, May 27, in Smith Hall, Louis Vasquez, society sponsor, stated yesterday.

Heading the evening's festivities will be the presentation of block letters, trophies, special awards and other forms of recognition to deserving athletes.

"A guest speaker for the banquet is still under consideration," Vasquez added.

Dual Season Over; Tracksters Clash In League Meet

With the dual meet conference over, the Ram spikers face the Golden Gate Conference meet this Friday. The Rams placed fourth in the dual meet season, behind San Mateo, Foothill and Oakland who tied for second.

"Lonnie Brantley stands the best chance of reaching the state meet, but he has been beaten twice this year, and hasn't broken 25 feet yet as was hoped," coach Lou Vasquez surmised, adding, "Tom Gardiner is not up to some of the other times in the conference, but his improvement is outstanding. Gene Plotkin, like Brantley, hasn't had his best day yet."

In the final clash of the dual season, Foothill downed City College, 68½-53½, in the process breaking a national two-year college shot-put record, returning to California the only record that had gone astray.

In the 100, Gardiner ran 10.0 with Foothill's Paul McCormick and Ram Artie Flowers off the pace at 10.2 and 10.3. Gardiner also took the 220 in 22.6, followed by Ram Claude Shipp, 22.7, and Flowers, 22.9.

Foothill took first and second in the 440, 49.2 and 51.5, with Tim Power of San Francisco running third with 51.5, while the Rams fared slightly better in the 880. Ozzie Norris with 1:59.3 and Pete Giachetti with 2:02.2 showed second and third behind Tom Burton of Foothill who ran 1:57.4.

Foothill swept the mile, 4:28.9, 4:31.0 and 4:33.7 with Plotkin's 4:35.7 the only San Francisco showing. Plotkin got his own back in the two-mile with a 9:44.1, 15 seconds ahead of the nearest contender.

In the field, Brantley broad jumped 21-0 for a win.

Don Castle of Foothill set a national two-year record with a 58-7½ shot-put.

Divine Ones, Zeta Phi Sigma Lead Intra League

The Divine Ones and Zeta Phi Sigma, both undefeated, maintained their league leads going into the seventh week of the intramural basketball league in the men's gymnasium.

With only two games remaining, the Divine Ones now are firmly in first place with a 6-0 record, and meet the league's cellar-dwellers—Hawaiian Bia's and the Red Sox—in their final contests.

Both the Bla's and the Sox have 1-4 records.

The fraternity race is still wide open with Zeta Phi Sigma holding a narrow one-half game lead over Alpha Phi Epsilon. Zeta Phi Sigma is 4-0, Alpha Phi Epsilon, 3-0, well ahead of the third-place club, Alpha Sigma Delta, which carts a 2-2 mark.

The two leagues settled down to the averaging scoring contest, after a rash of 70-plus scoring games two weeks ago. The Untouchables, paced by Roger Baristone's 18 points, won their third game of the year with a 50-41 win over Hotel & Restaurant.

The Newman Club kept its championship hopes high by nipping the Turnbull's Blues, 46-45. The Hawaiian Bia's got out of last place, but only into a tie for the latter spot when they edged the Brothers Five, 37-33.

In the fraternity loop, Gamma Phi Ypsilon was defeated by Alpha Kappa Rho, 19-8, in one of the lowest scoring contests of the year. Alpha Phi Epsilon topped Alpha Sigma Delta, 52-38, as little 5-4 John Giles poured in 18 for the winners. It was Epsilon's fourth period splurge which overcame a Delta lead built up in part by Rich Cote, who finished with 12 points.

In tonight's Independent action, the Red Sox meet the Divine Ones at 7:15 p.m., men's gymnasium; the Untouchables meet the Newman Club, 8:15 p.m., men's gymnasium; the Filipino Club takes on the Hawaiian Bia's, 7:15 p.m., women's gymnasium; the Turnbull's Blues tangle with Brothers Five, 8:15, women's gymnasium.

Annual Recruitment Day Brings Employers To Screen June Graduates

Employer representatives from industry, business and government in the Bay Area will gather at the college today to participate in the eight annual business-engineering Recruitment Day.

Joseph A. Amori, placement director here, said the program will begin at 8 a.m. with an orientation breakfast for employers, college administrative and instructional staffs.

Joseph Metzger, vice president for personnel and industrial relations for Ampex Corporation, will speak at the breakfast in behalf of the more than 100 employer representatives.

He will outline the role the engineering technician plays in modern industry.

Amori stated the purpose of the day, initiated eight years ago by the college, is to bring together employer and graduate on a friendly basis.

It also gives the graduate an opportunity to participate in personal interviews with some of the outstanding business, industry and government leaders in Northern California.

These leaders will compete for the services of the graduates who have been instructed in courses from engineering and accounting to real estate and photography.

Recent research studies, according to Amori, show that currently the most sought-after graduates are in the engineering, accounting and secretarial fields.

Men who apply for positions outnumber women 130 to 70.

Harold Spears, superintendent of schools; Louis G. Conlan, college president, and Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical terminal education here, will be on hand to discuss some of the salient features of the program.

Employers to be represented today are Alberton Realty Co., Ampex Corp., Army and Air Force Board of U. S. Civil Service Examiner, Bank of America N. T. & S. A., California Packing Corp., California State Automobile Association, California State Personnel Board, City of Paris.

Crocker-Anglo National Bank, The Emporium, Equitable Life Insurance Co., Fairehild Semi-Conductor Corp., Fiberboard Paper Products Corp., Fireman's Fund Insurance Co., Internal Revenue Service, International Business Machines, Lawrence Radiation Labs (Berkeley and Livermore), Levi Strauss & Co., Nationwide Life Insurance Co., Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

Pacific Tel&Tel, Permanente Medical Group, Prudential Insurance Co., Rogers Engineering, Sandia Corp., Social Security Administration, Standard Oil of California, Stanford Linear Accelerator Center, U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, U. S. Geological Survey, Veterans Administration.

Veterans Hospital (Fort Miley), U. S. Civil Service Commission, Wells Fargo-American Trust, and F. W. Woolworth Co.

Forum Nets Copy From 200 'Shy' Student Writers

By Chris Weizig

Forum magazine's staff, after a two-month campaign to squeeze literary material from bashful writers at the college, goes into full swing this month to meet their publishing date.

"Between selecting publishable material from the manuscripts submitted, choosing the photography and art work, hounding those oh-so-necessary advertisers and arranging publication details, our work has just begun," Rena Kitch, Forum's 1963 editor, sighed.

Miss Kitch, an English major who served as last year's assistant editor, noted that 124 pieces of prose and poetry were turned in and, with art and photography, the total submissions passed 200.

"Our big problem is eliminating the material which lacks a collegiate tone and, in some cases, resounds with high school cliches. We can squeeze nearly one-third of the work we have into the magazine, and we'll try to select writing which has a collegiate appeal," she said.

"In the literary category," she said, "the mixture between the traditional and the 'way-out' has been well balanced."

Construction Will Begin Soon On Horticulture Center

Students Draft Model Gardens; Building Ready In Ten Months

The area adjacent to Judson avenue is now being cleared and actual construction will start soon on the college's new horticulture center, Harry Nelson, horticulture instructor, announced last week.

ENTRIES WIN OAKLAND PRIZES

A group of students from the horticulture department, who entered the Oakland Spring Home and Garden Show a week ago, won two first and three second prizes.

Entries were in the name of the Horticulture Society, and awards were for overall work and for exhibitions in two categories, Harry Nelson, horticulture instructor here, said.

Prizes totaled $600.

Nelson added that construction workers had encountered some difficulty with underground springs, but that the problem had been overcome.

When asked when the new center would be completed Nelson said, "The contract calls for 270 working days, which comes to approximately ten months. Therefore, the center should be completed by next spring."

In addition to tending plants for the new center, horticulture students are presently working on a Bog garden for the new facility.

"This will be a garden, submerged in water, with islands of soil and plants at various points," Nelson explained. "It is also a double project, because we are working in conjunction with the biology department."

Tad Nakazawa, a horticulture student, is drawing up plans for a Japanese garden theme. Once the center is completed, Nakazawa's plans will go into effect as part of the front landscaping.

All students in the horticulture department have been asked to submit plans for model gardens, to be turned in this semester, and then to be judged for actual gardening next spring.

Nelson added a note of urgency when he said, "We hope the new center will be completed as soon as possible."

The old horticulture center, located near the men's gymnasium, was a familiar sight on campus for 15 years, but was destroyed last semester to make way for the new freeway on Ocean avenue.

Nelson and his heipers had no easy task in moving the office equipment, classroom facilities and tools—in addition to the transfer of 30,000 plants.

Two temporary greenhouses were erected on the north end of the football field.

AS Card Holders To Vote On Constitutional Change For Second Time Friday

Associated Student card holders here will vote this Friday on whether they alone should have the privilege of electing next semester's AS officers.

In question is in Article IX, paragraph 3 of the AS Constitution which reads: "A member of the Associated Students may have the full privileges of electing student officers for the forthcoming semester."

Ballots will contain a proposed amendment to delete this section. AS card holders will be asked to vote "yes" if they want the paragraph deleted, thus paving the way for open AS elections, or "no" if they want the sentence retained, meaning that only AS card holders may vote in general elections.

Polls will be set up between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the silver pole in Science Hall, at the entrance to the library and at the entrance to the fountain section of Smith Hall.

Last semester a similar proposal was brought before AS card holders for a vote. At that time, balloting decided not to open elections to the entire student body.

Student Council reconsidered the matter two weeks ago when member Rich Thomas proposed another motion calling for a special election to determine student feeling on the matter this semester.

As a result, council revealed for the record that it is in favor of open elections as opposed to voting limited to those possessing AS cards.

May 13 Deadline For AS Petitions

Petitions to run for next semester's Associated Student offices are available this week from Election Commissioner Tony Taormina in the AS office, S-134.

"Any quaified student may run for any AS office," Taormina explained, adding that the petitions must be signed by 15 AS card holders and be submitted to him no later than next Monday (May 13).

Each candidate must also be a member of the AS this semester.

Once all hopefuls have submitted their petitions, Taormina and his election committee will prepare a mimeographed booklet containing pertinent information on each contested AS office and the candidates running for each post.

Spring Choral Concert Set For Tuesday In Theater

The annual Spring Choral Concert, directed by music instructors Galen Marshall and Richard Fenner, will be held at 8 p.m. next Tuesday in the college theater, with a preview scheduled during College Hour Friday.

"With a rich complement of four groups singing selections which include German, French, American and Slavic folk songs, Tuesday night's program will provide very interesting entertainment," director Marshall promised.

Four Slavic folk songs by Bela Bartok will be sung by the Chamber Choir, a group of 14 persons selected for choir membership because of special singing talent.

The A Cappella Choir, performing a motet for double chorus, will sing What Can Life Be But A Shadow by Johann Bach, plus Haydn's Evensong To God.

The works of Hindemith and Schuetz, and Psalm 13 by Johannes Brahms, are to be sung by the Women's Choir.

An arrangement by Cesar Franck, The Chorus of Camel Drivers, is to be performed, along with a series of American, German and French folk songs by the Men's Glee Club.

Warner Jepson will accompany the choral groups on the piano. A graduate of the conservatory of music at Oberlin College in Ohio, Jepson also accompanied a similar choral concert here last year.

Selections from the program will be provided during the Friday College Hour as a forerunner of Tuesday night's performance, Marshall said.

There is no admission charge for either performance, he added, and Tuesday's is open to the general public.

Administrative Decision Stops Spring Festival

By Herm Kligerman

An administrative decision to uphold its original stipulation concerning the number of booths needed to stage the Council of Organizations' Spring Festival this Friday night has officially cancelled the event, COO Chairman Vince Contreras told COO members last Thursday.

According to Contreras, following initial approval by members of the administration, including Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman, that one club could sponsor two different booths at the festival, it was learned during the COO meeting last Thursday that such a stipulation no longer stood.

Included in the administration's earlier decision, Contreras said, was the fact that at least 20 qualified booths (according to their discretion) would be the minimum number required to proceed with the festival. COO managed to amend this by listing 18 booths as the necessary minimum.

Last Thursday, the final deadline for booth petitions, Contreras had planned 20 booths at the festival, although petitions and full particulars had not been submitted. Through a sequence of events, the number was knocked down to 16—two below the previously established minimum.

Telephone conversations between Sherm Elworthy, student government adviser, the Smith Hall finance office and Dean Hillsman settled the matter officially, Contreras stated.

"If the administration had clarified itself earlier, this never would have happened. We had no idea that the college officials would alter their original stipulation," Contreras claimed.

He was confident that enough clubs would sponsor booths, although all petitions had not been received by the deadline. "We kept on extending the deadline and just as things looked good, the administration stepped in," Contreras added.

Contreras thanked all organizations for their assistance with the festival and assumed full responsibility for the cancellation.

New Alma Mater Contest Set For Fall Semester

Because the recent attempt to replace the college anthem was unsuccessful, the Alma Mater lyric contest is expected to be reopened here in the fall semester of 1963, according to Jerry Mendes, sophomore councilman.

"The meager number of entries submitted did not provide a suitable selection from which to choose lyrics for a new Alma Mater that would be a decided improvement on the existing song," Mendes stated, and therefore the promise of awards becomes invalid.

Mendes added that inasmuch as it is late in the semester, further thought on the project would be postponed until fall, as the purpose is not merely to change the Alma Mater but to create one more representational of the college.

As an Alma Mater is usually considered a permanent tradition, the matter of selection deserves the greatest of care, Mendes emphasized.

Material submitted so far had not met the standards set, yet Mendes hoped that the additional time will produce a greater response from the students and lyrics that will be more appropriate and distinctive to this college.

A $50 award had been offered to the student writing the winning lyrics. The award, in the form of a merchandise order, would have been redeemable at the Ramporium.

The Student Council originated the idea of the contest, and the prize money was contributed by the Council of Organizations, the Recreation Association and the Pep Band.

Business-Recruitment Day— Asset To Graduating Students

SOME INDIVIDUALS believe that college is the place of mental discipline. Others say that college is the place to develop personalities. Woodrow Wilson said that it is for the training of the men who are to rise above the ranks.

Many long and monotonous essays have been written on this subject, about which the only point of agreement has been that each writer agreed that he disagreed with his peers. After all is said and done, after all the carefully constructed arguments have been heard, one fact remains salient: the graduate must earn money.

To some graduates this means continual strife, a furious lifelong battle in which they have every intention to levy their competitors like an atomic blockbuster. But they enjoy it, and for this reason they attend college.

Others are quite content to spend their lives in the cloistered halls of a college, teaching others the ideals, the theories, the philosophies and, of course, preparing others for the struggle to attain the other ideals—monetary, social and professional.

Helping 200 of the college's prospective graduates to attain their professional ideals are 50 teams of employers from business, industry and government. These employers will visit the campus today and interview June 1963 and February 1964 graduates in planning full-time careers.

Under the auspices of Joseph A. Amori, placement director, this program is an integral part of higher education. Again, regardless of the bulging volumes of analytical essays on education, it is the ulterior result that counts.

Like a sound business relationship, a thorough education is a two-way proposition—the acquisition of knowledge for personal benefit and the dissemination of knowledge for the benefit of others. Today these educational benefits will be utilized on campus.

Today culminates two years of preparation by students, instructors, counselors and administrators. For the aspiring employee the seemingly endless hours of study are over. The theorizing of essayists will not help now. This is the time when theory is put to practice, and practice is put to application.

● 'G' Commended

Editor, The Guardsman:

May I most respectfully inform you that, upon motion made by Supervisor Harold S. Dobbs, the Board of Supervisors at its meeting of yesterday (April 23) directed that I convey to you in the members' behalf congratulations upon The Guardsman, the official publication of City College, having been cited for its excellent sports coverage and overall fine work in speech and interview stories contained in the Fall 1962 volume, a signal recognition which will enhance the roster of the many honors previously won by The Guardsman.

The members extend warm commendations to the editors and staff of The Guardsman for the acclaim extended to the paper by the Associated Collegiate Press with the cordial wish that the publication may continue to enjoy ever greater success in the years ahead.

● RAM Backer Speaks

Editor, The Guardsman:

There are two comments which I wish to make concerning the issue of The Guardsman. One deals with a news article published and the second deals with Campus PanoRAMa.

The news article is Student Council Declares War, Arms With SNAROL, by Patty Smith. This was a beautiful piece of reporting . . . Through this article we can see how the Student Council can function when not in the presence of their Hero-Leader, Bill Sliver has done a beautiful job this semester . . . This article shows what would happen without him . . .

My second point deals with Campus PanoRAMa. Since no reporter's name was affixed to this work I can only find it possible to affix the blame on you and your staff. The topic (Wednesday, April 14, 1963) was What Do You Think Of The New College Hour Proposal? I believe that the topic is perfect . . .

BUT, this report leads the reader to believe that only . . . the faculty was in favor of the change. This is incorrect. We do know that a poll was taken to learn the opinion of the students on this change.

To my recollection . . . there was a fair number of students in favor of this change, myself as one. If the reporter who did this work wished to print the opinions of those students against the change, then why did he not print the opinions of a few students who were for the change . . .?

● Comments On Snails

Editor, The Guardsman:

'I disagree with a number of statements published in your paper, The Guardsman, on Wednesday, April 24, 1963.

In an editorial entitled New Campus Political Party Could Form Another Dynasty, there appeared a rather odd display of misinformation, misquotation and inadequate structure.

. . . You state that a previous organization, off campus, "was abolished because of an alleged two-year political dynasty." It is my understanding that the party dissolved from within from common consent due to the fact that no opposition was developed.

The following semester, the RAMS appeared off campus and gained the hallmark of on-campus status. Prior to this time the fraternity block was in political control, and this "alleged two-year political dynasty" was formed in order to wrest control from that group . . .

You state in the closing paragraph, the rather high, but fully unsubstantiated, possibility of the RAMS being the only party on campus.

Throughout your editorial you over-

Unemployment Insurance For Part-Time Work Seekers?

By Kent Mitchell

Joseph Amori, placement director:

No. The law, as written, states: "In order to qualify for the benefits, an individual must be available for the work when the work opportunity is offered." In other words, the worker must be seeking full-time employment to be eligible for compensation.

JOSEPH AMORI

"The worker must be seeking full-time employment to be eligible for compensation."

Margaret Cain, freshman:

Actually, I don't think part-time work seekers should. If they're only working on a part-time basis they shouldn't receive any compensation. It wouldn't be fair to those available full-time who are out of work. Why should both groups receive the same benefits?

Emanuel Verde, sophomore:

If the student is self-supporting, it is only fitting and necessary that he receive some insurance. The person has to get along somehow and this is the only place to turn. The government should offer some assistance to a student who is working and going to college.

Sylvia Colbert, sophomore:

I think they should with certain provisions. They should be granted unemployment insurance providing they take the first acceptable job that is offered to them. If part-time work is their only source of income, they must turn somewhere.

Vicki White, freshman:

It all depends upon the situation. If the student is living with his parents and is not dependent upon a job, he should not receive unemployment insurance. However, if he needs a part-time job to support himself, he should definitely be given some compensation.

Dick Landau, sophomore:

No, I don't think they should receive any insurance unless they are completely independent. Most students want part-time jobs just to keep up their cars and other luxuries. Why should the state help support a student when all the money is used for pleasure?

Rocky Cole, freshman:

Yes, by all means. If a student is willing to go to college and work at the same time, he should be given some help by the government. I have never been in this position, and don't know what the law states, but I am definitely in favor of this.

Diana Ferrau, freshman:

No, they shouldn't if they're working only on a part-time basis. If they are attending college, they most likely aren't able to work on a regular eight-hour day schedule. If they did receive unemployment insurance, it should be in proportion to the time they work.

No Ugly American Here

Former Student Tells Use Of College Contributions For Colombian Peace Corps

(Editor's Note: Part of the proceeds from the Council of Organization's 1962 Spring Festival was sent to aid the Colombian Cooperative in San Joaquin. The story of the cooperative follows.)

A landmark in Latin American relations was established last year by two Peace Corpsmen in Colombia—one a former student here.

After graduation from City College in 1960, Jerry McMahon transferred to San Francisco State College. Later he volunteered for the Peace Corps and was sent to the first unit of the corps in San Joaquin, Colombia, a full-scale unit organized at the birth of the corps.

The other student, Philip Lopez, attended Coalinga Junior College.

When both students arrived in San Joaquin they decided to build an agrarian warehouse for the farmers of the region to house fertilizers, seeds, machinery and tools.

But who was to provide the necessary funds? Right away, both wrote an emergency plea to their respective colleges, McMahon to City College and Lopez to Coalinga.

From the time the letters were received, a flurry of preparation spread here in the offices of Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, and of Joseph Jacobsen of the counseling department and sponsor of the International Relations Club. It was then agreed that a percentage of the profits from the IRC fair would go to the two students overseas.

The results were most gratifying.

Under the sponsorship of the Associated Students and Council of Organizations, a festival was held last spring which brought $184, and the IRC fair in November $300.

The money collected was then sent to Louis Samia, executive of the Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe, Inc. (CARE) who, in turn, sent a representative of CARE in Bogota to handle the funds destined for the Colombian unit of the Peace Corps.

Coalinga students collected the other $400 and also sent the money to CARE.

In a letter addressed to Dean Hillsman on February 12, 1963, McMahon commented, "The money will be utilized in following manner: CARE will turn the money over to the cooperative and will act as overseer of the money for about a year and a half, or until such time as the present cooperative proves responsible for the handling of this money.

"The cooperative in turn will turn the money to the coordinating body of community action for the whole municipio (county) which will name a committee that will be responsible to form and administer this new store.

"This cooperating body will then—when it is possible—pay back to the Savings and Loan cooperative the original loan with interest, and this cooperative will use the money for some other type of cooperative improvement.

"Looking into the future, the money could be used to start a producing or marketing cooperative, however, in the end this decision will be left up to the people of the town."

In the same letter, McMahon announced that the date was to be set for delivering the money, and that the American Ambassador would take part in the ceremony. The CARE mission chief has also been invited, and Peace Corpsman McMahon promised to send pictures of the event "so that the students can see where their efforts have gone.

"Needless to say, this event will be of upmost importance to the inhabitants of San Joaquin. The delivering of the money and having the American Ambassador here will probably be the biggest thing that has ever happened in this small, isolated Andean village," McMahon commented.

In a letter of January 23, 1963, addressed to Dean Hillsman, President Jose E. Diaz Orejanera of the board of directors of the cooperative thanked the dean and the students for their generous donation.

Since the reults of the last IRC fair were so rewarding, Jacobsen and Dean Hillsman are already planning the next fair, which will be held in the Lowell High School auditorium. And once more, some of the proceeds will go to the two Peace Corpsmen.

Let no one ever say that the college had an ugly American.

The first issue of the college newspaper, published in 1935, was called EMANON, "no name" spelled backwards.

Avant Guardsman!

TO DELVE into mad hysteria is to encounter the strange, the bizarre, the incredible. Some of the best known instances of mass hysteria can be classified as comic and tragic—all blending into the warp and woof of the great human comedy.

Take, for example, the Children's Crusade of 1213, in which mass hysteria generated by religious fanaticism sent more than 30,000 European children on the long march to Palestine to assist in capturing the Holy City after five previous unsuccessful attempts by their elders.

Many of the children perished along the way; many were turned back from Italian seaports, and those who eventually reached the Middle East were captured and sold into slavery by the Saracens.

Or consider the end of the world. Two centuries ago, an eccentric woman, Lady Hester Stanhope, installed herself in a house on Mount Lebanon to be ready for the dread day. She kept two huge Arab stallions to provide transportation for herself and the Savior on reentry into Jerusalem.

Another prophet, William Miller, also announced the destruction of the world for the year 1834. Americans followed the movement blindly: more than 50,000 persons are considered to have been Millerites.

One of the most amusing incidents of the Millerite period took place in Westford, Massachusetts. Members had gathered in a large house in their ascension garments and were ready to be transfigured.

Living nearby was "Crazy Amos," the village half-wit, who was also distinguished for his drinking habit. He was fond of blowing on a large trumpet and when he heard the tumult in the neighborhood, he rushed outdoors to enjoy the fun.

He loosed a terrific blast on his horn, and the Millerites thought that Gabriel was heralding the day of judgment. They rushed into the streets shouting Hallelujahs and jostled each other for advantageous positions.

When calm had been restored, they realized that the day had not arrived and that they had been badly taken in. Crazy Amos added insult to injury by telling them to go home and dig potatoes since Gabriel was unlikely to do it for them!

Or again, take a date: August 24, 1926, in which one of the worst riots in the history of New York City erupted on Broadway near 66th Street. Between 60,000 and 80,000 persons were involved, hundreds of whom were injured. An emergency hospital had to be set up at the scene of the disturbance to care for those trampled underfoot or lacerated by fragments from broken windows.

A task force of nearly 200 policemen was eventually mobilized to bring the riot under control and then only after mounties repeatedly charged the rioters, most of whom were women. The cause of these unruly legions in the heart of the city was the dead body of Rudolph Valentino (The Sheik), the greatest movie hero of the day, and possibly of all time.

And who can possibly forget Halloween night, Sunday, October 30, 1938, when Orson Welles masterfully recreated and enacted H. G. Wells' The War Of The Worlds.

And so, a year later, the same play was broadcast in Ecuador where a similar panic resulted. When the South Americans realized they had been badly taken in, they got their Latin blood up and burned down the radio station, killing six of the show's participants.

It certainly was a Halloween to remember!

Hillsman Reveals Number Of College Grads Petitioning For Participation In Peace Corps

By Boyd Burtnett

To date, 38 men and at least 50 women from the college have filed applications to join the Peace Corps, and a number of these have already completed their training and have been assigned to various underdeveloped parts of the world, Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, stated recently.

"Each year more and more of our graduates are entering the organization," he said.

DEAN OF MEN Ralph Hillsman says that each year "more and more graduates from here are entering the Peace Corps."

The Peace Corps, formed almost immediately after the Kennedy Administration took office, is an organization designed to help the peoples of nations with low economic standards help themselves, and thereby check the flow of communism.

When first inaugurated under the leadership of Sargent Shriver, the President's brother-in-law, it was supposed that the Peace Corps would be composed only of young persons just out of college.

This supposition was quickly discarded, however, when it was found that doctors, social workers, farmers and business persons who were grandfathers and grandmothers were more than willing to donate their time and training for a two-year tour of duty with the corps.

It is generally supposed that the Peace Corps is interested only in graduates of four-year colleges, but according to corps spokesmen, "Two-year college graduates with their wide spectrum of skills are particularly valuable to community development projects.

"More than ten per cent of the volunteers now in training and overseas are graduates of two-year colleges. The Peace Corps has used their skills and training in almost every project and in every country where it operates."

Another false supposition that arose when the corps was formed was that it would be "a haven for draft-dodgers." All Peace Corps volunteers are draft deferred.

According to the Peace Corps, "During training and overseas service, all expenses—including travel, food, clothing, housing, medical care and incidentals—will be paid by the corps. Upon completion of Peace Corps service, volunteers will receive a termination payment equal to $78 for each month of service."

A recruit in the armed forces of the United States receives a monthly wage of $78 when he is in basic training. This is immediately raised to $84 when he leaves "boot camp," and he gets regular pay increases as he progresses in the service.

While Peace Corpsmen live at the same rural standards of the inhabitants of the country in which they are doing service, the ordinary serviceman receives about the same monthly wage as does an office manager in Japan.

Japan is the most highly developed country economically in Asia, and boasts the highest standard of living.

Brochures and information about the Peace Corps can be picked up in Dean Hillsman's office, S-150, in Joseph Jacobsen's office, S-155, and the location of examining stations is posted on bulletin boards on the ground floor of Science Hall.

Letters to the Editor

looked the fact that the RAMS have broken a precedent and have placed themselves in the position of accountability for their actions, and to a far greater extent than any other party for ten years, merely by receiving "on-campus" status.

. . . The possibilities and potentials of this organization are of a very wide scope. It is, in my mind, highly likely that another political organization can and will be formed on campus. It would, indeed, be folly to attempt to legislate another party at this time.

If there must be another political party then it should be formed by discontent or honest disagreement, not by force or legislation.

Location Photo Course Set For Summer Session

Location photography, listed in the college catalogue as photography 112, will be offered here this summer for the first time in ten years, photography instructor Bev Pasqualetti said yesterday.

Any advanced photography student wishing to enroll must obtain a signed statement from Pasqualetti.

Enrollment, he said, will be limited to make ample equipment and darkroom space available for all. The class may have from 10 to 18 students.

Enrollees will have a choice between motion picture or still cameras, and a choice of either black-and-white or color film. There will be four field trips scheduled, with the remainder of time to be spent in the laboratory.

"Some possible subjects for field trips are a venture to a dude ranch in Santa Rosa and a trip to the new Marin Civic Center," Pasqualetti added.

Summer Registration Starts Next Monday

Registration for summer session will be open to students here beginning next Monday and continuing through June 6, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, announced today.

To register, students are required to secure their program from their respective counselors and report to the registrar's office no later than June 6, Miss Learnard added. Maximum units permitted will be six, exclusive of physical education.

The registrar explained further that most of the courses offered will be of the university parallel program, but, she added, there are also courses scheduled in the semiprofessional program such as criminology, nursing, TV-radio and X-ray technology.

Ex 'G' Editor Wins Alaskan Press Award

Nick Peters, two-time sports editor of The Guardsman and also editor-in-chief, recently received Alaska's outstanding sports writer award for 1962 presented by the Alaska Press Club.

Peters was a student here in 1958 and '59.

Peters was honored for his work as sports editor of Fort Richardson's post newspaper, The Pioneer. He was then serving in the United States Army and was assigned to the Alaska Information Office.

After graduation here, Peters enrolled at San Jose State College, during which time he was sports editor of the Spartan Daily.

Before entering the service, he was with the Berkeley Gazette sports staff.

UMOC Rally Is Called Off When Egg 'Riot' Starts

Things got out of hand at the Ugly Man On Campus rally held in front of the Redwood Ram April 26 when eggs flew in the wrong directions.

Purpose of the rally was to raise funds for scholarships. Eggs and pies, sold by various fraternities to students, were to be thrown at the candidates for the Ugliest Man On Campus title.

For a short time all eggs and pies flew in the right direction—at the candidates.

But some students hurled eggs from the top of the hill and from near the campus bookstore—in every direction. No one was apprehended.

Vince Contreras, president of the Council of Organizations and leader of the RAMS political party, leaped on to the stage to try to restore order.

His efforts failed.

Egg-splattered Contreras climbed down from the stage. Instructor Clement Skrabak halted the rally.

Winner of the Ugly Man On Campus contest was Pete Montonen, who was a candidate from Beta Tau fraternity. Second place went to John Conlan from Alpha Kappa Rho.

UMOC sponsoring fraternity, Alpha Phi Omega, came in third, and fourth was the Newman Club. The Hawaiian Club took fifth place.

A total of $135.25 was collected in the contest. The money will go to the scholarship fund.

In future UMOC rallies, egg and pie throwing probably will not be permitted, Contreras hinted. Eggs will most likely be eliminated completely.

Lasley Has Role In Last Production Of Drama Season

Robert Lasley, assistant drama director, has the role of the Citizen of Angiers in the last production of the season, King John, which will be performed May 24, 25, 31 and June 1 in the theater, according to Michael Griffin, Shakespearean play director.

The role of Constance, played by Sandra Lundwall, is considered by critics and actors alike to be the most important one in the play.

Her part throughout the play is a highpoint of Shakespearean character study, and though various companies have omitted the scene "interchange" between her and the Queen Mother, this production will present the play in its entirety, Griffin said.

Also starring in the play, in the lead role of King John, is Ken Bachtold. Publicity for the show is being done by Dale Altauter, who also plays the part of the Duke of Austria.

Sets for the play, which include massive simulated oak doors, were constructed by Ron Lang, who has worked several months on this production and who has also made most of the props.

The costumes for King John are by Al Gonzales, who designed and executed all of the men's costumes. Kitty Condon designed and made all of the costumes for the women.

Rehearsals are still in progress and will continue through May 23. Although all of the speaking parts have been filled, there are still some parts open as extras for men and women students. Students interested in serving as extras in the play can consult Griffin in his office in the arts building theater.

King John will be the last production of the season. Admission will be free to AS card holders and $1 general admission. Curtain is at 8 p.m. sharp.

Campus Police Budget Starts Heated Argument As Council Hits Bumpy Road To Debate

By Patty Smith

Student Council found the long road of passing budgets a bumpy one when a heated argument arose last week concerning the budget requested by the Campus Police.

Council managed to allocate $6737.77 to the football team but hit a snag later when Phil Robbins moved to allocate $3649.42 to the Campus Police, stating, "This budget cannot be cut." Jim Fuller, former council member, asked him to repeat his statement, and the arguments began.

Tom Cain, Campus Police chief, rose to his feet and began defending his budget, stating that the uniforms the men were presently wearing date practically to the time of the Civil War.

He argued that five new uniforms were needed and five pairs of uniform trousers would have to be repaired to prevent arrest for appearing in improper attire.

At this point Fuller started to blast the proposed budget, arguing that since 1959 an additional $2000 has been allocated to the police force, whereas the Freshman and Sophomore Classes only receive a small portion of the requested amount in their budgets.

Keith Woolwine, Inter-Fraternity Council president, answered Fuller's charges by stating that the budget could not be cut, then yielded the floor to Jerry Shirinian, member of the police force pistol team.

Shirinian argued that the money earmarked ammunition and pistol matches was the bare minimum that could be spent.

The argument continued back and forth until council decided to table the motion until the budget could be reviewed again.

Council then allocated $50 to the dean of women, $52 to the dean of men, and $355 to KCSF Broadcasters.

The next business on the agenda was the nomination of the outstanding student and outstanding instructor for service to the Associated Students this semester. Those nominated for outstanding student are Paulette Waltz, Stella Cook, Roger Kaufman, Rosie Fang, Henry Cassel and Fuller.

Instructors nominated are Jack Gaddy, Lee Dolson, Henry Leff, Gerald Mullin, Larry Lawson, Galen Marshall and Terry Kilpatrick.

AWS Combines Feminine Fling, Careers Night

The Associated Women Students are planning to combine their semi-annual Feminine Fling with a Careers Night Wednesday, May 29, Imogene Walker, AWS president, disclosed today.

Miss Walker revealed that Careers Night was originally to take place Friday, May 17, during College Hour, but the AWS board decided that there wouldn't be enough interest because of other already scheduled activities.

The board decided that a combination of the Fling and Careers Night would be more effective. "Several displays from various terminal two-year programs will be shown and introduced to women of this college from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m." Miss Walker said.

A light dinner will be served at the Feminine Fling, and awards will be given by sponsoring organizations, the Recreation Association, the Inter-Sorority Council, and the AWS, to outstanding women here. In addition, pins will be awarded to the 12 semi-finalists in the Best Dressed Coed On Campus contest held last month.

McCloud Warns Students Of PreReg Requirements

Students who have not met counseling appointments either to discuss their fall semester program or summer session schedule will be penalized with a higher registration number, Walter McCloud, counselor here, stated this week.

Students unable to keep the specified appointment time on the postcard mailed to their homes should notify their counselor of this fact in advance or face the penalty of registering for classes at least an hour later than usual, he warned.

Soph-Of-The-Year To Be Named At 'May Night' Ball

The Sophomore Ball, scheduled for Friday, May 24, in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel, will feature the introduction of the Sophomore-of-the-Year.

President of the Sophomore Class, Mike Nevin, stated that the winner of the Sophomore-of-the-Year title will be determined on the bases of participation in student government, leadership, grade point average, athletic ability and participation in the various clubs and activities on campus.

The class president and class committee will pick the winner from names submitted in each category. The class president will also interview each contestant's counselor and decide which one is most outstanding in sophomore activities, sports as well as scholastics.

Following tradition, the Sophomore King and Queen will be crowned at the ball. They will be chosen by the penny-a-vote method, proceeds from which go to the class scholarship fund, Nevin explained.

Theme for the dance will be May Night, and Sal Carson and his band will provide the dance music.

May 17 Last Day To Take Leave Of Absence

Leave of absence petitions must be filed with the office of the registrar before Friday, May 17, and students applying for leaves of absence must obtain the necessary forms from their counselor, according to the college catalogue.

Leaves are not granted to students who have been disqualified in all courses; however, students are permitted to withdraw from those courses in which they are in good standing.

Students obtaining a leave of absence two consecutive semesters may reenroll only with the consent of the coordinator of student welfare, John Brady.

Anyone withdrawing from the college during a semester without obtaining a formal leave of absence will receive a final grade of F in each course in which he is enrolled.

Club Cavalcade: Ram Chess Team Defeats 'Q'

Compiled by Francine Dubonnet

Winning their first match of the season against a San Quentin prison team, members of the college's Chess Club are now awaiting the acceptance of an invitational match against San Francisco State College, club President Oliver Shank stated today.

The club's "playing team" includes Ray Hoppe, acknowledged a master by the United States Chess Federation, Frank Thomalily, Victor Jong, Herb Ziemer, Jack Bolcin and Shank.

The sexted defeated San Quentin on the first, second, third and fifth boards.

Club membership may be obtained by attending College Hour meetings in A-114, or consulting faculty adviser William McKenzie. Lessons are offered to new players.

● The Newman Club held its semi-annual nominations and election of officers last night in St. Emydius' Hall. Reverend Leonard Calegary, newly ordained priest, is the new chaplain.

● Friday, May 17, during College Hour, the Real Estate and Insurance Club will sponsor its annual business conference, Saul Samuels, club president, announced. Guest speakers from local realty and insurance companies will attend the meeting.

Nomination and election of new Real Estate officers is planned for Friday, May 31.

● As a climax to a hectic spring semester schedule, the Recreation Association will hold its semiannual awards social Tuesday, May 21, according to RA adviser Frances Galloway.

● Members of the Engineering Society saw a movie concerned with the Georgetown Band last Friday, and have planned successive meetings for Fridays, May 17 and 31, during College Hour in S-200.

Netters Use Depth To Easily Capture Golden Gate Conference Title

By Fred Wales

Following up its undefeated league record, the Ram tennis team used its depth to easily capture first place in the Golden Gate Conference meet last weekend at Foothill.

In the first day of competition all the Rams won their first round. Jack Kern blanked Wood from Diablo Valley, 6-0, 6-0; Bob Murio came back to take Lowe from San Jose, 3-6, 6-1, 6-1; Gordon Miller defeated Hagstrum from San Jose, 6-3, 6-3; Rich Anderson handily trounced Stewart from Chabot, 6-1, 6-0; and Bob Siska shut out Clarke from San Jose, 6-0, 6-0.

In the quarterfinals three Rams bit the dust as Kern was eliminated by Ritter, 6-2, 6-2; Bill Davis from San Mateo took out Gordon Miller, 6-4, 6-1; and Rich Anderson was stopped by teammate Siska, 6-4, 6-0.

Golden Gate Conference Meet at Foothill

CCSF 14, Foothill 8, San Mateo 4, Contra Costa 2, Oakland 1, San Jose 1, Diablo Valley 0 and Chabot 0.

Doubles proved easier for the Rams as both teams advanced to the semi-finals. Siska-Jilka first took Clarke-Lowe from San Jose, 6-1, 6-1, and then Lang-Liske from Contra Costa, 6-3, 6-0.

Murio-Anderson started by shutting out Esposito-Brisbin of Diablo Valley, 6-0, 6-0; and followed it up with a 6-3, 6-1 win over Davis and Reed of San Mateo.

At the end of the Friday's competition the Rams held a commanding lead with 11 points to the closest competitor, Foothill with five points.

Saturday's semifinals found Murio being eliminated by Ritter, 6-3, 6-1, and Davis downed by Siska, 6-1, 6-4. This set the stage for the toughest match of the day as the lightning fast reflexes of the Rams' Siska were pitted against the deadly serves of Foothill's Horst Ritter for the singles crown.

Siska started in command and the German-born Ritter found himself down, 5-4, with Siska serving. Siska then ran into trouble with his serves as shot after shot was either snagged by the net or eluded the seemingly minute serving box. Ritter took advantage of the serves to take first set, 7-5, and come back for a 6-2 win in the second and capture the coveted crown.

Bob Murio went three sets for his third place win over Bill Davis of San Mateo, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

The Rams also ran into difficulty in doubles but still managed to emerge victorious. After Siska-Jilka had little trouble with Contra Costa's Lang-Lisks, winning 6-3, 6-0, Murio-Anderson ran into problems with Ritter-Moss from Foothill.

The Foothill pair edged the locals 7-5 in the first set, but Anderson's deadly backhand combined with Murio's brilliant net slams as the Rams took the second set, also at 7-5.

In the third set a lapse in the Rams' teamwork allowed Ritter to spin his magic and win the third set, 6-4, and the match. The more experienced team of Siska-Jilka finally tamed the hilltoppers, 6-3, 6-4, for the doubles honors.

The final standings found the Rams on top with 14 points, followed by Foothill 8, San Mateo 4, Contra Costa 2, Oakland 1 and San Jose 1.

This weekend the Conference champions travel to American River College in Sacramento for the Northern California championships. Coach Roy Diederichsen predicted that the Rams should also take this meet, with competition coming mainly from Foothill's Ritter and Company.

Golfers Lose To San Jose; League Match Friday

The weakened Ram golf team lost an 18½-11½ match to the hungry San Jose Jaguars. The San Franciscans now prepare for the Golden Gate Conference tournament Friday at Richmond Country Club.

In losing to the Jaguars, the Klemmermen had an off day as a team with Dennis Drucker setting the pace by firing an 80. It was only the first win of the conference season for the Jaguars, while the Rams went down to their third defeat in six outings.

College of San Mateo and Foothill College ended up as conference co-champions when the Owls stunned the two-time state champion Bulldogs, 22½-7½, although classy Dick Lotz of San Mateo was medalist by firing a 69. Both teams ended the season with 6-1 records.

The loss broke a 65-game win streak for San Mateo, the longest golf streak in California history.

Tee-off for the Golden Gate Conference tournament is scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

One of the top golfers in the state will be present—Lotz—the current California state amateur champion and number one man for the Bulldogs last year.

Foothill's John Brugger is also highly rated.

Drucker, the Rams' top gun, should place high.

San Mateo and Foothill will probably battle it out for team honors, while the Rams, who took third in the old Big Eight Conference tournament last year, hope to do as well in the first Golden Gate Conference championships.

National Football League Names Klemmer Official

Grover Klemmer of the physical education department has received a contract to officiate in the National Football League for 1963, it was announced yesterday.

Klemmer has been an official in the Pacific Inter-Collegiate Officiating Bureau for ten years. Last year he officiated the Shrine East-West game. Klemmer applied for the position last year.

Williams, Kunkle Hit Homers As Rams Move Back Into Lead

STRONG WALT WILLIAMS sent this pitch soaring toward center field. —Guardsman photo by Edmund Hee.

Walt Williams and Russ Kunkle homered and Ron Bringuel cbalked up his second straigbt victory as the college defeated last place Diablo Valley, 6-2, last Friday at Balboa to go into undisputed possession of first place in the rapidly closing Golden Gate Conference baseball race.

In a day of upsets, the other top three contenders—San Mateo, Foothill and Oakland—all lost. San Mateo bowed, 5-6; Foothill, 7-9, and Oakland, 6-8.

This is how the leaders stood after Friday's action:

	W	L	Pct.	GB
San Francisco	8	3	.727	....
San Mateo	8	4	.667	½
Oakland	7	4	.636	1
Foothill	7	4	.636	1

The Rams tangle with Foothill at Foothill Friday in a contest that could decide the conference winner.

San Francisco was knocked out of first place last Wednesday by San Mateo, 5-1, as CSM shortstop Dennis Scott touched Ram ace Rich Nold (5-1) for two home runs. Williams' double was the only Ram threat.

In Friday's contest, Williams hit a solo homer in the first inning. It was followed by another quick run when Russ Kunkle went to first after being hit by a pitch, stole second and came in on Joe Dalpogetti's single.

The Rams scored again in the fifth when Joe Villanceniio singled, Kunkle homered, Rich Farrell and Lou Bevilacqua singled, and Bill Hynes, a second-string catcher, tripled in the three-run inning.

Bringuel (2-2) shut out the Vikings over the first seven with an assortment of breaking pitches.

The Chunky Kind

If you were to compare Ram outfielder Walt Williams to a jar of peanut butter, he would be the chunky kind.

The little scrapper wraps 175 pounds around a muscularly built 5-6 frame. He has tremendous reflexes, coordination and speed. It is easy to see why he has become All-City or near All-City in every sport he has savored.

But the current eye is on his baseball talents.

The main factor that put the Rams back into title contention came when the ex-Galileo all-around athlete was moved up from third to leadoff batter in the Ram lineup.

He played a major role in both one-run efforts over College of San Mateo and San Jose.

In his first 27 times at bat, he's collected 10 hits for .370, plus two home runs.

At Galileo he was All-City halfback in his junior year, sustained an injury in his senior year, but was All-City baseball as a junior and was second team All-City basketball.

He was the No. 1 back behind Ron Coleman on the Ram football team last year. He gained 121 yards in 38 carries with a 48-yard touchdown run.

It's been no secret that major league scouts have to watch the moves of the 19-year-old very carefully.

Hard-Luck Spikers In Fresno Relays

After an 18-point sixth place showing in the Northern California relays, held April 27, the bedraggled Ram spikers enter the Fresno relays Friday, and the Northern California trials at San Mateo next Tuesday.

Hindered by rain, wind and cold weather, and repeatedly set back by rescheduled meets, the team has seen a relatively unfruitful season, breaking no records, and placing only fourth in conference standings.

"If it weren't for Foothill's all-weather track," track coach Lou Vasquez said, "we couldn't have run a meet this season."

San Francisco pride broad jumper Lon Brantley has never reached the 25 feet that was hoped for this season. He fell twice in the conference season and again in the NorCal relays, when his best was 22-9¼.

The NorCal meet proved dissatisfying to the Rams, and their disappointment was magnified when Les Mills of Foothill broke Alex Darnes' 1962 discus record with a heave of 175-5, bettering the old record by 2-2.

Foothill again showed winning prowess when Don Castle upped his own shot record distance to 58-7¼.

"With warmer weather, we should be able to make good showings the remainder of the track season," Vasquez commented.

Foothill with Mills and Castle, and the College of San Mateo with 880-man Ron Benson, will most likely fight for high spots.

The Rams, perennial track powers just two years ago, should score well.

Action-Packed Hockey Gets Strong Support

By Dave Kleinberg

WITH the hockey season finally over (it started October 12 in the year of 1962), this might be the time to take a look at the status of ice hockey in San Francisco.

It is remarkable how any one sport has come so far so fast. The Seals came to town in 1961, greeting a public which was almost totally ignorant of the sport they were presenting.

Who had heard of icing, checking, face off, kneeing or high sticking?

During the past season, in which the Seals pressed earnestly toward the Southern Division title of the Western Hockey League, the San Francisco attendance danced around the 6000 mark.

Among that dance was a 10,209 matinee crowd to see the Los Angeles Blades in January, 12,290 for L.A. in March and 11,864 to watch S.F. beat Portland on April 11.

Yet the market has yet to reach full potential. San Francisco has had to become educated to the game, seeing it for the first time. What fans first thought was an out and out provocation of a fight they now recognize as good, rugged checking, one of the finer points of the action-packed sport.

Once fans were cognizant of what part the blue and red lines played in the game, the more enjoyable the game became.

It is said if the action moments were clipped from a baseball or a football game there would be only 10 to 12 minutes of true action.

It can reasonably be said that in hockey the 60 minutes of play are filled with at least 50 minutes of action. The action emphasis could be the reason why the Seals have succeeded where the basketball Warriors have failed.

The Warriors present a cheap imitation of basketball, where the value of the score is nearly nothing, and the San Francisco fan has never gone for that.

It would be too bad for the Seals if, just when they are reaching the pinnacle of success, that the National Hockey League entered and wiped out the stars that have been made naturalized San Franciscans.

Willie Mays, Wilt Chamberlain and the likes were known—by name—to San Franciscans before the respective clubs moved here.

The Seals that were once unknown—Jim McLeod, Larry McNabb, Mo Mantha, Tom Thurlby, Orland Kurtenbach and others—are now names in this city.

Possibly the most significant tribute was paid when 80-plus fans chartered a plane to Portland to see the Seals meet the Buckaroos in the final game of the Southern Division playoff.

Aquamen Score One Point—Grab Eighth Place At NorCal

Concluding a season of near misses, the Ram swim team was bombed out of qualifying places at the NorCal meet last week at Visalia. They scored one point and placed eighth.

Herm Fruchtenicht proved the only scorer for the Rams as he placed sixth in the 100 breast stroke with a time of 1:09.6. Just missing the finals in the 200 breast, Fruchtenicht came back to win his heat in the 100 and score the Rams' only point.

The Rams' medley relay, although turning its best time of the season with a 4:19, missed qualifying by less than a second as powerful Fresno edged them.

The free relay suffered the same fate as it placed eighth despite Rich Gray's 52.6 anchor.

In individual events the pattern was the same. Mark Haskell placed seventh in the 200 fly on a disqualification, Jeff Higman was completely washed out in the 50 free and Rich Gray settled for an eighth in the 200 free with a 2:01.3.

In the 100 free Gray fared better with a seventh and a 53.5 clocking, missing the finals by six-tenths of a second.

The only bright spot in the Rams "just-miss season" was third place in the conference meet at San Jose. A 1-5 record was far from their potential, but disqualifications and injuries haunted the small band all season long.

Newman Club Faces Cage Crucial Tonight

It's must-win for the Newman Club (6-1) in tonight's contest against Hotel & Restaurant (3-3) in the Associated Men Students intramural basketball tournament.

The Newman Club must win to stay one game behind the idle independent league leaders, the Divine Ones (6-0). This is Newman's last contest, while the Divine Ones have one to play next Wednesday against the Hawaiian Bla's (1-5).

If the Divine Ones lose and the Newman Club wins there will be a playoff.

The Divine Ones won easily last week when the Red Sox forfeited for not placing five men on the court in the required time.

The second-place Newman Club also won by forfeit when the Untouchables didn't show.

In other independent competition, the Turnbull's Blues defeated the Brothers Five, 51-46. High-point man was Brothers Fives' Jim Ruggles with 19.

The Filipino Club won its second game of the season by defeating the Hawaiian Bla's, 49-41. A. Rodriquez of the Filipino Club was high with 16.

In tonight's independent competition, the Newman Club meets Hotel & Restaurant at 7:15 p.m., men's gymnasium; the Red Sox meet the Hawaiian Bla's at 8:15 p.m., men's gymnasium; the Untouchables meet the Brothers Five at 7:15 p.m., women's gymnasium, and the Filipino Club meets the Turnbull's Blues at 8:15 p.m., women's gymnasium.

In the fraternity loop, last place Beta Tau meets second place Alpha Phi Epsilon next Tuesday in the last game of the season.

Students Vote To Open Future Elections

Associated Student cardholders voted in a special election last Friday to open future AS general elections to all registered students at the college.

Of the 256 votes cast, 191 were for the change while 65 voted to keep elections as they were—open to AS cardholders only.

This new policy goes into effect immediately and will allow all members of the student body to cast ballots in next week's elections to choose fall AS officers.

Three Candidates In AS Presidency Race

Rich Thomas John Theilen Vince Contreras

STUDENT GOVERNMENT at City College is not as effective as it could be.

Although we have a fine governmental system here, many phases have recently become stagnant because students as a whole have not been given a chance to participate actively in their own government.

Usually the only time that students are invited to participate is at election time, but participation has been limited to Associated Student cardholders only. Apathy is soon the outcome.

Through my experience as president of City College's Freshman Class, I know that student participation is vital in government.

That's why I say: Let's not ration student participation in government but let'e rather bring government back to the studente' level so that all students on campus can actively participate in it.

By opening AS elections to all and by informing students of governmental legislation, we can create a government that is truly representative of student interest.

As president of the Associated Students I pledge to bring government back to the students where it belongs.

RICH THOMAS

THE ONLY MEANS that I may have to meet with some of you will be through this statement. I am John Theilen, candidate for the office of Associated Student president.

I believe next semester's president will require all the ambition and skill possible in one person. This is important on the campus and the intercollegiate level. I feel I can meet these requirements.

Experience in three different facets of student leadership has given me an insight into our problems at City College. As your Associated Men Student president this semester and as past Finance Chairman and council member I have acquainted myself with your activity program.

Fall 1963 will see City College as the host for a student government conference. Participation in two state conventions and three regional conventions has provided me with the purpose and understanding for this conference in the fall.

By electing me your Associated Student president I will work to bring student government back to the whole student body where it was originally vested and not in the hands of the minority.

JOHN THEILEN

IT WILL BE the president's responsibility to maintain City College's outstanding reputation at the state conference next semester. I attended the state conference this semester, and I am definitely aware of this responsibility.

Next semester, City College will host the area conference, and the Associated Student president will also be the area president, responsible for a new area constitution.

He will also be the chairman of this conference. Being Council of Organizations chairman and Freshman and Sophomore Class president has given me an opportunity to chair meetings, to be thoroughly familiar with the makeup of the constitution, and, most important, to learn the application of parliamentary procedures to group meetings.

At the college level, the president must coordinate the activities of Student Council and cabinet. More important, next semester's president must direct legislation which will make the constitution of the Associated Students more flexible, applicable and useful to the Student Council.

My new ideas and plans make me the most qualified person to fill the job.

VINCE CONTRERAS

Vince Contreras, John Theilen, Rich Thomas Win Nomination At Poor Convention Turnout

By Herm Kilgerman

Thirty-three stalwart individuals braved fog, wind and hazards of the night May 6 to attend the college's open nominating convention and to hear Vince Contreras, John Theilen and Rich Thomas accept nominations for the fall Associated Student presidency.

Contreras is this semester's Council of Organizations chairman, Theilen is Associated Men Student president and Rich Thomas is a Student Council member.

This is the first AS election since the fall of 1959 with three candidates for the presidency.

Not only was the attendance disappointing at the convention but only 18 students were nominated for the 20 elective AS offices.

Phyllis Webb, finance chairman, received the lone nomination for AS vice president at the Smith Hall meeting.

Sole nominee for AMS president was Bob Roddick, this semester's Freshman Class president.

Judy Carlson and Rosie Fang are contesting the office of Associated Women Student president.

Steve Christ was the only nominee for Sophomore Class president, while Mike McCambridge and Gary Ettin received nominations for the Freshman Class presidency.

Only eight candidates were nominated to fill the 14 freshman and sophomore seats on Student Council next semester. Clemmie Thompson, Janet Sisk, Art Gersbman, Joel Cohen and Cecil Reichert were nominated for the seven sophomore seats on council.

Nominated for the equal number of freshman positions on council were Pat Walsh, Sandy Castelli and Mary Ganakis.

These posts, as well as those of the AS vice president, the AMS president and Sophomore Class president, remained open to nominations through last Monday.

The actual AS elections will be held next Tuesday, May 21, and Wednesday, May 22.

Voting machines will be placed at the silver pole in Science Hall, at the main entrance to the library and at the entrance to the fountain section of Smith Hall. Polls will be open between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. both days, according to Election Commissioner Tony Taormina.

As a result of last Friday's special election, all registered students will be able to vote in next week's general election.

To publicize the elections more and give the candidates a better opportunity to convey their objectives to the student body, Taormina has instituted three new devices this semester.

First, last week the three presidential candidates spoke to the student body over Campus Carrier, a regular morning feature prepared by the college's KCSF broadcasting station. On different days, each described briefly of their plans.

Secondly, through assistance by his election committee, Taormina has prepared a detailed mimeographed booklet containing pertinent information on each AS office and containing statements by each candidate.

This pamphlet will be mailed to all AS cardholders prior to the election.

Finally, a television debate between Contreras, Theilen and Thomas is planned. The trio were to meet this week to tape the interview in the KCSF studios here. Taormina expects to telecast the debate via closed circuit television next week.

Tentative plans call for the placing of several TV receivers in Smith Hall during the lunch hour next Monday, May 20.

At the conclusion of last week's nominating convention, AS President Bill Silver summed up the proceedings by stating that he foresees a "hard-fought, close, and most of all, fair election this semester."

Silver Expresses View On College Student 'Gripes'

By Chris Weizig

Urging the "gripers" at the college to become "doers," Associated Student President Bill Silver pointed out in a recent interview that "Everything and anything can be had by the students here if they show any initiative or desire."

Citing the Premiere show and dance which was sponsored by the Freshman Class last February, Silver called it an excellent example of how big a success anything can be at the college if a group is willing to push.

"The 'pushers' are usually the 'gripers' who find that when they participate as well as gripe, they discover an amazing amount of cooperation on the part of the Student Council and the administration," he said.

He mentioned that, in his opinion, there are 3000 gripers at the college, and only 10 of them have petitioned to run for the 14 Student Council seats.

Turning to the ever-present money problem, Silver said that the college may have to take advantage of a money bill which is now before the state assembly, in order to sponsor student activities in future years.

This bill would allow two-year colleges to charge parking fees and, Silver said, if the Associated Student card sales don't improve next semester, the college might use this means for fund raising.

Administration To Compile Honors List For Students

The administration is currently compiling an honors list to be released sometime before the end of the semester, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, announced last week.

"I can't say for sure when the list will be completed," Luckmann stated, "but the deans are busy working on it now."

The list will contain the names and majors of all students maintaining a 3.5 or better average.

Future list will be posted at the end of each midterm.

Students must carry at least 12 units to be eligible.

Students with an A minus average often cannot take part in the affairs of Alpha Gamma Sigma—the only campus organization giving recognition to scholastic ability.

AGS eligibility requires that the student maintain a 3.0 average for 12 units or more.

The honors list standing will be noted on the student's permanent record.

An honors list based on final grades is, also planned, Luckmann said.

Stanford, the University of California and many other colleges compile similar lists.

Monique Benoit Describes Men's Fashion Show Friday

Monique Benoit, San Francisco Chronicle columnist, will describe the latest in men's apparel in a men's fashion show in which competing models from campus fraternities will participate during College Hour Friday in the theater, according to Ray Cognasso, officer of the Merchandising Club, sponsor of the show.

Attire will be supplied by Roos/Atkins Men's Stores, and will include suits, beachwear and casual campus collegiate wear. "We hope that the wide variety of apparel to be shown will reach the interest of a vast number of students," Cognasso stated.

Approximately 40 outfits will be exhibited by 18 models.

Both men students and coeds, as well as the general public, are invited to attend. "Coeds are especially invited to attend. We don't want them to feel as if this show is limited to men students only," Bob Guetersloh, Merchandising Club vice president, emphasized.

All organizations participating are expected to lend moral support to their respective models in the contest. Models will be judged by three executives from wholesale and retail firms in the field of men's apparel. The model judged best will receive $20, the second prize is $10, and the third $5.

Prize money will be donated by the college Merchandising Club treasury.

Door prizes will include a Pendleton shirt, and a sweater of the latest style. These prizes will be donated by Roos/Atkins. "Students will receive respective numbers upon entering the theater, and the winning numbers will be drawn," Guetersloh explained.

The Merchandising Club dance originally scheduled for Friday night has been canceled.

Forum Magazine Available May 27

Rena Kitch, Forum magazine's 1963 editor, said yesterday that the magazine is to be available to the student body on Monday, May 27.

The going price is 50 cents to non-Associated Student cardholders, but the magazine is free to cardholders.

The final touch was supplied to the magazine by Haley Yee, who designed the cover. A student in the art department, Yee entered the cover design contest and his design was selected over 10 others.

Yee is a major in advertising art and a graduate of George Washington High School, he plans to attend the art center in Los Angeles after graduation from here.

A total of 124 pieces of prose and poetry was received. Art and photography contributions pushed the total submissions past 200.

This semester's issue is expected to maintain a balance between traditional and way-out literature.

Miss Kitch is an English major and served as last year's assistant editor of Forum.

Six Faculty Members Plan June Retirements

Six instructors here have announced their retirement from the college at the end of this semester.

They include Rex Harris and Charles Roland of the engineering department, Chester Crowell of the geology department, Ed Nielsen from the hotel and restaurant division, William Eckert of advertising art and Dean of Instruction Edward Sandys, who was in charge of the library operation.

Sandys has been on a leave of absence for the past year.

Annemarie Delfs, Fred McFarland and Harold Cunningham retired at the end of last semester.

Bullets Hold Up Council Action On AS Budgets

Tabled at two sessions of Student Council, action on the Campus Police budget and its sum of $2121.62 for bullets is holding up procedure on the fall semester budget, and consideration of this item is now postponed indefinitely, Phyllis Webb, financial chairman, stated last Wednesday.

Facts that contribute to the controversy are that the Campus Police, a group of 30 members, have a budget request for $3649.42, while the Freshman Class, representing 4000 students, ask $800 out of the Associated Student funds, Miss Webb explained.

In previous semesters, the business of the budget was handled during the semester of expenditure. Only recently adapted is the advanced planning of the budget in hopes that it will expedite budget allowances earlier for the next semester.

Ex-Engineering Major Holds Drama Lead

Bachtold Is King John In Last Production Of Season

"CUT HIM TO PIECES!" Al Gonzales plays the role of the Earl of Pembroke in Shakespeare's King John. Gonzales also designed and executed all of the men's costumes. The play will be performed May 24, 25, 31 and June 1 in the theater.—Guardsman photo by Herb Greene.

By Patty Smith

A young man who never had enough nerve to sign up for a drama course, much less appear on the stage, is now carrying the lead role in Shakespeare's King John, the final drama production of the semester, slated to begin in the theater Friday, May 24.

Ken Bachtold spoke of how he became interested in drama: "I was studying engineering at the University of California and hating it, so I left. I came here to study art but signed up for drama 10A and that was it!"

When asked what made him sign up for the course, he replied that he had always wanted to take a drama course but just "never had the nerve." He decided that it looked like a beginning course, so he signed up and now he loves it.

Bachtold, who loves the theater and working with all the people, said that he really hates to leave, but he will transfer to San Francisco State to earn his teaching credential after completing his studies here.

The young thespian enjoys his first Shakespearean role but also enjoyed working in William Inge's Bus Stop, which played here last month.

"The hardest thing about acting," he said, "is memorizing the lines. While appearing in Bus Stop I had my book on the table in the wings, and whenever I was offstage I looked at it."

Another young man who hopes for a career in the theater is Tom Purvis, who will play the role of the bastard son, Philip of Falconridge, in King John.

Purvis hails from Grants Pass, Oregon, and has been interested in acting and the theater in general since eighth grade, when he first saw the shows of Alfred Hitchcock.

During high school in Oregon, he appeared in 15 to 20 plays, and after graduation came to San Francisco to study acting with R. G. Davis for six months before enrolling here.

Majoring in humanities, Purvis hopes to go into the field of film work and directing as well as acting. He has made several of his own films in the past but finds that "acting is just as rewarding as making films," and hopes to be able to find time to do both.

Purvis is currently working with Davis and his mime troupe, and has appeared here in Bus Stop and in Graham Greene's mystery play, The Potting Shed, in the role of the devoted uncle.

He also appeared during College Hour last year in Samuel Beckett's A Mime For One Player. Purvis, who prefers tragic comedies, will transfer to San Francisco State after completion of his studies here.

The sets for King John were made by Ron Lang and publicity was handled by "King John himself," Bachtold. Kitty Condon, who also appears in the play, designed the women's costumes.

Al Gonzales, in the role of Pembroke, designed the properties and the men's costumes. In fact, Gonzales is described by the cast as "indispensable to the production in every respect." Direction is by Michael Griffin.

King John is one of Shakespeare's ten historical plays, concerned with the events that led up to England's first great civil war. King John specifically tells the story of a medieval king of England who had an unhappy and bloody reign.

University Man? 'Uh..Nah, I'm A GARBAGE Man'

It has probably occurred to every student at the college at one time or other, usually at the end of a disheartening midterm period, to exclaim, "What the h— am I doing here?"

Well, he is—if he follows the pattern set by American students for years—here for one particular purpose, and his steps to attaining his goal have become pretty much standardized.

He tries to earn that elusive 3.0 so he can transfer—to study some more so he can graduate, get an executive position, earn his $150 a week for 20 years, and retire at age 45 to live with his family—and his four ulcers.

But the average student, who sets his sights high, finds it somewhat disconcerting to be told after long tedious hours of study, and supreme effort in midterm tests, "Well, George, you have a 1.34 this time!!!"

Well, George, if you don't care how you make your $150 a week (legally, of course), maybe there is hope for you. In a students' conversation recently overhead, it was mentioned that he must have a magnificent part-time job to be able to support the '63 Sting Ray he was driving.

The expected answer would have been, "My father gave it to me for graduation." But unh uh . . . Instead, he casually replied, "Nah . . . I'm a garbageman."

And truly, garbaging seems to be a prosperous occupation, full time, part time, any time, as witness the three Cadillacs parked in front of his father's (also a garbageman) Sea Cliff abode.

Another of the most popular part-time aspirations of students currently enrolled in the college is janitorial service. Rates begin at $2.02, and peak at $3.64 per hour, a little less than the $3.56-$4.10 hourly range of the garbageman.

Other nonexecutive but well-paid tasks include warehousing and window washing (see the world from the 36th floor of the Mark Hopkins).

Seasonal jobs such as chain hauling and treetopping at neighboring logging camps (you'll save money here, because there is no place to spend it), and even fish-packing, $3500 for the six-week season, are also popular.

So, George, next time you doubt the might of the pen, whip down to your friendly scavenger representative and ask him, "What the H—?"

Trade in your problems along with your 46' Chevy for your Cadillac, and a new lease on strife. By the time your classmates reach retirement age as executives, you will have been out of the hassle for 70 years.

Campus PanoRAMa

will be resumed next week.

Avant Guardsman!

WHEN one speaks of New York City, skyscrapers and Washington Square beatniks come to his mind; of San Francisco, it is the Golden Gate Bridge and cable cars; of London, London Bridge and beefeaters; of Rome, the Vatican and La Dolce Vita; of Paris, Notre Dame, the Eiffel Tower and . . . love. (We'll merely deal with the tower today.)

Denounced as a monstrosity 74 years ago, the Eiffel Tower is today the best-loved figure on the Paris skyline. It has become the identification tag of the city. Since the second war, the tower has had a new lease of life: last year it welcomed more than 1,800,000 visitors.

A few facts about the tower—even to the Parisians themselves—still remain unknown. For instance, painting the tower costs approximately $150,000, takes 60 steeplejacks four months, and uses 150 brushes and 77,000 pounds of paint. And this occurs once every seven years!

The man behind the tower, Gustave Eiffel, built the then tallest structure in the world in only two years, prefabricating its 18,038 parts at his shop in Levallois, a Paris suburb. Every part later proved to be a perfect fit. Not a single hole had to be rebored to put it together. It was the world's biggest Meccano set.

When the tower officially opened on May 15, 1889, the first story housed an Anglo-American bar, a Flemish bar, a French restaurant and a Russian restaurant. To see the tower, an Italian crossed the Alps by bicycle, two Austrians came from Vienna by wheelbarrow, a Rumanian had himself carried all the way in a sedan chair and a cavalry officer of the Czar spent 30 days in the saddle between Warsaw and Paris.

After the 1889 exhibition, one question arose: what to do with the tower. Early predictions were for military use as the site for a giant heliograph to enable a besieged Paris to communicate with its defenders. Radio aerial and transmitter were then installed.

Requisitioned by the military authorities in 1914, the tower intercepted a German radio message and so enabled the French Army under Joffre to turn the tide at the crucial Battle of the Marne.

Useful though it is, the tower has lost none of its charm for eccentrics. One of the most famous was Pierre Labric, now the "Mayor of the Free Commune of Montmartre," who jolted down the 347 steps from the first story to the ground aboard a bicycle in 1923. Why? Because no one had ever thought of it before!

Less fortunate was an Austrian tailor named Treichelt who killed himself in 1912 when he tried to glide off the first story (186 feet) with the help of homemade wings.

The feat of flying under the tower was accomplished by an American pilot in 1945. That was after the Liberation of Paris and the day a member of the Maquis sneaked up to the top of the tower to hoist a tricolor flag over the heads of the retreating Germans. He had to make the trip on foot because the French Army cut the cables of the elevators in 1940.

The elevators did not come back into use until 1944 when the American Army took over the first story restaurant as a club for GI's, who managed to consume a truckload of champagne a day in their eyrie.

The tower also served eight years (1925-1933) as the world's tallest advertising sign, flashing the seven letters of automobile manufacturer Citroen in electric lights to all Paris. The city of Paris, which owns the tower, now forbids its use for advertising purpose because, "It would without a doubt be a dishonor of Paris."

Harris, Roland Have Plans For Retirement

Two retired naval officers currently serving as engineering instructors here will retire from their professional teaching careers at the college at the end of this semester.

They are Rex Harris, who is associated with the electrical engineering department, and Charles Roland, an instructor in the technical drawing division.

Harris has been here 23 years; he joined the faculty in 1940 when there were just two small and sparsely equipped engineering laboratories.

He accumulated anything he could—by the "beg, borrow or steal" method—and developed the first machine shop and radio lab at the college. He also established mechanical engineering courses.

The present lab, in operation only for the past two years in the Science Hall basement, was designed by Harris.

To the best of his recollection, Harris believes that he is the only instructor in this area who has a professional electrical engineering degree.

As to his plans for the future, Harris would choose either to enter the electronics industry on the Peninsula or join the faculty of a California state college or university.

Under an existing San Francisco law he may not teach at another public two-year college.

Roland, who came here in 1956, describes his teaching responsibilities as a sort of "second career" for him, his first having been a lengthy period of service in the Navy.

His claim to fame while here is an attempt to improve the course he taught, an aim "which should be the goal of any instructor teaching any subject at any school," Roland believes.

He feels that there is an urgent call for qualified instructors, and although admitting his plans are indefinite at present, he did state he is considering a return to the field of education.

Meanwhile, he is looking forward to some fishing this summer.

College Response To Peace Corps Helps Fulfill JFK's Objective

ESTABLISHED by President Kennedy on March 1, 1961, and enacted by Congress on September 22, 1961, the United States Peace Corps has received considerable commendation from foreign nations and has had almost full national support from educators, businessmen and students.

When he launched this program, the President said that it was his wish to have between 500 and 1000 persons in the field by the end of 1961. By the end of 1962 there were 3496 corpsmen working in 38 countries; at the same time 910 more volunteers were training in the United States and Puerto Rico. And it is predicted that this year's number will reach an unprecedented 9000.

According to these figures and to the excellent response from those whom volunteers have helped, the Peace Corps has been a success and has fulfilled the goals set forth by the President.

It was the President's goal to promote international rapport by sending Americans overseas to help interested foreign nations meet their needs for skilled manpower. Another Kennedy goal was to promote a better understanding of Americans on the part of persons overseas.

These goals were reached and maintained by corpsmen working hand-in-hand with local citizens, a task much more effective than the mere allocation of tools, goods or money. Corpsmen from private organizations, colleges and universities, including City College, worked overseas in Nigeria, the Philippines and Colombia.

In Colombia, for exanmple, Jerry McMahon, a City College graduate, and Philip Lopes, from Coalinga Junior College, are currently establishing an agrarian warehouse in the hinterlands of San Joaquin.

Before McMahon began work on the project, he informed the college of the Andean village's dire need for the cooperative warehouse. Immediately the college rallied to the cause, and $484 from the Council of Organizations and the International Relations Club were sent to Colombia. The college's excellent response here is indicative of student understanding and fulfillment of another Kennedy goal: the understanding of other persons by Americans.

Perhaps the main reason for volunteer success abroad is earmarked by corpsmen who do more than is anticipated. For example, volunteers in the Philippines organized a free summer camp for underprivileged children and poor orphans. A farm specialist in Cyprus, who labored assiduously all day showing farmers how to raise pigs, began teaching farmers English at night. In India, volunteers not only showed farmers how to raise chickens, they also began manufacturing chicken feed.

In light of the aforementioned corps' success, students here would do their country and themselves a priceless service by volunteering for Peace Corps duty.

As President Kennedy said, "It will not be easy. None of the men and women will be paid a salary. They will live at the same level as the citizens of the country which they are sent to, doing the same work, eating the same food, speaking the same language . . . I am hopeful that this will be a source of satisfaction to Americans and a contribution to world peace."

Information about joining the Peace Corps is available in the office of the dean of men, S-150.

Informal Commencement Set In Theater May 31

By Sherri Jones

Informal commencement exercises for the Spring 1963 graduating class are now scheduled for 10 to 11:30 a.m. Friday, May 31, in the theater.

Dean Mary Golding, confirming a combined College Hour and 10 o'clock class time for the ceremony, said that students eligible for Associate in Arts degrees will receive cards excusing them from attending any 10 o'clock class so that they can participate in the assembly. Because attendance is mandatory, roll will be taken.

Prospective graduates failing to attend will be counted as absent, she emphasized.

Musical selections by the orchestra and choir, greetings from college President Louis G. Conlan and Sophomore Class President Mike Nevin, and a speech by Joan Jeong will highlight the program.

Seventy-five students are expected to graduate with honors and scholarships. The President's Award Plaque for outstanding service to the college will be presented to the man and woman graduate who have been judged most active in campus affairs.

The Scholastic Cup will go to the graduate with the highest grade point average.

Miss Jeong, business major, was selected to speak at the assembly from among ten students presently boasting a 3.5 grade point average or above.

The other nine are Lorenzo Bagtos, business administration; Ronald Block, electrical engineering; Marie Hino, business; Kay Ilch, dental assisting; Henriette Kelso, nursing; Laurel Lught, letters and science; Wolfgang Rood, hotel and restaurant; Anne Thompson, commercial art, and Jane Treber, dental assisting.

The program will also include fall semester graduates Terry Kandall and Charles Swanson.

Formal commencement exercises, common to the college in preceding semesters, has been canceled because of apparent apathy and lack of participation by students; however, formal commencement programs will be printed, Dean Golding added.

Nursing Program To Graduate 25 This Summer

The college's nurse training department will graduate its first class this summer, according to Ganelle Griffin, head of the department.

The full nurse training program was started in September, 1961.

"The reason why an extensive program was opened here is that six hospitals closed their training programs in California in a period of about seven years. We were asked to open such a program in order to meet community needs," Miss Griffin declared.

Marion McDermott, Norma Carlisle and Miss Griffin were the first instructors in the training curriculum here.

Mary Mattison and Cecile Dawydiak joined the staff in the summer of 1962. Margaret Carter and Viola Martin joined later in the fall.

Forty-four of the 76 units required in the program cover nurse education specifically. The remaining 32 units meet general college requirements.

During the first semester, students work six hours weekly in a local hospital. Nine hours of hospital laboratory work are required for the second semester, 27 hours the last semester and 18 hours for the last summer session.

Students are trained and work as student nurses at Mount Zion, San Francisco General Hospital, Day Care Center and Franklin Hospital.

Fifty-two students are presently enrolled in the nursing program. Twenty-four coeds and one man student are graduating.

"We are specially proud of graduating these students, since it is our first class and the first group that we as a faculty have been associated with," Miss Griffin said.

The following students will graduate:

Carmen Aguirre, Anne Arena, Roy Campbell, Mary Clancy, Mary Beth Clopton, Susan Creek, Judith Crivelli, Patricia Daniele, Joanne Doyle, Martha Estes, Thelma Marie Fort, Carol Fredrick, Donna Fyles;

Christine Glader, Doris Hayes, Violetta Hidalgo, Kathleen Juler, Gene Lakeman, Rosemarie Mayer, Kathleen Stewart Montgomery, Judith Owens, Beverly Ponn, Sarah Rydberg, Patricia Troup and Gloria Worthy.

Bev Pasqualetti and Emmett Smith, photography instructors here, will serve as judges to select Miss Photo Queen, in ceremonies at Sigmund Stern Grove Sunday, May 26.

The photography department will also display works of present students and some of the best photographic efforts of former students at this public festival, Smith said.

The show will also consist of competition displays with black and white prints, color slides, motion pictures and a number of stage acts of a photographic nature.

"These displays are very popular among amateur and professional photographers throughout the Bay Area," Smith added.

The queen selected at this Photo Day will represent the city of San Francisco in the Miss Universe contest to be held later this year at Miami Beach, Florida.

"Each camera club participating in the ceremonies will be represented by a booth decorated to illustrate a particular theme and to provide a setting in which the Miss Photo Queen candidates may pose," Smith disclosed.

Visiting cameramen will also have an opportunity to shoot interesting pictures, he added.

FOUR WINNERS of this semester's Scottish Rite Foundation scholarships are, from left, Peter Barnard, Charles Miller, David Alindugan and Alan Levy. Four Students Win $170 Scottish Rite Scholarships

By Judy Carlson

Four men students in their freshman semester here have each been awarded $170 scholarships from the Scottish Rite Foundation of California, Dean of Women Mary Golding announced last week.

David Alindugan, Peter Barnard, Alan Levy and Charles Miller are the four recipients of the grants.

Alindugan is a graduate of Balboa High School and is majoring in electrical engineering. He plans to transfer to the University of California to earn his bachelor's degree.

Barnard, a Lowell graduate, has maintained a 3.5 grade point average here. Upon graduation, he will also enter UC to study bio-chemistry.

Levy, a graduate of Mission High, is planning a career as a teacher. In his National Merit Scholarship test he placed in the 99th percentile, and according to his sponsor, "He has a good mind and the ability to work well with people."

Miller, a Washington High graduate, is majoring in mathematics and plans to pursue this field later. He has maintained A's and B's in math throughout his schooling.

These four scholars, along with many others, applied for the scholarships and were interviewed by a faculty committee composed of Dean Golding, Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman, counselor Mary Perry and instructors Elmer Patterson, Verrel Weber and Roy Burkhead.

Candidates for the grant were chosen on the basis of their grade point average, ambition, need and activities participated in during both high school and college.

Also, each candidate must be a graduate of a San Francisco public high school.

"The Scottish Rite Foundation," Dean Golding explained, "gives these scholarships each semester to graduates of San Francisco high schools to encourage them to transfer to a four-year institution.

"This foundation has high regard for City College and extends the aid of a scholarship to help students first to come to a two-year college and then to enter a four-year institution," she added.

Last semester's winners of Scottish Rite scholarships were Lawrence Attinger, Robert Bachman and Alan Poletti. All three were engineering majors.

Karate Exhibition Tops AMS Sports Night

Associated Men Students will host their semiannual sports night from 7 to 10 p.m. Wednesday, May 22, in the men's gymnasium, John Thellen, AMS president, announced yesterday.

The program will include boxing tournaments under the direction of coach Roy Diederichsen, and the intramural basketball championship game. The highlight of the evening will be a Karate demonstration, conducted by the Kenpo Karate school.

Free cokes, doughnuts and cigarettes will be served. "Though I cordially invite women students to attend, the evening's program is designed specifically as entertainment for men," Thellen said.

Realtors Slate Annual Confab Here Friday

Compiled by Francine Dubonnet

Grover Cleveland, general sales manager of Saxe Realty, will speak at the Real Estate and Insurance Club's annual business conference during College Hour Friday in C-202. Saul Samuels, club president, announced.

A guest speaker from the Fireman's Fund Insurance Company will also discuss insurance at this conference.

Nomination and election of new club officers is planned for Friday, May 31. On this date awards will be presented to the most valuable man and woman in the club, Samuels stated.

• People To People, "a movie concerning Project Meals to Millions, proceeds from which aid those in need overseas," will be shown to Newman Club members and other students during College Hour Friday, Burt Lauray, club president, said last week.

On May 11 the club held a spaghetti dinner at St. Emydius Parish Hall, which was followed by a hayride in Pacifica.

• The Collegiate Christian Fellowship will hold its nomination and election meeting during College Hour Friday in C-201.

Horticulture Students Visit Wedding Show

Ornamental horticulture students are scheduled to visit this year's national wedding show, sponsored by the Florist Telegraph Delivery Service, this Sunday at the Edgewater Hotel in Oakland, according to Maryhope Jacks, ornamental horticulture instructor.

The wedding displays represent the florist's viewpoint of flower arrangements, and its participants are flower shop owners from all over the country, Mrs. Jacks said.

The display is open only to wholesale and retail florists and the 22 students of the college's ornamental horticulture class, the only one in the Bay Area.

Blue Book Sales Hit 20,000 During Midterms, Finals

Sale of blue books in the Rampurium at five cents each reaches approximately 20,000 copies during midterms and finals each semester, and through past semesters is in ratio to the number of students attending here, Dick Main, manager of the Associated Student bookstore, stated today.

Blue books, Main said, are used mainly for test essays in English and history and for experimental data in chemistry and physics.

When used for objective matter, students are required to obtain sales receipts for from three to five copies. The books are given to the instructors to be numbered and distributed in class when tests are taken, to prevent outside work being submitted, Main explained.

Regular books are sold at the publisher's established prices. A 50 per cent allowance is made on current books returned. "Current" applies to books having no later edition and a book that will be used the following semester.

Instructors are requested to list dropped books by March to enable a return privilege from the publisher of all new books in stock.

For students dropping a course, there is a two-week grace period wherein a full refund is made if the book is in good condition. However, Main stressed, a receipt, price sticker and a drop slip must be presented to prove ownership and to protect students who have had books stolen.

Main pointed ont that 90 per cent of the profit from sales is returned to the AS fund for special campus activities.

The Ramporium, near Smith Hall, has been in its present location since 1958 when it was moved from the cafeteria where it had temporary quarters.

Regular personnel includes two full-time assistants and a mimeograph operator, Main stated, but an additional 12 part-time employees are required for the rush period, which highlights the beginning and end of each semester.

Government Loans Provide Funds For Qualified Students

Enacted in 1959, the National Defense Education Loan provides for the continued education of undergraduate and graduate students of college level by providing funds which can be obtained on a loan basis.

City College students may obtain these funds if they meet the proper qualifications.

Information can be obtained from counselor Mary Perry in S-143.

The maximum which may be borrowed is $5000 for a complete course of study. The total amount which may be borrowed per year is $1000. Students here receive amounts determined by the total amount of funds as related to the number of students applying.

Students borrowing loan funds must begin repayment of the loan one year after they stop being full-time students. A minimum of 12 units is required to be considered a full-time student.

Special consideration will be given students in the teaching field, Miss Perry said. Others receiving special consideration will be those who are enrolled in science, mathematics and engineering. Students receiving special consideration are required to maintain a good grade point average.

It is also required that all borrowers be United States nationals, Miss Perry said. Also to be noted is that students under 21 must have the approval of a guardian to obtain a loan.

A charge of 3 per cent interest will be made with the repayment of the loan. Teachers need repay only 50 per cent of the borrowed sum if they meet certain conditions.

Council Members Ask 'Why' In Discussing Police Budget

By Patty Smith

Fireworks flared at Student Council last week when the controversial budget requested by the Campus Police again came up for discussion, and was finally postponed indefinitely.

Council member Phil Robbins reopened the discussion on the disputed budget and the arguments flew back and forth, much in the manner of a fast moving tennis match.

Joel Cohen asked Police Chief Tom Cain why they needed .38 calibre Remington wad-cutter ammunition, and Cain replied that it was required for class.

Phyllis Webb, finance chairman, asked what was meant by the provision for "shooting supplies" in the budget, and Cain answered her by saying, "Guns have to be cleaned and repaired or else they become dangerous, and I am sure that no one wants the guns to blow up in our faces."

Cohen brought the discussion back to the topic of the wad-cutters, stating that it was his impression that this item was "an unnecessary luxury" and he could not see why the Campus Police needed it.

Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor, advised Cohen that the ammunition was "needed in matches to win."

The arguments about ammunition continued back and forth with some suggesting that the members of the pistol team buy their own ammunition for classes and the matches.

Associated Student President Bill Silver noted that he realized that the Campus Police had cut their budget down to the bare minimum but he questioned whether council could afford to allocate so much money.

Cain stated that he doubted whether council would be able to come to a decision over the budget in one week, three weeks, or a year. So Rich Thomas moved to table the motion indefinitely and this motion was passed.

Council then proceeded to other budgets, and after a small controversy over the cost of productions, allocated $4000 to the drama department.

Council smoothly passed over the next five budgets, allocating $333.60 to the Council of Organizations, $931.50 to the Recreation Association, $430 to the RA Fencing Club, $55.50 to the Men's Glee, and $1920 to the varsity basketball team.

Miss Webb, who had previously warned council that they were lagging behind in passing the budgets, closed the meeting by thanking them for increasing their pace.

A Joke--Netters Set Mark In NorCal Rout

Nold Throws 1-Hitter, Fans 17, But Loses To Foothill In Disastrous Ninth, 3-0

Rich Nold, his pitching at an all-time best and his luck at an all-time worst, threw eight no-hit innings, struck out 17 but then lost everything in a disastrous ninth at Balboa in a crucial Golden Gate Conference baseball game against Foothill May 7.

Foothill scored three times after one was down in the ninth on two errors, a hit batter and a double by Matt Miholovich to drop the Rams into a first place deadlock and Nold to his second defeat against five wins.

Nold struck out the first six batters he faced, and retired 13 in a row before surrendering a walk with one down in the fourth.

San Francisco played Foothill for the GGC title last Monday. The results will appear next Wednesday.

Foothill's Ron Miller fanned 11 Rams en route to a five-hit shuout. He was in considerable trouble on more than one occasion, but pulled out of it. The Rams left six men on base.

In the first, Walt Williams opened with a single and went to second on Joe Villancenzio's subsequent single. Buf Miller got the next three to end the frame.

The Rams loaded the bases in the ninth on two walks and a Pete Giovanola single, but Miller got Butch Bussanick to fly to center to end the contest.

FOOTHILL .....000 000 003—3 1 2
CCSF .....000 000 000—0 5 1

Ron Bringuel kept the Rams in title contention last Saturday by going nine innings and defeating Contra Costa, 7-3. The Rams trailed, 2-1, going into the fourth, but Villancenzio doubled in three runs and the San Franciscans never lost the advantage from there on.

The college committed seven errors.

Bringuel, working hard for his third conference victory, got an extra three runs in the fifth, and although giving up a single tally in the eighth, he was never in serious tribulation. Bringuel beat Diablo Valley twice for his other wins.

He left 12 Comets stranded on the base paths.

Contra Costa .....000 200 010—3 7 7
CCSF .....001 330 000—7 7 5

In non-conference games last Thursday, Vallejo, the Coast Conference champ, topped the Rams, 7-6. Williams homered in the losing effort.

Clubbers Capture Seventh Place At Golden Gate Confab

Crippled by ineligibility, the college finished seventh in the Golden Gate Conference golf championships at Richmond Country Club May 6, trailing 72 strokes out of first place.

Favored College of San Mateo won both the individual and team championship on the 36-hole course. With a team total of 752 the Bulldogs were followed by Contra Costa 764, Foothill 778, Diablo Valley 798, Chabot 818, San Jose 821, San Francisco 824 and Oakland 843.

Dick Lotz, who is current California state amateur champion and number one man for the Bulldogs last year, had to settle for runnerup honors, behind Tom Brigham, in the individual championship rankings.

Brigham, the individual medalist, shot a 144, while Lotz fired a 147 in the Bulldogs' 1-2 finish. Oakland's Duane Garman copped third place in the individual ranking by firing a 148.

Led by Charles Cox, who placed fourth in the individual standings by firing a fine 149, the Comets of Contra Costa hopped into second place in the team standings.

Foothill—College, which had tied with San Mateo for the conference round robin championship with a 6-1 record while losing only to the Rams and had put an end to the Bulldogs' 65 golf match winning streak, could only garner third place in the team standings.

Rich Orme and Dennis Drucker paced the Rams by firing 157 and 161, respectively, as the team finished in seventh position. Unfortunately, none of the Rams qualified for the state meet. San Mateo should find the going rough against Southern California competition at the state meet at Los Angeles Friday.

In the final conference outing of the season, the Rams lost to the Diablo Valley Vikings, 23½-6½, as Drucker fired a respectable 76.

Dance Groups Sponsor Symposium May 18

Recreation Association folk and modern dance groups will sponsor a symposium by three master instructors Saturday, May 18, on campus.

The instructors are Inga Weiss Lopnis from Stanford, who will give the modern dance lesson; Tranto Franke-Eggeling, San Francisco State instructor in gymnastics, and the director of the International Dance Theater Madelynne Greene, who will give a folk dance lesson.

Students from Bay Area high schools and two-year colleges have been invited to participate in the three master lessons.

RA folk dancers will attend a folk dance festival at Stanford Sunday. The festival is Stanford sponsored.

An electrical foil team competition took place, sponsored by the Amateur Fencing League of America at Pannonia Athletic Club.

College Enters 7 Trackmen In Fresno West Coast Relays

Seven men will represent the college at the upcoming West Coast Relays Saturday in Fresno.

Scheduled to participate are Bob Hector, a 14.7 seconds high hurdler; Lon Brantley, a broad jumper who has leaped 24-1 (still waiting for that 25 jump); Gene Plotkin, a distance runner (two miles in 9:38.0), who will run the 5000-meter event; Tom Gardner, who runs the 100-yard dash, best time 9.8 seconds, and the 880-relay team, which has posted 1:28.3 minute best mark and is composed of Gardner, Brantley, Claude Sbipp and Leo Washington.

Pat Lewis, who will throw the discus and heave the shot-put, with best marks of 153 and 50 feet, will enter.

On May 3, coach Lou Vasquez' squad managed a fourth place finish in the Golden Gate Conference with 55 points behind San Mateo 119½, Foothill 77 and Contra Costa 62.

Hector, the hurdler, was the Rams' lone first-placer. Brantley took a second, Gardner a fourth, Plotkin a second in the mile and a third in the two mile, and Pat Lewis took thirds in both discus and shot-put events, to complete the scoring.

Vasquez says that Brantley and Hector are the men to watch.

Burkhead Cites Gains Of Past Swimming Season

"Although this was my smallest swim team ever, it would have to rank as the best small team I've ever coached." Coach Roy Burkhead used these terms to describe his "seven dwarfs" at the end of a short but potent season.

Burkhead said he was pleased with the Rams' third place finish in the conference meet and with the balance the new Golden Gate Conference turned out.

Bright spots this year were Herm Fruchtenicht's 12th place in the 200 breast at the state meet and the acquisition of a diver in Dave Stone.

Ed Montague May Speak At Block SF Awards

A guest speaker for the May 27 Block SF awards banquet has not been named, but San Francisco Giant scout Ed Montague has been considered, Lou Vasquez, society sponsor, said today.

Presentation of block letters, trophies and special awards will be made to the spring sports athletes.

Rams' 17 Points Break Record; Siska Triumphs

AMERICAN RIVER (Saturday, May 11) — With battling Bob Siska finally whipping Foothill's top seeded Horst Ritter, the Rams slaughtered all comers to capture the Northern California tennis championship today.

Placing 1-2 in doubles and five in the top eight of singles, the Rams ran up a record-breaking 17 points, six more than the rest of Northern California combined.

Foothill was second with five, San Mateo had 2, American River 2, College of the Sequoias 1 and Santa Rosa 1.

The Rams will be mild favorites to capture their second straight State crown Friday and Saturday at Santa Rosa.

The quarterfinals and semifinals of the singles became so cluttered with San Franciscans that they began knocking each other off.

Siska, who had suffered his only two league defeats this year to Ritter, got into the finals when Ram Rich Anderson defaulted to Ritter and Ram Gordon Miller defaulted to Siska in the semis.

Siska, the ex-junior Davis Cupper, wasted no time, administering a quick 6-3, 6-2 shellacking to the German-born Ritter to claim his second consecutive NorCal singles title.

The two San Francisco doubles teams—Siska and Ed Jilka, Miller and Anderson—took a share of the title by sweeping through three tandems each to reach the finals.

Jack Kern, S.F.'s No. 5 man, and Bob Murio, No. 2, fell in the singles quarterfinals, Murio to Ritter, 6-3, 6-2, and Kern to teammate Miller 3-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Anderson defeated San Mateo's No. 2 Bill Davis, 6-2, 6-3, and Siska eased past American River's Rick Underwood, 6-1.

SINGLES (First Round)—Bob Murio, CCSF, d. Fletcher Greninger, Santa Rosa, 8-6. Rich Anderson, CCSF, d. John Reed, San Mateo, 7-5, 6-0. Jack Kern, CCSF, d. Mike Alcala, Modesto, 6-1, 6-0. Gordon Miller CCSF, d. Sal Javier, Cabrillo, 6-4, 7-5. Bob Siska, CCSF, d. Keith Madriago, Sacramento, 6-1, 6-1.

DOUBLES (First Round) — Siska-Jilka, CCSF, d. Houston-Parrish, Monterey, 6-1, 6-0. Anderson-Miller, CCSF, d. Lange-Lisko, Contra Costa, 15-13, 6-4. (Quarterfinals)—Siska-Jilka d. Underwood-Young, 6-2, 6-3. Anderson-Miller d. Paull-Greninger, 6-2, 8-7. (Semifinals) — Siska-Jilka d. Vossbrinch-Hawkes, Foothill, 6-2, 6-1. Anderson-Miller d. Ritter-Moss, default. (Final)—Siska-Jilka vs. Anderson-Miller, not played.

Newman Club Rips Hotel & Restaurant —Now The Wait

The Newman Club maintained its chance of a title deadlock with a 49-21 rout over the Hotel & Restaurant last Wednesday in the independent league section of the Associated Men Student basketball league.

With the help of Tom Rice's 24 points, the Newman Club, now 7-1, piled up a big lead early and coasted through the second half to stay in competition with the undefeated Divine Ones.

The Divine Ones can cinch the title by beating the last place Hawaiian Bla's (1-5) at 7:15 o'clock tonight in the men's gymnasium in the last game of the season.

In the fraternity loop, Alpha Phi Epsilon (4-0) needs a win over last place Beta Tau (0-4) to win the title.

The two league winners will clash for the overall crown in the semi-annual sports night, May 22, in the men's gymnasium.

The eighth place Hawaiian Bla's won by forfeit over the Red Sox.

In the fraternity action, Zeta Phi Sigma lost to Alpha Phi Epsilon, 48-26.

There was no decision in the Gamma Phi Ypsilon vs. Alpha Sigma Delta contest. Neither team showed.

America Has Them— But Nothing Like This

RAMBLINGS

By Dave Kleinberg

Soccer Fans Stage Wild Italian Riots

IN OUR YEARS of sports attendance and coverage, we've witnessed some interesting riots.

We can recall watching the Philadelphia Eagles and the San Francisco 49ers battling on the floor of Kezar Stadium in 1953 and 1959. We can remember seeing umpire Mel Steiner being chased by angry Seal fans after a Pacific Coast League baseball game in 1957.

We've been at countless St. Ignatius-Sacred Heart basketball games that have broken into near full-scale riots, and watched a pretty good battle up at Foothill last year when Foothill fans swarmed in on a Ram-Owl altercation on the football surface.

But probably nothing in America can compare to the story out of Italy, which we quote from the April 30 New York Times.

"The Sunday soccer riots left one dead, 89 injured and two big stadiums wrecked. Of more than 100 arrested at Naples and Salerno, nearly half still were held in jail for continued questioning.

"At least three of the injured, two of them policemen, were in critical condition. More than 20 still were in hospitals. Among the injured were Naples' Argentine coach, Bruno Pasaola, and five Modena players.

"Both games which ended in rioting were crucial with the Italian soccer season only three games from its end.

"At Naples, the home team was playing Modena in a bitter attempt to keep Napoli from sliding into the B League next season. Modena led, 2-0, when thousands of fans tore up benches, smashed down protective screens and swarmed onto the field attacking the referee and Modena players.

"More than half of the 32 injured were police. One police car was overturned.

"At Salerno the local team battled Potenza. Fans thought their team should have received a penalty kick.

"Within moments, thousands of screaming, stone hurling fans poured onto the field. Team members and the officials fled to the dressing rooms. Police called for reinforcements.

"When the fighting died down, one police car had been set afire, 57 persons were injured, including a dozen policemen and one fan was shot dead. At first there were reports he had been killed by shots which the rioters were reported to have fired into the air.

"Police said later they ordered a medical examination to determine whether he died of an injury to his forehead or whether he had dropped dead from a heart attack.

"Rome's biggest sports paper, Corriere Dello Sport, carried a front page banner line 'Even Death!' Alongside was a huge black blot of ink with letters in white, 'Black Sunday.'"

That was the start of it. The Vatican paper, L'Osservatore Romano, called it a throwback to the days of the pagan gladiators. They said the outbursts were savage, like the "bloody games" of the ancient Romans.

They wrote, "When we read in ancient chronicles about the bloody fights among different gladiatorial factions, we find it hard to understand that reasonable men were capable of such excesses.

"And now episdoes not much different give us an image of the customs of present times."

AS Polls Open Until 2 p.m. For Final Balloting Today

Contreras, Theilen And Thomas In Tight Race; All Students May Vote

Top Candidates Agree Improvement Needed —They Differ On How

By Herm Kligerman

Students have until 2 p.m. today to cast ballots in the election to choose next semester's Associated Student officers.

Election Commissioner Tony Taormina emphasized that an AS card is not necessary to vote. "Students need only show their current registration card," he said.

Voting machines are situated at the silver pole in Science Hall, at the entrance to the library and at the entrance to the fountain section of Smith Hall.

Competing for the fall semester presidency are Vince Contreras, John Theilen and Rich Thomas. The two vice presidential candidates are Imogene Walker and Phyllis Webb.

The next three AS positions are unopposed and, according to Taormina, the candidate will be elected if he receives a majority of the votes cast in the election.

Bob Roddick is Associated Men Student presidential hopeful, Rosie Fang is the candidate for Associated Student president and Steve Christ is the lone candidate for Sophomore Class president.

Contesting the office of Freshman Class president are Gary Ettin and Mike McCambridge.

Ten students are in contention for the seven sophomore seats on Student Council. They are Cecil Reichert, Tony Vigil, Janet Sisk, Clemmie Thompson, Carol Wong, Marty Cohen, Mike Asher, Joel Cohen, Alan Poletti and Art Gershman.

Only seven candidates are in the running for the seven freshman seats, and they will be elected to these posts if they, too, receive a majority of the votes cast in the election. The aspirants here are Gerald Whelan, Lambert Din, Henry Cassel, Sandy Castelli, Pat Walsh, Lon Galliani and Robert Aviani.

Formal announcement of fall semester AS officers will come tomorrow night in Smith Hall during the semiannual Student Council dinner. The new president and vice president will be officially installed at this time.

Associated Student Presidential candidates Vince Contreras, John Theilen and Rich Thomas agreed in an interview last week that the college's student government has not been operating at full potential.

Each has his solution.

Contreras contends that for a college-level group, Student Council is not proceeding in the best manner possible. "Members should use parliamentary law more at meetings and leave informal discussions for outside the meeting room," he stated.

"Most improvement is needed in the scheduling of activities. An earlier start should be made and a calendar of events for the entire college year should be publicly released at the beginning of each semester," Contreras added.

"Futhermore, activities should be planned to appeal to the majority of students."

Theilen agrees that council isn't operating at its full potential but stated there is too much formality at meetings.

"If we had open meetings, I think more could be accomplished, and more students would participate in student government," he remarked. Theilen advised less parliamentary law in certain areas, but said when budget requests and similar business is being transacted, parliamentary law should definitely be enacted.

He also noted that activity planning is too centralized in the AS office, and should be spread throughout the campus to encourage greater student participation.

Thomas cites a poor student government system in the past as the main reason for the strong sense of apathy now. "In preceding semesters, students were restricted because of the requirement of having an AS card," Thomas noted.

"This will not be the case if I'm (Continued on Page 3, Column 1)

AMS Officers Invite All To Attend Sports Night

All students—including coeds—are invited to attend tonight's Associated Men Student semiannual sports night from 7:15 to 10:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

AMS officers emphasized the affair is primarily for men students, but coeds should find the program an enjoyable one.

A Karate demonstration by the Kenpo School, 1422 Ocean avenue, is slated to be the highlight of the evening.

Shakespeare's King John Opens Here On Friday

King John, one of the most lavish drama productions since the 1961 opening of the college theater, will be presented for the first time Friday and will run through Saturday, June 1, according to Robert Lasley, assistant director.

Ken Bachtold will play the lead role in this the final drama production of the season. In supporting roles are Sandra Lundwall and Tom Purvis. This particular production will offer several innovations to college audiences here, among them scene and set changes made in full view of the audience.

The role of the bastard son, Philip of Falconridge, will be played by Tom Purvis, and it is considered by many Shakespearean students to be one of his most remarkable character creations, particularly in the historical dramas.

A sidelight to the play is that two of the minor characters, Cardinal Pandulph, a papal legate, and Hurbert de Burgh, a king's henchman, are played by brothers Jim and Mike Morgan. The characters represent opposite forces in the play, in a "civil war" type situation.

The college library is cooperating with the drama department by displaying a collection of photographs of the cast in full costume, as well as a collection of books pertaining to the medieval era. In addition to the books and pictures, several posters are also on display.

At a later date, the library hopes to obtain a knight's helmet to add to the exhibit, which has been timed to coincide with the opening of the play.

Michael Griffin, director of the production, has been stricken with an undisclosed illness and may be unable to continue directing the play.

Lasley, who is assistant director and who had been scheduled to fill several minor roles in the play, has withdrawn so that he can do "an adequate job of directing."

Admission to the play will be by AS card or $1 general admission. Curtain will be at 8 p.m., Lasley emphasized.

Dinner To Honor Student Council Leaders Tomorrow

Two traditional service awards are to be presented at the semiannual Student Council dinner to be held from 5:45 to 10 p.m. tomorrow in Smith Hall, according to Sue Fitzpatrick, vice president of the Associated Students and chairman of the dinner arrangements.

The newly elected AS president and vice president will also be installed in office, and the service award will be given to the student and faculty member, respectively, who have given the most service to the AS.

Guest speaker at the dinner will be Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, Miss Fitzpatrick said.

Awards, in the form of Ram's head pins, will also be given to members of Student Council and the President's Cabinet, she added.

Gavels will be presented to outgoing AS President Bill Silver and Vice President Fitzpatrick.

Approximately 100 are expected to attend the dinner.

Entertainment will be provided by student Lynn Goodrich, who will sing a medley. Dress for the affair is suits for men and cocktail dresses for the women, and price for the dinner is 75 cents for AS and council members, and $3.25 for others.

Figuring The Odds

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES Vince Contreras, John Theilen and Rich Thomas (from left) peruse the issues. Contreras maintains that improvement is needed in the scheduling of campus activities. Theilen says a less formal Student Council would have mass appeal. And Thomas campaigns for equal rights.—Guardsman photo by Ron Turner.

College Orchestra To Present Concert In Theater Friday

As a prelude to their annual spring concert, the college orchestra and concert band will present an instrumental concert during College Hour Friday, according to Meyer M. Cahn, orchestra and band director.

The major concert is scheduled for 8 p.m. next Tuesday, and both performances will be given in the little theater. There will be no admission charge, Cahn said.

The orchestra will perform Sea Songs by Ralph Vaughan Williams, and Symphony No. 5 in B flat by Franz Schubert.

The band's program includes Brahms' Academic Festival Overture and Schubert's and Godard's Adago Pathetique, Opus 128, No. 3. The college wind quintet will perform Mozart's Divertimento No. 9, K. 240.

Members of the college wind quintet are Michael Megas on the flute, clarinet players David Cohen and Carlo Lindsey, bassoon player Catherine Samudi Tracy and Donald Lyon on the French horn.

Invitations to the concerts, Cahn said, have been sent to many high school and junior high school instrumental directors.

"The concert to be presented on May 28 will exceed in length the one to be given on May 24, because of the College Hour time element of 40 minutes involved," Cahn stated.

Turnout, Not Constitution, Assures Good Government

ELECTION COMMISSIONER Tony Taormina, in a recent clandestine parley with a high-ranking student leader, said that he virtually planned to rig the May 10 special election, designed to give voting franchise to all students. Yet, beneath this veneer of corruption, he had every intention of conducting an honest election —and he did.

In retrospect, most City College elections have been disgraceful fiascos because of poor student participation. Obviously, aware of that, Taormina was determined not to let it happen again. Thus he planned the following:

Prior to the nominating convention, he plotted to disseminate the news that he would halt all voting when a two-thirds majority had been reached. Facilitating his scheme, the Associated Student constitution stipulates that the Election Commissioner has the power to stop voting when a two-thirds majority has been recorded.

The commissioner's purpose in devising the false rumor was to spark life into the dreary, blase attitude of nonvoters. He contrived to incite such a state of righteous indignation among students that they would parade truculently off to the nominating convention, name numerous candidates, then march to the polls and vote for their man.

Instead, what happened? A mere 33 individuals attended the convention; just 18 students were nominated for 20 offices. Only 256 persons voted at the special election. Taormina's plot failed because he devised it too late. And before he could create the rumor, the convention just began.

The main point in question here is not the commissioner's plan per se; the real issue is this brilliant example of what can happen to a disinterested student population or even to a distinterested nation.

For all intent and purpose, Taormina could have rigged the special election; he can rig today's election, and future elections can be rigged. What can prevent this? Certainly not constitutional stipulations and amendments. Only you can prevent this. Only the people, the voters, can insure fair, effective, representative government.

Consider the current Birmingham crisis, for example. Theoretically, the United States Constitution should insure against this tragic insurrection. Yet the problem can only be solved by the people, not by politicians or the constitution.

Similarly, student government problems can be solved only by students and not by administrators, faculty or the constitution. The administration and faculty do their work well; the college is ranked high among academic circles. Now, it's about time that students show some initiative, take command of their affairs, display the courage of their convictions and vote.

Can You Reach Class In Time With No 10-Minute Bells?

By Barbara Snell

Penny Nestor, freshman:

Bells are for high school. College students should be able to get to class on time on their own. Carillons would be more pleasant to hear than bells. They will also give the college a more collegiate note. As it is now, bells sound like high school.

Gerald J. Whelan, freshman:

I like the way the present bell system works. I think the idea of the second bell is helpful, because I always have a cigarette before class, and when that last bell rings I know it's time to go. However, the present bells are bad on headaches.

PENNY NESTOR

"Bells are for high schools . . . carillons will be more pleasant to hear than bells."

Mitzi Meilach, sophomore:

I don't depend on the bell system now, and I don't suppose I'll count on the carilion system next fall. Occasionally the bell doesn't ring or can't be heard; probably the same thing will happen with the carillon system. I think someone should eliminate bells and buy watches for everyone.

Bill Kern, sophomore:

Yes, I feel I will be able to make it to my classes with the new carillon system. The time alloted between classes will be the same, so it won't make any difference to me. By the time the "ten-after bell" rings now, I'm usually in my class, ready for work.

Maggie Johnson, freshman:

I don't think I'll like the new system. It will probably make a lot more students late for class. Getting to classes now, before the final bell, presents a problem to a lot of persons. Without that second bell, you could either be early or late.

William Langell, freshman:

I don't think the difference in the bell system will make anyone late to class. By the time you're in college, you should be able to judge when ten minutes are up. Besides, when the bell does ring you should already be in class. But, I believe the college could find a better way to spend its money.

Gary Mitchell, sophomore:

I don't believe that there will be much of a difference with the new carillon system. However, I would like to hear the final bell so that I'll know for sure whether I'm late or not. It's hard to judge 10 minutes time when you have something important to do.

Fay Yee, sophomore:

I think the hourly carillon is a very good idea, because I feel students in college are old enough to know what time it is and how long it will take them to get to class on time. The new carillons will also make the college seem a little more collegiate.

King John Painting

Gonzalez' Creation In Oil Done 'Most Of All For Fun'

The striking oil painting of Ken Bachtold, who carries the lead role in the forthcoming production here of Shakespeare's King John, and which is featured in the main floor showcase of Science Hall, was painted by Al Gonzalez.

Gonzalez, whose full name is Alonzo Daniel Dominic Gonzalez-Prado, is in his fourth semester—three of which have been spent working with the drama department. Gonzalez has also had experience in little theater groups throughout the city and has worked extensively with the Actors' Workshop.

Although Gonzalez started as an English major, he soon left that field because he felt that "drama presents more of an outlet for my energy." He has prepared the props for the present King John production and designed the men's costumes.

Before King John, he designed sets for Dear Brutus, The Potting Shed, and Joan Of Lorraine. For professional little theaters, Gonzalez has created sets and costumes for Dumb Waiter and Volpone, both of which were Actors' Workshop productions.

The oil painting of Bachtold as John, recognized as a remarkable likeness, was accomplished in less than two days, according to Gonzalez. "I did it because I thought it would give an added touch to the show and would call more attention to the production. Most of all I did it for fun."

Gonzalez, as well as the rest of the cast and crew, have worked continuously, eight hours a day for the past two months to get the play ready for Friday's opening night.

In his "spare time," Gonzalez plays the Flamenco guitar, paints, plays the lute and after he has crammed all of this into his crowded schedule, he has still found time for extensive research pertaining to the costumes he has designed.

Relative to the King John production, Gonzalez commented, "I feel that this will be the best production of the season. Everyone involved in the play is enthusiastic, and it should really be a hit."

PAINTER - actor - designer - musician Al Gonzalez painted this oil of King John, which is now on display in a showcase in Science Hall. Ken Bachtold is the actor portraying the King, and Al Gonzalez appears as the Earl of Pembroke.

Avant Guardsman!

MANY REASONS have been put forward to account for Napoleon's fame, apart from those put forward by Napoleon himself. Historians, politicians, novelists and film directors never seem tired of airing their theories about the small corporal.

But the point is, which theory takes into account the importance of the Emperor's hat?

Napoleon's genius showed itself in an astonishing variety of ways. It was apparent not only in war and in diplomacy, but also in the art of good government, in his judgment of men and still more in his judgment of moments. Above all, it was shown in his choice of a hat.

Many famous men have been distinguished by slight idiosyncrasies of appearance. Some, like Alma-Tadema, for instance, whose appearance was in itself unique, have been distinguished for little else. Both Solomon and Louis XIV were known for the glory of their apparel, hence the "Roi Soleil" nickname.

Charlemagne was renowned for the length of his beard. It was said that he could kneel on it, though it is not recorded why this was necessary.

The Black Prince was famed for his funereal armour; Disraeli for his waistcoats; Gladstone, not only for his collars, but also for his bags; no one knew quite what it was that Clemencean wore for a hat, but it will live in the annals of history; Lloyd George had his hair bobbed, and Cromwell had warts.

In the museum at Boulogne there used to be a hat that was treasured as a genuine Napoleonic relic. It was so big that certainly there was room for at least two under the saucepan-like covering. Yet there is no record that the Emperor even suffered—except perhaps in a metaphorical sense—from a swollen head. (This can also be seen in today's Charles de Gaulle.)

So what went on inside that part of the hat that was not filled by the head? Was it stuffed with dispatches from the battlefields? Old newspapers? Did it contain a secret drawer for Josephine's love letters? Or was there a flask of cognac for sudden emergencies?

Napoleon's consciousness of his appearance was not merely a sign of vanity. His cultivation of the picturesque was not simply to gratify a whim. Like most successful men of blood and iron, with the possible exception of Bismarck, whose personality could have charmed only another walrus, Napoleon knew that to appeal to the people you must first appeal to their imagination.

In the matter of dress some men are a law unto themselves, and Napoleon's sartorial sense was always unorthodox.

The uniform of the First Consul was slightly bizarre, though not lacking in chic. The coronation robes, too, were original in design. By dressing to please oneself, whether by imitating the fastidiousness of Brummell or the knickerbockery of Bernard Shaw, a man's clothes become so much a part of his personality that it is difficult to imagine him in any other sort of garb.

Napoleon created for himself an outfit which is impossible to imagine anyone else wearing. So, who but he could have worn that hat? Even Hitler, who seemed to fancy some affinity with the Emperor, stuck to his own ill-designed get-up.

It was lucky for the English that in Winston Churchill they had a leader who knew from experience the parts that a hat may play in history.

'Bonnie Blue Bells' Echo In Cloud Hall

Custodian Singer Cuts Record On Own Label

If you should hear singing echoing down the corridors of Cloud Hall on your way to class, don't be too surprised . . . it's probably maintenance man Andrew Sneedon, who recently cut a record of Scottish folk songs under his own label.

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, Sneedon came to this country as a boy in 1928.

After settling in San Francisco, Sneedon majored in music at Polytechnic High School and also took private lessons. Upon graduation, he went to Berkeley to continue his private study.

Sneedon has sung professionally for many years at banquets, weddings and anniversaries. From 1947 to 1957 he sang with the San Francisco Pacific and Cosmopolitan Opera Companies.

As for the record business, Sneedon admitted that "it-is all too ghastly true" that he had cut a record, and explained that the idea came from relatives, friends and others.

Sneedon made his original tape of the folk songs six weeks ago. After editing, the master record was cut and the copies made. The 12-inch LP has Scottish highland melodies and two Irish folk songs.

Sneedon's original intention was to make only 200 copies for himself, relatives and friends, but interest in his record has been so great that there is a possibility he will sell his rights to a commercial record company.

Cutting a record certainly doesn't happen every day, but Sneedon remarked that his accomplishment is being pushed into a corner for the time being because of two more important events in the family. Sandra, his younger daughter, has received an outstanding student award at Balboa High School and Janet, his elder daughter, is planning a May 26 wedding.

To top it off, Sneedon is scheduled to sing at his own daughter's wedding.

Skeleton Shortage At College—Closet Search Is Under Way

BULLETIN

Science instructor Martha Scott announced Monday that a skeleton is missing from the biology laboratory. The skeleton was last seen Friday afternoon.

During World War II, the skeleton supply route in France was virtually demolished, and Clay Adams of New York, who supplies the college with its best skeletons, turned to India and Mexico for his new source.

Another interesting source for skeleton supplies is well-used cadavers. As every good student knows, a cadaver is a corpse used in laboratory experiments and, after the fleshy part has served its instructive purposes, the skeleton is left to hang around college laboratories, storerooms—and closets.

A skeleton's value depends, of course, on the condition of the bones, but a self-respecting skeleton must have a well-ossified skull with complete dentician.

The price for a good skull ranges from $25, for a skull with incomplete dentician, to $150 for a skull with complete dentures.

The college's anatomy department has seven complete skeletons, a number of skulls and 20 boxes, each of which contains a half-body. Two of the skulls are of the $150 variety, and they have been dissected to show the nerve centers, head muscles and veins.

Donations of bodies to two-year colleges fall far behind those to universities. Students aren't often requested to consider their old two-year Alma Maters when they will their bodies, but it seems that a satisfactory way to show appreciation might be to will a body where it would be most appreciated.

Angie Touloume—Miss World Trade And Travel

Foreign Student Here Winner Of Three Beauty Contests

By Barbara McQuaid

Beauty and brains are evident in Angie Touloume, a student presently enrolled here from Greece. The modest, soft-spoken coed not only has won three beauty contests but also has learned American customs and English since leaving her native Greece in 1956.

"I was surprised at my first crowning and never expected to win another beauty contest," she exclaimed in a recent interview.

Miss Touloume was recently named Miss World Trade and Travel by Golden Gate World Trade and Travel Week Committee. This "week" is an annual national observance of the importance of the United States' overseas partners to this country's general welfare, and is being celebrated through Saturday.

All Bay Area colleges were invited to choose a candidate from their overseas students. The nominee then sent a biographical sketch and photograph to the judges. Later, in personal interview, entrants were judged for personality, charm and grace.

The beauty queen received her title officially in Union Square Monday. She was also a guest at the International Ball.

In 1960 the Greek beauty was chosen Queen of the Greek Festival, which celebrated the 139th anniversary of Greek independence. Last fall, on September 9, she was chosen Queen of the Greek Coronation Ball from a field of 30 finalists.

Since arriving in the United States she has attended Lowell High School and City College, where she is majoring in business, and where last fall she was elected secretary of the International Relations Club.

"The faculty and students at the college have been very friendly, understanding and helpful to me and other foreign students," she stated.

The warm-eyed sophomore finds American schools somewhat different from the Greek schools.

"In Greece, more respect was shown openly toward instructors. Students would even stand when the teacher entered the room. High school was not compulsory; the high school student was admired in much the same manner as your college student."

The modest coed was born in Thebes in 1941. When the Germans completely destroyed her house in 1944, her family had to live with neighbors.

"My village had a one-room, one-teacher schoolhouse, so after the war I went to Athens," she said, "and lived with my aunt. I attended school there for eight years until my sophomore year in high school."

In 1956, another aunt who lives in San Francisco visited the Touloume family in Greece and asked the young girl to come to America.

"My mother didn't want me to make the trip, but I wanted to go so badly that I became ill, and she finally consented. I have been attending school here ever since," she said.

"I have found people almost the same in both countries," Miss Touloume reflected. "Only the customs differ. In Greece such things as social dances and parties are not held so often nor for such a young group of students as in America."

San Francisco will soon lose the soft-spoken beauty, for after graduation in June, she plans to return to her native Greece and work with an airline company.

Soph Ball Set Friday At St. Francis

Semiannual Event Honors King, Queen, Top Student

Announcement of the Sophomore Of The Year and the traditional king and queen will highlight the semiannual Soph Ball from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel, Class President Mike Nevin announced today.

Theme of this year's dance is May Night.

Voting for the "royal couple" is now being conducted at the silver pole in Science Hall and in the fountain section of Smith Hall. A penny donation into each contestant's container will constitute one vote and proceeds from this will go into the class scholarship fund, Nevin added.

A picture of the contestant is placed on his container.

Formal announcement of the winning couple will be made during intermission ceremonies at the ball.

A committee composed of Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman, Council of Organizations President Vince Contreras, class sponsors Nancy Humiston and Thomas Humiston, counselors, and Nevin will choose the Sophomore Of The Year. This is the first semester that such an award is being made.

Selection of the winner will be determined on the bases of participation in student government here, leadership, grade-point average, athletic prowess and participation in clubs and activities on campus, Nevin said.

"So far we have about 20 names submitted for this award," Nevin stated, adding that he hopes the faculty will put other names of deserving sophomores into the race.

A trophy will be awarded the winner, according to Nevin.

Bids to the ball are now available at the silver pole in Science Hall, and an Associated Student card must be presented to secure an invitation, Nevin emphasized. Bids are being distributed on a first-come first-serve basis.

Attendance is not limited to members of the AS here or the Sophomore Class, but one person in each couple must be currently registered at the college.

A nine-piece orchestra conducted by Sal Carson will provide the music.

Nevin hopes to continue an established precedent by seeing an excellent turnout of students at this affair, which will bring the curtain down on sophomore activities this semester.

Council Approves Campus Police Budget—In Part

By Patty Smith

Student Council finally took action last week on the controversial budget requested by the Campus Police and divided the budget into two—one for the police and the other for the pistol team.

After the division, council allocated $531.80 to the Campus Police and indefinitely postponed the requested budget of $3117.62 of the pistol team.

The requested budget of the Freshman Class for $2580 caused a great deal of discussion and argument as the amount asked for is an increase of $1775 over the original request.

Associated Student President Bill Silver explained that the additional money is for a dinner dance, and he defended this expense by saying, "This campus needs a shot in the arm."

Several felt that the Freshman Class would not be able to handle the responsibility of putting on such a large affair.

Freshman Class President Bob Roddick argued, "The Freshman Class has more spirit than the sophomores." The budget was tabled until the next time council meets.

Concerning other budgets, council allocated $1200 to the athletic injury fund, $350 to student insurance fund, $2938 to the controller, $450 to the administration, $494.50 to junior varsity basketball, $1070.50 to the soccer team, $416.20 to the Associated Men Students and $5012.04 to The Guardsman.

Need An Excuse? Library Staff Knows Them All

As any college student knows, a good excuse rates along with an open book test or an instructor who doesn't like to come to class.

But Eleanor Blinn of the college library staff has come across just about every excuse there is for turning in a book late or in poor condition.

According to Miss Blinn, students will stoop to just about anything to keep from paying a fine on an overdue book. They have even accused their relatives. "My aunt took the book with her to Los Angeles," one timid coed explained.

With a sheepish smile one claimed, "Well . . . I have a little brother . . . and he . . . he took his crayons and colored it."

Man's so-called best friend has even had to take the blame for a damaged book. "He's just a little puppy, and you know how they like to chew on things—don't you?" The fine stood.

Forum Magazine To Hit Stands Monday, Free To AS Members

Distribution of Forum magazine is to be handled solely through the Rampurium when the magazine becomes available next Monday, Catherine Connolly, faculty adviser to Forum, said yesterday.

With an Associated Student card students may get the magazine free. Others will be charged 50 cents.

"Because of our budget, the supply is limited, and the students who would like to read the magazine should get to the bookstore before the end of that week," Miss Connolly said.

elected. All students will have a say in student government and will be afforded equal rights here," he added.

He suggests less formality for council meetings. "I hope to place student government in the category of a regular class where instructors will teach student leaders parliamentary law," Thomas remarked.

Each candidate also reacted to the change in College Hour time next semester.

"It should be more advantageous to students," Contreras suggested. "However, if students are not content with the change, I will institute legislation to bring College Hour back to Friday morning," he promised.

Theilen hopes that the change will prompt more student participation in extracurricular activities. "With one full hour for College Hour, events are bound to be broadened and more organized," Theilen stated.

Thomas, however, feels that the students should have been consulted first before the change was approved. "The whole matter was handled poorly, and I plan to poll students next semester to find out what they really want," he explained.

Administrative intervention in student government also met with comment among the candidates.

Contreras believes that administrative controls are important academically, but with activities, controls should be relaxed. "Student leaders should have as much freedom as possible," he added.

"I am pleased with the way things are now," Theilen commented. "Council has all the power it needs at present." He cited the fact that council has the right to approve and allocate funds to budgeted organizations on campus each semester without administrative intervention.

Thomas hopes that an expansion of Council of Organizations next semester will make it possible for less faculty control. "I plan to give COO more jurisdiction over the clubs here," he emphasized.

All three noted the importance of the two conferences the college will host in September—the California Junior College Student Government Association area meeting and the annual Associated Women Student conference.

Each believes he is the man for the presidential job because of previous experience.

Contreras has been Freshman and Sophomore Class president and has attended one state conference and three northern regional meets.

Theilen contends that he has a more "diversified background." He has served as Associated Men Student president, Finance Chairman and Freshman Class president.

Thomas has become acquainted with student government through his association as an active member of Student Council and as president of the Freshman Class. He was student president at Mission High School.

Club Cavalcade: Realtors Host Guest Speaker

Compiled by Francine Dubonnet

William Carr, staff worker of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, will speak to members of the Collegiate Christian Fellowship during College Hour Friday in C-201, Tong Wu, president of the fellowship, announced.

Fellowship elections will be held Friday, May 31.

• A guest speaker from Fireman's Fund Insurance Company will give a lecture to the Real Estate and Insurance Club during College Hour Friday in C-202.

• Nominations and elections of Newman Club officers are planned for Friday, May 31. On this date awards will be presented to the most valuable man and woman in the club.

"All paid-up members of the Newman Club will receive election baliots in the mail," Burt Lauray, club president, announced.

Lauray urged members "to return these baliots as soon as possible so that the baliots can be tallied to determine next semester's officers."

A communion breakfast was held last Friday at St. Cecilia's Church.

• Home Economics Club members are in the process of sewing bean bags for the benefit of a local orphanage. Evelyn Hing, club president, stated that the club "has not as yet chosen an orphanage."

• The Recreation Association will hold a council meeting Friday, May 31.

• The Engineering Society will hold a meeting for members on May 31.

• Elections for the Merchandising Club will be held at the May 31 meeting, according to Ray Cognasso, club officer.

Honors Due 75 At Commencement Assembly May 31

Honors and scholarships are waiting for approximately 75 students during an informal commencement assembly set for Friday, May 31.

The assembly is scheduled from 10 to 11:30 a.m. in the theater when graduates will receive their Associate in Arts degrees.

The President's Award Plaque will be presented to the man and the woman graduate who have contributed most to the college throughout the year. The second honor award, the Scholastic Cup, will be awarded to the graduate with the highest grade point average.

According to Dean Mary Golding, there will be no 10 a.m. class for graduating students, so that everyone can take part in the ceremony. Attendance for all eligible students is mandatory, she emphasized.

Musical highlights of the program include the college orchestra with selected pieces. The choir will sing Evening Song To God by Haydn, conducted by Galen Marshall, music instructor, accompanied by Warner Jepson.

Speeches will be given by college President Louis G. Conlan, Mike Nevin, Sophomore Class president, and Joan Jeong.

From a group of ten students maintaining a grade point average of 3.5 or better, Miss Jeong was recently chosen to speak at the assembly.

The two fall semester graduates included in the program are Terry Kandall and Charles Swanson.

16 Women Students Capped In Dental Assisting Program

Sixteen women students received their caps in the semiannual dental assistant graduating ceremony held last Thursday night in the theater.

Dean Louis F. Batmale welcomed the group after Lynn Goodrich, a student here, sang The Star Spangled Banner. Ruth P. Innskipp, instructor-coordinator of dental assisting, introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. Walter M. Wong of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, who addressed the students.

Following the presentation of the caps in a candlelight ceremony by Evelyn L. Seekatz, instructor, 1961 City College graduate Lillian Stell recited the dental assistant's pledge.

Vickey Malowney, past president of the San Francisco Dental Assistants Society, congratulated the women on their achievement.

Laura Bourdon, Judith Brunner, Betty Chin, Sybil Cohn, Nancy Gordon, Lois Hague, Yoshiko Hayashino, Michaele Herbert, Margaret Jacob, Sharon Lambing, Mary Laplant, Pat Milner, Susan Ryken, Anne Wells, Gayle Wilson and Jan Wilson were the students capped.

Senior sponsors included Jo Ann Almada, Denice Crispi, Verna Dodson, Patty Ellerbeck, Susan Fitzpatrick, Carol Galatoire, Barbara Hicks, Kay Ilch, Barbara Loizos, Mary Ann Lucey, Carole Mar, Judith Moore, Anita Nagel, Celeste Schoenstein, Jane Treber and Ardath Witcosky.

AWS 'Fling' Set Next Wednesday

It's A Woman's World is the theme of the combination Associated Women Student Feminine Fling and Careers Night, set from 5:30 to 9 p.m. next Wednesday in Smith Hall, Imogene Walker, AWS president, stated today.

A light supper provided by the hotel and restaurant department will be served at 6:30.

Three awards will be presented to outstanding women students by the Recreation Association, the Inter-Sorority Council and the AWS. The newly elected presidents of each organization will be installed.

Chairmen of committees for the event are Sue Fitzpatrick, publicity; Marilyn Kuhn, decorations; Mimi Travis, cleanup; Wanda Lee, invitations; Sue Davis, setup; Phyllis Webb, entertainment, and Marlene Marcelli and Arlene Kraus, ushers.

Crowell Ends Career After 17 Years At College

Adviser to the college's Pick and Hammer Society and a veteran geology instructor here, Chester Crowell will retire from his professional teaching career at the college next month.

Crowell has taught in the San Francisco Unified School District for the past 30 years. He has been here since the fall of 1946, beginning as an engineering instructor and then transferring to the teaching of geology.

The Pick and Hammer Society has been in existence since 1936. With Crowell as adviser to the group is George Baffico, geography instructor here. Meetings of the society are held during College Hours in S-45.

CHESTER CROWELL, geology instructor, will retire at the end of this semester after 17 years of service here.—Guardsman photo by Cypriano Ayalin.

About once a month members of the club hear distinguished representatives from different geological organizations in the area. Frequent field trips are also conducted.

"The associations I have made with students here have been the most rewarding aspect of my teaching career," Crowell stated. "I enjoy following the careers of former students, too," he added.

He noted that many graduates of the geology department are now working in the four corners of the earth. One of these graduates who was enrolled in Crowell's class between 1950 and 1951 is expected to replace him.

Crowell's plans for the future are not definite. "I know that I'll be taking life easy for awhile," he remarked.

Rams Win State Net Crown Again

Karate Show Backs Boxing In AMS Sports Night Tonight

Two undefeated basketball teams, along with 20 of the best boxers at the college, will clash today at 7:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium in the semiannual AMS sports night.

The Divine Ones of the independent league and Alpha Phi Epsilon of the fraternity league will meet for the Associated Men Student intramural basketball trophy at 7:30. This should also be a scoring contest, pitting John Giles of the fraternity league against John Brown of the Divine Ones for the Highest Scorer Award.

Boxing follows the cage contest as Al Rivas and George York meet for the 132-lb. division title, Charles Gilbert meets Vic Kaprelian or Rocco Chavez for the 136-lb. crown, John Green faces Roseo Teruya for the 142-lb. award and Phil Alberto meets swimmer Gil Gallegos for the 147-lb. title.

A special attraction will be a Karate demonstration by the Kenpo Karate School, to be held midway in the boxing show. AMS President John Theilen arranged the exhibition and said, "Karate has rocketed into popularity recently and the demonstration should be both informative and interesting."

Following the Karate, the boxing will continue with Paul Fua or Sylvester Tracy squaring off with John Young or Art Octavio in the 152-lb. class, Bob Harris taking on Omer Beard in the 160-lb. division, Jim Leach will enter the ring with versatile Walt Williams who will be slugging Leach instead of a baseball for the 175-lb. crown, and basketball player Andy Woods or Ray Lynch will square off with Grady Farley or Bob Baughn for the heavyweight award.

Theilen said, "Free doughnuts, cokes and cigarettes will be available and girls will be welcome."

In last week's action, the Divine Ones clinched the independent league title and remained undefeated when the Hawaiian Bla's forfeited.

Also forfeiting were the Red Sox to the Turnbull Blues and the Untouchables to the Filipino Club. Bill March hit 22 points to lead the Brothers Five to a 53-40 victory over Hotel & Restaurant, despite Roger Battistone's 22 points.

The Newman Club received a bye this week, and with the Divine Ones winning had to settle for second place with a 7-1 record.

In the fraternity league Alpha Phi Epsilon remained undefeated and clinched the title with a 64-25 rout of Beta Tau. High point man for the winners was Hershel Hollie with 21, and point leader John Giles hit 15.

Zeta Phi Sigma placed second in the fraternity league with a 4-1 record.

Klemmer Terms Past Golf Season 'Very Successful'

Although the college failed to qualify anyone for the state golf championships at San Diego last Monday, coach Grover Klemmer stated, "The overall season was very successful and if the loss of second man John Steddin could have been avoided, we could have finished higher in the conference standings."

As to the best Ram golfer, Dennis Drucker, Klemmer added, "Drucker shows versatility in many sports and if he were to concentrate on his golf game, could become one of the best golfers in the state.

"At full strength we lost only one match, to San Mateo; when weakened, we lost our remaining three," Klemmer moaned. High point of the season was the upset win over the Foothill College Owls by a 16-14 count.

It was the only dual meet loss of the Golden Gate Conference season for the Owls, who later upset San Mateo, its first dual match loss in 10 years, as the two teams finished in a tie for first with 6-1 records.

Against Foothill, Rams Drucker, Steddin and Mike Selsnik each fired excellent 76's for the Rams' best team effort of the season. The Rams' Achilles heel was the loss of second man Steddin.

In conference dual standings, the Rams finished with a 3-4 record, while overall the slate was 5-4 to get the Klemmermen over the .500 hump.

As to the Golden Gate Conference, Klemmer stated, "The conference overall is as strong as last year, although San Mateo, the winner, is not as strong as last year."

The Bulldogs should find the going rough in the state meet against the teams from Southern California.

College of San Mateo, however, has won the past four state championships, and was a slight favorite to repeat.

College Will Send Four To Modesto For State Track

Bob Hector, Gene Plotkin, Pat Lewis and Lonnie Brantley remain as the last trackmen to carry the Ram banner for the state meet at Modesto Saturday.

The college placed eighth in the Northern California meet Saturday.

Hector and Plotkin qualified for the state meet at the Fresno trials May 11. Heetor placed third in his event with a 14.4 high hurdles time, and Plotkin took a first with a 4:23.4 mile. Plotkin is expected to run the mile and two-mile.

Brantley and Lewis qualified on the merits of their season records. In the Modesto meet May 14, Brantley jumped 23-11½, and the second place jump was 23-11. Fifth place in the event was as near as 23-6.

"This is, needless to say, going to be a tight event, and the winner will be the guy who has a good day, as can be seen from the distance between first and fifth," Coach Lou Vasquez stated.

Lewis was outthrown by 14 others in the shot and discus trials but wound up with a fourth in the meet. "He's going to have a tough time," Vasquez said.

It is Vasquez' contention that Plotkin has yet to run his best race. "His times over the semester weren't anything to marvel about, and neither were his trial times, but he runs well under pressure," he added.

Tom Gardner, the only other Ram expected to make the trip, did not qualify at Fresno.

Jilka Sparkles In Doubles; Ritter Tops Siska For Title

By Fred Wales

SANTA ROSA (Saturday, May 18)—With veterans Bob Siska and Ed Jilka successfully defending their doubles title, the Rams retained the State tennis championship today.

San Francisco accumulated 10 points, followed by Foothill and San Diego with 5, Citrus, Fullerton and Pasadena with 3 and El Camino with 1.

The singles proved a disappointment when Siska, seemingly on the way to the singles crown after an easy 6-2, 6-1, win over Craig Stuart of Citrus, was caught off guard and downed by old nemesis, Horst Ritter of Foothill.

Just last Saturday, Siska downed Ritter, 6-2, 6-3, for the NorCal singles crown. But this was a different Ritter. In the semifinals, Ritter beat top-seeded Gary Johnsoh of San Diego, 7-5, 4-6, 6-2, and continued along the upset trail by taking the first set from Siska, 6-1.

Siska countered in the second set with some beautifully placed shots, but his rally fell short, 7-5, and for the second year in a row Siska lost the singles title in the last match.

The doubles was all San Francisco with Ed Jilka carrying the team to a 6-3, 6-3 win over Allgood-Hall of Fullerton in the semifinals and a close 6-4, 6-4 victory over favored Johnson and Saxton of San Diego for the title.

Jilka was the difference.

The opposing teams, in an effort to keep the ball from notorious Siska, had ball after ball blasted through them by the wild-swinging Jilka.

In Friday's action the 92-degree heat took its toll. Jack Kern was eliminated by Hall of Fullerton, 6-1, 6-4.

No. 2 man Bob Murio also went down in the first round, 6-2, 6-3, to Alvarez of Pasadena. Siska started on his climb to the final by downing Bob Mollaga of El Camino, 6-1, 6-2. Rich Anderson had a tough time, coming back to upset Allen of San Diego, 3-6, 6-1, 7-5.

Gordon Miller had an easier time with Cowen of Pasadena, but wore himself down winning, 6-3, 6-4.

The quarterfinals saw the heat wipe out two Rams.

Siska scored an impressive upset rout of Hall from Fullerton, 6-1, 6-1. But Anderson, after losing 8-6 in a hard fought set with Stuart of Citrus, defaulted the second set, down 2-1.

Sunstroke bad Anderson blinded and dizzy, but after a half hour of alcobol baths and ice packs he was back on the court for the doubles action.

Gordon Miller's case wasn't as severe, but after being edged finally in the first set by Johnson, 14-12, he wisely defaulted.

The second doubles team of Anderson and Miller dropped Allen-Hall of San Diego, 6-4, 6-2, before losing to the South's best in Johnson-Saxton of San Diego, 6-2, 6-3.

Siska closed out his career with an array of applause from the partisan crowd that rallied to the champion's side throughout the tournament.

Coach Roy Diederichsen concluded this clean sweep season with this statement, "All the boys played excellent tennis, and I'm proud of them, but I'll never have a player like Siska or a team like this for quite a while."

Success Without A Title

By Pete Franklin

A brave but futile effort marked the end of the Ram nine's season as they bowed, 7-3, to Foothill May 13 in a wild and woolly contest for the Golden Gate conference title. Nold was the losing pitcher, ending the season with a 5-3 record.

Manager Sid Phelan commented after this defeat that the success of his diamondmen was unexpected when one noted that they had only two pitchers, two .300 hitters and an average of three errors per game.

San Francisco jumped off to an early lead as Russ Kunkle belted his 1-0 pitch for a high soaring home run to left. In the Owl half of the third, with two out, a questionable call at third set up disaster for Ram hurler Rich Nold. The next Foothill batter blasted the first pitch for two runs.

In the fifth inning, explosive Walt Williams hit a towering 385-foot line shot over the left center field clubhouse to even the score, 3-3.

The remainder of the Ram effort was marred by miscues and faulty base running, and "questionable calls," Pete Giovanola was ejected in the seventh for disputing a third called strike, and Lou Bevilacqua and Kunkle were threatened with ejection in other arguments.

"The game was played under protest," said Ram coach Larry Lawson. The Foothill manager failed to remove his pitcher on his second trip to the mound.

The Rams entered the ninth with a four-run deficit, and put up a battle to the last.

With two on and two out, Rich Farreli popped up to end the threat and with it the Rams' last hopes for the conference title.

"The preseason ratings slated the Rams for a fourth place finish, but the league was tight, and anything could have happened at any time," Phelan commented.

"However, once we got going, despite the fact that we didn't have a break all season, it was too bad we couldn't go all the way," Lawson said.

"Our boys did their best, and proved, despite any contrary opinion, that they were as good as the best, and better than the rest," he added.

RA Plans Dance Exhibitions

A dance demonstration will be sponsored by the women's physical education department at 1 p.m. next Wednesday.

"The program will include modern dance, folk dancing, and rhythmic movement," Mella Furgis, dance instructor, said. Students from each dance class will demonstrate abilities in their particular area.

Among the modern dance group will be Ellen Fraser, Randi Goldberg, Christine Thompson, June Altfield, Catherine O'Leary, Bonnie Finn, Sharon Windfeldt and Sharon Hambrick. The "Skipping Three," Mary Marquering, Evelyn Miller and Carole Sager, will also perform.

Six students of modern dance composed original steps for the exhibition. They are Mairana Bauman, Antonia Cero, Frances Spying, Jamie Sweetwyne, Glora Washnigton and Sharon Ponder, who will perform to Jazz.

Dancing to Sport Day will be Maria Dorsey, Alma Larieau, Carol Randall, Bertie Sapp and Jewel Valentine. Miss Washington will give an exhibition dance, A Red Drum.

"All of the dance studies are pleasing to watch because of the skill with which they are performed, the freshness of the themes, and the patterns of movement in relation to line, level and space," Lene Johnson, dance instructor here, added.

Folk dancers performing in the dance demonstrations will be Leticia Ciriales, Purita Pero, Teresita Racimo, Concordea Sagum, Carlotta Cleave, Michael Fiorentino, Elinor Reese, Bette Jean Willis, Beverly Galtin, Linda Rathbone, Joan De Meo, Mory Robledo, Bruce Arbeit, Richard Caneglea, Orlando DaCosta, Dorothy Johns, Madan Mesia, Carol Roberts, Marguerite Nagy, Betty Willie, Sharon Winter, Nenita Barsan and Maria Magabilig.

Studies of rhythmic movements will be presented by Wendy Feldman, Carole Jackson, Meriam Maisler, Yolanda Romerez, Jerelyn White, Marcea Witherspoon, Isabelle Mather and Ines Schulze.

Contreras Wins AS Presidency

PRESIDENT-ELECT Vince Contreras.

Webb Downs Walker For Second Slot As Open Election Tally Reaches 977 Votes

By Herm Kligerman

Vince Contreras, who last semester lost the election for Associated Student president by a mere ten votes, captured the fall AS presidency in last week's election by a margin of 75 votes over his closest opponent.

Official results, released by Election Commissioner Tony Taormina, reveal that Contreras polled 371 votes to Rich Thomas' 296 and John Theilen's 246.

A total of 977 votes was cast in the election, which was open to all registered students at the college. This number, which represents about 18 per cent of the entire student body, is a decrease of 167 over last spring when open elections were also held.

However, last fall, when elections were limited to AS cardholders, only 328 students cast votes.

Phyllis Webb, gathering 457 votes, easily won the AS vice presidency over Imogene Walker, who tallied 355 votes.

The offices of Associated Men Student president, Associated Women Student president and Sophomore Class president were unopposed in the race. Bob Roddick with 707 votes, Rosie Fang with 653 and Steve Christ with 603 were automatically placed into the respective positions.

The closest AS race this semester saw Gary Ettin with 393 votes edge out Mike McCambridge and his 369 tallies to claim the Freshman Class presidency.

The seven sophomore seats on Student Council were filled by Janet Sisk (537 votes), Carol Wong (519), Mike Asher (473), Clemmie Thompson (464), Tony Vigil (450), Joel Cohen (445) and Alan Poletti (437). Loscrs in this contest were Cecil Reichert (413), Martin Cohen (414) and Art Gershman (430).

Seven candidates were in the running to fill the seven freshman seats on council and were automatically placed in those positions. They are Sandy Castelli (648 votes), Patrick Walsh (595), Lambert Din (590), Henry Cassel (589), Lou Galliani (588), Robert Aviani (587) and Gerald Whelan (577).

Contreras and Miss Webb were officially installed in office at the Student Council dinner last Thursday night in Smith Hall.

When asked if he felt more relaxed with elections over, Contreras stated, "There's no time to relax; my work is just beginning."

Pet projects of Contreras next semester are expected to be a revision of council's method of approving budgets and arrangement of a social calendar for the entire college year.

Joan Jeong Speaks At Commencement Awards Friday

With Joan Jeong as student speaker, a combination awards assembly and commencement program Friday morning will honor June graduates and see scholarships presented to 76 students.

The assembly starts at 10 a.m. in the theater and is expected to run through the following class hour.

"Most scholarships are $50 book scholarships awarded to students in order to meet textbook costs, and there are other specific scholarships ranging in monetary value from $120 to $200," Dean Mary Golding said.

Those students receiving scholarships are Jane Hannigan, Robert Hanlon, Luise Krois, Celia Sacks, Marie Dufau, Paulette Dusdall, Imogene Walker, Wayne MacDonald, Hamilton Wong, Barbara Sperring, Eleanor Lew, Betsy Erkkila, Richard Thomas, David Alindugan, Larry Attinger, Robert Bachman.

Peter Barnard, Alan Levy, Charles Miller, Alan Poletti, Barbara Bergk, Shirley Chang, Janice Chow, Rogena Jeong, Randolph Bach, Carolyn Earl, Donna Dennis, Thelma Fort, Kathleen Gaffney, Carolyn Giomi and Conchita Herdman are among scholarship winners.

Also Joan Jeong, Laurie Lyght, Michiko Nichols, James Perry, Jamie Sweetwyne, Michele Tracy, Don Vasconcellos, James Hendricks.

John Ross Kasparek, Judith Marsh, George Materson, Giselle Von Putkamer, Ted Arellanes, David Bartlett, George F. Campbell, Patrick Flaherty, Goro Fukumitsu, Wayne Gillette, Benjamin Ho, Bruce Lindai, Owen McClurg, Glen Nance, Roy Piccinini, Brennan Polley.

Wolfgang Rood, Kay Sera, Charles Swanson, Sandra Tofanelli, Carrato Lindsey, Dennis Mattos, Merie Prescott, Gary Podesta, Luciano Quinrolo, Kenneth Hoppe, Sadako Hino, Barbara Shattuck, Gayle Wilson, Betty Chin, Armand Attia, Alex Dong, Andrew Lutze and Robert Materson.

Other students to receive scholarships are James McMillan, Kenneth T. Sever and Masanori Yoshikawa.

JOAN JEONG, assembly speaker.

Sadako Hino Wins Scholastic Honors

Highest academic honors and the Scholastic Cup will go to Sadako Hino Friday at informal commencement ceremonies in the college theater.

Miss Hino's grade average over four semesters is 3.84. Minimum requirement for Highest Honors is 3.75.

Graduates with high honors, 3.50 grade average minimum, are Jane Adele Treber, Lorenzo Bagatas, Ronald Block, Marie Ferrari, Kay Ilch, Joan Jeong, Terry Ross Kandall, Henrietta Kelso, Laurel Lyght, Wolfgang Rood, Charles F. Swanson and Ann L. Thompson.

Graduates with honors, 3.30 grade average minimum, are Armand V. Attia, Beverly Ann Bergk, Russell Call, George F. Campbell, Jeremy Cave, Paulette Dusdall, Henry Fearnley, Wayne A. Gillette, Carolyn Z. Giomi, Charles Greninger, Faye O. Hutchins.

Carol A. Louie, Kay Madsen, Richard Michael, Nika Narkvich, Stanley F. Schmidt, Barbara M. Shattuck, Valborg Tietz, Wesley D. Wright; Jane Hannigan and Barbara L. Hicks also bad 3.30 or plus averages.

IFC, ISC Threaten Walkout From The Ranks Of COO

Lack of participation by clubs affiliated with the Council of Organizations last week prompted both the Inter-Fraternity Council and the Inter-Sorority Council to consider a "walkout" from the COO.

Associated Student President-Elect Vince Contreras, this semester's president of COO, stated that the clubs were "not doing their part," and as a result, COO members believe it would be wise to put the clubs "on their own" and, in effect, force them to participate.

Both IFC President Keith Woolwine and ISC President Carole Rubino claimed that they are definiteiy "leaving the ranks of COO," but would defer such action until the move is put before Student Council for consideration.

According to Contreras, the fraternities and sororities are justified in their proposed action, and he does not plan to block the withdrawal.

As far as approval by Student Council is concerned, Contreras said, "It has been some time since Student Council has refused approval of recommendations made by COO, and I doubt that it will reject this action."

AWS Hosts Feminine Fling Tonight

Program Includes Dinner, Show And Careers' Talk

A fashion show of wigs, a speaker from the United States Department of Labor, awards and special entertainment by students here are the main attractions of tonight's Feminine Fling and Careers Night, according to Imogene Walker, Associated Women Student president.

Overall theme of the semiannual affair is A Woman's World.

All women students are invited to attend the Fling, scheduled from 6:30 to 9 p.m. in Smith Hall, Miss Walker added.

Dinner will be served and awards will be given to outstanding women by the AWS, the Inter-Sorority Council and the Recreation Association, co-sponsors of the event.

Carole Rubino is ISC president, and Sue Davis heads the RA this semester.

The new presidents of the AWS, ISC and RA will be introduced, and the 12 "best-dressed coeds on campus" will receive pins as awards, Miss Walker said.

Mrs. Shirley Anderson of the Fashion Wig Shop in Millbrae has been invited to the event to model wigs.

Madeline H. Coddling, Western Regional director of the Women's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, has been invited to tell guests of the "new range of careers and opportunities available to women."

A musical number, which Miss Walker described as being related to the theme of the Fling, will be given by Dennis Paulette Walti and Phyllis Webb.

Presentation of the Margaret Dougherty scholarship trophy to the sorority with the highest grade point average tops the award part of the program, Miss Walker declared.

To tie in with Careers Night, four tables will be placed in the cafeteria where representatives will describe four of the programs here, dental assisting, journalism, advertising art and floristry.

Drama Sets Final Showings Of King John This Weekend

Shakespeare's King John opened successfully at the college theater last Friday night despite a serious accident that occurred during rehearsal the preceding Monday.

Steve Booker, in the roie of the deposed Prince Arthur, practiced in the gymnasium for countless weeks perfecting a leap from a high wall. Rehearsal time rolled to May 20, and Booker made his leap for approximately the 500th time . . . only something went amiss. He landed wrong and broke both his arms.

Lasley said this of the young trouper: "He delivered his lines, finished the scene and then left. But he was back in time for the second rehearsal —with his arms in casts!"

Booker, wearing a specially designed cape to conceal the plaster casts, is continuing in the play.

The leap has since been cut from the scene.

Others appearing in King John are Ken Bachtold in the lead role, Sandra Lundwall as Constance and Tom Purvis as Phillip of Falconbridge.

Direction is by Michael Griffin. The final performance of King John will be Saturday June 1. Admission to the play will be by AS card or $1 general admission, and curtain rises sharp at 8 p.m., Griffin emphasized.

Following last week's opening, Griffin stated that he was proud of the production as a whole.

"It is doubly gratifying to direct a 'meaty' theme when so much enthusiasm is displayed by the cast," Griffin remarked, adding, "especially with the amount of work entailed in a production of this nature.

"With two performances behind them now, the cast has really shown remarkable interpretative instincts," Griffin added, hoping that the word has been circulated sufficiently to provide full houses for the remaining two performances.

Ventures for the fall semester are as yet undetermined, but Griffin mentioned a wide variety of possibilities, naming authors Sheridan, Shaw or perhaps something "way out" like Albee, who wrote the current Broadway success, Who's Afraid Of Virginia Woolfe?

Heroes, Fools Make Memorial Day

By Dick Bullard

Thursday, May 30, is Memorial Day—a day set aside to honor the American war dead. It is also a legal holiday.

Since the advent of the automobile, Memorial Day has become synonymous with racing cars and the Indianapolis "500."

Every year, 33 of the world's finest drivers gather at the Indianapolis Raceway to test the world's finest automotive machines.

In contrast to this, millions of the world's worst drivers infest the nation's highways to test their ignorance.

Some of them go out to decorate the graves of loved ones. Some of them go out to find graves of tbeir own. Driving cars which would make a junkdealer's heart sigh with envy, these self-styled Graham Hills play highway murder with astonishing success.

Some who shouldn't be allowed to walk across the street without the aid of a Boy Scout, nevertheless think nothing of doing 70 or 80 mph on the freeways.

Treadless tires, faulty brakes and loose steering are the tools with which these infants play their game. It is as though these "superhumans" can control their autos by sheer force of will, physical laws notwithstanding.

As long as the nation is blessed with these "bumanitarians" it will not need the threat of war to insure that May 30 will remain a legal holiday.

Council, Police Should Come To Mutual Agreement On Budget

AFTER MANY WEEKS of debate based on a penny-wise and dollar-foolish theory of economics, Student Council still has not approved the Campus Police department's $3117.62 pistol team budget, because some councilmen believe that such a large sum of money should not go to such a small group of students.

Specifically, it is argued that it's not fair for the 30-man force to ask for $3117.62 while the 4000-student Freshman Class originally asked for $800. Despite this theory, council promptly allocated $4000 to the drama department and $6737.77 to the football team—organizations comprised of a limited number of students.

Although these two groups are small in size, they actually work for the entire college. Likewise, a 30-man Campus Police force and gunnery squad also work for the entire student body. In fact, more students are provided for by police services than the number of students who attend football games or drama productions.

All Associated Student members may attend football games or drama productions free of charge, but it is a matter of record that only a small minority patronize these functions. However, all AS members park their cars in police supervised parking lots. Furthermore, all students, including non-AS members, are direct recipients of Campus Police services. The Campus Police do not direct traffic for just one group of students; they do not supervise parking facilities and social activities for only one organization; they perform their duties for the entire college, and as a pistol team, they bring added prestige to the college.

Admittedly, pistol matches lack the pomp and pageantry of football games and drama productions but that is certainly no reason for disapproving the police budget.

However, this is not to say that it is our purpose to pit one organization's budget against another's. We are merely illustrating the point that the size of the group is not of paramount importance, while the number of students for whom an organization works is important.

Concerning the 4000-strong Freshman Class—it is idiotic to compare its budget with the Campus Police's. Academically, the Freshman Class is not a "class" but is rather a social organization with basic social functions. And most important, this organization does not serve the entire student body, whereas the Campus Police do. To reiterate, it is the number of students for whom an organization works that is important.

Another council argument is based on the point that since 1959 the controversial budget soared to unprecedented heights, and some councilmen therefore suggested that members of the pistol team purchase their own equipment for pistol matches.

Council should know that drama, football and several other budgets have increased considerably over the years. For example, since 1956, funds for drama have increased by more than $2000. Does this mean that actors should pay for their sets and costumes? Of course not.

Council actually displayed an appalling lack of knowledge of issues concerned. At a recent council meeting, it was asked why .38 calibre wad-cutter ammunition was needed, what was meant by the term shooting supplies, and then the very same person who didn't know why wad-cutters were needed said that they were an unnecessary luxury. How can council expect to reach a reasonable, just decision if it is not thoroughly familiar with each item for which AS funds are to be spent?

It is understood that council has a limited amount of money with which to work, so that some budgets must be cut. Therefore, we urge Student Council to reconsider and to appoint a competent man to investigate each item in this budget thoroughly, by interviewing the Campus Police chief and the criminology department head, and then reach its decision.

After becoming thoroughly familiar with the budget, the interviewer should submit a detailed, expository, written report on his findings to all council members. Then, with the facts before them at their meeting, councilmen and policemen can work together to establish a mutual, just agreement based on the facts.

Editor, The Guardsman:

The Guardsman does an outstanding job of providing students with news and information about the college and the various student and teacher activities associated with it. I think that anyone would agree that The Guardsman has a very professional and neat appearance and that the reporters should be complimented for their accurate and top-notch writing.

Doesn't it seem as if much of The Guardsman staff's time and talent are being wasted when, on Wednesday, one sees how few students are actually reading the paper and that the ones who are reading it are doing so with casual indifference? I realize that the social disease of indifference, which is so predominant on our campus, must be applied to the paper as well as everything else, but does it have to be?

Most of the "spirited" students of the college do read—look at the size of the last honor list, almost 4 per cent of total enrollment—and, since The Guardsman is not classified as a textbook, I think that the majority of the students would read it if it could be made a little more interesting. This interest could possibly be established by more controversial and colorful

Campus PanoRAMa
Should Assembly Replace A Formal June Commencement?

By Barbara Snell

Paulette Dusdall, sophomore:

For the student who is transferring to another college the commencement assembly would suffice. However, I feel that those who are not continuing will feel disappointment at such a quick closing to their college program. I also feel that this will be a disappointment to the parents of these graduates.

PAULETTE DUSDALL
"I feel that those who are not continuing will feel disappointment."

Rick Holmberg, sophomore:

I am in favor of the informal commencement exercises. I think that a graduation from a two-year college is not really a graduation but more of a transfer. I feel in the future that these commencement exercises should be conducted with a maximum amount of importance and a minimum of formality.

Imogene Walker, sophomore:

I think that the commencement exercises should continue even if there is only a small turnout. It could be held just as well in the theater. Perhaps this location could be investigated further for future commencements. Students work hard and long for this event, and value it highly. It is not an event to be shrugged off!

David Tullus, sophomore:

The insignificance of ceremonies such as these at City College is due to a lack of college spirit. Students feel that there is no need for such formal assemblies. These activities would be more appropriate and appreciated if they received student support.

Sharon Abrams, freshman:

I feel that a formal graduation from a two-year college is in many ways senseless. Most students who graduate from a two-year college are planning to go on to a four-year college and then they will participate in a formal commencement. Therefore, I feel that an informal commencement from a two-year college is much more appropriate.

Pat Perrott, freshman:

I am decidedly in favor of a formal commencement. Many students here look forward to this and expect a formal recognition of their efforts after two years of work and study. I do not feel that an assembly fully satisfies the student need for recognition. Somehow, an informal assembly does not fill the bill.

Trish Slevin, freshman:

I don't think the new commencement assembly is formal enough for the graduates. Since the students have spent two years preparing for this graduation, the ceremony should at least be memorable. Also, this type of exercise is too impersonal. I hope that by the time I am ready to graduate, the formal ceremony has returned.

Paula Lattimore, sophomore:

The commencement assembly seems sort of senseless. If there is going to be such a small, insignificant ceremony, why bother to have one at all? Even if there is only a small class, a regular and formal graduation ceremony should be held, if only for those students who don't intend to go on to another college.

Man Among Women
Roy Campbell Lone Male In Nurse Training Class

Roy Campbell, a 35-year-old student in the nurse training program, is the only man scheduled to graduate this year in a class otherwise made up of women.

Commenting on this situation, Campbell said, "I think it is a wonderful experience—to say the least."

Campbell, who came from Panama seven years ago, began his studies as a biology major in Texas. When he moved to San Francisco he worked at French Hospital, where he continued his studies in biology while receiving on-the-job training.

When the college began its nurse training program in 1961, Campbell left the hospital to begin studies here. At that time and up to the present he has been the only man in a class made up of women. In fact, there are only four men enrolled in this training program.

Campbell, who has recently been elected representative for the Student Nursing Association and who has also been nominated as Student Nurse of the Year, also directs a choral group made up of nursing students from nurse training schools and hospitals in the Bay Area.

Members of the nurse training classes here do in-service study at several hospitals in San Francisco. Among them are Mount Zion Hospital and Presbyterian Medical Center.

In addition to these studies, the class makes field trips to other hospitals in the Bay Area, such as the Veterans' Hospital in Palo Alto and various public health clinics.

"Nursing," said Campbell, "is not restricted to women. The public is becoming better informed in this area and the male nurse is now just as well accepted by patients as is the female doctor.

"In fact," he added, "male nurses have become more prominent within the last 10 years. There are more than 10,000 men enrolled in training or practicing nursing in the United States today."

Nursing offers many opportunities of which students may be unaware, he added. For instance, students who enter this program and who are drafted into the Armed Forces are commissioned as officers. "And," Campbell added, "students interested in a real challenge should look into the possibilities of this type of work."

Campbell, who is married and has two sons, intends to continue his studies at San Francisco State College, where he will enter the bacealaureate program in nurse training and where he eventually hopes to receive his Public Health Certificate, then proceed to nursing administration.

"But to be a good administrator you must first be a good nurse—and I intend to be one."

Wayward Skeleton Readmitted To Class

Hans, the $500 German skeleton which was missing for a few days, mysteriously found its way back to instructor Martha Scott's laboratory last Wednesday.

At 8 a.m. it was still missing. Only after the break following a 10 o'clock class did it return—hiding in a corner in the back of the lab.

"He's my boy friend—I've been true to him for 16 years now," Miss Scott sighed with relief.

Because of Hans' highly ossified and heavy bones, he has proved to be an invaluable scientific instrument.

Avant Guardsman!

SOMETIMES while browsing in a bookstore, one's curiosity and awareness are abruptly stopped when a black and white headline screaming BANNED is rubber-stamped on the cover.

Most of these books fall under a ban because of religion, politics or morality making the offense one of heresy, treason or obscenity.

For instance, Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels was considered obscene and detrimental to both government and morals in Ireland until 1881. Hans Christian Andersen's Wonder Stories were banned by Nicholas I of Russia, who also suppressed Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin and Nathaniel Hawthorne's The Scarlet Letter. Jack London's The Call of the Wild was banned in Italy and Yugoslavia in 1929 as "being radical."

Marc Connelly's innocuous and charming play Green Pastures was banned in England and Norway in 1929 because it showed God on the stage; the play won the Pulitzer Prize that same year. Dante's Divine Comedy was burned in France in 1318 and fell under the Inquisition in Lisbon in 1581. The Spanish Inquisition also banned Francis Bacon's Advancement of Learning in 1640.

In 16th century England, Sir Thomas Mallory's The Birth, Life and Facts of King Arthur was denounced as "bold adultery and wilful murder."

The first printed book to be banned in England was the Tyndale Bible, not for blasphemy but because of Henry VIII's sensitiveness on the subject of divorce.

And what about Shakespeare? In 1597 the original version of Richard II contained a deposition scene of the King, and it so infuriated Queen Elizabeth that she ordered it eliminated from all copies. It was not reinserted until after her death in the edition of 1608.

As late as 1931, The Merchant of Venice was eliminated from the high school curricula of Buffalo and Manchester, New York. Jewish organizations believed that it fostered intolerance.

Darwin's Origin of the Species was banned from the Cambridge University library, although Darwin was a graduate of Cambridge. In 1925, a Dayton, Tennessee, teacher, John T. Scopes, was found guilty of having taught evolution based on Darwin's theory in the high school and was fined $100.

Chief counsel for the prosecution was William Jennings Bryan and chief defense counsel was Clarence Darrow. As a result of the decision, a law was passed forbidding any teacher in the state "to teach any theory that denies the story of the Divine creation of man as taught in the Bible, and to teach instead that man has descended from a lower order of animals."

Or consider Mark Twain's Adventures of Tom Sawyer, which was excluded from the children's room of the Brooklyn public library. In 1885, Twain's The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn was banned in the Concord (Mass.) public library as "trash and suitable only for the slums."

James Joyce's Ulysses also created quite a stir. In 1922, the Post Office department burned 500 copies of the book and another 500 were also burned by the British Customs authorities at Folkstone. Nevertheless, Joyce's original manuscript was sold at a New York City auction for $1975 in 1924.

Even Walt Disney's Mickey Mouse and the Popeye the Sailor comic strips have been on the list of banned books. In 1937, the Mickey Mouse comic strip was banned in Yugoslavia because of a supposedly antimonarchial story pictured of a plot against a young king and a conspiracy to place an impostor on the throne. At the time a regency by Prince Paul was ruling the country during the minority of King Peter.

In 1938, the National Conference of Juvenile Literature in Rome decided that Disney's works were unsuitable for the minds of children, and editors were instructed to eliminate them as counter to "Italian inspiration as to racism, and exaltation of the imperial, Fascist and Mussolinian tone in which we live." And as late as 1954, Communists in East Berlin raided the schools in search of Western books. They found Mickey Mouse comics and banned them as Mickey was classed as an anti-Red rebel!!!

Perhaps the moral of these banned books can be summed up by Voltaire (whose works also suffered extensively from the censor): "I disapprove of what you say, but I shall defend to the death your right to say it."

Sheraton Corp. Awards Plaque To H&R's Rood

At a reception and dinner held in the Comstock Room of the Sheraton Palace last week, the Sheraton Corporation Plaque was awarded to Wolfgang Rood, a graduating student in the hotel and restaurant department.

In addition to the presentation of the plaque, the event paid tribute to the accomplishments of the graduating class, who number 32 this year. Lawrence Wong, personnel manager of the hotel and restaurant department, said.

James Stahlbaum, sales financier of the Sheraton Palace and T. Devean, assistant executive manager, were responsible for dinner arrangements.

Both faculty and students in the department nominated three candidates, George Campbell, Douglas Gibbs and Rood. A committee of the Sheraton Palace Hotel, representing the Sheraton Corporation, selected the winner.

Rood, selected as an outstanding student and judged on the basis of his accomplishments in the department, is German born, a native of Wuppertal, Western Germany.

In addition to his work here, he works part time at the Hilton Inn near the San Francisco airport. He plans to enter San Francisco State College in the fall to major in business administration.

"I will stay in this country after I have graduated from San Francisco State and go into the hotel and restaurant business; I feel there is a tremendous future in this field," Rood said, after receiving the award.

After solid student interest in The Guardsman is established, wouldn't the next logical step be for The Guardsman to promote more participation in the college's affairs and help stamp out INDIFFERENCE?

• 'Moro Controversy'

Editor, The Guardsman:

In my opinion the material published in The Guardsman is of a limited source, but it is well covered.

However, there should be controversial articles in each publication. This will help the students to keep abreast with what is happening around them and give them an opportunity to express their opinions.

The Guardsman could occasionally have an article reminding or encouraging students to write their opinions, criticisms or suggestions and send them to the editor. The student body, as a whole, I think, is aware that it does have this privilege, but sometimes we need to be reminded that this is our paper, and it is up to us to inform the editor of our point of view whether it be complimentary, critical or suggestive.

June 6 D-Day For Text Book Resale

Resale of books to the Ramporium will begin Thursday, June 6, Dick Main, manager of the Associated Student bookstore, announced last week.

No records are required for the resale of books at the end of a semester, he said, advising students wishing to return books to do so as soon as possible.

"We accept all current books; in other words, books that are presently being used and that will be in use the following semester," Main explained.

Scholars in the possession of books of a later edition have an opportunity to dispose of them on June 10 and 11 when a purchaser will stay at the Ramporium to repurchase textbooks.

Sydney, Australia, is 10,500 miles away from Paris, France — or visaversa.

Forum Available Friday
Editor Encounters Problem As Advertiser Causes 'Ad' Delay

By Chris Welzig

Rena Kitch is a young lady with a problem. Her problem? Forum magazine, or specifically, getting Forum into print and onto the stands at the Ramporium.

Miss Kitch, Forum's editor, had planned publication so that issues would be available last Monday. A petulant advertiser threw a wrench into her plans by stalling on an important ad, thereby causing a publication delay.

Although the magazine won't be available now until Friday, she allowed The Guardsman a sneak preview of Forum's content (her mock-up copy), and it proves to be as diversified as she promised.

Miss Kitch believes that a literary magazine should be more representative of the artistic fields at the college, and her influence is certainly felt in this year's issue.

While not relying heavily (as past issues have) on short stories, Forum includes costume designs, a newly written piece of music by Donald A. Cooper, a stage setting, a fair sprinkling of poetry and an interesting woodcut by Lee Weisman.

Alfred Pace's story about a hard-working janitor in a state park who tracks down a hard-working litterbug has a twisty ending, while Eddie Hanson's A Day In The Other World directs one's thoughts to the derelictsville on the Third street which every town possesses.

There are pages of bright poetry; Robert Anderson, Richard Gumbiner, Jubal Turner and others have contributed thoughtful materil here.

Forum goes on sale at the Ramporium—50 cents to non-Associated cardholders and free to cardholders.

Arab Speaker Lectures Friday On Middle East

Compiled by Francine Dubonnet

Topping College Hour events Friday, a lecture by the director of the West Coast office of the Arab Information Center will be held in S-100, sponsored by the International Relations Club, Joseph Jacobsen, IRC sponsor, announced.

Farouk A. Mawlawi will be the speaker.

"He will discuss the current problems facing Arabian countries," Jacobsen stated, adding that the Arabian areas are now facing organization setbacks and that Mawlawi is well-informed on the subject.

His latest visit to the Middle East was two years ago, at which time he met with several high-ranking Arab officials. He assumed the position of director of the San Francisco Information Office last year.

Jacobsen has urged all students and instructors to attend this lecture.

Several campus clubs have scheduled elections of officers for College Hour Friday:

• The Real Estate and Insurance Club will meet in C-202. In addition to its election, an outstanding man and woman member of the club will be presented with awards, Saul Samuels, club president, said.

• The Merchandising Club will meet in S-258; the Collegiate Christian Fellowship will gather in C-201 and the Engineering Society will meet in S-200.

• Sue Davis, Recreation Association president, announced that the RA will hold a council meeting in C-221.

• Members of the Newman Club have received election ballots in the mail and have been requested by President Burt Lauray to return the filled-out forms as soon as possible so that they may be tallied and fall semester officers chosen.

Fox Learns Kenpo Style Karate, Finds Profession

By Pete Franklin

The areas of business endeavor covered by students here are great and diverse, but the part-time occupation of Steve Fox, 20-year-old freshman business major, is as unusual as it is interesting.

Fox is a Karate instructor at the Kenpo Karate studio, 1422 Ocean avenue. He studied under Ed Parker, one of the nation's top Karate men, and after his first 14 months of training, earned his brown belt.

"The Kenpo style of Karate (empty hand) fighting is derived from Gung Fu, a Chinese self-defense method initiated by Buddhist monks to protect them from would-be attackers," Fox explained.

Kenpo differs from the Japanese style of Karate in that it features a circular striking motion. The Japanese style, with its square shouldered frontal attack, has the advantage of maximum power concentrated on a focal point in each blow, but Kenpo's circular motion enables a man to strike a greater number of times (three to five) with each motion.

"I wouldn't venture a statement as to which method is better; each has advantages and disadvantages, and each is effective," Fox commented.

While other schools concentrate on stance and pinans and katas (combined series of fighting movements), the Kenpo school's main objective is to teach practical self-defense methods for specific instances. For this reason, it concentrates on readying students for Kumite—simulated street-fight conditions.

Fox neither teaches nor encourages hardening of the hands and feet. "That is left entirely up to the individual," he said. His classes are comprised of persons from every walk of life and though relatively small, as in most schools of Oriental arts, his classes continue to grow as Karate becomes more popular in the country.

"Karate," Fox asserted, regretfully, "is widely misunderstood in the Caucasian world. I wish more people would take an interest and explore its finer points."

WATCH YOUR CONTROL — Steve Fox (left) goes through a maneuver with Al Tracy, part owner of Kenpo Karate School.—Guardsman photo by John Miller.

Fox, who studied Judo under Nishi Hara, a Japanese Judo master, for two and one-half years where he earned his brown belt status, took up Karate at 18 when he became interested in its fluency of movement and its coordinating and conditioning effects. "Now that I hold two brown belts (Judo and Karate), my only regret is that I didn't start studying Karate earlier," Fox said.

"I intend to continue study here through the fall before going into the Air Force; and then I plan to study and teach Karate as a profession," he added confidently.

Nielsen Retires At End Of Semester

COOKING INSTRUCTOR In the college's hotel and restaurant department for the past 18 years, Edmund Nielsen will retire at the end of this semester. — Guardsman photo by Cypriano Ayalin.

H&R Instructor's Career Spans More Than 50 Years

An avid swimmer, a "Jack Benny-type" violinist, and a world traveler describe Edmund Nielsen, cooking instructor in the college's hotel and restaurant department since 1945, who plans to retire at the end of this semester.

Actually, Nielsen is best known for his accomplishments in the art of food preparation. His career encompasses more than a half century. At the age of 14-plus, he began as an apprentice cook in his hometown of Copenhagen, Denmark.

From Denmark he went to London, England, where he gained employment in the culinary profession. Nielsen came to the United States in 1918 and was promptly employed by San Francisco's famed St. Francis Hotel as a cook.

With this position his career was officially launched in this country. After the St. Francis, Nielsen worked at Berkeley's Claremont Hotel, and as sous-chef at San Francisco's Clift and Sir Francis Drake Hoteis.

He also served as head chef at the Del Monte Hotel in Monterey County.

In addition, Nielsen found time to operate his own restaurant in the West Portal district of San Francisco, which lasted for more than a dozen years until he sold out.

Nielsen's hobbies center around swimming "all year 'round," and playing the violin. "My specialty is diving, and some people even say I'm an expert in it; I disagree, though," he added modestly.

"I play the violin mainly around the house. That way I only disturb my wife," he continued.

The Nielsens live on Portola Drive, have two children and five grandchildren. Asked if his two offspring are interested in the H&R business, Nielsen remarked, "Thank goodness, no. They're both executives down the Peninsula."

As for future plans, Nielsen hopes to return to Denmark for another visit with his parents.

Dr. Sanborn Shows Teaching Methods With 6th Graders

Dr. William Sanborn, noted archeologist, as a guest of the college in the video-taped production series, Teaching The Gifted, recently demonstrated here—with 15 sixth grade students—his methods as an approach to teaching, Henry Leff, TV and radio department instructor, stated today.

Sanborn, director of instructional materials for the San Francisco Unified School District, conducted as an experiment "the first of its kind made by the district for the district as an in-service teaching film for elementary teachers," Leff explained.

"Excavation tools, maps, artifacts and even a skull were used in the lesson and passed among the children to be examined. They were asked to identify an object such as an arrowhead, thereby scientifically formulating reason by deduction," Leff said.

Because of limited space in the broadcasting room, the group of approximately 35 students from the West Portal Elementary School was divided into two groups.

Films of the Master Teacher Approach, Leff emphasized, are designed primarily for teachers in an attempt to show every teacher a systematic method to impart zeal for a subject, and to stimulate and excite curiosity into self-exploration of the subject.

Forum To Release Copy In C331A Next Tuesday

Students who submitted manuscripts and other material for publication to Forum magazine may claim them in C-331A next Tuesday (June 4), between noon and 3 p.m. from Marsha Latham, copy editor, Catherine Connolly, Forum adviser, reported yesterday.

Access to copy may also be obtained during regular posted office hours throughout the first week of June, Miss Connolly added.

Council Adjourns With Passage Of CJCSGA Budget

By Patty Smith

Student Council increased its pace last week and passed the final budget just a few minutes before outgoing Associated Student President Bill Silver rapped the gavel and adjourned the final meeting of this council for the semester.

The proposed budget of $2580 for the Freshman Class came under fire again when council member Joel Cohen reopened debate. Rich Thomas moved to amend the motion by deleting a dinner dance.

The motion passed, and council allocated $805 to the Freshman Class.

Council moved on and in rapid succession allocated $1187 to Student-Faculty Relations, $520 to the physical education department, $748.20 to the Sophomore Class and $369 to posters, signs and banners.

Next on the agenda was the A Cappella Choir budget. Phil Robbins moved to allocate $2102 to the choir so that they could purchase 100 new choir robes all at once. Some felt that council could afford only to allocate $1602, while a minority wished to delete the provision for choir robes entirely and allocate $102 to the choir.

Finance Chairman Phyllis Webb continually repeated, "We are over the amount we can allocate," but council allocated $1602 to the choir.

Janet Sisk moved to allocate $1109 to the Rally Committee, and a debate ensued among several council members as to whether there really were song girls and yell leaders. Miss Sisk stated, "If you ever came to the rallies and games, you would know that there are."

Council finished by allocating $1109 to the Rally Committee, $6160 to the executive budget and $500 to the California Junior College Student Government Association.

Prediction Comes True

Diederichsen Says Champion Netters As 'The Best Ever'

RICH ANDERSON

Having swept one tournament after another as predicted, the Ram tennis team is still described by coach Roy Diederichsen as "the best tennis team in the history of the college."

At the beginning of the season, Diederichsen said that nobody would beat his team. Now, three months later, the Rams have beaten every university frosh team played except Stanford's 4-3 edging, captured the conference title with a perfect 7-0 record, won the Northern California meet with a record 17 points and retained the state title.

Veteran Bob Siska, who many coaches feel is the best player to come out of San Francisco in a long time, led the Rams in both singles and doubles. The ex-Junior Davis Cupper reached the finals in singles at all the tournaments and won the NorCal meet, downing Horst Ritter, 6-2, 6-3.

Ritter was the only player to beat Siska in conference play. In doubles, he and frolicsome Ed Jilka were unbeatable, their only loss coming to Kamakana and Davis of San Mateo after the team had won the meet, 6-0.

The pair captured all three titles and insured the state crown for the Rams with their 6-4, 6-4 doubles win over Johnston-Saxton (San Diego) for the title.

Phenomenal Rich Anderson went undefeated in conference play and reached the semifinals in the NorCals and the quarterfinals in the state meet before defaulting because of sunstroke.

In doubles, teamed with either Gordon Miller or Bob Murio, the twosome reached the semifinals in the conference meet, placed second in the NorCals and reached the quarterfinals in the state.

Jack Kern rounded out the veterans and, although fifth man, accounted for points all-year long and fought a tough match in the NorCal quarterfinals, losing to teammate Miller, 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. On any other team, Kern would be second man, but the Rams were four deep in great players.

Newcomers Murio and Miller helped the Rams all year long. Murio was second man without a loss throughout conference play, and Miller teamed with Anderson to take second place in the NorCals.

Murio will be lost to the Rams next year since he is only a freshman on a scholarship. All the Rams have received tennis scholarships attesting to their ability.

Sequoias Take NorCal Track As Rams Finish Eighth

An afternoon in which two meet records and one national record were set saw powerful College of Sequoias rack up 75 points to win the Northern California Junior College Championship meet at Modesto on a hot and windy day.

The Rams finished eighth with 24 digits.

With the top four men in each event going to the state meet at Modesto, the college was paced by long distance runner Gene Piotkin, an ex-Balboa runner, who placed second in the mile with a 4:24.2 and third in the two-mile with a 9:55.7.

Lonnie Brantley, the college's star broad jumper, jumped out 24-1¾ at Modesto but could take only third place. Weight man Pat Lewis took third place for the college in the discus by throwing the platter 154-10½.

Big Les Mills of Foothill College broke his own national two-year college discus mark with a record heave of 187-5½ inches to break the record of 173-3 set by Ram Alex Darnes. Don Castle finished second for a 1-2 Owl placing.

Owl Don Castle, the national shot-put record-holder, after fouling on his first three throws, finally tossed the iron ball 55-13¾ for a new meet record as 260-pound Mills placed second for a 1-2 Owl finish.

Contra Costa Comet Ed Booth set a record in the broad jump and still took second place as Levi of Oakland took first place with a wind-aided 24-8¼ leap. Booth had a wind-aided 24-2¾ jump for second place.

Bill Cowings paced College of Sequoias by winning the 100 and 220-yard dashes in 9.6 and 20.8, respectively. He anchored the winning Sequoia mile relay team to a 3:19 clocking.

The team trophy went to College of Sequoias with 75 points, followed by San Mateo with 58, Foothill 56, Contra Costa 38, Fresno 33, Oakland 31, San Jose 28, San Francisco 24, Reedley 16, Taft 16, Monterey Peninsula 12, Diablo Valley 11, Santa Rosa 10, San Benito 8, Stockton 5, Modesto 4, Hartnell 4, Saeramento 3, Porterville 1 and American River 1.

'Divine' Cagers Win At Sports Night

In a night filled with karate, basketball and boxing, Gil Gallego emerged as the Fightingest Fighter, and the Divine Ones with the intramural basketball trophy last Wednesday in the men's gymnasium at the semiannual Associated Men Student Sports Night before a crowd of 500.

Wharton Brown and Henry King led the Divine Ones past Alpha Phi Epsilon, 33-26, despite Nolan Robinson's 15-point game high. The Divine Ones led all the way as they controlled the boards with their superior height. Brown hit 13 for the winners, while King sank seven.

Brown won the highest scorer title in the independent league, and Tom London from Alpha Kappa Rho took the fraternity crown.

The boxing saw George York decision Al Rivas for the 132 trophy. Charles Faison decisioned Charles Gilbert in the 136 division. John Green took a split decision from Roseo Teruya in a close bout for the 142 title.

Gallego won the Fightingest Fighter award with an impressive technical knockout over Phil Alberto in the second round.

Gallego caught Alberto with three blows to the head that sent Alberto stumbling about the ring, and referee Len Beatie stopped the contest.

In the 152 division, Syl Tracy took a decision from John Young.

During the intermission, the Karate exhibition was presented by Jim and Al Tracy and three of their students.

Al Tracy gave a small historical background of the sport, explaining its origin. Then he teamed with his brother to show some of the basic moves.

The demonstration concluded with Jim Tracy breaking a concrete slab and two-inch boards.

Rounding out the boxing, Bob Harris decisioned Omar Beard for the 160 title, and Ray Lynch and Grady Farley fought a tough bout, but settled for a draw in the 185 bracket.

College Honors 82 Athletes At Block SF Dinner

Presentation of Most Valuable Player awards to All-Conference Everett Adams in basketball, Ed Jilka in tennis, Dennis Drucker in golf, Herman Fruehtenicht in swimming and Rich Nold in baseball, highlighted the Block SF Society's awards banquet held Monday night in Smith Hall.

With Ed Montague, the San Francisco Giants' head scout, as guest speaker and Jack Burgett, president of the Block SF, as master of ceremonies, 82 athletes received their awards.

Basketball players who earned letters are Art Adams, Everett Adams, Bill Denniston, Stan Fuelscher, Weston Hatch, James Keenan, Elton McGriff, Ken Scalmanini, Randy Simms, Mac Smith and Andy Woods.

Seven members of the state championship tennis team earned their letters. They are Rich Anderson, Ed Jilka, Steve Jones, Jack Kern, Gordon Miller, Bob Murio and Bob Siska.

Swimmers earning blocks are Fruchtenicht, Richard Gray, Charles Greninger, Mark Haskell, Jeff Higman, Dave Stone and Fred Wales.

Varsity baseball players claimed 20 letters—Jewell Bacon, Lou Bevilacqua, James Bisio, Ron Bringle, Burgett, John Bussanich, Rich Farrell, Gus Geraldi, Philip Gervasi, Pete Giovanola, Bob Greenberg, Hershel Hollie, Bill Hynes, Clarence Jenkins, Russ Kunkle, Nold, Joe Dal Pogetti, Joe Villacenzio, Walter Williams and Dave Wormal.

Trackmen who won letters are John Arberry, Lon Brantley, Clarence Coleman, Jack DeAngelo, Glen Diffenbaugh, Art Flowers, Tom Gardner, Peter Giachetti, Larry Heckard, Bob Hector, John Johnson, Pat Louis, Eric Neilson, Dizzie Norris, Barry Noss, Gene Piotkin, Tim Power, Tom Piggee, Claude Shipp, Jose Valle, Loe Washington and Andy Woods.

The five golfers who won their letters are Dennis Drucker, Rich Orme, Jim Roman, Mike Selsnik and James Wisefield.

Junior varsity letter winners are Jack Burgett, Larry Curran, Jack Downey, Steven Hart, Dan Levy, Gerald Noble, Howard Oliver, Russ Rege, Bob Weekly and Walter Williams.

Recreation Association Presents 34 Awards At Semiannual Dinner

By Fran Dubonnet

With the presentation of awards to 34 outstanding students, the Recreation Association held its semiannual installation-awards dinner May 21 in the activity room of the women's gymnasium.

Following a roast beef dinner, prepared by Maude Reidy, custodian and caretaker of the women's gymnasium, RA President Sue Davis welcomed 50 guests, including Dean Mary Golding, Dean Ralph Hillsman and several alumni and RA members.

Miss Davis presented gifts to Frances Galloway for her sponsorship of the association and to Mrs. Reidy for her help in "preparing all the meals for RA events."

Miss Davis was awarded a gavel on a wooden base by Fran Richardson, RA historian, for "her fine work as RA president."

Following the "welcome and thank you" aspects of the dinner, club managers presented awards to deserving team members.

Badminton manager Donna Lleces, who earned a block award, in turn presented one to Carol Wong and a shield award to Terry Santos.

Basketball manager Sharon Ganon and Phyllis Jackson received shield awards.

Harry Jorgensen, fencing manager, presented block awards to Oscar Dinwiddie and Gary Cooper and shield awards to John Buckley, Donna Fetesoff, Charles Miller and Marilyn Nichols for outstanding fencing.

Bruce Albert, Orlanda da Costa and Beverly Galten received star awards from Folk Dancing Club manager Sharon Winter, who also received a block award. Miss Winter gave block awards to Michael Fioretino, Madan Misra, Marguerite Nagy and Linda Rathbone.

Modern Dance manager Gloria Washington received a shield.

Jim Davenport, RA Council of Organizations representative, presented the awards for the volleyball club. Donald Peterson and Richard Surabian were awarded RA blocks. Miss Davis, Joyce Holeman, Guy Oei, Miss Richardson and Virginia Rush received RA stars.

Vince Contreras, Bruce Klein, Joe Marin, David Mueller, Jim Posner and Charlotte Smith were given shield awards from the RA volleyball club.

RA officers for Fall 1963 who were installed in office at the dinner are Fran Richardson, president; Miss Wong, vice president; Miss Smith, secretary; Miss Lleces, treasurer, and Marin, historian.

Ruth Wimmer was awarded the "outstanding service award" for her "helpful participation and volunteer work in the RA this semester" by Miss Galloway.

After the awards were presented, alumni members were requested to add their names and addresses on the mailing list, which will include this semester's graduating RA members.

RAMBLINGS

Spring Sports Picture Story Of Comebacks

By Dave Kleinberg

ROBERT SISKA, grim and determined, regained some of his old prestige by defeating Foothill's Horst Ritter for the first time in three meetings this year in the NorCal tennis championships.

Siska's comeback, although marred by a loss to Ritter the subsequent week, was pretty much indicative of this spring's sports picture.

It was a picture of expected triumphs and unusual comebacks. It was a picture that took three San Francisco teams down to the final contest to decide the championship, with the Rams emerging twice on top.

For the tennis team it was almost easy. Coach Roy Diederichsen said right from the beginning of the season that this was his best team ever. It was hard for anyone to believe that statement. His team the year before had won and had brought the college its first state tennis title.

When Diederichsen mentioned names like Murio (Bob) and Miller (Gordon), and you looked at the kids' high school records, you knew Diederichsen wasn't kidding.

He wasn't.

They went undefeated in conference play, crushing undefeated San Mateo in the final match of the year, clinched the conference title after the first day, set a record in winning the NorCal crown and finished at Santa Rosa with state championship No. 2.

Swimming coach Roy Burkhead is handicapped each year—he just never sees enough swimmers to get something really started. He carried only eight of them this year but pulled a stunner in the Golden Gate Conference championships by sneaking in third behind Foothill and Oakland.

The baseball team, aided by a host of stars from San Francisco high schools, went from a 3-11 and last place in 1962 to a race for the championship, which ended tragically in the last game of the season.

Rich Nold, who had pitched so brilliantly for the Rams over the long, rainy season, was beaten by Foothill, 7-3, and the losers settled for a second-place deadlock with San Mateo at 9-5.

As a team, Lou Vasquez' trackmen were buried by San Mateo's Ron Benson and Foothill's weightmen, Lee Mills and Don Castle.

But in the conference meet, Ram Bob Hector surprised everyone by running the best 120 high hurdles of his life, 14.7; Lon Brantley jumped more than 24 feet for the first time this year (24-1) but lost to a San Jose jumper.

Scholastic ineligibility crippled the golf team's chances of sneaking into third; both San Mateo and Foothill were firmly entrenched in the top spots. The Rams settled for fourth, a half-game behind Diablo Valley.

Basketball, which really can't be considered a spring sport, although it ends during the spring semester, went down to a title tie, before San Francisco walloped Oakland and went on to third in the state tournament.

Ram Shortstop Signs With Cards Of National League

Rich Farrell, quick moving with his glove on the field and with his bat at the plate, was signed last week by the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League.

He was assigned to the Brunswick, Ga., club of the Georgia-Florida League. The 6-0, 175-pounder, an All-City shortstop at Balboa two years ago, hit .320 for the Rams and made the first string Golden Gate Conference team.

In 1962, he played at San Diego before returning here.

The Cardinals did not announce the amount that Farrell received for signing.

Others named to the Golden Gate All-Conference squad were Rich Nold, pitcher (5-3), and Walter Williams, outfielder, .337.

Coach Larry Lawson, after one season, intends to retire from coaching this year to devote more time to his work in the criminology department.

Kelly Third In Miami Handball; Seattle Is A Different Story

Mike Kelly, an 18-year-old freshman here and one of the nation's top collegiate handball competitors, pulls no punches when the question of his ability arises.

In between his third-place conquest in the Tenth National Intercollegiate Fourwall tournament at Miami, Fla., and his trip to Seattle for the National Open, Kelly candidly admitted, "I won't have much of a chance at Seattle.

"I'm going for the ride and experience," he said. "All the top handball players from the East, especially from the area around New York where the game is considered a big minor sport, should dominate."

• • •

Kelly was right. The 5-9, 140-pound Riordan High graduate got past the first round of singles by default, but lost quickly in the second round, and lost in a first round doubles match.

Kelly, who competes for the Olympic Club, said after the matches, "I'm not up there yet. They didn't expect me to win, but there's always next year."

He almost hit gold at Miami in the intercollegiate business last April 12.

• • •

He advanced to the semifinals before the University of Texas' Boris Orlin, a tournament veteran, put on the heat.

And that wasn't the only heat. In 90-plus degree weather, Kelly, the only representative from the West Coast, took salt tablets through a three-hour marathon, the longest match of the tournament. He lost, 20-21, 21-15, 21-20.

In 1960, Kelly started fooling around with handball at the 7th and Lincoln Way courts, and joined the Olympic Club last June. He collaborated with Jerry Arngbarger to win this year's Bay Area doubles.

He practices with the best—Bob Brady, ex-National champion, and veteran Bob McGuire.

Final Friday C-Hour Schedule Marks End Of 'Play-Day' Era

By Chris Welzig

College Hour may never be the same.

Often forgotten until the 10-minute-early ringing of the bell at 9:50 on Friday mornings, College Hour usually popped up unexpectedly for most persons and created an aura of restfulness after a prodigious week of classes.

Way back in 1946, the late President A. J. Cloud announced the creation of a Friday College Hour schedule in which student participation in pep rallies, assemblies and the like would be required, and he stated that, furthermore, the cafeteria would be closed during that hour.

The College Hour schedule lasted through the years, and even though at times participation slowed to a trickle, everyone was urged to attend functions during those well-appreciated 40 minutes, but students who just wanted to take a load off their feet (and mind) weren't discouraged from just flopping somewhere on campus.

Friday's College Hour schedule remained in effect from 1946 until last Friday, May 31, 1963.

It had been long felt by some faculty members that College Hour was a nice thing, but that it upset the teaching schedule too much. Some even began to refer to Friday as "play-day."

Well, "play-day" on Friday is no more. Recent administrative action switched College Hour to 11 a.m. Thursdays, effective next semester, when no classes will be scheduled.

Rigorousness may well supplant the restfulness of Fridays in past years—especially for a faculty long accustomed to a prolonged Friday morning coffee break.

AWS Honors Judy Carlson

Judy Carlson, a general education major here, was presented with the Associated Women Students' special Service Award at the semiannual Feminine Fling last Wednesday in Smith Hall.

She received the award for her outstanding services performed for the AWS.

Also at the ceremonies Theta Tau was awarded the Margaret Dougherty Trophy for holding this semester's top scholastic average among all the college's sororities.

Other announcements were Rosie Fang as next semester's AWS president and Fran Richardson as Recreation Association president.

Beatrice Malone, a member of Phi Beta Rho, was introduced as the fall semester's new Inter-Sorority Council president.

The 12 best-dressed coeds on campus who participated in the Glamour Magazine contest earlier this semester received pins as awards.

The Feminine Fling, whose theme this semester was A Woman's World, is cosponsored by AWS, RA and ISC.

College Honors 78 With Scholarships Totalling $12,000

Scholarships totaling $12,000 were presented to 78 students in an awards assembly during commencement exercises last Friday in the theater.

The assembly, honoring graduates as well as scholarship winners, drew a capacity audience, and was carried by closed circuit television from the theater to the arts building choral room.

Scholarships were available for only one-half of those who submitted applications. The quality of this year's applicants, however, was unusually high, Dean Mary Golding said.

• Winners of the Archibald J. Cloud scholarship were Jane Hannigan and Robert Hanlon, and the Margaret Dougherty scholarship was awarded to Luise R. Krois. Celia Saeks received the J. Paul Mohr scholarship.

• Recipient of the Edith Pence scholarship was Marie Dufau, while Paulette Dusdall and Imogene Walker were awarded the James Denman scholarship.

• This year's Lucille Lesser scholarships were awarded to Wayne MacDonald and Hamilton Wong. The Florence Louis scholarship was presented to Barbara Sperring, and the Mary Roberts Scott scholarship to Eleanor Lew.

• Betsy Erkkila and Richard Thomas won the Alpha Phi Omega scholarship.

• The California Scottish Rite Foundation scholarship had seven winners this year. They are David Alindugan, Larry Attinger, Robert Bachman, Peter Barnard, Alan Levy, Charles Miller and Alan Poletti.

• The Chinese Students Club awarded scholarships to Barbara Bergk and Shirley Chang, and the Square and Circle scholarship was won by Janice Chow and Rogena Jeong.

• Graduating Class of 1962 scholarships went to Ted Arellanos, David Bartlett, George Campbell, Patriek Flaherty, Goro Fukumitsu, Wayne Gillette, Benjamin Ho, Bruce Lindal, Owen McClurg, Glen Nance, Leroy Piccinini, Brennan Polley, Wolfgang Rood, Kay Sera, Charles Swanson and Sandra Tofanelli.

• The music department's Flossita Badger music scholarship was awarded to Carrato Lindsey. The ornamental horticulture department awarded the Alice Eastwood scholarship to Dennis Mattos, Merle Prescott, Gary Podesta and Luciano Queirolo.

• The Mrs. Edward Dewitt Taylor Memorial scholarship from the Garden Club of St. Francis Wood was presented to Kenneth Hoppe.

• In the business department, Bank of America scholarships were won by Sadako Hino and Barbara Shattuck. Miss Hino was also the winner of the Wall Street Journal scholarship.

• Gayle Wilson was the winner of the Dental Assistants' Dr. E. Frank Inskipp scholarship, and the Medical Assistants scholarship went to Betty Chin.

• Physics scholarships from the Piekett Slide Rule Company were won by Armand Attia, Alex Dong, Andrew Luize, Robert Materson, James McMillan, Kenneth Sever and Masanori Yoshikawa.

Menges, Trabucco Win President's Plaque For Outstanding Service

By Jean Zeidler

The President's Plaque, awarded annually to the graduating man and woman who have contributed outstanding service to the college, was presented to Lorraine Menges and Robert Trabucco at the commencement assembly held last Friday in the theater.

Miss Menges, a graduate of Immaculate Conception Academy High School, completed requirements for the Associate in Arts degree last February. She majored in general education, returned to major in medical assisting and will have completed this terminal program at the end of this semester.

Miss Menges won the award on the basis of her active partieipation in the Newman Club and Associated Women Students. She was one of two delegates from the college to attend the National Conference of the Newman Club held in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Outstanding partieipation in regional conferences was a contributing factor in her receiving the award. Miss Menges is a member of the executive boards of both the Newman Club and AWS, and was in charge of decoration at the AWS fashion show and tea this semester.

In addition she worked as a registration assistant last semester.

The second winner of the President's Plaque, Trabucco, is a graduate of Lincoln High School, where he was the technieal engineer for the drama department.

Trabucco is an electrical engineer major here and has put his knowledge to practical use as the master electrician on the theater staff. Trabucco was also the technical director for the drama department productions this year.

He won the award on the basis of being one of the most valuable persons in the drama department over the last five semesters.

In addition to presentation of the scholarships, special awards to graduates and certificates to 34 students graduating with honors, both the A Cappella Choir and the College Concert Orchestra contributed to the program.

The program Friday marked the first combination of the traditional scholarship awards assembly and commencement ceremonies.

Previously, an awards assembly preceded a formal commeneement program by at least one week.

Horticulture Student Wins New Award

The first $100 scholarship offered in memory of Mrs. Edward DeWitt Taylor was recently presented to Kenneth Hoppe, a student in the horticulture department.

The scholarship, which was presented in commencement assembly eeremonies last Friday, is given to the outstanding student in the horticulture department, and according to Dean Mary Golding, the purpose of the scholarship is to encourage study in the horticulture field.

Michel Janicot To Head Fall Guardsman Staff

Members of The Guardsman editorial board last week unanimously elected Michel Janicot Editor in Chief of the newspaper for the fall semester.

The election also placed Boyd Burtnett in the position of managing editor; Dick Bullard, staff editor; Fred Wales, sports editor; Chris Weisig, feature editor, and Patty Smith, news editor.

Janicot was feature editor this semester, Burtnett was staff editor and Bullard was news editor. Weisig and Miss Smith are in their first semester now, and Wales is a second semester journalism major.

102 Qualify For First Honors List; 19 Hit Bull's-Eye

A total of 102 students enrolled here last fall qualified for the college's first Honors List, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction here, announced last week.

To obtain a berth on the list, which will be compiled each semester, Luckmann explained that a student must make at least a 3.5 grade average while carrying a minimum of 12 units.

Of the 102 on the first Honors List, 19 hit the bull's-eye with a 4.0 grade average. They are:

Barbara Bergk, Russell Call, Robert Hawkins, Sadako Hino, Joan Jeong, Terry Kandall, Henrietta Kelso, Stuart Kepner, Gene Lakeman, Robert Lewon, Robert Marchand, John McKenzie, Masami Motozaki, Marian Pardini, Wolfgang Rood, Norman Spangler, Ernest Thalinger, Brian Tom and Donald Vasconcellos.

The following students had a 3.5 or better grade point average:

Gertrude Adams, Carmen Aguirre, Jeannette Allyn, Joseph Almirol, Donald Asplund, Armand Attia, Kenneth Bachtold, Lorenzo Bagtas, Leroy Banks, Leonard Barton, Robert Batterton, Beverly Bergk, Ronald Block, Tony Britton.

Ronald Carriere, Shirley Chang, Betty B. Chin, Lawrenee Courter, Marie Dufau, Pauletti Dusdall, Carolyn Earl, Patricia Ellerbeck, Betsy Erkila, Henry Fearnley, David Ferris, Richard Flahaven, Gloria Garibaldi, Jonathon Goiwyn, Stephen Goodman, Wendy Groner, Robert Hanlon, Jane Hannigan, Rogena Jeong.

Charles Kaldahl, Gary Kingzett, John Koroloff, Kasi Kurose, James Lallas, Marsha Latham, Parke L. Lee, Eleanor Lew, Claude Lhospital, Paul Lucia, Byron K. Madsen, Lorenzo Mariauella, Judith Marsh, Janice Meiaeh, Albert Mendoza, Jaime Merbaum, Richard Michael, Charles Mohn, Patricia Moore, Clifford Moss.

Joyce Nakagawa, Todashi Nakazawa, Glenn Nanee, Albert Napolitan, Michiko Nichols, Earl O'Brien, Patriek Perroit, Kathryn Quan, Cecil Reichert, Carolyn Relei, Eleanor Reynolds, Samuel Riker, Barbara Rivara, Richard Rusyn, Stephen Samuels, Blair Ann Sawyer, Gail Shainfeld, Barbara Shattuek, Marion Simpson, Constanee Slobodchikoff, Charles Swanson.

Melvin Taylor, Gregory Tilden, Flora Torres, Jane Treber, Gayle Wilson, Haley M. Yee, Masanori Yoshikawa, Jiro Yoshioka and Arthur Zoloth.

Japanese Student Captures Still Another Honor

Sadako Hino Wins Wall Street Journal Award, Receives Medal And Subscription

Sadako Hino, an accounting major, honor student and native of Japan, was the recipient of the Wall Street Journal Award as well as the Scholastic Cup in ceremonies here last Friday.

Miss Hino received a silver medal and a year's subscription to the Wall Street Journal.

Graduating this semester with an overall grade point of 3.84, she had been the winner of several other awards in the past. Among these were the $100 Bank of America award and the $50 Chinese Student scholarship.

Coming from Ramakura, the holy city of Japan on the island of Honchu, Miss Hino (shown at right) first visited the United States as a tourist four years ago and then returned to attend college.

Upon graduation, Miss Hino will be employed with the California Packing Corporation in San Francisco as an assistant accountant.

"After a year and a half on-the-job training," she said, "I plan to return to Japan and work there."

Miss Hino is presently residing with Mr. and Mrs. Laurence D. Benamati at 40 San Benito Way in the St. Francis Wood district.

It Was A Year Like All Years, But...

'Infamous' Shack Blossoms With Flowers, Meader Turns Out For Dimes To Overshadow 50-Mile Skate

By Boyd Burtnett

This being the last issue of The Guardsman for this semester, it is almost a tradition that a rehash of some past major events be included. So be it.

David Kleinberg became the 31st Guardsman editor in chief to lead the newspaper into winning the Associated Collegiate Press All American award.

Kleinberg also received city-wide publicity for a journey he was prevented from making. In the height of the "50-mile hike" craze that swept the nation, he proposed to make the trip on roller skates.

College officials and Campus Police had other ideas.

On the sports scene, the Ram netters again captured the two-year college tennis crown in the state of California and the soccer team proved to be so tough for the four-year institutions in the Bay Area that it was dropped from the league.

Being rational about the whole affair and therefore starting with the last first, the campus saw Vince Contreras finally make it to the position of Associated Student president.

Also rising from the depths of defeat was the amendment to the AS constitution that campus elections be opened to all students registered at the college.

Last semester the Shack, a building where persons could go for recreation and study, was racked by vandalism, gambling and controversy and was subsequently closed.

Perhaps the building had become a symbol of debauchery about the campus because the horticulture department took it over for a few days and made it a display room for flowers, thereby depriving it of some of its more romantic qualities.

Vaughn Meader, star of the now famous "First Family" recording, was refusing to play at Enrico Banducci's hungry i because of money but at the same time showed up at the college for free to promote the annual Mile Of Dimes campaign.

As a matter of fact, the result of the Mile Of Dimes campaign was a little confusing to a few in that the total collected was 3303½ dimes—and no nickels.

Drifting back to political matters, the third semiannual nomination convention broke another attendance record; a new low was set. This proved surprising to campus political observers who believed that things could not get worse in this field.

All of this is now recorded in the annals of the history of the college. Students tend to look forward into the future rather than in the past—except when studying history.

New AS President Formulates Promising Budgetary System

THE INEVITABLE suggestions of the semester's end are upon us: the election of a new Associated Student president; the approval of budgets; the commencement assembly and the 13th issue of The Guardsman.

Vince Contreras was elected Fall 1963 AS President in another election fiasco, a farce because only a scant 977 students voted, representing barely 18 per cent of the student body.

Nevertheless, an experienced, capable student leader was elected. Already this leader is formulating a new budget system, similar to the one suggested by The Guardsman last week.

Under Contreras' new policy, an organization would submit to council a data sheet, listing all expenditures made during Fall 1963; that year's expenses would act as a criterion on which to estimate the Spring 1964 budget. Then, with this information before them, councilmen could question the organization's leaders on all phases of the budget and arrive at a logical, fair decision.

Currently, budgets are judged on the dubious basis of size of organization and on a pithy data sheet listing probable semester expenditures. This information alone has proved to be almost valueless.

Since some organizations—drama, for example—are not sure of the exact amount of money needed to finance a semester's activities, it would be folly to judge a budget on probable expenditures alone. However, together with a complete account of the preceding semester's expenses, council can then estimate and better understand the budgets and can avoid the controversy that disrupted recent council meetings.

BY FAR EXCEEDING the problems of new budgets and elections is the astonishing lack of concern shown toward City College commencement ceremonies. Nonattendance at this event is a direct affront to the high academic standards maintained by the college.

Last Friday's commencement program was the first one at the college in 27 years in which ceremonial formalities were eliminated. The elimination of formal exercises was enacted because so few graduates attended the affair last semester and semesters preceding. An additional note of despair is evidenced here by many students who request the resumption of a formal commencement but who admit that they themselves would not attend.

THROUGHOUT THIS SEMESTER The Guardsman has directed its critical gaze toward these and 12 other college events. Some were viewed with delight, others with annoyance. Generally, reader response has been gratifying; many students have expressed their satisfaction with this volume of The Guardsman. But toward those whom we've annoyed, we can only be sympathetic, because it was they who made the news; we merely reported it.

Sukiyaki, Tortillas And Burgers Give H&R International Flavor

Though hamburgers and apple pie typify the national food of the American student, this is not where the line is drawn in the college cafeteria.

The fragrant aroma of sukiyaki or tortillas drift by noses of hungry students many days of the college week.

The hotel and restaurant department at the college is not only well known in the Bay Area and California but is known overseas as well. This is evidenced by the 31 foreign students, representing 13 foreign countries, currently enrolled in the department.

Major representation is Japan with eight students presently enrolled, seven are from Hawaii, all of whom come from Honolulu, and there are five students from the Philippines.

"Though the students have not had the time to prepare their national dishes for their American colleagues, they have, on occasion, delighted the instructors and administrators of the college in the faculty dining room with rare and exotic cuisine," Nina Tucker, in charge of the faculty dining room, said.

"Many of these foreign students either have worked in hotels before or have parents who own and operate hotels and restaurants," she explained, adding:

"The students come to the college for our program, and many of them then return to their countries to continue work in this field and resume work in the family businesses."

What Is The Most Unusual Summer Job You Ever Held?

By Barbara Snell

Betsy Erkkila, freshman:

Last summer I decided to do something that would put me in the great outdoors. So I worked as a pear picker in Lake County, California. It was really exciting because I met all kinds of interesting people. Someone would shake the tree and we would pick up the pears from the ground. It was hard work and now I hate pears.

BETSY ERKKILA
"Last summer I worked as a pear picker in Lake County. I now hate pears."

Hugh Dickson, freshman:

About the most unusual summer job I have had was working as a truck driver on a goose farm. In the morning I would take all the geese out to the fields to be fed, and in the afternoon I would bring them back. Although it wasn't too exciting, it was different.

Sue Rohrs, freshman:

For the last three summers I have been a dancing teacher. I teach ballet, tap, acrobat and ballroom dancing to students from three years on. I teach classes and also give private lessons. Our school has put on shows for such organizations as the American Legion and the Letterman Hospital.

Carlos Rivas, sophomore:

Last summer a friend and I worked our way to Europe on a freighter. The hardest part of the trip was getting our seaman papers. With the aid of the money we earned on the ship plus what we had saved, we saw most of Europe.

Mary Ann Wilcox, sophomore:

My last three summers have been spent as a junior volunteer at a local hospital. At first I just delivered messages and mail. Gradually I earned more responsible assignments and now I have spent over 1000 hours as a nurse's aide. I now plan to go to Nursing School at the University of California Medical Center.

Bob Hassing, freshman:

I haven't had any unusual summer jobs in the past, but this summer I am going to work as a cowboy in Argentina. A friend's uncle owns a ranch down there, and he hired us for the summer. Our day will start at sunrise and end at sunset. It will be hard work but interesting.

Barbara Berman, sophomore:

Two summers ago I worked correcting aptitude tests given to 4-year-olds. The children who took the tests were from schools all over San Francisco. I plan to teach in the primary grades, so the tests gave me an insight to the potential and ability of 4-year-olds.

Bill Jonas, sophomore:

Last summer I worked for a logging company up north. I was on a crew that fought blister rust. Blister rust affects certain pine trees. It is caused by rust fungi, producing blisters externally. If the trees were too far gone, we would cut them down; otherwise, we would just spray them.

Unsung Hero Of The Theater

Bob Trabucco Vital Cog In Show Production

Although many people become familiar with the more glamorous aspects of the theater, few know about a very important cog in the wheel of all shows—the production department.

People in the production department are responsible for getting a show going, and without their efforts there would be no production. One such young man who works behind the footlights in Shakespeare's King John is Robert Trabucco, an electronic engineering major here.

Trabucco, who graduates this semester, has been eating, sleeping and living production for many years. He began his career as school projectionist in the fifth grade, and had his first taste of show production while working on sets in the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, HMS Pinafore, put on by his West Portal Elementary School graduating class.

Production is a full-time job. Trabucco not only is master electrician on the theater staff but also is technical director for the shows produced by the college this year. Some of Trabucco's duties involve the directing of painters and handling the rigging with the new winch system.

Trabucco explained some of the work that went on for the production of King John. "Ron Lang designed the sets and we went ahead and built a model stage with the sets to scale.

Occasionally small problems arise which tended to make the work more interesting. "One day," Trabucco said, "someone turned on the refrigerator upstairs and unknowingly blew out all the lights in the theater. The instructors were upset, and it was quite a job getting the lights back in working order so that class could continue."

Avant Guardsman!

SIC QUID ALLIUD NOVI." So what else is new? Since the semester is drawing to a close, springtime air is flowing through the window, and finals are just around the corner, students and instructors alike are anxiously awaiting June 14.

However, this week, pantheistic belief pushed Avant Guardsman to deflect from the usual lucubrations of the weekly column to a potpourri of extravaganzas.

First, for our cigar-smoking fans, may they be advised that the longest and most expensive cigars in the world are the "Partagas Visible Immensas" from Cuba, measuring 10½ inches and selling for just $7.50. Of course, that was before Fidel (alias Bluebeard) Castro took over the cigar industry and probably smoked them all or handed them around to his friends in Moscow a few weeks ago.

Of erudite newspaper readers, they should know by now that the best newspapers in the United States are the New York Times and the Christian Science Monitor. A further fact is that the thickest issue of the Times ever published was that of November 11, 1960; it had 636 pages and weighed 6½ pounds.

Now we'll shift to another field, much more interesting and educational . . . women. As singer-composer-guitarist Georges Brassens once said, "If all women wear the same manufactured dresses, a Frenchman won't be able to tell his wife from his girl friend."

Its' a fact: women are losing their allure in France. It's a national scandal. The men blame the women for the sad turn of events and the women blame the men. This is known as the entente cordiale. Age has little to do with it, as older women frequently possess more allure than college girls.

The woman with allure is happy to be a woman and such a lady likes men completely, not superficially, and French allure is based upon individuality. To walk the feminine way while barely holding the man's arm is a second miracle.

An oscillation of the hips, a properly curvaceous figure and a short, tripping gait is the answer to everything.

Pretty lingerie has allure, too! A bit of lace petticoat peeking out has it, as tight girdles do not . . . To sum it up, deliver us from girls who demand, complain and criticize.

(P.S. A certain Count wants to form a partnership with the author of this column.)

'Tough Guys' From The 'Right' Side

Delinquency Not Confined To Leather Jackets

(Editor's Note: Juvenile delinquency plays no favorites— it plagues the wealthy, destitute, illiterate and erudite with equal impact. On this theme, a Guardsman reporter wrote the following analysis of her district based upon her own observations.)

By Sherri Jones

I live in a locale within a middle-class district of San Francisco. Since this district encompasses a wide area, I will attempt to discuss juvenile delinquency only within this locale.

Although I would like to, I cannot say with any accuracy that my district is free from delinquency. In fact, I feel, as do many of my neighbors, that a great deal of juvenile crime has its very roots in my district. I know this to be true because of statistics, because of individual cases, because of public attitude.

When I asked a few neighbors, merchants and friends their opinion of juvenile delinquency—what they thought constituted a crime, what a juvenile delinquent looked like and just exactly what a j.d. was—I received a variety of replies:

"A delinquent is any youth between the ages of 15 and 20, 12 and 19, 13 and 21 and "teenagers" who are ". . . smart alecks and show-offs . . . know-it-alls . . . big guys . . . tough guys . . . rebels against society, parents and authority (although some is justifiable) . . . have chips on their shoulders . . .

"Lack something to do . . . needing sports or a job as an outlet for their energies and to occupy their spare time . . . lazy . . . insolent . . . trying to attract attention in immature ways . . . needing severe discipline . . . difficult to handle."

Many of these are accurate descriptions of delinquents or at least those traits which have a tendency toward delinquency However, some degree of these "traits" may be found in any number of boys who aren't necessarily "j.d.'s." (Those queried do not feel a crime need be committed to categorize these youngsters.)

However, their sons, many of whom habitually lift tires, strip cars, drink excessively, participate in racial gang wars, speed to the point where their cars become deadly weapons—these are but "healthy" outlets for young men out for fun. After all, their sons come from the "right" side of the city and from the better homes and families.

These guys don't have to steal for personal gain but rather for the kicks derived from it. They destroy, deface and otherwise disfigure public and private property often merely for the satisfaction and attention it affords them.

Many adults describe a delinquent as one who ". . . needs a haircut and bath . . . his pants are too tight . . . is sloppy . . . slumps . . . his posture is poor . . . is extremely careless in dress and grooming."

Perhaps this is true.

However, the clean-cut collegian around the corner with the Roos/Atkins clothes and Bruce Bary sweaters and a '63 car (compliments of his parents) can get into trouble of a more serious nature than can the "black leather jacket and Levi set" across the town, whose skin might not be the "right" color and whose parents may not know the "right" people.

Why? More time and money on his hands, influential parents, and a number of other reasons, all centered around the economic comfort and slack attitudes of his parents . . . good parents who want the best for their children—and more than often this constitutes the luxury of a good time at another's expense, the comforts of a nice home and fine clothes and cars.

These boys — and girls — have so much that there is too little to strive for; they are bored and this boredom leads to excitement, dares, something different.

They grow up with the wrong ideals. It's all for good times . . . they needn't worry about the consequences for their parents are always on hand to straighten things out one way or another once things get a little rough.

Dad will come and get them when matters go wrong and in a few hours, after a stern lecture and a lot of meaningless threats, they're home in a comfortable bed with everything smoothed over by their ol' man.

It's nice, and these kids are fortunate. The world is generous to them. But it won't last—for someday there will be trouble too serious, dad will be too tired and everything will catch up with them.

For it is not the other kids who are unfortunate, it is they. They live their lives too fast just because they are able to—and they are destined to miss out on so much.

Council OK's 'Missing' Minutes, Votes IFC, ISC Separation From COO

By Patty Smith

It's called "the case of the missing minutes."

Associated Student President-elect Vince Contreras called the Student Council meeting to order last Tuesday, but it was apparent that many members of council were not present.

Roll call was taken and council then moved to dispense with the reading of the minutes. The motion was seconded and, as there were no corrections nor additions to the minutes, they stood approved. At this point, former AS President Bill Silver noted, "But there are no minutes."

Indeed there were not. A motion to reconsider the approval of the missing minutes was made but it failed. As the issue was apparently confusing to council, Contreras decided to move on to cabinet reports.

Contreras, acting as Council of Organizations representative, brought up the subject of the withdrawal of Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Councils from COO and called for a discussion and straw vote as to how council felt about the matter.

WALTI, DOLSON WIN AWARDS

Paulette Walti, Finance Committee Chairman assistant, and Lee Dolson, social science instructor, won Student Council's semiannual student and instructor awards, respectively, for service to the Associated Students.

John Theilen, next semester's State Information chairman, stated, "I feel that the split is due to the fact that the fraternities and sororities feel that they do all the work in COO while the other organizations do very little."

Contreras agreed that this was one of the reasons advanced by the councils for their withdrawal, and he added, "I would like to remind council that they will have the final decision on the matter."

Contreras also commented on the problem of representatives not returning to their respective clubs and reporting what was discussed in COO meetings. He felt that this could be solved if the presidents themselves of the respective clubs attended the COO meetings rather than a representative.

Silver commented that perhaps the withdrawal of the councils would be "a shot in the arm" for COO. A straw vote was then taken and most members of council were in favor of the withdrawal, and of having the presidents themselves represent their clubs at COO.

Student-Faculty Relations Chairman Phil Robbins announced that there was to be a concert last Tuesday night, but his voice was not audible in the back of the room and KCSF President Bud Ewing asked if Mr. Robbins could "please drone a little louder."

Joel Cohen announced that he must decline council membership for Fall 1963 because he has been elected president of IFC.

3 Campus Police Share Award

A $500 scholarship from the International Footprinters Association was shared by Thomas Cain, Albert Mendoza and Jerrold Shirinian, three criminology majors, during recent ceremonies here, Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor, announced last week.

This annual award was presented by Fitzgerald at a Campus Police award dinner May 28 at Ed's Chuck Wagon restaurant.

A three-man committee, headed by Fitzgerald, Lawrence Lawson, criminology instructor, and Louis F. Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal education, made the selection of the three, who graduate this semester, Fitzgerald added.

Cain was chief of the Campus Police organization this semester and acted as its representative to Student Council.

Mendoza was deputy chief of the Campus Police organization this semester, member of Student Council and of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society.

Shirinian acted as sergeant in the Campus Police organization, and is a member of a championship pistol team.

Galliani, Herting Reign As Soph King And Queen

Lou Galliani and Randee Herting were named Sophomore King and Queen at the semiannual Sophomore Ball May 24.

Voting for the "royal couple" was conducted during the week preceding the ball at the silver pole in Science Hall and in the fountain section of Smith Hall.

A penny donation for a specific contestant constituted one vote, and proceeds went into the class scholarship fund, Sophomore Class President Mike Nevin stated.

The "royal pair" led the first dance.

Eckert To Retire After 22 Years In Advertising Art

By Herm Kligerman

"Thousands of well-equipped students and numberless personal additions of his . . . prove beyond question that breadth, the variable dimension of time, was cherished reality to him."

This paragraph appears on a certificate presented to William Eckert, advertising art instructor here since 1941, who plans to retire from his teaching career at the end of this semester.

The certificate and an engraved silver platter were presented to him by the faculty and students at last month's Student Council dinner.

At a "surprise" dinner last Saturday, 90 of Eckert's former students, all active in the advertising art profession, established the Bill Eckert scholarship for the college's advertising art department.

The party was a surprise until 3 p.m., Saturday, when Eckert received a telegram from Copenhagen artist Millard Sheets, also a former student.

Upon joining the faculty 23 years ago, Eckert organized the advertising art curriculum. Since that time he has aided in drawing the advertising art and graphic arts departments into a closer relationship. Now, upon his retirement, the two branches are approaching the intended perspective.

"Through the efforts of William Davis, art instructor, an advisory committee of top art people in the country has been established in the department," Eckert noted. "Davis will coordinate the curriculum with able assistance from faculty members William Svabek and John O'Brien," he added.

Two members of the newly formed committee are graduates of the college's advertising art program. They are Joe Romero and Gig Goneila, art directors of different Bay Area firms.

Another member of the group represents Walter Lander and Associates, a top packaging design company in the country today.

Eckert, who doesn't like the word "retirement," is leaving the realm of teaching to devote more time to his "other interests." These include working as art editor for the San Francisco Press and Union League Club's Scoop magazine and finishing two murals of his own.

Travel is foremost in his mind for next summer.

"My main regret in leaving the college is that of severing the daily association I have had with the faculty and administration here," he commented.

His biggest reward — "Seeing students in the department develop and branch out as leaders in the professional advertising art field."

The certificate of tribute concludes with the sentence, "We who have so greatly profited from his stay with us wish him to come back often."

Summer Signups End Tomorrow

Registration for summer classes ends tomorrow and the session starts Monday, June 24, Mary Jean Learnard, registrar, announced today.

"So far, 12 classes have been closed to registration, but there is a long list of subjects still available," she noted.

"We've had a flock of students from colleges in the San Francisco area try to register for summer classes in order to take advantage of the free tuition, but our summer courses are for students at this college and June, 1963, high school graduates only," she emphasized.

Registrants for summer courses at the college number 150 more than last year's, and she stressed tomorrow's closing date as the final day to register.

The 1960 census of Japan showed the population to be 93.4 million, or well over half that of the United States—and on less than a twentieth of the soil. The average population density is of about 654 persons per square mile.

Club Cavalcade: Finals End Events

Compiled by Francine Dubonnet

In preparation for final examinations, most campus organizations have ceased activities for this semester after electing Fall 1963 officers during meetings last Friday.

• Newly elected officers of the Recreation Association are Fran Richardson, president; Carol Wong, vice president; Charlotte Smith, secretary; Donna Lleces, treasurer, and Jim Marin, historian.

• The Real Estate and Insurance Club had as its final guest speaker of the semester last Friday a representative from the Fireman's Fund Insurance Corporation.

• Before the semester concludes, Home Economics Club members will donate bean bags to a local orphanage. Members have been in the process of sewing the bags during the past several weeks.

• Final Bible study classes for the Collegiate Christian Fellowship will be held Friday from 11:40 a.m. to 12:20 p.m. in bungalow six and next Tuesday from noon to 1 p.m. All interested students are requested to attend.

Football Graduation—Elston's Nightmare

By David Kleinberg

The age-old problem of graduation faces Ram football coach Dutch Elston like a nightmare in a haunted house.

Elston, looking forward to his second Golden Gate Conference campaign after finishing fifth with a 3-4 mark last year, lost approximately 675 pounds of interior linemen talent when center George Benkie, guard Jack Burgett and tackle Dennis Drucker completed their eligibility last fall.

Oh yes, and Coleman's gone, too.

All-American Ron Coleman, whom Elston last year described as "our best runner, best blocker, best defensive back and best pass receiver," has departed for the University of Utah after dominating Ram statistics in 1962.

The passing attack of next fall's club will ride on the arm of Craig Schwartz, who, off his 1962 record, doesn't look very impressive. He threw 24 passes in nine games, completed only seven for 68 yards and had six intercepted.

But the 190-pounder, who played prep ball at Lincoln High, has a real strong arm and the potential to become an outstanding passer, a noticeable deficiency in the Ram attack for more than three years.

Ben Brown, hobbled with injuries in 1962, and Charles Stewart are backfield returnees.

In the line, Elston expects back first-team tackle Joe McGinity, center Rod Someya, guards Phil Assia and Bruce Marovich, all of whom saw limited action. Someya and Assia, both from Washington High, lack nothing in the gut department only in the weight, both hitting the scales around the low 170 mark.

At the ends, slender Howard Oliver and Mike Scanlon appear the best prospects of the returnees. Wharton Brown looks good on defense.

A big aid in the line, if he is as good as his weight, will be Charlie O'Brien from Oregon, who was ineligible last year. He weighs 310.

New prospects (those presently enrolled here) are Galileo's Ed Parker, a halfback; Riordan halfback Joe Sobeck, Lowell guard George Benetatos and Pat Lewis, a halfback from Lincoln and one of state's better discus throwers.

Henry King, a basketball player by first rights, could be a tremendous help if he decides to give football another whirl. At Poly, King was king. He was switched from end to quarterback in desperation and performed more than adequately. At end, he might have made All-City.

The big question mark, however, will be what freshmen enroll in September. Names like Mission's Oliver Mitchell, St. Ignatius' Tom Kennedy, Balboa's Rich Columbo, etc., dance around in Elston's head during dream time, but until they're officially enrolled, it ain't doing us no good.

College Names Patton, Lewis To Hall Of Fame

Two ex-Ram athletes, football star Gary Lewis and track ace Paul Patton, were elected last week to the college's sports Hall of Fame for 1963.

The selection committee was composed of Dean Ralph Hillsman, athletic director Jack Gaddy, counselor Bill Fischer and instructor Tom Wilson.

The award is given annually in recognition of noteworthy accomplishments in the area of athletic endeavor to two outstanding graduate Rams who displayed potential and ability while here.

Lewis, All-American from Polytechnic High, was Big Eight Conference "back of the year" in 1960. Lewis, 6-2 215-pounder, quarterbacked regularly for the club, doubling at fullback. He was noted for his break-away running ability.

At the end of the 1960 season, Lewis led the Rams in passing, scoring, interceptions, and was second only to "his other half," Tom Piggee, the Rams' Most Valuable Player of 1960, in rushing; as one coach put it, "He was a hell of a good ballplayer."

Patton set Ram records in 1958 for the mile and two-mile distances which still stand. At one time he held the national two-year college record time of 4:16.7 for the mile.

Patton was also the mainstay in the Ram cross-country assault of the same year. After continually turning in firsts in distance running, however, he announced that he intended to give up track in order to have enough time to devote to his studies.

Patton in one afternoon ran the mile in 4:16, and then after only a 20-minute rest, with machine-like infallibility, cranked out a 9:34.3 two-mile.

The other nominee in this year's selection was Roy Tripaldi, slugging All-Conference shortstop, who sparkled with glove, stick and spike in his 1958 appearance with the college baseball squad.

Lewis topped the selection list with 11 out of a possible 16 points, followed closely by Patton's 10.

GARY LEWIS, a hard driving fullback and All-City ace from Polytechnic High, was named to college's Hall of Fame.

Trackmen Drop To Last Place As Records Fall

Three Ram entrants in the state track finals—Lonnie Brantley, Pat Lewis and Gene Plotkin—were eaten alive along with many of their Northern California friends by the Southland at Modesto May 25.

"Those fellows beat each other every week down there," said coach Lou Vasquez. "Anyone can do better if the competition pushes him."

Brantley, who had hopes of a 25-foot broad jump all season, but rarely cleared 24, was obliterated.

Plotkin, who had "yet to run his best race," probably did, but his efforts were marked by a sixth place finish. "Gene did better under the pressure of the meet," Vasquez said, "but when you get men who are used to running the mile and two mile in short times, Plotkin can't break any records." The best mile time was 4:09.6.

Lewis, discusman, also finished sixth in his event, but saw ex-Ram Alex Darnes' national two-year record heave fall.

Darnes' toss of 173-3 was substantially bounced by Les Mills of Foothill, who threw 187-5. The second place mark in the event also bested the old record by six feet.

San Francisco placed last in the meet with a score of two. "We didn't expect to work wonders," Vasquez stated. "But we saw a meet that was worth the ride to Modesto."

Giant Scout Defends Quick College Signings

By John Arberry

"The Professional College-Baseball Plan enables players to continue their college education and play baseball," Ed Montague, the San Francisco Giants' head scout, stated in response to criticism of major league policy of signing collegians before their eligibility is completed.

"Any player signing through this plan will have all costs of tuition, room, board, books and fees at the four-year college of his choice covered up to $8000, with a maximum of $1000 per semester, regardless of the player's ability to make the grade," Montague said at the recent Block SF awards banquet here.

"Players go to college during the winter and play professional baseball in the summer. They are, of course, ineligible for any participation in college sports," Montague said.

"If a player fails to attend his classes or quits baseball, his scholarship would be forfeited, but if he were released by the club because of insufficient ability, then the club is obligated to fulfill the terms of the scholarship plan as long as he stays in college."

As to the potential of two-year college players, Montague commented, "Right here at City College are two fine promising players in Walt Williams, signed by the Houston Colts, and Rich Farrell, signed by the St. Louis Cardinals."

Montague, a player for 17 years, a manager for one and a scout for the past 20, stated, "I see possibly 300 games in a season which include high school, college, Legion, semi-pro and professional.

"San Francisco has some of the finest college and high school coaches in the country, and they teach the techniques of baseball used in professional leagues," Montague declared.

Commenting on having baseball on the program at future Olympic games, Montague said, "Although baseball is popular in Latin and South America and Japan, it is not world-popular, and although there will be an exhibition of baseball at Tokyo, it will probably be many years before it becomes a part of the regular Olympic program."

Walt Williams Signs With Houston Colt .45's

Slugging Ram outfielder Walter Williams was signed by the Houston Colts 45's following the end of the Golden Gate Conference season.

Williams, who batted .337 and belted six homers during the season, got the contract after a tryout in the Colt training camp.

According to Sid Phelan, Ram baseball coach, Williams is in Modesto to play through the summer.

"Walt has a lot of good equipment for a ballplayer, and he should do well in pro ball," Phelan said.

RA Sets Meeting To Plan '63-64 Events

Events for the 1963-64 Recreation Association will be planned during a meeting in September, Frances Galloway, RA adviser, said yesterday.

"There has been much more alumni participation this semester," she added.

One thing that made this semester different from any other was a meeting, for the first time, of RA advisors from all Bay Area colleges. A great deal of planning is going into the 1963-64 RA.

Booters To 'Make Best Of It' In New Conference

With a nucleus of seven veterans and a body of the high school's best, the Ram soccer team has adopted a "make the best of it" policy in its new Northern California Junior College Conference.

The league is the only two-year college soccer conference in the state, and as yet has no connection with any other conference or league. Conference members are College of San Mateo, Diablo Valley, Menlo and Monterey.

Each team will play a double round robin composed of eight games. The Rams will still meet the four-year colleges, but on a practice basis. In all, the team will compete in more contests than last year.

Q. Why Doesn't Tommy Davis Run? RAMBLINGS Brodie: He's Smarter Than That

By Dave Kleinberg

ART ROSENBAUM, the San Francisco Chronicle's executive sports editor, sorted the questions and then the fun began.

The occasion was the Furniture Mart's annual luncheon May 24, and the town's favorite Giants and 49ers put on the show, MC'd by the able Rosenbaum.

The Giants were represented by pitching coach Larry Jensen, Matty Alou, Felipe Alou, Ed Bailey and Billy O'Dell, while Ted Connoliy, 6-9, 265-pound Bob St. Clair, Clyde Conner and John Brodie were the 49ers.

In introducing Brodie, Rosenbaum pointed out that when John was on the serious golf trail, he continually practiced iron shots from the trees. "John would fire shots from behind the trees, to the left and to the right. Then the other day he hits a tree."

Brodie's cast was gone, but his face showed two deep scars from his serious car accident last month.

Rosenbaum introduced the guests individually, asking each questions received from the audience.

JOHN BRODIE, before the crash.

Q.—Billy Pierce, do you notice a difference with the new strike zone?

A.—Actually, not many of my pitches have gotten as far as the catcher.

Q.—Billy Pierce, what does Alvin Dark say to you when he comes to take you out?

A.—Good bye.

Q.—Ed Bailey, have you figured out how to hit Koufax, or are you going into the Dodger series tonight blind?

A.—What I think this question means is: we'll probably be blinded.

Felipe Alou was flooded with questions concerning his slumping bat, something Felipe was unable to explain. He was asked about Orlando Cepeda's suit against Look magazine. Felipe said, "It's nice to have a millionaire for a teammate."

Ted Connolly, the 49ers offensive guard, said he felt out of place among the champion Giants. "We've been trying for the championship for so many years."

Q.—Mr. Connelly, what is the relationship between the 49ers and coach Red Hickey?

FELIPE ALOU, in hitting slump.

A.—We'll find out this year.

Q.—Bob St. Clair, how long have you been eating raw meat?

A.—Ever since I was a little boy.

From the audience, "You were never a little boy."

Q.—John Brodie, why doesn't Tommy Davis run from punt formation? He was a good back in college.

A.—I think Tommy is smarter than that.

Q.—Mr. Brodie, when will the 49ers win a championship?

A.—It will come. We have a few weak positions this year.

Clyde Conner, the quick-moving end who has been hampered by injuries in recent times, added, "I hope John isn't talking about my position."

The Giants went out that night and knocked Sandy Koufax out of the box in the first inning with five runs. The 49ers went home.

SCHOOL YEAR

As It Was...

THIS IS HOW the college's new horticulture center looked as construction began last Spring. Students submitted plans for model gardens which will include a Japanese garden designed by Tad Nakazawa, a student here.

Horticulture Construction Ahead Of Schedule; Early 1964 Opening Seen

By Boyd Burtnett

Construction of the college's new ornamental horticulture building is ahead of schedule and Harry Nelson, head of the horticulture department, stated in a recent interview that he expects his people will move into their new quarters sometime after Christmas.

The large, sprawling ranch-type structure is being raised in the large dirt area adjacent to Judson Avenue, formerly used for student parking.

Construction also includes three greenhouses and two lath houses, located in back of the new building.

Architect for the new building is Alex Woolworth, a former horticulture student here and presently employed by the California Division of Highways, the department responsible for destruction of the old horticulture center.

This was an old, familiar green building near the men's gymnasium that had to be razed to make way for the Ocean Avenue freeway off-ramp now under construction.

"With the new facilities, the ornamental horticulture department will be closely knit. Prior to the destruction of our old building, we were spread all over the place," Nelson said.

Since last semester, the horticulture department has been housed in temporary quarters on the north side of the football field. Temporary greenhouses were hastily thrown up to house the 35,000 plants that Nelson and his people had to move.

The three new greenhouses are to be prefabricated and all that will need to be done on the college grounds will be the pouring of the cement foundations.

Nelson estimated the cost of construction to be around $40,000.

The moving of the plants, shelves, work tools and classroom equipment will be accomplished in the same manner as was the move from the now demolished horticulture center to the temporary quarters. Professional moving men, instructors and students all pitched in and gave a hand.

Nelson said that he estimates they will only have to move between 20,000 and 22,000 plants this time because they are forced to cut down because of their limited quarters.

One feature of the new building will be the splitting up of a greenhouse, one section to be used for a collection of 3000 orchids and the other for putting the mist system of irrigation into practice.

Another feature, according to Nelson, will be the permanent landscaping of the front of the building.

Members of the horticulture department are looking forward once again to obtaining permanent quarters and are already making preparations for the big move. "However," Nelson said, "moving will still be a major job."

...As It Is Now

Fall Semester Sets Another New Enrollment Mark

A new enrollment record was set at the college this semester, when a total of 9015 students was enrolled for day or evening classes, Miss Lois Learnard, registrar, announced today.

This new enrollment figure represents an increase of more than 500 over previous semesters and is the largest enrollment in the history of the college, Miss Learnard stated.

The previous enrollment high was set in Fall 1962 when more than 8400 attended evening or day classes. The reason for this increase in enrollment is attributed to overall recognition of the importance of a college education and the rising status of two year colleges in the community.

With this large student body it is expected that classes, reservoir parking, and the cafeteria will be congested and cause many new problems that have not been seen before.

The complete tabulation of registration statistics will be available later in the semester. At that time the break down representing the ratio of men to women students as well as the number of freshman students from each high school, will be announced.

At present there are 7265 students enrolled in a daytime program of study and 1750 in evening classes.

Radenzal Guest Speaker At First Of C-Hour Lectures

[illegible] Lecture Forum Series of the C-hour [illegible] will be the [illegible] at the 1st of the series for [illegible] to be held [illegible] Hall Speaker will be Guard [illegible] Herbert [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] Where the West I Goes. [illegible] Impression of [illegible]

Radenzal returned from a tour of West Germany, France and the USSR where he had an opportunity to interview top government and [illegible] figures of the countries.

His lecture will be just one of the many activities scheduled for the new Downtown College Hour time.

In previous semesters Friday morning classes were 40 minutes long with a College Hour scheduled between the 9 and 10 o'clock classes. College Hour time was changed with approval from the faculty and Student Council to a 50 minute period Thursdays at 11 a.m.

The change occurred because it was felt that students should not only be allotted a full hour for lectures, concerts and club meetings but also that classes would not be "chopped" on Fridays.

Certain laboratory and business courses must meet at this time because of our limited amount of space and demand for equipment, Lloyd D. Luckman, coordinator of instruction explained today.

Janicot Sets Guardsman Publication Schedule

Remaining publication dates of The Guardsman for this semester were released yesterday by Michel Janicot, chairman of the Publications Board.

The 12 remaining issues for this semester will appear on the following dates: October 2, 9, 16, 23, 30, November 6, 13, 20, 27, December 11, January 8 and 16.

Distribution stations for The Guardsman were also announced by Janicot.

There will be two in Cloud Hall, one in the library and one near the faculty offices. The newspapers will be distributed just inside the second story ramp entrance of the arts building, and at the entrances of Smith Hall and Science Hall.

Sorority Rushing Begins Monday; Members Needed

Sororities at City College begin their semi-annual rushing activities next week with chances for more than two continuing on campus this semester in doubt.

At the moment Theta Tau and Phi Beta Rho are the only two sororities meeting the requirement of 30 members. The other sororities, Delta Psi, Delta Sigma Tau and Kappa Phi have fewer returning members.

The sororities have until Friday, October 25 for the required number, Dean of Women Mary Golding said.

Efforts are expected to be made to rebuild the sororities during rushing beginning next Monday and ending Saturday, October 5.

Rushees will register in S 150 from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday and there is a registration fee of $1.

There will also be an all sorority tea from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, October 6, at the University Women's headquarters in the Womens' City Club.

Phi Beta Rho will hold a Fireside from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Tuesday, October 8. Theta Tau's is scheduled from 8 to 10 p.m.

On Thursday, October 10, Kappa Phi will hold its Fireside from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Delta Ps will hold one from 8 to 10 p.m. and Delta Sigma Tau, from 8:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.

COO Needs Support To Insure Homecoming Success

Council of Organizations will sponsor its "Day" during College Hour Thursday, October 3 and Homecoming Week festivities between October 7 and 11, but Buzz Krebs, COO president, emphasized that more on-campus club support is needed to insure the success of these events.

"At present," Krebs stated, "only one third of the recognized clubs and organizations here are attending COO meetings." He warned that unless the delinquent clubs start sending representatives they are subject to losing their on campus status.

COO meetings are held at 1 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday in bungalow six.

During COO Day, students will have an opportunity to get acquainted with many of the college's clubs, fraternities and sororities through booths which will be situated in the courtyard between Science and Cloud Halls.

Membership drives will also be conducted at this time by the respective organizations.

"Because we are only budgeted to have one dance a semester," Krebs explained, "COO has decided to stage that social at the end of Homecoming week on Friday, October 11."

Krebs also commented that Homecoming Week is scheduled "much earlier" this year. Highlighting the week of October 7 through 11 will be a football queen contest. Voting will not be by students at large but rather by a judging committee composed of three faculty members and three students.

Women may secure petitions to enter this contest at COO meetings, Krebs stated.

The actual crowning of the queen will occur during a College Hour rally Thursday, October 10 at the Redwood Ram. A car parade is also scheduled.

Two Dental Awards To Students Here

Two scholarships of $500 each were awarded to dental technology students here during the summer by the Fund for Dental Education, Inc., Chicago, Illinois.

The students, now in their second year, are Edward M. Inaba and Michael G. Phelps.

To qualify for the scholarships, the dental students must be nominated by the dental examining committee from the college with final approval from the Fund in Chicago, Frank G. Szeher, director of the dental program here explained.

The Fund judges applicants on the basis of their academic achievements, financial need and personal attributes.

The scholarships vary in amount from $250 to $720 and were created by contributions from four organizations: Dentists' Supply Company of New York, located in York, Pennsylvania, Luxene, Incorporated, and Luxene Processing Laboratories, New York City; Dental Gold Institute, Incorporated, Buffalo, New York, and National Association of Dental Laboratories, Washington, D. C.

Inaba received his scholarship from The Dentists' Supply Company, while Phelps received his from Luxene Incorporated.

AWS Hosts Annual Conclave October 5 In Theater

Approximately 300 [illegible] representatives of Associated Women Students from the Northern California college will meet in the [illegible] Theater Saturday, October 5 for their annual conference, Head Fairy AWS president announced today.

The one [illegible] conference will [illegible] with a keynote address by Mrs. Lee E. Martin, former [illegible] director of [illegible] Children's Hospital and now a member of the faculty here.

Mrs. Martin will speak on the Potential of the College Educated Young Wife.

Welcome address will be given by Judy Carlson, 1963 conference chairman. Miss Fairy, AWS president and Dean of Women Mary Golding.

Workshops on the various roles of the young college educated wife will be conducted by Mrs. John R. Upton, executive vice-president of the San Francisco Symphony Association; Mrs. Jane Hertzog, formerly of the University of Anchorage and now a sociology instructor here.

Mrs. William Hoskins, wife of an instructor here and a teacher in her own right, will discuss how young wives can combine a career with the role of a young homemaker.

Other consultants will be Dr. Iona Logie, veterans counselor; Mrs. William Webb, active in social organizations; Mrs. Glenn Molyneaux, world traveler, and Mrs. Theodore Doudiet.

Shipwreck Dance Due At Smith Hall This Friday

Phi Beta Delta fraternity will host its annual Shipwreck Dance from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday in Smith Hall, Jim Marshall fraternity president, announced this week.

The dance, with a south sea island decor, is open to all students. Admission is $1.75 with an Associated Student card or $2.00 with registration card only.

Tickets may be purchased from fraternity members on campus or at the door of Smith Hall Friday night.

As the first fraternity social of the semester, Marshall stated that all fraternities on campus are backing the event. The affair will serve, in part, as an introduction of students and new pledges to fraternity members.

Selection of a band for the dance is still to be made.

Carillons, Full Length College Hour—Signs Of New Semester

TO RETURNING STUDENTS this Fall, two events have made their initial appearance on campus. The first one is the change from buzzers to carillons, and the second one, College Hour.

The simulated carillons, which ring from atop Science Hall, were the climax to a long-planned move by Dr. Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator of instruction. Costing an approximate sum of $350, this new system, he hopes, will strike a more collegiate tone on campus. The Guardsman also wants to get away from the typical high school use of buzzers.

It appears that the only objecting conjecture is that which regards the change as a move toward the factory-oriented attitude of workers patiently waiting for the 5 o'clock whistle.

Another point is that the carillons suggest the sound of church bells. City College does not look like a church. In fact, it is not a church, even though the motto The Truth Shall Make You Free, towering high on Science Hall and quoted from the Bible, may give it that appearance.

We do hope, however, that the "rose" will awake students and faculty members alike so that they will be on time for their classes, just as they are for their weekly church services.

The other change, concerning the College Hour schedule, is not an experimental one and is here to stay. The administration has finally concluded that Friday morning classes, scheduled for the usual 50 minutes, were being shortened to 40 minutes to permit an extra class of 40 minutes also) to allow students to participate in concerts, rallies and the like.

However, students reacted differently. The cafeteria, originally scheduled to shut down during the period when College Hour was introduced in 1946, had no trouble welcoming lazy-minded students to its tables, while clubs, organizations and societies, meeting at that same time, waited for their members.

The College Hour schedule has been changed to allow uniformity of all classes and to bring to the attention of everyone the original purpose of this hour. Let us all enjoy the benefits of this hour and show our appreciation in gratitude and thanks to the administration, ever watchful for its students' welfare.

No Time For Loafers

IT'S THE SAME good story—Welcome to City College!

But it is also a different advice he ever watchful Beware of those fall midterm exams, for they shall determine your registration number for the next semester, beware of the so-called "retention standard" for which students must maintain a poor 1.5 grade point average or more. Plain English, a grade of D in order to remain enrolled. In view of that standard which might possibly be raised to a 2.0 grade point average in the near future.

We don't mean to scare you away. But enrollment keeps increasing every semester. "There will be no room for students who go to college to eat their lunch and waste time," College President Louis G. Conti emphasized this semester. To his advice, we would like to add a few. Always we hear the plaintive cry of teenagers "What can we do? Where can we go?"

The answer is GO HOME!

Rake the leaves. Wash the family car. Learn to cook. Scrub some floors. Paint a fence. Get a job. Help the minister, the rabbi or the priest. Be a Girl Scout, the Salvation Army. Visit the sick. Assist the poor. Study your lessons. And then, when you are through, and not too tired, read a book.

Your parents do not owe you entertainment. This city does not owe you recreational facilities. The world does not owe you a living. YOU owe the world something. You owe it your time and energy and if we adopt this attitude to come we will be at war or in poverty, or sick, or lonely again.

In plain simple words, GROW UP!

This is not a high school nor a glorified one. Do it over and call it. If you do, you do not belong here.

Collegiate Tone

EYESTRAIN AND NECK CRICKS seem to be the two predominant side effects of the college's simulated carillon system. Eyestrain from watching the clock; cricks from looking for the loudspeakers that amplify the chimes.

The four loudspeakers are located atop Science Hall. Two, (shown above), loom over the courtyard; one is attached to the radio tower on the south side, and one is on the extreme north side of the hall.

The chimes are styled after those of London's Westminster Cathedral, and boom out hourly and half-hourly each class day.

"The purpose of the Carillon," stated the system's installation supervisor, Fred Muller, "is to get away from the high school pass bell idea."

While some are satisfied with the "hallowed halls of ivy" aspect of the newly installed Carillon, there are a few murmurs of dissention concerning said "gongs."

This "Big Ben" of the college is currently inaudible in some parts of the campus. This, coupled with its temper tantrums, like striking ten times at 9:30, and occasionally not ringing at all, creates doubt as to its reliability.

Muller promises that the inaudibility of the tape recorded notes will be remedied in the near future by the installation of more speakers.

With $7 It's No Laughing Matter

Cut Rate Trip Strands Student In New York

Being stranded in New York with only $7 in your pocket is no laughing matter, as Alfred Young, a student here, well knows.

Events leading up to this minor catastrophe began when Young, a business administration major here, heard of a travel agency offering transportation to and from Europe for only $400. "Friends of mine were going, and it sounded like a good thing, so I decided to go," said Young.

Trouble began almost immediately. The plane was originally scheduled to leave Oakland June 18, but the flight was delayed until June 24.

More trouble followed. The plane was supposed to leave at 9 a.m., but Young and his friends found themselves standing in line until just before 3 p.m. when the plane finally took off for New York. Young explained "By the time we arrived in London, we were 15 hours behind schedule."

Young spent the next two months traveling all over Europe with his friends, blissfully unaware of the calamity that was to occur. When he arrived in Paris August 27 to catch his plane for New York, he heard discomforting rumors about the agency "losing its charter," but he tried to ignore them.

When he arrived in New York, he discovered the rumors were uncomfortably true. He and his friends (along with hundreds of others) were told they would have to pay an additional $59 for their passage home.

After two months of traveling, they did not have the extra money, so they turned to the classified pages of the New York papers and found a man who wanted his car driven to Phoenix. After arriving in Arizona, Young received the money to fly to San Francisco.

As Young said, "It was close. My

Finances Poor, So Student Turns To Tiki Wood Carving

Summer jobs can vary from apple-picking to saleswork. But not many students spend their vacations working on giant Tikis as Walter "Gus" Kelly did.

Kelly began his summer in Sausalito where he met Patrick Fitzsimen. Discerning that Fitzsimen was renovating a 35-foot powerboat, Kelly agreed to help repair the boat's engine for a 50 per cent share in the vessel.

Working on the powerboat didn't do much for Kelly's finances so he began looking for part-time work in Sausalito. Barney West, a local Tiki wood sculptor, was looking for an apprentice, and Kelly decided to give it a whirl.

Standing from one and a half to 22 feet in height and weighing from 300 to 2000 pounds, Tiki sculpture proved to be an impressive form of art. Most of the work is done by chain-saws, and very little is done by the human hand.

Most Tikis are made of redwood or pine and may cost up to $18,000.

Two of West's Tikis were recently placed in the new terminal at San Francisco's International Airport.

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

ONCE AGAIN that ole time in September has passed and the young of our nation look around to find themselves back in school. This includes that backbone of democracy, the college student.

It has been noticed that a few of the newer students are laboring under a misapprehension. They think they have come to college to acquire an education.

It is a well known fact within academic circles that college is not the place to get an education. If a person can read, he can spend a few hours daily in the city library and accomplish this purpose.

When you take into consideration how many people in the United States can read, this means that with a little effort about 45 per cent of the adult population could obtain diplomas.

But college is a dog of another color indeed. Today a person goes to an institution of higher learning to become "well-rounded."

For the female student, this means finding a husband. After marriage they usually become well-rounded 2.75 times, according to the latest statistics.

For the male student, "well-rounded" means the ability to get along with his fellow beings. He therefore masses with his jolly-good-fellows behind a few Greek letters and conforms. This is the secret of happiness.

It is apparent even to untrained eyes that City College is bound to be a failure in the American educational system. The administrators have neglected to put up any "well-rounding" facilities anywhere.

• There has never been an on-campus panty raid recorded in the annals of our history, nor has a Baby Grand once felt the bite of the fraternity man's axe.

(As a matter of fact, it would seem the fraternities at City College have even wasted their time on constructive projects such as blood drives, campus improvements and the like.)

• Also, there has yet to be seen around here the wonderful spectacle of 75 normal, adult, healthy college students trying to get into one, small, foreign, ivy-league Volkswagen.

It is enough to make one hang his head in shame when he looks at the slim list of achievements of this institution. It is a wonder we have not lost our accreditation!

Because of the narrow-mindedness of just a few, college students are being thwarted from achieving the most-sought-after title in the American society, the Organization Man.

If present practices continue, this institution may turn all of us into the most dreaded of all animal species, the Individual.

• • •

And now, for those students who wish to impress their English literature instructor for possibly a better grade, this bit of useless information is offered. The motoreyede that Lawrence of Arabia was riding when he was killed belonged to Mrs. George Bernard Shaw.

And so the history majors will not feel put out with no useless information of their own, they are hereby informed that Anne Boleyn one-time wife of King Henry VIII, had six fingers on her right hand.

The six digits did not quite exactly please old Henry and he made Anne wear gloves. Although history does not say so, it is apparent that the girl took off her gloves, so Henry took off her head.

Foresight The Next Best Thing To Being 4-F—Marriage

By Dick Bullard

BE OF stout heart you gentlemen with low grade point averages! (Veterans, disregard.)

If diminishing grades and advancing years have you in a state of somewhat less than glowing spirits, don't despair. There is yet another way to keep the roughness of khaki from next to your skin.

Thanks to Our President you have a brand new way to beat the Dreaded Draft. In a word, Matrimony. For two dollars, a gold band and a few seemingly harmless words, you can avert two years of Fun-In-The-Foxhole and gain a partner for a lifetime of connubial bliss. (Young ladies please take note; this can be a strong selling point.)

In days of old it was necessary for a man to have not only a wife but also a gang of kids in order to skip F.I.T.F. But as we all know it takes some time to build a deferment type family. This also involves some considerable expense. But now, owing to Mr. Kennedy's assignature, instant deferment is open to all.

So, gentlemen, don't look upon that little brunette sitting next to you as merely a starry-eyed date for the next dance. Look upon her as the next best thing to a 4-F classification!

A word of caution before a rash of young love springs up all over the country. Let's look at the minus side of the ledger. Be sure the young lady of your choice is compatible with your nature, because, let's face it, you're probably broke. The obvious solution is to find a girl with money. This is not always easy. Failing in this, the next best thing is to limit your prospects to those young ladies with practical natures.

By all means avoid girls whose idea of matrimony is a large cathedral, mountains of flowers and a standing army of bridesmaids and ushers. Your idea in getting married is to forego military hardships—not to finance the florist, the caterers, the photographers, the singer and the organist, just to mention a few.

Also, don't waste your time on indecisive females. You haven't got time!

Lastly, be sure your choice is going to stick by you. For if the two of you decide to call it quits, remember that lawyer's fees and alimony make your original investment seem like a drop in the old oaken bucket. Besides, this also defeats your first purpose and you automatically become a prime target for Uncle Sam's beckoning finger.

Now that you know the facts, make your choice. College is your only salvation. You must either study or start holding hands.

Coeds Place High In Lenox Contest

By Marcia Latham

Study in home economics here not only enables one to learn which fork goes where, but, in the case of graduate student Evelyn Hing, it also brings national acclaim and a rich reward.

For the fourth consecutive spring, Frances Lloyd, instructor of home economics, has had class entrants in the National Lenox Table Setting Contest with a total of eight finalists "in the money" and one honorable mention.

Capturing third place honors this year out of a group of 600,000 entrants, Miss Hing, "a shy, efficient perfectionist" was awarded by Lenox the equivalent of $400 in China, crystal and silver for her table setting entry. This includes four place settings of five pieces of China, four pieces of crystal and six pieces of silver.

Miss Hing's table will be on display here in the show case next to S-136 through Friday. Also on display will be the awards of the three runners up from this college.

As instructor of a winner, Mrs. Lloyd was also in line for an award and was given her choice of patterns of four place settings in Lenox china.

Miss Hing's good taste is evident in the choice of the most classic of patterns, the Lenox Olympia plateware in basic white with a fine gold border complementing the Debutante pattern in crystal and the Lark in silver.

"With a penchant for getting things done without fan-fare," Miss Hing, in her quiet way, went about her selection of the simplest and least expensive settings out of a choice of 24. Even though her mother was in favor of something more elaborate, she held to her original choice.

Rules of the contest permit a table planned for either indoors or out, for formal or informal and for a party or just a regular meal. All entries must be notarized as to their originality.

Coed Carol Scrievers, merchandising major, won two place settings of China for fourth class in the next group of 25 winners, while Suzanne Taylor and Geraldine Schaefer received a cup and saucer for fifth place.

As added incentive for entering the contest, Mrs. Lloyd includes it as a class assignment but does not give judgment. However, extra credit is given for those who receive mention. Entrants must be currently enrolled in home economics or have completed the course in the preceding semester.

Police Chief Cain Promises Strict Enforcement Of Law

Returning again as Campus Police Chief, Thomas Cain is maintaining a strict discipline for the campus force, and stresses the fact that parkng and speeding regulations will be strongly enforced.

Working along with Cain to keep things running smoothly will be Deputy Police Chief Al Mendoza, Sergeants Rich Phillips, Joseph Cressa and Jerry Shirinian and the officers of the campus force.

As many students probably already know, citations for illegally parked cars are already being given and can be avoided by following the parking and traffic regulations carefully. A complete list of regulations is available in C-120, and any questions that arise will be answered there, or by any officer on duty, Cain said.

All students who park in campus parking lots must have a student parking permit affixed to the lower right hand corner of the windshield, he warned.

To secure a permit the student must possess a valid driver's license and an Associated Student card, and bring these along with the automobile registration to C-120 where the permit will be issued.

Student parking is available in the following areas only—lots B, C, D, F and G, and the reservoir across Phelan Avenue. Some important points to remember, Cain added, are to keep out of all faculty lots which are plainly marked at each entrance and to park only in marked stalls and not along paved roadways.

To clarify some misconceptions concerning police authority, Cain emphasized that Campus Police have authority on campus at all times and also have jurisdiction on streets adjacent to the college.

Lost And Found Locations Now Open For Business

Students finding lost articles are requested to bring them to one of the following lost-and-found offices: C-303, A-201, S-149, or the Finance Office in Smith Hall. Inquiries for lost articles should be directed to the secretary in these offices.

All books should have the owner's name, address and telephone number clearly written in them in order to facilitate their return if lost.

Radio-Television Corps Initiates Campus Channel

Channel 13, the new channel for the closed circuit television here is expected to bring college viewers an improvement in sound and picture.

Channel 3, the present station, will become obsolete when new equipment is installed, Henry Leff, instructor of television and radio broadcasting, said last week. Plans to change this are expected next month.

Under Leff's supervision, students produce taped educational television shows for classroom use in this college. These programs include health education, English, communications and photography.

Education 30, an Introduction to Teaching, is a new series of tapes being planned for production this semester.

Dr. William Sanborn and Dr. Joseph Hill, both of the San Francisco school system, will be among the guest lecturers.

Other productions may include taping of a concert series, talent programs and of classical instrumental music featuring a trio or quartet.

All classrooms in the arts building are wired for television, both in closed-circuit and commercial reception. In Science Hall, only S-100 and S-136 are so wired for television.

Tanya Ury Begins Fall Concert Series

The Fall College Hour concert-artist series began last Thursday in the college theater with a piano recital by Tanya Ury.

The next concert, scheduled for October 10, will be by Frances Weiner and Lev Shoor; Eugene Jones will appear on November 7, and the Austrian String Orchestra will perform January 16.

The Student Series begins November 21 with a performance by the college orchestra and concert band. A choral concert will be presented on December 10 and a Christmas concert on December 12.

The last of this series will be held on January 7.

Committee Taking Applications For Two Scholarships

Applications are now being reviewed by the faculty committee on awards and loans for the Lucille Lesser and Scottish Rite scholarships, Dean of Women Mary Golding announced last week.

The scholarships will go to San Francisco high school graduates who are now students here. Winners of the awards will be announced after the first midterm week, October 14-18.

The Lucille Lesser scholarship, presented to two men students annually, amounts to $1500 each and extends over a period of four years. The funds are distributed on the basis of the student having a superior record in high school and attending four semesters here.

The scholarship was first presented to the college in Spring, 1962.

The Scottish Rite scholarships of $175 each are presented by the Scottish Rite Foundation of California every semester to graduates of San Francisco high schools to encourage them to transfer to a four-year institution, Dean Golding explained.

Candidates for the grant are chosen on the basis of their grade point average, ambition, need and activities participated in during both high school and college.

Dean Golding also announced that Alan Grey Merritt was last semester's recipient of the $1000 R.I.S. Foundation scholarship. This scholarship is open to sophomore men enrolled in a business oriented program of study.

The foundation, R.I.S., Inc., takes its name from the initials of its founder's belief of the "Right of the Individual to create and Sell his ideas and products."

The scholarship is awarded on the basis of the applicant's need and promise of success. The duration of the award is one year; however, applicants may apply for a second year, Dean Golding stated.

Merritt completed his course of study here and is now at the University of California, majoring in economics.

Opera Passes Free For Ushers

Students interested in ushering at the Opera House may obtain passes in S-150 and should do so as soon as possible, since the college may send only four student-ushers to each performance, Dean of Women Mary Golding announced today.

The program for the current season includes the presentation of Saint-Saens' Samson et Dalila at 8:30 p.m. tomorrow; Puccini's Tosca at 8:30 p.m. September 27, Rossini's Il Barbiere Di Siviglia at 8:30 p.m. September 28, Tchaikovsky's The Queen of Spades at 8 p.m. October 1, Tosca at 8:30 p.m. October 3, Verdi's La Traviata at 8:30 p.m. October 4, The Queen of Spades at 8 p.m. October 5 and Il Barbiere Di Siviglia again at 2 p.m. October 6.

Featured performers include Leontyne Price, Mary Costa and Dorothy Kirsten.

AS Card Sales Short Of Desired 3000 Quota

Associated Student card sales have reached close to 2500 this semester, according to Rich Thomas, chairman in charge of card sales.

"Our goal is a minimum of 3000 sales," Thomas said. Ruth Wimmer and John Theilen lead in card sales with more than 700 sales.

Card salesmen compete for sales with the winning pair receiving portable radios.

Student activities cost $35,000 per semester. Approximately 40 per cent of the funds come from card sales.

Information concerning AS cards is available at the AS office on the first floor of Science Hall.

Council Passes Amendment Approving IFC, ISC Walkout From COO; AS Vote Due

By Lowell Mengel

Student Council last week approved a proposed amendment to the Associated Student Constitution which will remove the section which now requires each individual fraternity and sorority to send a representative to Council of Organizations meetings.

The amendment will now come before the Associated Students for final approval. President Vince Contreras said the election may be held "in a month or so."

Action on the amendment began last semester when the individual fraternities and sororities felt they were doing most of the work in COO. When last spring's council brought the amendment up for a straw vote, it was approved.

In support of the amendment at that meeting, it was mentioned that the amendment was a result of the clubs "not doing their part."

The motion was approved by a vote of 9-0-0. Later action to reconsider the motion failed by a vote of 3-4-2, and council moved on to other business.

Last Thursday's meeting also was the scene of lengthy discussion on the proposed $3100 budget for the Campus Police pistol team. In support of the team it was pointed out that the squad competes not only with other two-year colleges, but with four-year institutions, the United States Marines and the Army.

In addition, the squad is the current holder of the state championship.

In rebutal, council member Gerald Whelan then proceeded through the budget, pointing out how high the pistol team expenses were in comparison with budgets of major sports here.

With time growing short, Student Government Adviser Sherm Elworthy recommended to council that other colleges with pistol teams be questioned as to the amount they spend for the activity. The issue was dropped for the time being.

Ruth Wimmer and her partner John Theilen were also congratulated for having sold more than 700 AS cards between them. They were the winners in the competition among student leaders and each will receive a portable radio from the AS.

Associated Men Student President Bob Roddiek and Inter-Fraternity Council President Joel Cohen said they were pleased with the smoker.

VINCE CONTRERAS, president of the Associated Students, who plans to schedule a constitutional change election "in a month or so."

Fraternity Awards Mark AMS-IFC Smoker

More than 100 men students attended the recent smoker sponsored jointly by the Associated Men Students and the Inter-Fraternity Council.

This event, held September 17 in Smith Hall, marked the start of the fraternity rushing program which will run through the second week in October. Students interested in signing up for rushing may do so at the Silver Pole in Science Hall.

The evening's highlight was the presentation of the scholarship trophy by Dean Ralph Hillsman to Beta Tau, winner for the third consecutive year. Hillsman also presented the Service trophy to Phi Beta Delta.

Symphony Forum Tickets On Sale

Student discount tickets for the 1963-64 season of the San Francisco Symphony Forum concerts can be purchased now at the student bank in Smith Hall, music instructor Meyer M. Cahn announced today.

Eighteen Forum concerts are to be held at the War Memorial Opera House at 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays, beginning December 4.

Student discounts enable college students to enjoy such classical works as Handel's Messiah, Schumann's Concerto in A Minor, Strauss' Don Quixote and Mendelssohn's Concerto in E Minor, at 50 per cent discount from the regular admission price.

The concerts are to feature such internationally famous artists as Josef Krips, musical director of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra; Yehudi Menuhin, violinist; Leonard Rose, cellist; Jorge Bolet, pianist; Isaac Stern, violinist, and Charles Munch, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

In past semesters the college has completely sold out its supply of season tickets. Reservations are on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Twenty-five years ago a group of northern California colleges established the Symphony Forum, and, by arrangement with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra Association, are allowed a special student discount.

Alpha Gamma Sigma Membership Open To 300

A total of 300 students have qualified for membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college's scholastic honor society, this semester, according to William Richardson, sponsor.

'Pea Green' Rams Invade LA Valley

San Quentin First Soccer Opponent For Ram Booters

San Quentin is the Rams' first opponent at 11 a.m. Sunday behind the walls. In the meantime the practice-session of the soccer players is in full swing, and the first team is gradually taking shape.

About half of last year's first string players have returned: Waldon Hom, the leading scorer of the preceding season; Larry Katzeff, Jose Flores, Tony Losada, Andy Nabong, Joe Simon, Ceasar Pina, All-American forward, who is not eligible to compete against two-year colleges but will play all other games scheduled, and Hector Olay, who played for the Rams last in 1961.

Three outstanding players of last season did not return this Semester. They are fullback Ken Gregory, employed in a full-time job, All-American goalie Gary DeLong, who was graduated, and wing Olaf Strohmeier, who transferred to S. F. State college.

Coach Roy Diederichsen pointed out that some of the new players look promising, such as Art Vigil, center forward; Coxito Cuevas, inside left; Ruben Hernadez, goal-keeper, and Jochen-Peter Huebner, inside right.

"Altogether we should have a strong team this year and sufficiently good players to meet the busy schedule we have this season," Diederichsen said.

The starting lineup has not been decided on as yet, but as it looks now, Diederichsen said, "we have as many backs as forwards so that every position will be filled with an adequate player."

The Rams will compete in the Junior College League and play the Bay Area's four year colleges, except the University of California, on a practice basis.

RA Starts Student Activities Sign-Up

All interested men and women students on campus are invited to sign up for Recreation Association activities this week in the women's gymnasium, Frances Galloway, RA adviser, stated recently.

Activity sign-ups have already hit a high mark this semester, and more students are expected to participate in activities this year than ever before. Because of the change over of college hour from Fridays to Thursdays, it is possible for RA activities to be scheduled during this time.

"This change may increase RA activity participation greatly this semester," Miss Galloway predicted.

Activities scheduled for this semester are as follows: Archery, 11 a.m. Tuesdays, sponsored by Miss Galloway; badminton, 11 a.m. Thursdays, sponsored by Elizabeth Wirth.

Social dance, 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays is sponsored by Melia Furgis; folk and square dancing, 3 p.m. Tuesdays, by Miss Furgis; modern dance, 3 p.m. Mondays, by Lenc Johnson; volleyball, 3 p.m. Mondays by Miss Galloway, and fencing, 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, by Mrs. Johnson.

All activities are coeducational and the first club meetings are scheduled this week, Miss Galloway said.

RA officers this semester are Fran Richardson, president; Carole Wong, vice president; Joyce Holeman, secretary; Donna Illeces, treasurer, and Joe Marino, historian.

Lloyd Winston On 49er's First Squad

At long last the San Francisco 49ers have realized the potential of former student Lloyd Winston. The 225-pound halfback was interviewed last year when he was a member of the 49er taxi squad.

At that time he told The Guardsman that he thought he had a good chance of making the team this year. Not only did the Merced boy make the team but he was the starting halfback for the 49ers' opening game.

Despite bruising a few ribs, Winston showed why he was given the chance as he led the team in rushing.

VETERAN SIGNAL CALLER Craig Schwartz hands off to hard-hitting Pat Lewis. Waiting impatiently for their turn in the background are right halfback Craig Rodeick and fullback Joe Sobeck.

Against Vacaville the frolicsome four accounted for 282 yards as Schwartz passed or ran for 147 while Lewis hit for another 90 yards. Rodeick picked up 38 yards on three carries and Sobeck 17 on 5 carries.

The four will get a chance to add to their preseason total Saturday night when they meet the Los Angeles Valley Monarchs.

Only Nine Veterans To Brace Elston's Eleven

Ram football coach "Dutch" Elston, with only nine returning veterans and minus Back-of-the-Year Ron Coleman, takes what he calls a "pea green" team of gridders into Los Angeles Saturday night for the team's opener against Los Angeles Valley College.

Coleman was the league's leading ground gainer last year and considered the team's strongest offensive punch. All that remains of last year's offense is 5-11, 175-pound quarterback Craig Schwartz. The veteran signal caller came into his own at the end of last season and is known for his aerial accuracy.

The new backfield has at right half, Ed Parker; at left half, Pat Lewis, and at fullback, Joe Sobeck. Parker is a 5-9, 190-pound speedster from Galileo, who may also be used as a flanker.

Lewis is the ex-Lincoln High great who at 5-9, 195 pounds has the power of a fullback and the rare ability to get through the openings in the line faster than most backs.

At fullback, pounding Sobeck, a 6', 200-pound All-Catholic League choice from neighboring Riordan, should always be good for a few yards.

Backing them up will be halfbacks Craig Rodeick at 5-11, 180 pounds; Oliver Mitchel, an All-City track great from Mission, and also from Mission High, reserve quarterback Henry Scott.

On the line, attempting to replace greats like Dennis Drucker, Jack Burgett and George Benke, will be tackles, Rich Colombo, Suiese Malae; guards, Dave Conway and Bob Hector; ends Henry King and Frank Papia, and center, Laisene Malauulu.

Colombo is a 5-11, 210-pound All-City pick from Mission High. Malae is a 6', 210-pound tackle with plenty of hustle. Attempting to replace All-Conference guard Dennis Drucker, will be Conway at 5-9, 180 pounds and guard Hector 5-11, 180-pounds. Over the ball will be 5-11, 205-pound Malauulu.

The Rams are blessed with a pair of fine ends in King and Papia. King played quarterback for Polytechnic last year and at 6-4, is sure to get his hands on the ball. Papia is a 6', 195-pound Lincolnite with good moves.

Backing up the front eleven are ends: Lee Johnson, 6-2, 210 pounds; Rich Spadini, 6', 175 pounds and Ray Lynch, 195 pounds. Prospective tackles are Terry Lofrano, 5-11, 215 pounds and Bruce Marovich, 6-1, 228 pounds; at center is Louie Balzar.

Defensively the Rams are stronger, with veteran safetys Ben Brown and Charlie Stewart and veteran end Howard Oliver. All three are experienced tacklers and should pull down their share of interceptions.

Helping to plug up the holes in the middle of the line will be 350-pound middle guard Chuck O'Brien. For his size, the big man has good speed and quick reflexes.

Backing up O'Brien will be linebackers Rudy Lapera, 5-10, 195 pounds, and Ed Johnson, 5-10, 210 pounds.

Deadline Set For AMS Basketball Petitions Oct. 8

Last date for filing petitions to play in the coming Associated Men Student intramural basketball competition is Tuesday, October 8, announced AMS President Bob Roddick today.

"All those wishing to participate this semester," Roddick said, "must adhere strictly to AMS regulations."

These regulations are as follows:

1. All players must be Associated Student card holders.
2. Teams must have five eligible players on the court within 15 minutes of game time or lose by default.
3. All petitions must have been filed by October 8.
4. Teams and players must observe any additional rules posted by AMS officers during seasonal play.

The first game is scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday, October 15, in the men's gymnasium.

Four games a night, with fraternity teams playing on Tuesdays, and independents Wednesday, form the basic schedule. At the end of the regular season play, there will be a four-team playoff, giving any of the top four teams a chance for the championship.

Playoffs will be between the first and fourth place teams and the second and third place teams. Winners will play each other for the championship at the AMS Sportsnight in January.

Extra attractions at the sportsnight will be boxing tournaments under the auspices of coach Roy Diederichsen, and one other event to be announced. The exact date of the sportsnight has not yet been decided.

Roddick emphasized the fact that he hopes to "revolutionize" AMS functions by encouraging more women to take an interest in the activities. "We need more support from women," he asserted.

He presently has two women on his staff—secretary Kathie Lively and treasurer Maggie Kriz.

Other officers this semester are vice presidents Ray Chezic and Arcil Zamora.

Adolph Anderssen of Breslau, Germany, was the world's champion chess player from 1851 to 1858.

Harriers Meet Saturday For Season's First At Park

Blending a predominantly freshman squad with several returning veterans, the college's cross-country team prepares for its first encounter at 10:30 a.m., Saturday, by hosting the Golden Gate conference four-mile team race at Golden Gate Park, coach Lou Vasquez said.

Top returning harriers are Gene Plotkin and Ozzie Norris. Plotkin, ex-Balboa runner, placed in the state track meet with a 4:21 in the mile and last season ran a swift 15:17 clocking for the three-mile Golden Gate Park cross country course.

Norris, ex-Galileo spiker, was a 1:57 half-miler in track and number one man for the college at the Northern California Cross-country Championships last year.

Expected to bolster the team will be freshmen Rich Klemmer, son of the college's golf mentor Grover Klemmer, a 1:58 half-miler at Lincoln High, and Chris Ferrigno, a 440-880 man from Saint Ignatius High school.

Other team members are Dan Christian and George Clevice, Balboa; Harry McCoy and Don Tiedeman, Lincoln; Mike Dougherty, Saint Ignatius; Gary Grutze, Mission; Dan Murphy, Polytechnic; Mike Conroy, Riordan, and Larry Heckard, Seaside High, Oregon.

As to the Golden Gate conference four-mile team race, Vasquez stated, "This should be an outstanding meet as not only Golden Gate conference teams are entered but also strong teams from American River Junior College and College of Sequoias have entered; it should give us a chance to see who our top five or six men are."

"As for the Golden Gate conference race," Vasquez declared, "the conference favorite will be the San Mateo Bulldogs but once we have a couple of meets we should jell and have a successful season."

Last year the Ram harriers ran to a third place 5-2 conference record and finished a close second in the Northern California Championships as San Jose edged the Rams 44-50, low score winning.

Siska Meets The Best On Summer Tour

WHILE this is the beginning of a new season for most students, for some San Franciscans it marks the end of the season.

For the third consecutive year, tennis ace Bob Siska matched shots with the best on his summer tennis tour.

Starting off last June at Wimbleton, Siska was forced to play qualifying rounds through a mix-up in invitations. Despite the error, he succeeded in qualifying by beating his three international opponents.

BOB SISKA

Three rounds later, the sole San Franciscan fell to Italy's best in three sets.

Upon his return to the States, Siska competed in the Pennsylvania State Championships at Philadelphia. In the city of Brotherly Love, he reached the second round before falling to fellow Californian, Charles Pasarell 6-3, 2-6, 6-3.

At South Orange, New Jersey, he lost a close fourth round match to Bill Grabner, 6-4, 14-12.

Next it was Baltimore for the Middle Atlantic Championships, then to Newport for a Rhode Island tourney.

In the Boston National Doubles Championships, Siska, teamed with Ed Turville of Florida, was able to display his talent. The unseeded pair battled their way to the semifinals before losing in four sets 8-10, 6-4, 7-5, 6-3.

Forest Hills marked the close of the 1963 tennis season for Siska. Back in college, Siska revealed that many school representatives had approached him with offers to play for them, stating that their particular locale was most suitable for tennis.

Siska doesn't agree. As he puts it, "California is the best place for tennis I've seen." He ought to know!

Baseball also called a few Rams. For one, pitcher Rich Nold at the close of last semester, was signed by the Washington Senators and sent to play for the Wisconsin Rapids.

The former Riordan ace found Class A ball to his liking as he won his first game 1-0 in the bottom of the ninth by hurling a three hitter. Following up his opener, Nold downed the league-leading club 6-2 by driving in four runs and allowing only one hit.

At season's end the fast-balling right hander had accumulated a respectable 4-win, 4-loss record and raised his team from last place in the ten-team league to a third place tie.

Scrappy Walt Williams also got the call. Signing with the Houston Colts, the chunky outfielder played for Modesto in the Class A California League!

RICH NOLD

At the close of the first session, Williams' .365 batting was leading the league, and he was moved up to play at Durham, North Carolina.

Presently he is in the Texas League where he is receiving his rookie training. Houston might have a 5-8 Colt 45 next season.

Friday Final Deadline For February Graduates

All students who expect to graduate in February must file a petition for graduation by this Friday at the latest, Mary Jane Leanard, registrar, announced today.

No student can expect to graduate without filing a petition, Miss Learnard warned, adding that forms can be obtained at the registrar's office between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Although these students will complete their study here in February, they will not receive their Associate in Arts degrees until the commencement assembly exercises held in June.

COO Launches Activities With Get Acquainted Day Tomorrow; Homecoming Set Next Week

Council of Organizations' activities will officially be kicked off during College Hour tomorrow and will come to a climax next week as Homecoming festivities are held on campus, COO President Buzz Kribs announced today.

Most fraternities, sororities and on-campus organizations will participate in COO "Day" tomorrow by displaying booths in the courtyard between Cloud and Science Halls. Purpose is to acquaint new students and the general student body with the activities offered here this semester.

Membership drives will also be conducted during the College Hour event, Kribs added.

Next week's festivities—coinciding with Homecoming Week and the first home game of the Ram football team—will feature a College Hour rally on Thursday, October 10, crowning of the football queen and a dance Friday, October 11, in Smith Hall.

The rally, to be held at the Redwood Ram, will be highlighted by entertainment and the disclosure of the 1963-64 football queen.

Coeds interested in running for this title may secure petitions and full information at the COO meeting at 1 p.m. tomorrow in bungalow six.

Judging will not be by student vote this semester, Kribs stated. A committee composed of three faculty members and three impartial students will determine the winner.

In addition to the rally, a car parade is also scheduled. Kribs asked interested students to sign up with him if they would like to participate in the parade.

The Homecoming dance, entitled Summer's Gone, will be held from 9 p.m. to midnight, October 11. Admission will be free to Associated Student members while 75 cents will be charged those possessing a registration card only.

A charge of $1 will be made for guests attending, Kribs commented.

Dress will be semiformal, and music will be supplied by a five-piece orchestra.

AS Card Sales Top Semester's Goal Of 3000

Associated Student card sales have surpassed the goal of 3000 set for the semester, Rich Thomas, card sales chairman, stated today.

Salesmen were grouped in teams of two, and competed with other couples in the selling of AS cards. The winning couple was Ruth Wimmer and John Theilen. Miss Wimmer sold 425 cards and Theilen sold 310 for a combined total of 735.

The first-place couple received a portable radio each. "We are extremely proud of their salesmanship, and of the efforts of all our salesmen," Thomas stated.

Runners-up in the selling contest were Charlie Hoenisch and Phyllis Webb, who together sold 380 cards. The third-place couple of Gary Ettin and Judi Beverly sold 240 cards.

"More than 12 salesmen sold 100 cards or better," Thomas said.

Cards originally ordered did not meet the demand of the card seekers. An order for an additional 1000 cards was made so as to meet the demand, Thomas explained.

In addition to the "bargains" already available with AS cards the Skihaus located at 1209 California, has offered a 10 per cent discount on all purchases other than skis.

Fourteen New Instructors Augment Present Faculty

Addition of eight permanent and six one-year substitute instructors was announced here last week by Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction.

On a permanent basis in the sociology department is Marcia Aron, formerly connected with the Survey Research Center at the University of California, and holder of an A.B. from University of California and an M.S. from the University of Utah.

Jack Aldridge, who received his A.B. from Southern Illinois and his M.B.A. from Indiana University, is a permanent political science appointee.

Ernest Domecus, formerly an instructor at George Washington High School, received an A.A. from City College, and an A.B. and M.B.A. from San Francisco State College, and is with the physical education department here.

New member of the physics department is Norman Easter, formerly of Fullerton Junior College, who received his B.S. and M.A. from San Francisco State College.

Robert Kaar, formerly laboratory assistant in the department of paleontology at the University of California, who received his A.A. here, and his A.B. and M.A. from the University of California, is a geology instructor.

Formerly an instructor at Chabot Junior College and Contra Costa College, Craig Kuhns received his B.S., A.B. and M.B.A. from the University of California, and is with the business administration department.

Marvin Schinnerer, who received his B.S. and M.B.A. from the University of California, is with the engineering department.

Ione Trimbie, formerly of College of San Mateo, is an instructor in the dental assisting department.

Substitute instructor in the business administration department, Paul Fisher, received his A.A. here and his B.S. and M.B.A. from the University of California.

Sociology instructor Jane Herzog, formerly instructor at West High School in Anchorage, received her A.B. from the American University at Washington, D.C. and her M.A. from the University of Alaska.

Psychology instructor Robert Messman, received his A.B. and M.A. from the University of California.

Physical education instructor Edna Pope, formerly taught at a Paris high school in France, received her A.B. from Los Angeles State College and her M.A. from San Francisco State College.

German instructor Rose Royal, formerly of the University of California, received her A.B. from the same university.

Phyllis Vasquez, physical education instructor, received her A.B. from San Francisco State College.

Dr. Luckmann also announced that Victor Vaio, formerly of the Holzmueller Corporation of San Francisco, joins the staff here this semester as an assistant in the drama department. Vaio will also have full charge of all electrical and technical equipment in the arts building.

In addition to these permanent and one-year substitute faculty members, there are several new part-time instructors.

Although originally assigned this semester to the communications staff, Robert Lasley, previously associated with the drama department, will be in charge of production, Luckmann said, until director Michael Griffin's health permits him to return to his post.

James Haran, English and drama instructor, will assist in drama productions.

Northern State AWS Conference To Be Held In College Theater Saturday

'Young Wife Plus' Theme Of Annual College Conclave

Representatives of Associated Women Students from 15 Northern California two-year colleges will meet here Saturday for their annual conference.

Colleges expected to send representatives, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here, are College of San Mateo, Cabrillo Junior College, San Jose City College, Santa Rosa Junior College, Sierra Junior College, Vallejo Junior College, Hartnell College, Napa Junior College, Diablo Valley College, Monterey Peninsula College, Modesto Junior College, Chabot College, Yuba Junior College, Gavilan College and San Benito College.

Theme of the one-day conclave, which will open in the campus theater at 9:30 a.m. with registration, is "Young Wife, Plus."

Welcome addresses will be given by Judy Carlson, conference chairman; Rosie Fang, AWS president, and Dean Golding, conference adviser.

Following this, the keynote address will be given by Mrs. Lee R. Martin, formerly director of nurse education at Children's Hospital and now a member of the faculty here.

Mrs. Martin's topic is The Potential of the College-Educated Young Wife.

Following the general meeting, seven workshops will be conducted on career, civic responsibility, community culture, continuing education, social organizations, travel and volunteer services.

Consultants for these workshops will be Mrs. William Hoskins, Mrs. Jane Herzog, Mrs. John R. Upton, Dr. Iona Logie, Mrs. William Webb, Mrs. Glenn Molyneaux and Mrs. Theodore Doudiet.

Reports on the workshops will be given, followed by a luncheon and entertainment by Lynn Goodrich and two guitarists.

ROSIE FANG, AWS president (left) and Judy Carlson, conference chairman, discuss the program of the annual conclave to be held here Saturday, in which representatives of Associated Women Students from Northern California two-year colleges will participate.

—Guardsman photo by Bill Gebhardt.

In describing the conference, Dean Golding said, "The AWS is the women's branch of student government in the colleges. The Northern California Conference existed in all the four-year colleges before World War II but died out during that period.

"After the war, the four-year colleges organized the Intercollegiate AWS, and San Jose State, Stanford University and the University of California helped the two-year colleges to organize their own conference."

Dean Golding emphasized that, "we hope all women here will attend the conference, even if they can't stay for the luncheon."

Tickets for $1.50 include the conference and the luncheon, and may be purchased this week in Dean Golding's office, S-150. —By P.S.

Campus Police Regulate Cafeteria

Administration Lists Cafeteria Conduct Rules

The college administration issued a set of rules this semester which are to be strictly enforced by the Campus Police. All students are held responsible for knowledge of these rules, listed below:

"1. Do not congregate in aisles or doorways.
"2. Use the proper entrances and exits.
"3. Do not move or 'share' chairs.
"4. Do not sit on radiators or bookshelves.
"5. Do not smoke in service areas or away from receptacles provided for this purpose.
"6. Please eat and leave promptly so that we may serve as many as possible during the time allotted.
"7. Read and comply with all directional signs."

'Operation Turnover' Attempts To Solve Smith Hall Congestion

"Operation Turnover" is in full swing in the cafeteria. The college administration has delegated the authority to the Campus Police to keep order there this semester, Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor, announced today.

The authority to function as Public Relations Officers in the cafeteria was given to the Campus Police by President Louis Conlan.

"The main function of the police is to help in trying to stop or reduce the congestion that is presently appearing during the luncheon period by directing students to adhere to some rules, which, it is hoped, will help in easing the congestion problem," Fitzgerald stated.

"A set of simple rules has been issued and distributed and it is hoped that students will comply with the policemen's request for the safety and convenience of all concerned," Fitzgerald added.

Refusal or failure to obey may result in disciplinary actions by Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman, and the administration is expected to handle all decisions relative to any violation of the rules.

Two policemen are on duty for the morning patrol, checking for general compliance by the students using the service, breakfast and main areas of the cafeteria. These sections are open from 7:45 to 11 a.m.

The center section, open from 11 a.m. to 1:15 p.m., is patrolled by as many policemen as may be needed, as the congestion hits the apex at this time.

No incident has occurred as yet.

Elworthy Assumes New Post—Activities Adviser

Sherm Elworthy has assumed the new position of Student Activities Adviser at the college, Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman disclosed today.

Elsworthy's duties will include supervision of campus activities.

Because of these added responsibilities, Elworthy no longer is involved in the supervision of the cafeteria. This function is now handled by the Campus Police as assigned by the administration.

Fifteen Rookies Join Police Force

Police chief Thomas Cain and deputy chief Al Mendoza revealed that their prime concern this semester will be to keep the Campus Police force as a smooth, efficient well-knit unit.

This semester's campus force is composed of the following officers: Chief Cain, Deputy Mendoza, and sergeants Rich Phillips and Joseph Cressa.

Returning officers of the force are Dennis Carlemagno, Ray Carlson, Tom Gardner, David Hummel, James Kenney, Paul Lucia, John Marotto, Brian Newlon, Richard Nold, Jerry Shirinian, Robert Sola, John Susoeff, Keith Woolwine and Sherwood Zammit.

Men due to be sworn in as officers are John Bussanick, James Dean, Theodore Estonillo, John Fusselman, Lawrence Levy, Robert Moss, Charles O'Brien, Michael O'Keefe, Michael Phalen, Mario Piazza, Paul Robin, Charles Sims and Francis Smith.

There's An Old Cliche—Time And Place For 'Everything'

TWO WEEKS AGO, a 27-year-old coed majoring in engineering appeared on campus dressed in slacks and was immediately asked to leave and to appear properly dressed for her classes.

The next day, metropolitan newspapers carried the story on this unusual student attire—for it is strictly forbidden at City College except in engineering or similar laboratory classes—in addition to editorials praising the move as a fight for "the coeds' right to wearing slacks."

In the style of La Passionara's tabasco-tempered speeches, the American Civil Liberties Union's executive director Ernest Besig immediately wrote a letter to the Board of Education in behalf of the coed. The letter asked for a clear definition of what is considered proper student attire.

Ironically enough, Mr. Besig himself admitted that he personally feels that "dresses are more attractive."

Superintendent Harold Spears replied that it was "the college's business," and that the Dean of Women would arbitrate the issue.

The ACLU attack on the college administration came as a shock to many coeds and parents of students currently enrolled here.

Just because there is no written regulation applying to the wearing of slacks on campus does not mean that any coed is authorized to roam around freely in slacks.

We must remember that it was not too long ago that women were allowed the right to vote; then, women were seen smoking; next, they were wearing slacks. Today, women wear slacks while shopping, attending movies, club gatherings and other social functions, and no one (except perhaps the better stores, restaurants and shops) has yet said a word about the pink, the blue, the green, the yellow, the nauseating peppermint-striped slacks and capris that are allowed to be worn "socially" by the weaker sex.

Surely a foreigner's image of THE American woman cannot be thus. In England and the British Commonwealth for example, coeds must sport a school uniform.

There are no deviations from the rule. These women have realized the importance of a neat appearance. By wearing the uniform, they show due respect to their institution, the college of which they are a part.

"There is a place and a time for everything" is an overused cliche that should not have to be brought up to mature, American college students.

Evidently, some of us are not mature and do not think City College deserves some respect, if any!

To these students, we would like to ask a question and to ponder a while for the answer: what are you doing here then, if it isn't because of the FREE tuition?

In addition, we submit a simple male-oriented formula which should make any coed feel like a woman (and a potential mother): wear those skirts and those dressess so that the American man can truly appreciate those ankles and legs. The dresses and the skirts give an illusion of what is hidden under the cloth material. The slacks —either form-fitting or loose-fitting—leave nothing to the eyesight and/or the imagination.

Foresight

OK, WEAR The Slacks, But Pick Up The Tab

By Dick Bullard

GATHER 'round people. We have something of the utmost importance to discuss. To wit, women and their wearing apparel. To be more specific, slacks.

We realize that this topic would be more at home in our colleague's column in the upper right hand corner of this page, but we feel we should take the liberty of stretching this column's name a little in order to voice a few opinions of our own on this subject which we are all watching so closely.

First of all, let us say we enjoy seeing women dressed in any manner save a double-breasted suit. But to be realistic, let's admit that there are some outfits which are considerably preferable to others.

We'll admit that much enjoyment can be attained from watching a girl in slacks, capris, or what have you, strolling down the cobblestones. But, a tailored skirt and heels, ah——— Valhalla!

Nothing triggers the imagination or locks the red corpuscles in mortal combat with the white quicker than a nylon-encased calf tapering into a size six stacked heel.

At the close of World War II, femininity, from a visual standpoint, lapsed into a disgusting downgrade. This movement culminated in the atrocity known as the "sack." Overnight we became a nation of expectant mothers and half deflated balloons.

The following year a coup took place in the Paris salons.

The tottering old relics of the world of fashion were, probably because of the ranting of the world's misused men, replaced by young, forceful, forward looking designers.

Since then the world has been striving to return to normalcy, so let's not knock a good thing.

Another thing which we might look at is the influence of our modern push button society. Automatic living has made our lives soft and easy. Face it, girls, only about one out of five of you can do justice to a pair of slacks.

Also, these are the years when a goodly number of you are going to meet The Man in your life.

This is the lucky fellow who is going to liquidate your debts and bring home the ham hocks. Your slightest whim will be his added burden.

So in these last carefree, happy, ulcerless days of his young life, give him a break. Let him see you at your loveliest. He has years ahead in which to see you looking like a slob.

If, on the other hand you feel that you must attain equality and "civil liberty," by all means go at it. The next time you are out having dinner with The Man, grab that check!

Escher Back From Tour

Instructor Tells Of New Cultural Changes In Africa

Witch doctors and learned medical men sometimes practice on the same patient. Old tribesmen and women sport foot-long ears or tattooed faces, while the young businessman dresses in a conservative tweed suit.

Sights such as these are common in Africa, according to Miriam Escher, English instructor here, who, with her husband, Dr. Earl Escher, recently completed an 18-month trip to the Caribbean, Africa, Europe and the Orient.

"We picked the ideal time to visit Africa," Mrs. Escher said, "for we saw the ago-old customs dying out under the influence of modernization. This part of our trip was the most unusual and educational."

Kenya had just won independence from Great Britain when the Eschers arrived in the small African country. They were able to see the celebration which occurred when the British governor transferred control to the new Kenyan president, Jomo "Burning Spear" Kenyatta.

Kenyatta was just recently released from a British jail for being the leader of the Mau Mau terrorist upraisal in 1952.

Mrs. Escher noted that schools in Africa are generally taught by natives and that the children are taught their native dialect during the first four years of instruction. The fifth and sixth years are devoted to the teaching of English.

"In Tanganyika," Mrs. Escher said, "I saw 40 young Peace Corps nurses attempting to adjust to the conditions in a foreign country. They were enthusiastic about their work and were quartered in flats which once belonged to British families."

Mrs. Escher recalled that the Peace Corps men did not have it so easy. They worked in the bush country and had to sleep in tents, huts, or whatever was available.

"Perhaps the greatest difficulty confronting the Peace Corps men," she said, "is that they do not have a command of the language or of native dialects."

In general, Mrs. Escher said that she found the African cities to be modern but the villages scattered across the continent most primitive. To reach the villages the Eschers had to drive hundreds of miles over gravel roads, often without meeting a single automobile.

"Communism is not apparent in these villages," Mrs. Escher said, "though there was talk of the Party in the newspapers. Most of the common villagers have never heard of either Russia or of the United States and are unconcerned about international crises.

"Africans will take aid from wherever they can," Mrs. Escher concluded, "and they will not depend solely on the United States."

The Ugly Duckling

ANOTHER CHARACTER from fiction has been immortalized by the brush of Alonso Gonzalez, artist, actor and student here.

The Ugly Duckling had its "preview showing" in one-act play form recently during a College Hour performance. This strange story will be unveiled again in the first major drama endeavor of the semester on Friday, November 1.

It will be presented with two other one-act plays in the theater, Antigone and The Bald Soprano.

The 34 by 40 inch oil portrait (a photograph of which is shown above), is of Princess Camilla, the lead character in the play. It was painted by Gonzalez, not just for purposes of promotion but for actual use in the production, and "took three nights for a total of eight hours to complete."

Gonzalez explained that the portrait was a composite of five photographs. Sandy Lundwall, who has the title role in the play, did not sit for him.

Last semester, Gonzalez painted "an amazing likeness" to drama student Ken Bachtold in the robes of King John.

Gonzalez also appears in The Ugly Duckling as Prince Simon.

Robert Lasley of the drama department will be in charge of production during Michael Griffin's absence.

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

THE Ramporium, the college's on-campus bookstore, had a very interesting fact to report last week. It was probably the most substantial bit of news to come out of the building in the last two years.

Students engaged in academic activities here (that's about 50 per cent of them) prefer used text books to the new ones. The used texts sold about 75 per cent faster.

Cashiers at the Ramporium told of many heartbreaking cases of late arriving students being forced to buy new books, books yet to be underlined and with margins as clean as a window washer's hands.

One young lady is supposed to have gotten down on her knees and begged for the moth-eaten version of Perin's Index to English, but to no avail.

It is hoped that this problem may be alleviated next year by urging the publishers to print their wares in a used condition.

The fact that City College students buy up the used text books first can bring all sorts of speculation about their particular desires.

Take the average woman student please. Knowing what you know now what would you say her tastes were in chewing gum? Or clothes? Or make-up?

And the male student. What could be his tastes in gym shorts? Or cigarettes? Or women?

Only students who have taken, or are currently taking, Psychology 1A are eligible to make a guess.

No! We refuse to do it! This column is not even going to mention women's slacks.

The Guardsman reminds you that you are an old-timer if you can remember . . . the name of The Shadow's girl friend. His name when he was visible and not particularly caring about "the evil that lurks in the hearts of men" was Lamont Cranston.

And while we're on the subject, what was the name of the Green Hornet's valet?

And now here is some information about some Presidents of the United States that is designed to be of no use whatsoever to history or political science majors.

William McKinley was the first President ever to ride in an automobile. Franklin D. Roosevelt was the first President ever to fly in an airplane. Dwight D. Eisenhower (remember him?) was the first President ever to fly in a helicopter.

The United States has yet to turn out a president who just flies, man.

Harry Truman and James A. Garfield were the only two Presidents who were left-handed. It's a pity they didn't know each other.

Kennedy and Nixon were the first candidates for President from major political parties ever to have naval backgrounds.

Now, anybody who can make some use of the above information is hereby invited to do so. Contestants will be judged on originality and promptness and the prize is one, shiny Nixon button.

Yes old-timer, you're right. The Shadow's girl friend was named Margo Lane, no relation to Lois Lane, Superman's girl friend. And the Green Hornet's trusty valet was named Kato.

'Participate In Activities'

Civic Leader Offers 'Aid' To Bored Students

By Patty Smith

For young people who continually complain, "What can we do? There is NOTHING for us to do!" Anna-Logan Upton has this answer, "Participate in community activities."

Mrs. Upton, who will be one of the featured speakers at the Northern California Associated Women Student Junior College Conference here Saturday, has a long history of community service behind her.

After graduating Phi Beta Kappa from the University of California, she married Dr. John R. Upton and began devoting her time and energy to various community projects.

During World War II, she worked for French relief and was awarded the decoration of the Legion of Honor for her work. For many years, she has been active in the Women's Auxiliary at St. Luke's Hospital and has devoted much of her time to the symphony and ballet.

She is perhaps best known for originating, in 1956, the Black and White Ball, which is a major source of support for San Francisco's symphony orchestra.

In 1959, she was chosen as one of the ten distinguished women of the year by the San Francisco Examiner.

As mother of two grown sons, John Jr. and Sloan, she knows how time-consuming college work can be, and she firmly believes that a student's first loyalty should be to his studies, but for those who always seem to have spare time, she suggests that "they participate in various community activities—the arts, volunteer work, politics."

Mrs. Upton, executive vice president of the San Francisco Symphony Foundation, said that the Symphony Forum in the colleges is a "wonderful way" for young people to become acquainted with and interested in the arts.

"Those who were members of the forum in college are now the staunchest supporters of the foundation. Phillip Boone, who was recently named as president of the foundation, replacing the late J. D. Zellerbach, is a perfect example of this."

About volunteer work, Mrs. Upton commented that volunteers are always in demand. "In the hospitals, they are needed for so many duties that presently rob the specially trained doctors and nurses from the time they need for more important duties."

Mrs. Upton believes that everyone with the time should become involved with politics because of its importance. "We all have the vote, so we should use it," she said.

"There are so many things that one can do," said Mrs. Upton, "and there is such a feeling of accomplishment when one can serve, help and share."

Heated Discussion Breaks Out; $617.62 Cut Made, But Pistol Team Will Have Its Bullets

By Lowell Mengel

The Campus Police pistol team budget, a matter of controversy since last semester, was finally passed last week by Student Council, but not before heated discussion broke out and a $617.62 cut made from the original request.

Basis for the cut, according to Finance Chairman Judi Beverly, was to try to limit college expenditures this semester to make up for past deficits.

The pistol team budget fell victim to this. Council cut the $600-plus amount which was itemized to take the pistol teams to the state championships if and when they qualify for it. They are currently the title holders.

If the team qualifies, council will give it the opportunity to request additional money to go to the matches. If the team does not qualify, it will not actually be losing anything in the line of finances.

The vote came after several cabinet members spoke in favor of the pistol team, yet council still voted the cut 9-1-0.

Non-distinction of individual classes at the college also was brought up when council member Art Gershman moved to reconsider a motion that had been presented in the past concerning the admittance of freshmen to the Sophomore Ball and of sophomores to the Freshman Ball. The motion was passed.

Phyllis Webb then moved to have only the sophomores pick up bids for the Sophomore Ball, and only freshmen pick up bids for the Freshman Ball.

Miss Webb supported her motion by stating that "some persons can afford only two dances," and adding that she felt that in this way class members would attend their own dances plus a dinner dance the council is considering later this semester.

Council member Gerald Whelan objected to this reasoning, stating that "we have a lack of class systems" and that balls should be "open." Council then defeated Miss Webb's motion, 2-7-1, and dances will be open to members of both classes.

The "filthy appearance" of the campus was mentioned by Student Activities Adviser Sherm Elworthy who said that it was beginning to "look like a junior high school around here."

He stated that council members should do their part in reminding fellow students who eat on campus that they are not animals, but people, and people pick up after themselves."

Council member Whelan then suggested that a committee be formed to help keep the campus clean. Cabinet member John Theilen agreed with Whelan, and associated Student President Vince Contreras said he would consider the idea.

Council and cabinet members also voted on the color for an "official college blazer," which, according to Contreras, they would wear to student government affairs. The members selected the color—charcoal.

Radenzel Warns Collegiates Of Responsibilities

By Bea Takeuchi

The college student's part in this changing world was emphasized by Edward Radenzel, foreign news editor of The Chronicle, who delivered a prolific lecture in the theater last Thursday.

"You are the generation which is going to be able to take part in the change—to wipe out the old injustices that my generation and those past have inflicted upon the world," he said.

Radenzel stressed the need for national understanding and a change of attitude toward the cold war with Russia. He urged peaceful cooperation, wisdom and rational thinking on the part of all Americans.

The American image of being mature, with equality for all, must not be impaired, he said, stating, "This society is far from being perfect." Besides technical wisdom and advancement in science, this country needs the maturity of many foreign lands.

Radenzel made reference to four threats to world peace: China, The Bomb, The Population Explosion and Automation. He expressed his belief that the solution to these problems depends upon the international understanding between peoples.

"China is living in a semifeudal society today," he said. If this overly-populated nation insists on a voice in international problems, someday he must be heard.

The Bomb, Radenzel predicted, in the hands of a nation with impulsive administrators, can cause world chaos, and countries that cannot produce enough food for their increasing populace may seek land for expansion.

Automation, which he calls the sign of true progress, also poses a threat. "With automation, it takes only 11 per cent of the U. S. population to feed its people. In Russia, it takes 45 per cent," he said.

Radenzel also commented that he finds Germany flexible, and that "nobody expects Germany to re-unify." He considers French policy "a one-man operation," very difficult to fathom.

BOB RODDICK, Arcil Zamora and Ray Chezik, (from left to right) AMS president and vice presidents respectively, the three men who are the master architects of the bold plan to admit women into the ranks of their organization, hoping to encourage more male participation.

AMS President Appoints Coeds To Organizational Positions

In an effort to get more participation in Associated Men Student activities this semester, coeds are now eligible to hold some positions in the AMS, Bob Roddick, president, announced this week.

The coeds will be selected at random from the student body, Roddick said. They may refuse the offer to become AMS officers if they so desire, but those who are asked if they would like to become officers will be screened by the men officers of the AMS.

"We hope to find girls who have some knowledge of office procedures, and have some skill along the secretarial lines," Roddick stated.

Two of the woman officers are Maggie Kriz, treasurer and Kathie Lively, corresponding secretary. A third coed is yet to be selected.

"Coeds serving as AMS officers will do most of the typing and paper work involved in AMS affairs. Clerical work, and sending 'thank you' notes to outside contacts will be some of the duties of the girls among others," Roddick explained.

"The reason for the opening of these positions is that coeds will also attract more men to the AMS," Roddick added hopefully.

Men officers of the AMS working with Roddick are Ray Chezik and Arcil Zamora, vice presidents, and Roger Kaufman, honorary financial adviser.

All interested women can consult Roddick or other AMS officers as soon as possible.

Men officers will donate most of their time to duties generally not along the secretarial line. They will be involved in organization of AMS affairs. Supervision of intramural basketball games will be one of the duties, Roddick explained.

All-Sorority Tea For Rushees To Be Held Sunday

To acquaint rushees with the purposes, activities and requirements for membership in the college sororities, an all-sorority tea will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the Women's City Club, 465 Post street.

The first group of rushees will attend from 2 to 3:30 p.m., the second from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

Sorority representatives will explain the purpose of firesides, gatherings at the homes of members, and acceptance dinners.

Procedure for three scheduled pledge days, Monday, October 28, Wednesday, October 30 and Friday, November 1, will be explained. During pledge week, for example, pledges of each sorority wear distinctive outfits. Delta Psi pledges will wear green skirts and blouses.

Pledges to Delta Sigma Tau will wear white skirts and turquoise blouses, while Kappa Phi pledges will wear black skirts and white blouses.

Phi Beta Rho calls for black skirts and white blouses and Theta Tau for red skirts and white blouses.

Clarification of the two days reserved for service projects, which are required from each sorority for acceptance on campus, is also scheduled.

Minimum grade requirements will be explained—the 12-unit C-average qualification for pledging.

Another purpose of the tea is to describe the Presents, at which all pledges are "presented" as sorority members.

Television's Answer To Education

Mr. Novak Is Tops — Channing Flops

By Hugh Wilson

Television's answer to the problems—or attractions—of education is to be found in two of the new series that began last week. Channing, a story of a small-town college professor, and Mr. Novak, the story of a high school teacher in the big city.

Each of these programs is supposed to give the viewer an idea of the problems that face the professor and the high school teacher. Unfortunately, one of these shows is nothing more than a shallow imitation of a cheap B- movie.

Channing, which was alleged to have dealt with the problems of a small-town college professor, turned out to be nothing more than an hour of pointless tedium that was not only an insult to the viewer but to the teaching profession as well.

Briefly, the first program dealt with "our hero," Jason Evers, who is a professor of literature at a rural college. He attempts to help a convicted murderer, perhaps modeled on the late Caryl Chessman, to re-write a book that may save him from execution.

Throughout this painful hour, "our hero" alternately weeps over the plight of the murderer, cuts classes at the university to help the convict with his book and attempts to have the governor grant a stay of execution of his friend.

All is for naught, however. The villain is executed on schedule and the professor returns to his classes . . . presumably a much wiser man. He isn't the only one who is wiser, for the viewer has learned quite a lot too.

For one thing, Channing is a wasted hour of pointless drivel. The scripts are not only unrealistic in content but poorly constructed as well. There is nothing at all in this program that rings of authenticity.

If programs are to have a moral, then the moral in the Channing series is most elusive. Even the acting is bad. Somebody must have told Jason Evers that he could act. Unfortunately, his mother was wrong. There is one encouraging thought, though. The series can only get better. It certainly can't get any worse.

On the other hand a similar program, Mr. Novak, which considers the problems of a high school teacher newly employed in the profession, has definite promise and a great amount of appeal. Whereas the Channing program deals with the unreal, Mr. Novak shows originality not often found in television programs.

Its premiere had a moral that is important for all and one that the President of the United States has been stressing for some time: the importance of completing a high school education—at least.

Though there were no suspense-filled moments, nor beautiful girls swishing across the screen, the program showed preparation on the part of the actors and the production staff alike.

When the two shows are compared, two direct opposites appear on the value scale. Mr. Novak shows evidence of tight script writing, sensible plots and believable acting. Channing shows just the opposite.

It would seem that college-level series is trying to get by on emotional sex appeal instead of good acting, plausable scripts and sensible situations.

No wonder Mr. Novak has the sanction of the CTA, the NEA and the sponsors. Channing, if the program continues along last week's lines, will soon not have even the sponsor's sanction, and thankfully will enter into the Valley of Discontinued Programs.

Cute Mice Contest Tops Semiannual Freshman Ball

Mystic Magic is the theme of the semi-annual Freshman Ball scheduled for 9 p.m. to midnight Friday, October 8, in the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel, Gary Ettin, class president, revealed this week.

A week prior to the dance there will be a Cutest Couple Contest of Mice, Ettin explained. The mice are expected to be on exhibit in one of the display windows in Science Hall. "Just how the mice will be judged is a technicality that has to be worked out," Ettin added.

Couples, referring to college students, interested in signing up for the contest, may do so at the silver pole in Science Hall at the same time the mice do. The contest is limited to 20 couples entered on campus with an additional five couples selected at the ball.

Ettin emphasized "The ladies can relax. There will be no mice present at the dance."

Contest rules are that one member of the entering team be of freshman status.

Bids for the dance, free to Associated Students card holders, will be available at the silver pole starting Friday, October 11, and will be distributed on a first-come basis with freshmen given preference the first three days.

Presentation of the trophies to the Cutest Couple will be a featured attraction of the ball along with other prizes of flowers, dinner and show tickets for two, for second and third place winners.

Assisting Ettin with plans for the ball and contest is a committee of ten, composed of class officers.

Milo Yoshino, Ernie Walker and Sandy Castelli are responsible for publicity, Vicki Brown, Vieki Mears, Ruth Blanz and Ella May Bernhard are members of the Cutest Couple contest committee and Bev Palmer, Loralee Lando and Oan Sorhi are responsible for bids.

Ettin surmised that it might be difficult to interest coeds in the mice. "I guess it will be a man's job," he said, "but it should be fun and create a lot of excitement."

Mosel's Play On Stage Tomorrow

Impromtu, by the well-known television writer Tad Mosel, is scheduled for College Hour tomorrow in the theater, Ken Bachtold, drama student in charge of publicity here, announced today.

A satire on plays and life in general, the skit was written by Mosel while he was a student at Yale. It is described as lending a provocative treatment to a popular theme, the line drawn between illusion and reality through the question, "How much truth does a person need to live a balanced life?"

Four actors find themselves called upon to create their own script. They alternately plead with and spurn the audience in the Shakespearian analogy that the world is a stage and men and women merely players.

Members of Delta Psi Omega comprising the cast are Andrea Fulton as Winifred, Leon Moniot as Tony, Sandy Lundwall as Lora and Bachtold as Ernest. Direction is by Robert Lasley.

Fraternity Rushing Continues

By Bob Lutz

Fraternities here will continue their rushing program with the start of the second rushing affair on Saturday, according to Sherm Elworthy, student activities adviser.

The fraternity rushing program will run through this week and next, according to newly elected Inter-Fraternity Council President Joel Cohen. The first rushing activity for Alpha Sigma Delta which was originally scheduled for an earlier date, was postponed until today.

Phi Beta Delta and Alpha Phi Epsilon have announced that they will hold their second rushing during the coming weekend, both Saturday and Sunday. Similar activities will be held by Beta Tau and Alpha Sigma Delta on Thursday and Friday, October 10 and 11.

Climaxing fraternity rushing for this semester will be Alpha Kappa Rho's activity scheduled for Saturday, October 12, and Zeta Phi Sigma's, Sunday, October 13.

Students interested in signing up for the second rushing may do so at the silver pole in Science Hall, Elworthy said.

The Inter-Fraternity Council, a joint organization representing the fraternities on campus, intends to withdraw from the Council of Organizations, according to Elworthy. At present, the Associated Student Constitution requires that each individual fraternity send a representative to COO meetings.

A step has been taken, however, to remove this section from the constitution. Final approval of the change is scheduled to come before the Associated Students by way of a special election to be held in several weeks.

LA Fleeces Rams 31-6 In Saturday Grid Opener

105 Yard Return By Stewart Nets Only Home Score

By Fred Wales

In the 85 degree heat of Los Angeles, the "pea green" Ram gridders were picked clean as they helped a tough and experienced Los Angeles Valley team to a 31-6 trouncing before a crowd of 600 Saturday night at Los Angeles.

The Rams never threatened once during the contest and managed only to cross the midfield strip twice during the entire contest with their closest penetration being the Monarch's 40 yard line.

Charlie Stewart accounted for the only Ram tally with a sensational 105 yard kickoff return.

With 6:45 minutes left in the first half and the Monarch lead of 19-0, they kicked off to Stewart, who, starting five yards deep in the end zone, decided he wasn't going to stop.

As he put it, "I was mad at their easy scores and was out to get back at them." And that's just what he did!

With some good blocking, he got past the Monarch's first blockers at his own 30, then cutting to his right and heading down the sidelines, leaving a stunned group of five Monarch defenders seemingly standing still at the L.A. 40 and scoring with the closest defender back on the 15 yard line.

The run was the only bright spot for the Rams as they only gained 120 yards as compared to the 280 yards for Los Angeles.

The Monarch's first score came on a 80 yard punt return by Phil Culotta, who used his blockers and bounced off tacklers as the Rams were clipped down one by one, to go all the way for the score.

Valley's second score came at the beginning of the second quarter as Craig Schwartz was trapped on his own one yard line and Henry King's punt was blocked by Jim Trense making the score 13-0.

Again the Rams played Santa Claus as they punted from their own 40 and the ball rolled dead on the Ram 34 after going straight up into the steaming Los Angeles night.

The Monarchs took over and went 34 yards in five plays with Mike Koutnik scoring from the 3.

Then Stewart's 105 yard gem for a 19-6 reading before Valley put it away with a 40 yard drive in seven plays with 235 pound fullback Charlie Butler going over for the final yard with 12:46 in the game.

L.A.'s final score started with an interception of Henry Scott's pass on the Ram 34 and went 66 yards in nine plays.

Coach "Dutch" Elston found some light in the midst of darkness as he singled out linebacker Rudy Lapera, Safety Oliver Mitchell and of course Stewart as playing good ball.

He went on to explain that, for all but four Rams, this was the first time the team has played a junior college opponent while Valley has three games behind them and are full of talent.

Dutch felt the Rams lost the game in the first five minutes as starting linemen Rich Colombo, Laisene Malauulu and Suiese Malae all were crippled and forced to leave the game.

Halfback Craig Rodelck was injured the first time he carried the ball and sat out the game as the Rams, stated Elston, "were on the receiving end of the blocking."

The Rams meet Chabot October 11.

San Mateo Takes First At Spiker Conference Saturday

By John Arberry

College of San Mateo's Jim Huff took the first step towards defending his championship by winning individual honors in the Golden Gate Conference four mile team race at Golden Gate Park to lead San Mateo's Bulldogs to the team title as the hosting Rams placed sixth in the team standings.

Huff set the pace most of the way in clocking a swift 21:04 for the tough four mile Golden Gate Park course to nail down individual honors.

San Mateo's Bulldogs also captured the team title from a strong field by totaling only 62 points followed by San Jose City College with 75, College of Sequoia's 90, American River 92, Oakland 102, CCSF 197, Diablo Valley 226, Foothill 253, Contra Costa 262, and Chabot 275.

Top individual placings behind Huff were: second, Lodin, Oakland 21:12; third, Sullivan, San Jose 21:21; fourth, Jiminez, COS 21:25; fifth, Lamenada, DV 21:37.

Sixth, Harden, American River 21:40; seventh, Vogel, American River 21:43; eighth, Likens, San Mateo 21:46; ninth, Casillas, San Mateo 21:54; and tenth, Godwin, Chabot 21:56.

Pacing the Ram harriers were Ozzie Norris and Gene Plotkin, placing 15th and 17th respectively in a large field of 90 entrants. Norris clocked 22:22 while Plotkin clocked 22:25 for the four mile course.

Rick Kiemmer placed 38th, while George Clerici, 43rd and Mike Conroy 60th, rounded out the Rams first five places.

As to the meet, harrier mentor Lou Vasquez stated, "It was a good meet as it gave our freshmen a chance to gain experience and an idea as to the top teams and overall strength of the Golden Gate Conference." Adding, "This meet and the coming dual meets should help prepare us for the all important conference meet at the end of the season."

This Friday the Rams run head-on into San Mateo, along with Chabot, at 4:00 p.m. at San Mateo. Last season the Bulldogs placed second in the Golden Gate Conference dual meet with a 4-1 mark.

In the conference meet the Bulldogs placed third with a total of 54 points behind Foothill's 49 and San Jose's 51 as the Rams placed fourth with 78. In the Northern California cross-country championship the Bulldogs placed fourth, with a total of 122 points compared to the Ram's 50.

The Bulldogs present a classy and formidable team which threatens to improve on last season's fine record.

Leading San Mateo's returning veterans will be Jim Huff, the Golden Gate Conference individual champion and All-American Junior College trackman Ron Benson who led the nation's J.C. runners in the 440 (47.5) and 880 (1:50.4). Larry Peterson, the Bulldog's number three man along with Steve Fannucchi and Clint Miller also return. Sixth returning letterman is Frank Procella.

Chabot College which will field its first cross-country team this fall, has Floyd Godwin who placed tenth in the Golden Gate Conference team race.

Gridders 'Polish Up' This Weekend

This weekend will be all drills and more drills for the inexperienced Ram gridders, as they will have a no-competition weekend before their first conference game against Chabot at 2:30 p.m. Friday, October 11, on the Rams' field.

Head coach "Dutch" Elston welcomes the breakaway a chance to polish up his team before the opener.

Assisting Elston in his buffing task will be line coach Alex "Gramps" Schwarz and new mentor Ernie Domecus. Domecus has come to the Rams after eight years at Washington High School and has helped the team in all categories.

The 1963 schedule seems to favor the Rams, as they will meet the toughest teams later in the season when they will have some playing experience behind them.

San Mateo and Foothill, considered by many as the teams to beat, won't meet the Rams until November 1 and November 22, respectively.

Monterey Peninsula College Withdrawal Leaves Soccer League With Four Teams

The newly-formed Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference suffered its first setback last week when Monterey Peninsula College withdrew from this the first season of competition.

Soccer coach Roy Diederichsen explained, "The budget of the Monterey Peninsula College was not drawn up in time, so that a financial dilemma made it necessary for them to drop out of the League, at least until next season."

This makes the new league a very small one, with only four competitors —Diablo Valley College, College of San Mateo, Menlo College and San Francisco.

"We should have no trouble coming out ahead," Diederichsen was quoted as saying, "They are relatively new teams and lack the experience we have."

Because Monterey dropped out, first league opponent of the Rams will be Diablo Valley College on Wednesday, October 16, at Balboa Stadium.

In the meantime the Rams have practice games with several four-year college teams and a team from San Quentin, Diederichsen pointed out.

The first team is formed and ready to go with all positions filled with the best players available.

The line-up:

Goalkeeper—Ruben Hernandez
Left fullback—Andy Nabong
Right fullback—Tony Losada
Left halfback—Joe Simon
Center half—Hector Olaya
Right halfback—Jose Flores
Outside left—Cocixto Cuevas
Inside left—Larry Katzeff
Center forward—Waldon Hom
Inside right—Art Vigil
Outside right—Peter Huebner

"There probably will be changes in the line-up later on," Diederichsen said," but right now this is the strongest team I have and it should be hard to beat."

Ram league engagements are scheduled as follows:

Wednesday, October 16, 2:30 p.m., here against Diablo Valley College.

Saturday, October 26, 1 p.m., against College of San Mateo in San Mateo.

Saturday, November 2, 1 p.m., here against Menlo College.

Wednesday, November 13, 2:30 p.m., here against Diablo Valley College.

Saturday, November 23, 1 p.m. against College of San Mateo in San Mateo.

Saturday, December 7, 1 p.m., against Menlo College in Menlo Park.

SOCCER MENTOR Roy Diederichsen found the new conference down to four teams when Monterey Peninsula was forced to drop out.

Block SF Elections Set For College Hour

Block SF sponsor, "Dutch" Elston expects all letter holders to attend a brief meeting during College Hour tomorrow in C-260 for the election of new officers.

At present Ram quarterback Craig Schwartz is representing the organization in student affairs.

The Block SF is composed of letter-winners in all the sports on campus. The group is in charge of the concessions at the sport facilities and the athletes' voice in student government.

Tuesday Last Day To File Petitions For Intramurals

Teams wishing to participate in this year's intramural basketball league are expected to file petitions as early as possible to eliminate any last-minute rush.

"Next Tuesday is the last day, and no concessions will be made concerning late petitions," Associated Men Student President Bob Roddick said yesterday. To date, few teams have petitioned, he added.

Roddick hopes that this year's league activity proves to be as exciting as last year's, and that the AMS Sportnight will be as successful.

The Divine Ones romped over Alpha Phi Epsilon in last year's Sportnight playoff, 33-26. Despite the valiant 15-point, game high effort of Phi Epsilon's Nolan Robinson, the combined efforts of the Divine Ones' Warton Brown, who scored 13, and Hank King surpassed Phi Epsilon's best.

Brown won the award as highest scorer in the Independent league and Tom London took highest in the Fraternity league.

The Sportnight also featured the boxing exhibition under the direction of Coach Roy Diederichsen and a demonstration of Karate by the Tracy Kenpo school.

This year's Sportnight promises to be at least as eventful, with the playoff, the boxing and an unannounced event, Roddick said.

David Seeking New Goliaths To Slay

RAMBLINGS

By Fred Wales

Cal's 'Scapegoat' Beginning To Falter

LAST YEAR at this time, the Ram soccermen, fired-up for their opener against Cal and anticipating a possible fourth title in as many years, found themselves with no opponent.

The mighty California Bears had forfeited their opening game as a protest against a two-year college playing in their four-year college soccer league.

The incident ultimately led to the expulsion of City College from the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference.

As an apparent pacifier, the NCISC made up a new soccer league for City College's very own. In their new league, the Rams could play with teams more their own size and could not embarrass anyone like the mighty bear.

Now a year later, the David and Goliath situation has been reversed. The Rams are virtually assured of capturing the title, yet they again find themselves without an opponent for the first part of the season.

Monterey Peninsula College had to bow out of the league because of lack of funds to finance participation in a double round robin. However, Monterey hopes to be able to compete next year. This leaves the league with four teams playing a double round robin. The schedule had to be re-arranged and many practice games were cancelled.

Despite the drop, Coach Roy Diederichsen, expressing the attitude of a good coach, is trying to build up the league for the sake of his players and the sport itself.

An all-conference team will be picked at the conclusion of the season, and All-Americans will be chosen at a two-year level.

Diederichsen is also attempting to schedule a north-south game with a similar league in Los Angeles for the state title.

How do the players feel about the whole thing?

One veteran of many years, stated, "the new kids just want to play ball for City College. They don't seem to realize that the reason we have such a big name is because we beat the 'Big Schools.' Now, who knows? For me and a few others it will never be the same.

"From now on we play Sunday ball (big league soccer) and let it go at that."

A university player had this to say, "It's too bad it happened. City College's Rams kept all the teams on their toes and played good ball. This kind of thing hurts the league too, because our university teams are made up of a lot of former Rams. Men like Jim Lynch at U.S.F., and Al Korbus at San Jose State.

"After they graduate from City College they play for us, and if their quality and enthusiasm begin to slack then we will be the first ones to feel it."

The comments go on and on—from players, coaches and observers. Some agree with Cal, but most don't.

In the midst of the whole controversy, Diederichsen just wants to help the playcrs and soccer. The players want to play soccer and win games.

But what about Cal? What DO the Bears want?

To them, we wish success in their up-coming season.

Sonata Recital Postponed To College Hour Next Thursday

Frances Wiener Shorr, native San Franciscan, and her blind husband, Lev Shorr, will appear in a sonata recital here in the theater during College Hour Thursday, October 17, rather than the day (tomorrow) originally set.

They are the second guest performers in this semester's artists series, music instruetor Meyer Cahn said last week.

Frances Shorr is an acclaimed violinist, and Lev Shorr, an internationally famous concert pianist. The couple has also recorded music and performed on radio.

Their performances have consistently brought "rave" reviews from music critics. Cahn commented, "Together the Shorrs present a remarkable combination of musical talent that is worthy of such praise."

Shorr has been associated with the San Francisco Symphony, as official pianist and featured soloist for many years. He has played in concert with many artists, among them Piatigorsky, Garbousova, Menuhin and Piastro.

Among his students, Hepzibah and Yalta Menuhin, Leon Fleisher, Samuel Lipman and Stephen Bishop have won universal acclaim. Shorr is a graduate of the Petrograd Conservatory of Music.

Frances Wiener, as she is known professionally, was graduated from the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. She is one of the foremost Chamber Music artists of this country.

The Shorrs will play Beethoven's Sonata in A major, Op. 12, No. 2, and Sonata in G major, by Mozart.

Replacing the sonata recital, a student jazz combo, headed by Paul Taliaferro, will claim tomorrow's College Hour spotlight in the campus theater.

Members of the group are Jerry Sealund, bass; Homer Williams, piano; Bob Weekly, drums; Melvin Pierre, flute; and L. J. Roberts, saxophone.

Taliaferro explained that most of the members of the group are new, but the group has played at San Francisco State College and plans several more engagements here this year.

Smith Hall Site For IRC Tea-Dance

City College will act as host for the first time to the annual tea-dance of the International Relation Clubs of four Bay Area colleges, scheduled to start at 4 p.m. Friday, October 18, in Smith Hall, according to Mohammed Kowsar, president of the IRC here.

Major sponsors for the affair, with an assist from the Rotary Club and the Red Cross, are faculty advisers of the various IRCs and their presidents.

Clubs from Golden Gate College, San Francisco State College, City College of San Francisco and University of San Francisco are the principal participants. A crowd of 500 students is expected.

Invitations to all consul generals residing in San Francisco have been extended, Kowsar said.

Ray Hackett's orchestra is providing entertainment and free refreshments and an admission charge form part of the effort to make it an "enjoyable evening," Kowsar added.

Anti-Litterbug Drive Strikes Campus

An unofficial anti-litter campaign has sprung up almost overnight here, headed by a few individuals who hope to clean up the campus.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, said in a recent interview, that he thought the litter problem could be alleviated by the development of personal and individual pride in each student for the college.

"The litter situation has been caused by only one thing on the part of the student," Hillsman said, "and that is thoughtlessness."

Hillsman pointed out that, especially on nice days as with the recent "Indian Summer," the lawns and area in front of the cafeteria are literally strewn with trash.

Hillsman said that he expects that the Associated Students will declare an official anti-litter campaign in the near future.

The Associated Student Council is already looking into the matter. At a recent meeting Sherm Elworthy, council adviser, brought up the subject, saying that the college "resembles a junior high school." He also compared the students who tbrow litter about with "animals."

Findings of the council's investigation have not been made public as yet, but already there are notices up on bulletin boards and trash receptacles, reminding students of the proper place to dispose of their trash.

It is expected that the Campus Police will join in the anti-litter campaign and keep a closer watch on students. Other developments of the campaign may be more trash receptacles and cigarette cans at different locations on campus.

The last official anti-litter campaign at City College, although the word "litter" had not been invented then, was in 1950.

Fall Football Queen To Be Crowned In C-Hour Rally At Redwood Ram Tomorrow

Crowning of the Fall Football Queen tomorrow during a College Hour rally and a dance Friday night in Smith Hall will highlight this week's Homecoming activities on campus, Buzz Kribs, COO president, disclosed today.

The queen, chosen by a judging committee comprised of four faculty members and four students (originally three instructors and three students), will be crowned and presented with a bouquet of long-stem roses.

"This year's queen will be chosen from a list of candidates, each of whom has been sponsored by an on-campus organization," Kribs explained."

Last year, selection of the football queen was by student-at-large votes. The ultimate winner, out of a group of 45 contestants, was Gloria McClellan, an attractive 20-year-old dental assisting major. She was sponsored by Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity.

The queen selected this year will make her official appearance during half-time at the City College-Chabot football game which starts at 2 p.m. Friday in the college stadium.

A car parade will also take place during the rally. Prizes will be awarded to those with the best decoration, Kribs said, with the "Queen" also judging the car parade.

Prizes will be awarded for originality, effectiveness and amount of work, Kribs added, explaining that themes for the decorations must have something to do with football.

Students who wish to enter the parade can sign up with Kribs in the Associated Student office, S-134, no later than today.

Winding up the COO festivities will be a dance, with Summer's Gone, the theme, to be held from 9 p.m. to midnight, Friday, in Smith Hall.

Dress for the occasion will be semi-formal and music will be supplied by the Blue Diamonds, a combo which performed at last year's COO dance.

Because of a conflict on the 1962 social calendar there was no dance to commemorate Homecoming last year.

GLORIA McCLELLAN, the 1962 Homecoming Queen who majored in dental assisting here is now employed as a dental assistant. The Council of Organizations is sponsoring this year's Homecoming event. A car parade, rally and a dance will highlight the festivities.

Semester Yell Leaders Chosen By Competition

John Crossley, Norma Johnson, Chris Small, and Judy Levy will represent the college this semester as yell leaders. They were chosen on a competitive basis by Rally Committee adviser Gerald Mullin and former yell leaders.

Contestants were judged on a point system. Those receiving most points were named yell leaders, and two with the next highest number were named alternates.

Yvonne Edwards and Carolyn Dyson are alternates, while song girls are Barbara Joseph, Penny Brown, Shirley Daigle, Penny Parkham and Connie Wilson.

Administration Halts AMS Plan For Coed Officers

Associated Men Student President Bob Roddick expressed regret last week at an administration decision to halt the plan of having coeds fill some AMS offices.

Women students could have helped with secretarial chores, which would have allowed the men officers to spend more time in other areas of the AMS. The plan of having women officers in the AMS was to begin this semester.

"We were hoping to have women officers in three office posts, but we want to abide by the administration's ruling," Roddick stated.

Two of the coeds who were to have filled AMS offices were Kathie Lively, who was to have taken the position of Corresponding Secretary, and Maggie Kriz, who would have been AMS treasurer. All AMS positions will now be held by men students.

Plans for having coeds as officers was not officially approved by the administration, nor greatly brought to their attention until just last week. The administration then decided against the plan.

The AMS, a compietely male organization, will remain as such in all general phases. "Keeping the positions of the AMS offices filled by men students only is part of the tradition of the college," Roddick explained.

Limited Number Of Frosh Ball Bids Available

Only 400 couples will be admitted to the Freshman Ball, Gary Ettin, class president, said today, adding that he expects this dance to be a sell-out.

Freshmen can obtain bids at the Silver Pole beginning next Monday through Wednesday, instead of the original dates of October 11 through 13.

Upper classmen may obtain remaining bids unclaimed by Freshmen after October 16. AS cards must be presented at the Silver Pole to secure the bids, Ettin emphasized.

Maurice Wolohan and his orchestra will provide music at the ball, which will be held at the Fairmont Hotel's Terrace Room, from 9 p.m. to midnight, Friday, October 18.

Trophies, dinner reservations to local hotels, free theater passes and flowers will be the prizes in the Cutest Couple Contest. A panel of three judges will select the winning couples.

Twenty Cutest Couples will be chosen by ballots, and five more will be chosen at the dance, and Ettin urged freshmen to enter this contest by filling out ballots provided at the Silver Pole.

A week before the dance there will be a Cutest Couple of Mice Contest, Ettin explained. The mice are expected to be on exhibit in the display cases at the south end of Science Hall's first floor.

Prior to the ball, a small magic show will be staged in front of the Ramporium. On Thursday, October 17, amateur magicians will perform. Volunteer performers can see Ettin in S-134 after 1 p.m. daily this week.

AWS Conclave Stresses Work, Education In Future Society

By Charlotte Wong

The importance of continuing education in the realization of a woman's potential as a wife and a member of society was stressed by Mrs. Lee R. Martin, nurse education instructor in the keynote address of the Associated Women Students Conference held in the theater Saturday.

The annual conclave began at 10 a.m. with opening speeches by AWS President Rosie Fang, Dean of Women Mary Golding and Conference Chairman Judy Carlson and adjourned at 2 p.m. after lunch.

"Women must take a long range view of their lives," Mrs. Martin stated and, "through education and work, they must develop their ambitions and interests that will be self-satisfying and purposeful throughout the decades of their lives," she added.

Mrs. Martin emphasized that more women work today because they actually want to: "A source of personal satisfaction, work improves mental health by alleviating marital hostilities through impersonal competition."

Approximately 120 representatives from eight Northern California junior colleges attended the conference, although representatives from 15 junior colleges were originally scheduled to be present for the conclave.

Seven workshops conducted by coeds and consultants of the college were conducted for the women's interests in the 'Young Wife, Plus' theme of the conference.

Consultant and chairman, respectively, for the career workshop were Mrs. William Hoskins and Carol Parnow; for the civic responsibility workshop were Mrs. Jane Herzog, sociology instructor and Beatrice Maione; Mrs. John Upton, executive vice-president of the San Francisco Symphony Association and Lynn Goodrich represented the community culture workshop.

Dr. Iona Logie, veteran counselor and Marsha Latham were in charge of the continuing education workshop; Mrs. William Webb, an active worker in social organizations and Phyllis Webb headed the social organizations workshop; Mrs. Glenn Molyneaux and Barbara Kontis directed the travel workshop; Mrs. Theodore Doudlet, an active member of the Parent-Teacher Association and Wardene Oliver managed the volunteer workshop.

Calendar Coeds Is AWS Show Theme

Calendar Coeds is the theme of the Associated Women Student fashion show-tea to be held from 3 to 5 p.m. Wednesday, November 6, in Smith Hall, Rosie Fang, AWS president, announced last week.

A contest will be held by the show's models in an effort to choose a college representative for Glamour Magazine's Ten Best-Dressed College Girls in America competition. The names of the 12 semifinalists will be announced during the show.

Any coed at the college who is interested in modeling may try out for a position in the show during College Hour Thursday, October 17, in bungalow 6, Miss Fang said.

The AWS fashion show and tea is held in honor of the Bay Area's high school students who will be introduced to the college.

Huh, A Mouse? No, A Contestant

LORALEE LANDO and Ernie Walker, Cutest Couple committee members, look over one of the entrants in the Cutest Couple of Mice Contest, which is being held this week prior to the Freshman Ball Friday, October 18.

Freshman Class President Gary Ettin explained, "Purpose of the contest is to build up enthusiasm for the Cutest Couple Contest which is the highlight of the semiannual ball."

The four pairs of mice may currently be viewed in the display case on the first floor at the south end of Science Hall. Names of the mice couples are Ralph and Zelda, Hank and Henrietta, Mike and Matilda, and Melvin and Penelope.

Theme of the ball, which is scheduled to take place from 9 p.m. to midnight in the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel, is Mystic Magic.

A Sad Fact — College Students Are Not Mature Enough To Police Themselves In Cafeteria

WELL, CITY COLLEGE has done it again!

A year ago, it was the closing of the Shack after four students were caught gambling. Last semester, it was a student on a 50-mile roller skateathon craze. Last month, it was an engineering coed wearing slacks on campus. This week, it is the turn of the Campus Police to make the news . . . in the cafeteria.

CONGESTION THE PROBLEM?

Policemen are now patrolling the cafeteria. The Campus Police have been given authority to function as "Public Relations Officers" by the administration who feel that the congestion problem has grown out of proportion and needs immediate action to try to help solve the problem.

Previously, Sherm Elworthy, student activities adviser, was responsible for the general order of the cafeteria; fraternities also helped, urging students to obey a few simple rules of social behavior. Then it was agreed that Elworthy's capabilities and experience were much more beneficial as an instructor and adviser than in controlling the cafeteria's congestion problem.

RULES DENOTE MATURITY OF STUDENTS

To combat the problem, the administration has issued and distributed a set of rules for all students. These rules are nothing more than simple, common sense observations which should not even have to be pronounced, at least to mature, college students.

Once again, City College students show signs of immaturity when it is found that they cannot even keep order in their own buildings and have to be supervised by policemen.

CAFETERIA IS FOR US TO ENJOY

Our cafeteria is a place where it should be enjoyable for all of us to lunch without having a policeman breathing down our necks, requesting us to sit here or there.

No one wants another student to sit on the table where his food is laid out, or to find that the salt shaker actually contains sugar, as someone thought would be a good idea . . . just for "kicks."

CHILD BEHAVIOR EVIDENT

These signs are simply reflections of child behavior. Evidently, some students are still under the illusion that they are in their junior high school's cafeteria. If they behave as ninth-graders do, why don't they simply return there?

There will always be a few "hotheads" in any large group, such as our college. The Campus Police are not here to take police action against these students. Any disciplinary action is to be handled by the Dean of Men and if this is not enough, the administration can then step in.

NO INCIDENT REPORTED — YET

The Campus Police does not want to take such drastic steps. Fraternization between policemen and students is hard to establish because of psychological reaction: the uniform represents Authority and students, in turn, obey as any law-abiding person would.

So far, no incidents have been reported. Policemen agree that the students are behaving quite well when requested to cooperate. An extra load from the shoulders of the cleaning women has also been lifted: previously, they had to tell students how to behave.

CAFETERIA BELONGS TO US, NOT POLICE

The cafeteria belongs to EVERY ONE of us. It is only a deplorable fact that the Campus Police had to be called in to keep order. Actually, WE asked for this present situation.

We do not want a Gestapo-like situation in our cafeteria. We have no need for Orwellian shades of 1984. We do not want to be spied upon as Communist-controlled countries are. We do not want to be as puppets, acting only on orders for our so-called "benefit."

STOP ACTING AS A CHILD

Veterans of the Armed Forces should well remember and appreciate the return to liberty after they have done their service time. (Perhaps everyone should be exposed to the military.)

No one enjoys being told to "stop acting like a child." We are not children and therefore should not behave as such.

The policemen themselves do not like the situation. Their duty is to enforce the set rules. Would you like to be in their position, acting as baby-sitters for spoiled children? The policemen are not pleased to keep order over such unruly groups and do not like to be regarded as kindergarten teachers.

COOPERATION IS CORE OF SUCCESS

Indifference to a policeman's orders must be stamped out. Cooperation is needed to insure success. Already, a lot of students, disgusted by the situation, feel that they do not even have the privilege — for it is not a right — to patronize the cafeteria and eat their lunch in stairways and on lawns because of a few inconsiderate students spoiling things for everyone else.

Perhaps The Guardsman can offer advice which, it is hoped, will partially help: stubbornness, inflexibility, unyielding attitudes hamper achievement. Cooperation is the core of success. Give a little — to gain a lot.

Mixed Feelings At 'Q'

Booters Find Inmates A Rough But Friendly Crowd

By Peter Huebner

Twenty Ram stalwarts went to prison September 28. To San Quentin that is, to meet the inmates in a soccer contest. But they stayed only part of one day, during which they defeated the San Quentin team, 4-1.

They entered with mixed feelings and left with mixed feelings. At first there was curiosity to see the so-called "bad men" of society.

The team had to go through a number of security procedures before reaching the dressing room in the gymnasium. There waited the prisoners, confined to this institute as correctional punishment for breaking the laws of man and society.

Prison terms at San Quentin range from one year to life. At this time there are more than 40 men on death row.

In the gymnasium some of the men were weight-lifting, boxing, playing table-tennis, chess and the like. When the soccer team, the outside, the free men, entered the gymnasium, it was greeted with curious eyes. One prisoner asked: "How is the outside, man?" The visitor was inclined to say, not knowing for how long this inmate has not seen the outside, "It has not changed much," because he did not know how to answer this question.

Later, on the soccer field which is adjacent to the yard and where the men congregate during the day when they do not work, the team was met by most of the 5000 inmates with friendly but somewhat distrustful remarks.

As they passed the crowd of inmates, they felt tempted to look over each and every one of them trying to figure out what had brought them here. But they only allowed themselves a quick glance now and then, because they thought that a curious look might be interpreted as prejudice, which it is to a certain extent, and this might only provoke the inmate's anger.

The soccer game was a little rough, since the players of the prison team apparently do not have a chance to dispense their energy too often. But after the game, both teams shook hands, and the onlookers applauded.

A few words were exchanged between both team players and they suddenly could look one or the other inmate straight in the face, not feeling ashamed of having the privilege of freedom.

A tour of the institute gave a clear account of what is being done to rehabilitate the men who have not complied with the rules and laws of society. There are educational and recreational centers, the cellblock for those who are hard to handle, the cellblock with extended privileges, and those cellblocks for the average inmates.

One guard asked: "What do you think of the Institute?" And the visiting Ram soccermen did not know what to say. A prison is certainly not a desirable place to live, but the visitors were not overly shocked by the sight of it.

Upon leaving the prison, which the 20 college men entered as free men, they had an increased knowledge of their fellowmen and understood them better. The 20 free men had lost some of their ignorance and gained understanding.

Dropouts Start When Leaves Of Autumn Fall

Autumn leaves are beginning to fall throughout the nation and, as many students who were at the college last year will testify, Dropouts at the college will start fluttering out at approximately the same time.

Sometimes, a rough test in Physics 33 or English 1B can start the ball rolling. Doubts are formulated in young minds (minds which, incidentally, have adjusted well to the rigors of beach bumming and related activities) as to whether the struggle is worth surmounting.

Often heard at the flagpole: "I wanted to work this semester, anyway. I'll come back next semester when I've got enough coins." (These coins are usually spent, the following semester, at the cafeteria.)

President Kennedy's program for Dropouts deserves mention, but some persons have been heard to wonder. Can't a person who is old enough for college make his own decisions without the aid of the Ol' Harvard Grad?

Anyone who "thinked" his way through grammar school (at least long enough to read and be able to decipher words like job statistics), can see for himself that "there's gold at the end of that rainbow!"

Picture a large company. Any company. They've all got the same personnel shops for executive material and for shop personnel.

But any two guys applying for employment, same age, same nice personality, can be separated quickly, almost as if a wall had been drawn between them, if there exists a four-year difference between their respective levels of education.

Guess which way the guy with the college degree is going to go!

When you see those autumn leaves start to fall, don't start shaking. Just think about it.

Hindsight

Student Defeated In The Common Market

By Boyd Burtnett

ONCE upon a time, about last week, a political science major here decided to do a term paper on what students were thinking about the Common Market.

This enterprising student knew the easiest way to find out what the students of City College were thinking was to ask them, but he also knew that this way was ineffective.

When confronted with any philosophical question, the average student usually tries to become intellectual far beyond his usual meager means.

The political science major, therefore, decided to eavesdrop on a typical collegiate bull-session. He knew these bull-sessions existed because he had read about them in Life magazine.

So down to the cafeteria he went, in search of the truth, and hungry for opinions.

He sat near the fraternity tables — and listened to the young, bright-eyed youths of America talk about women.

He sat near the sorority tables — and listened to the rosy-cheeked lassies talk about men.

At no time did he hear the Common Market mentioned, at least in an economic sense.

He finally had to leave the cafeteria because a campus policeman came by with a thermometer, checked his coffee and told him it was time to leave.

So off to the litter-covered lawns of City College did this young lad roam, to where the fun-loving students whiled away their free hours. It was from these persons that he knew he would find the truth; he would most certainly find out what they believed in.

A half hour later he walked away, believing that these students did not believe in anything.

But still, the undaunted hero refused to accept defeat. He went and sat down near the flag pole where so many students congregated. He listened.

And he listened, and listened, and listened . . . NOTHING!

Finally, he accepted defeat. His head hanging, he slowly made his way home through the bountiful ignorance that surrounded him.

Two weeks later a certain political science instructor received a most confusing term paper, printed here by permission in full. "What the students of City College are thinking about the Common Market: The students are not thinking about the Common Market. As a matter of fact, the college students have stopped thinking altogether."

Foresight

By Dick Bullard

AS WE LOOK at the calendar we see that this Saturday is the birthday of that great explorer and foresighted individual Christopher Columbus.

Therefore, we feel that it is proper that we take a close look at this fellow to whom we owe so much. Or do we?

After all, Signore Columbus didn't come over here looking for any real estate possibilities. He came looking for loot. All he wanted to do was to fill his empty cargo holds with goodies and make it back to Spain.

In fact, nowhere do we remember reading that anyone was particularly happy about Chris' voyage. The natives did not jump up and down on the beach yelling, "Oh joy! We are discovered!"

And when he got back to Spain the queen was not overwhelmed by a boatload of monkeys and fruit. After all, you can't get your jewels out of hock with bananas.

What about Chris himself? Can't you just see him sloshing up on the beach like a buffoon, waving his arms around dramatically and saying, "Here we are men — India!"

This is not to imply that the Great Navigator was a simpleton. Quite the contrary. When he saw that there were no gems or spices hanging on the trees and his Indian princes were a rag-tag bunch of Limbo dancers, he quickly realized that he had goofed. Old Chris then applied immediate action; he claimed everything in sight for the queen of Spain. (In modern days this is known as passing the buck.)

Isn't it about time to stop all this nonsense and devote a day to the man who really discovered this, our native land?

Why doesn't someone start a campaign for the observance of Leif Ericson Day? After all, Leif was the boy who got here first, and he wasn't trying to go to India. He even stuck around for a while and planted a few settlements. Just because he decided the whole thing was a loser and went home, everybody has forgotten about him.

But old Leif has a few things not in his favor. Number one, he didn't have a Public Relations man with him. Number two, nobody could really care less where he had been.

On the other hand, as soon as people began to realize that what Christopher did was a little out of the ordinary, everybody jumped on the bandwagon. Italy claimed him as her own. Spain said they financed him. Half a dozen towns in Portugal said he sailed from there. Finally every island in the Caribbean claimed he landed there. Why not? Columbus Day could be a good thing and everyone wanted a piece of the action.

Of course, by this time Chris had departed his newly-rounded world, having spent his last days as something of a recluse. What do you expect when someone sends you on a jaunt to India and you end up on a Caribbean cruise?

All things taken into consideration, it still seems that the man to be honored is Mr. Ericson. However, we realize that changing a time honored symbol like Columbus Day is reasonably close to impossible. (He even made the trip on credit. How much more American can you get?)

So if nothing comes of this campaign, we are ready to accept defeat with dignity. We'll even say, Happy Birthday, Chris!

You too, Mark.

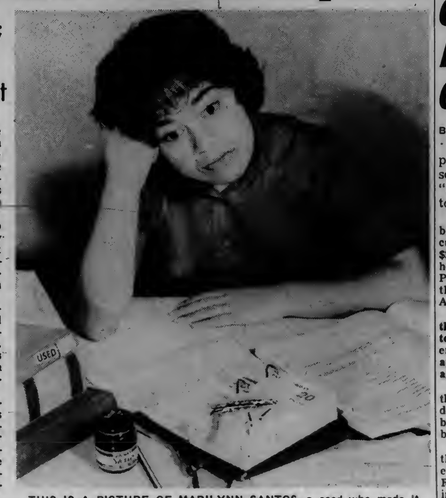
Midterms Are A Necessary Evil

Pressure Is On; Students Work For Grade Point

By Chris Welzig

Since time immemorial, the bane of the college student has been examinations. Needless to say, some persons would have these done away with entirely, while other redoubtable persons prefer exams over any other form of collegiate entertainment.

The latter group is catered to immeasurably at the college. They receive (along with those who don't want them, for, although democratic, the educational process is all-engulfing) three big exams each semester!



For the reasons behind this seeming madness, a reporter interviewed Lloyd Luckmann, co-ordinator of instruction, who supplied the answers.

"The function of the midterm is to provide the administration with three grades for a student each semester," Luckmann declared.

"From the administration's viewpoint," he said, "the first midterms are used by the counseling department to determine who will register the earliest for the following semester, with the persons having the highest grade point average registering first. The advantages of registering early are obvious."

Luckmann noted that athletic eligibility is upheld on the basis of the midterm grades. "And," he added, "the sustaining of student loans and awards by the scholarship committee is based on student achievement through each midterm period."

Well, looking down, these reasons sufficiently highlighted the administration's viewpoint, but how about the view from the student's position, looking up? "Here," said Luckmann, "is the genuine basis for midterms."

THIS IS A PICTURE OF MARILYNN SANTOS, a coed who made it, despite the look of futility on her face. She graduated a couple of semesters ago and has gone out into the world with an education. However, there are still a few who have to put up with the "necessary evils" of midterms.

"By placing the student in a position where he has to account for himself three times a semester, instead of once or twice, the pressure is extended over a larger period rather than loaded on him all at once at the end of the semester.

"This system, used at the University of California, explains why so many beginning freshmen wash out there in their first semester. They haven't had sufficient preparation at the high school level to prepare for such an examination."

The reporter left Dr. Luckmann then, sufficiently convinced that the midterms are a necessary evil. Remembering that "forewarned is forearmed," he left hastily so that he would have time to write this story and begin to prepare for midterm examinations!

Highly Competitive Season Awaits Campus Pistol Team

With a good return of shooting experts, the college's Pistol Team is looking forward to a highly competitive season against some of Northern California's top pistol clubs and teams, according to its coach, criminology instructor Fred Fitzgerald.

The team maintained practice during the summer, and has had several impressive wins recently. Among these are a first place win in the .22 caliber class at the Richmond Police Range on August 11, and second places in the .22, .38 and .45 caliber classes, also at Richmond on September 8.

At present, Fitzgerald is maintaining only two teams instead of three.

These are the expert and sharpshooter teams. The marksman team will be left out indefinitely because of lack of funds necessary to send all three teams to future matches.

This came about after Student Council cut a large part of the requested Pistol Team funds.

The college's Pistol Team is currently the holder of the State championship. It is doubtful, however, if the team can retain the title, since the portion cut from their budget this semester was to be used to enter the State matches.

Members of the expert team are Captain Al Palmer, Jim Dean, James Tedesco, Bill Wilson and former Campus Police Chief Bob Mulhall. The five sharpshooters are Jerry Shirinian, Sherwood Zammit, Walter Bowsher, David Kannisto and Charley John.

At the matches a standard pattern of shooting is used. The three types of firing are slow fire, which is ten shots in ten minutes at fifty yards; timed firing, five shots in twenty seconds at twenty-five yards, and rapid fire which consists of five shots in ten seconds at twenty-five yards.

To keep up their shooting skills, team members practice every Tuesday at the San Francisco Municipal Range, located in Pacifica. With a number of highly proficient men in its ranks, the outlook for the Pistol Team in future matches is considered promising.

A few of the teams which will make competition challenging this semester are Navy and Army teams, Mountain View Police Department, San Francisco Olympic Club, Travis Air Force Base and the Oakland Pistol Club. Besides these, many other groups will be taken on by the college's Pistol Team in future matches.

SRO Typical For Medical Assisting

The medical assisting program goes into its second year at the college this semester with high recommendations for its trainees and "standing room only" for its beginning students.

According to Harryjean Tiesselinck, instructor and adviser for medical assisting, the curriculum is so popular, with a turnout of 90 women this semester, that additional room space is needed for the beginning classes that have students "sitting in the windows."

The administration staff, she added, is being very helpful, and new equipment is arriving. Proper housing is also being investigated.

Medical assisting, Mrs. Tiesselinck explained, is a very important field in medicine, and there are many opportunities for trained assistants.

Graduates go to work as office or hospital receptionists, medical-office managers and in other fields in medical aid and students in the work experience program are receiving high recommendations from Bay Area physicians and hospitals.

"There is no reason," Mrs. Tiesselinck said, "why our men students shouldn't enroll in the curriculum," since there are ample opportunities for men in this field. "But the men seem to have decided it's a women's course," she commented.

The San Francisco Medical Assistants Society and the San Francisco Medical Society are sponsoring the program which includes instruction in laboratory techniques, physical and biological sciences and basic business skills.

The assistants society gives a scholarship each year to a deserving student. Last year's winner was Betty Chin.

Deadline For Free-Hour Forms Set This Week

Students who have not filed their free-hour forms are expected to do so before the end of the first midterm period, Walter McCloud, counselor, announced recently.

Free-hour forms may be obtained from the counseling office, S-160.

Students will be given registration numbers on the basis of seniority and grade point average. However, first semester students will be given numbers on the basis of first midterm grades.

A few years ago registration was conducted on a first-come first-serve basis, but it proved to be difficult for all concerned.

Retail Floristry Halts Meetings

Because of numerous activities and demonstrations planned, the Retail Floristry Club will not convene this semester, according to Maryhope C. Jacks, instructor in charge of the retail floristry division at the college.

This semester, students in retail floristry will travel to Lincoln, Balboa, Woodrow Wilson, Polytechnic and Samuel Gompers High Schools to teach flower designs in high school home economics classes.

The students participating in this activity will include Chuck Kaldahl, Ellen Fraser, Pat Renfro, Betty Mansfield, Diane Young, Larry Martin, Trudy Masterson, Warren Hom, Rosemary Oliver and Jim Bertucci.

These students will work in teams, and as one student leetures to the class, the other will design flower arrangements, Mrs. Jacks said.

Home economics classes will be shown how flowers can be used in the home and how to make table decorations and corsages. The purpose of the program is to educate high school students as to the uses of flowers for possible careers in floristry.

Floristry students will have a booth in the annual Christmas design show at the San Francisco flower market this month, Mrs. Jacks said.

Mrs. Jacks also told The Guardsman that three students in floristry traveled to Europe during the summer to attend the International Conference of Florists.

Council OK's Publicity Budget In Record Time, Takes 3 Votes On 'Happy Birthday' Motion

By Lowell Mengel

Fiscal-minded members of Student Council last week quickly passed the Publicity Committee budget for this semester, spent several minutes, and three votes, deciding if council would sing "happy birthday" to a cabinet member, then temporarily refused to approve appointive Associated Men Student officers.

Publicity funds amounting to $683.80 were allocated last week, but in line with the previous week's cut in the Pistol Team budget, some $250 dollars that was for an open house was deleted after Sophomore President Steve Christ pointed out that this would not be needed until April.

A motion from council was made that the group sing "happy birthday" to Finance Committee head Judi Beverly — newly 19 years. Objections were apparent as the male members voted against the action.

The vote in each case was so close that it took Associated Student President Vince Contreras three counts before he declared the motion passed by a narrow margin of 4-3-3.

Council member Gerald Whelan then presented a motion asking council to approve AMS President Bob Roddick's appointed officers, and to insert their names in the Student Council directory which had come out the previous week.

Constitutional Revisions Chairman Bill May then pointed out how great a hardship this would put on the secretary, since she would almost have to prepare a new directory every time an organization had its new officers approved by the council.

The council then voted against the motion, 2-3-5, and Roddick asked to be excused saying, "If my officers are not approved, I'm not either."

After Roddick had left, council then approved AMS officers Ray Chezik and Areil Zamora, vice presidents, and Roger Kaufman, treasurer. Council was in agreement on the action.

High School Public Relations Chairman Loralee Lando, and Student Handbook Chairman Ruth Wimmer then mentioned that a proposed Who's-Who of former City College students who have achieved prominent positions is being prepared.

Miss Wimmer also mentioned that she wanted to know if the council and cabinet members would pay 10 cents for the handbook if they were entering the college for the first time. A slight majority indicated they would.

In other business, councilman Whelan once again urged the creation of a committee to combat littering of the campus. No further action was taken by the council or president.

Sophomore President Christ then mentioned that council might consider the idea of co-hosting, with the other colleges in the Golden Gate Conference, a hootenanny with some popular singers. Council was to consider the idea.

Election Commissioner Chris Small reported that nominations for the vacant seats on this semester's Student Council may be made now. There are four vacant freshman seats on council, and one vacant sophomore seat.

Miss Small also announced that she is starting a list of candidates for AS elections next semester.

Job Applications Reach New High

Approximately one thousand students have filed applications with the placement center for part time work this semester, according to Joseph Amori, director of placement services here.

This is the largest number of job applicants to file for part time employment during a one-month period in the history of the college, Amori said.

The rush for part time jobs began before the opening of college on September 3, and gained momentum with daily figures reaching a high of 300 applicants on September 15. All students who were qualified and could meet the employers' demands were placed, Amori said.

Biggest demand has been in the clerical fields such as for billing clerks, accounting clerks, stenographers, clerk typists, office machine operators, file clerks and general clerks. Service occupations ranked second in demand.

Demand for technically trained personnel was meager. This, Amori said, is customary in the employment picture, because most jobs calling for technical skills are of a full time nature.

The college placement service completed a project with the San Francisco Post Office when 100 men students filed applications and completed the United States Civil Service examination for clerk carrier positions.

Amori states that all students interested in part time, full time and/or Christmas employment can file their applications in the college placement office, S-188.

Last Three Firesides Precede Pledge Week

Three remaining sorority firesides, Kappa Phi's, Delta Psi's and Delta Sigma Tau's will be held tomorrow night in the homes of members, according to the schedule of rushing events.

Kappa Phi is scheduled to hold a fireside from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Delta Psi from 8 to 10 p.m. and Delta Sigma Tau from 8:30 to 10 p.m.

Pledge days, when the pledges wear skirts and blouses in the colors of their sorority, will be Monday, October 28, Wednesday, October 30, and Friday, November 1.

The remaining two days of the week will be reserved for service projects. Last year two of the projects were a visit to the children at Kaiser Hospital and a library project.

Instructor Here To Act As Judge For Teachers Of English Awards

Edward J. Knapton, English instructor here currently on leave, was recently appointed to be a judge in the National Council of Teachers of English Awards program for 1963, according to James Squire, executive secretary of the National Council of Teachers of English.

The achievement awards program was organized by the council to grant recognition to the nation's outstanding high school seniors for excellence in English. Recognition is also extended to the English departments of high schools that have trained these students.

Knapton, a member of the state judging committee, composed of English instructors from high schools and colleges, will help evaluate the writing abilities and literary awareness of several thousand candidates, Squire said.

"By serving this national organization as an achievement award judge, Knapton will be making a significant contribution to the teaching of English in this country," Squire declared.

Knapton is currently serving an active term in the "visiting professor" program at the University of California in Berkeley, and will serve in this capacity for the remainder of the academic school year.

The University of California established such a program to aid the educational endeavors of other colleges by inviting specially selected professors from other institutions to participate in the university faculty program.

Visiting professors become aware of the most recent and advanced methods of instruction as a result of taking part in the program, Luckmann emphasized.

He also pointed out that when Knapton returns here, his experience will prove valuable in aiding further curriculum planning or in examining the teaching methods within the English department here.

Crippled Gridders To Meet Cocky Gladiator Eleven In Friday's 'Homecoming' Clash

Eleven battle-scarred Rams, mostly second stringers, will take the field against a cocky Chabot squad Friday at the Balboa High School field, for the 1963 "Homecoming" grid classic.

The change in site was announced only last Friday through an administrative notice which said, "The change . . . has been made necessary because of the unfinished construction which endangers playing conditions on our own field."

The heralded Gladiators, with five returning lettermen, three of whom are starters, fresh from a sweeping 15-0 conquest of Menlo's Vikings, in non-conference play, and a week's rest, boast of a strong team, ready to take on the Rams.

Claiming speed and strength, the Gladiators also threaten the Rams with their ace receivers, Gary Woznick and Ken Gerlach.

Gladiator coach Ed Hart more conservatively states that his team has speed but that defense mistakes spell trouble. "The club lacks some of the depth it had last year, and it loses speed when it becomes necessary to delve into reserves," he said.

Running almost exclusively from a multiple wing formation, the Chabotans have reason to be optimistic with Gerry Fisher, last season's league leading passer, piloting the squad.

The Ram team, suffering severe deficiencies in the first string line, may find it difficult to duplicate last year's 12-7 victory over Chabot. Seven San Francisco starters are out with various injuries received in the recent Los Angeles clash.

Rich Colombo has severe ligament damage and is to undergo surgery, Craig Rodeick suffers from ankle trouble, and there are five leg injuries on the squad.

Line coach Alec Schwarz surmised: "There are no soft-touch teams in the league," and with morale ajar, the Rams may confirm this theory. Because of the size of the existing line, the Ram squad will probably use a split-T with an unbalanced line setup.

Although this college's line is not stupendous in weight, neither is Chabot's. The average weight of the Gladiator line is little more than 200 pounds.

Since the Ram team is not yet established either as a passing or running team, the type of offense to be used Friday, remains to be seen.

Chabot's club, although boasting of strength and more speed than last year's team, seems to have left some room for speculation as to the solidity of the team. Although the Gladiators played well as a team in defeating Menlo, several defensive position changes had to be made in the last minute.

Ram experience, or lack of it, being the keynote in the loss to Los Angeles Valley, should be a determining factor in the Chabot contest.

Spikers Settle For Split In Opening Conference Meet

By John Arberry

Paced by Gene Plotkin and Ozzie Norris, the Ram harriers earned a split in the opening conference cross-country meet against San Mateo and Chabot Friday at San Mateo.

Dual scores found the Rams losing to San Mateo 15-46 while bouncing back to nip Chabot 26-29. San Mateo in turn measured Chabot 17-44. Triangular scores read San Mateo 17, San Francisco 57 and Chabot 60.

Plotkin and Norris placed eighth and ninth respectively, with times of 19:47 and 19:52 for the difficult San Mateo course.

The pair of veterans led the college to a close win over Chabot, despite the Gladiators' Floyd Goodwin capturing fourth place.

Rich Klemmer crossed the tape 12th followed by George Clevice who placed 14th for the Rams. Harry McCoy was the last Ram across the finish line.

Powerful San Mateo dominated the meet as they took the first three places then fifth and sixth. Ralph Likens led the San Mateans with a 18:36 followed by teammate Jim Huff in 18:46 as the title-favored Bulldogs moved to a perfect 2-0 conference mark.

As to the meet, Coach Lou Vasquez commented, "We were not quite ready for San Mateo in a dual meet but when championship meet comes around with all the teams competing we could become a contender."

Next league opponent will be Contra Costa at Contra Costa on October 16.

Petitions Filed; Intra Action To Start Next Week

With the last of the petitions for this semester's Associated Men Student intramural tournament filed yesterday, two leagues will start their respective round robin competition next week, according to Bob Roddick, AMS president.

According to Roddick, this year's play promises to be faster and more furious, with maximum competition. All six fraternities are represented in the fraternity league, whereas only five turned out last semester.

"So many independents have petitioned that it will be necessary to play a double round robin in the fraternity league before a championship can be played," Roddick said. The Independent league will play a single round robin, he added.

The two separate league champions, determined by separate playoffs, will then vie for the intramural championship in this semester's sportnight.

Neither a freshman class or sophomore class team is entered in the league. Beta Tau, however, is well represented, having two teams in fraternity league play.

"It is hoped that with more teams, better organization, and a grand finale in sportnight, this semester's intramurals will be a sueeess, and that the AMS will have encouraged student interest not only in this, but in other campus activities as well," Roddick emphasized.

He explained that his only disappointment is that his attempt to arouse coed interest in AMS activities by "drafting" three women students for secretarial duties, was ineffectual.

"I had hoped," he sighed wistfully, "that I could start something new by appointing girls to several of our offices."

Blowing Bubbles? — In Game?

LARRY KATZEFF APPEARS to be blowing a bubble while he sends the ball past the goalie in a typical piece of Ram soccer action. The Rams demonstrated their ability in recent victories over San Francisco State, 4-3, and the San Quentin Pirates, 4-1. Katzeff play (above) occurred in an 8-1 victory over Menlo College last year.

San Quentin And SF State Gators First Booter Victims

Coach Roy Diederichsen's soccer eleven squeezed by San Francisco State's Gators, September 26, 4-3, but beat San Quentin September 28 more decisively, 4-1, to mark the beginning of the soccer season.

The first game at State College, a practice game, saw a lively and quick passing Ram team, and as it looked after the first quarter with the Rams leading 2-0, the local soccermen were about to stampede State.

But in the second and third quarter the Ram booters, apparently overly confident, relaxed and State took advantage of the situation to score one goal.

After the Rams increased their lead with one goal, State, clinging on, started pressing, adding two goals and tying the score.

This called for immediate action on behalf of the Rams. Consequently Diederichsen put outstanding center-half Hector Olaya into the center forward position, giving the forward line the necessary push in the last quarter.

The Rams then took command of the game, and Olaya finally and deservedly scored the winning goal, a few minutes before the game's end.

Center forward Waldon Hom, who scored three goals, showed his old shooting spirit. Olaya, who scored the winning goal, was the team's backbone, and halfback Ceasar Pina fed the forward line with accurate passes.

After the game, Diederichsen said, "In the first quarter my players showed an effective team play, and I was pleased. Before the game one is always uncertain as to the team's balance and whether the players are worked in—holding their positions and harmonizing with each other.

"Although in the second and third quarter the team let down," Diederichsen pointed out, "this was partially due to the fact that I had to try out some of the new players. The game then was a little disorganized, since it takes a while before the players are used to each other."

The coach's decision to move Olaya to the forward line in the last quarter seemed to mark the turning point and the game then went along even better.

In the San Quentin game, the Rams encountered an inexperienced but determined team.

In the first two quarters there was much individual play, especially by the Spanish members of the squad, who are ball-artists at heart. But later, after Diederichsen reminded the players that soccer is a team game and its purpose is to score goals, there was less dribbling and more passing.

The Rams directed the game throughout and never gave up control of midfield. At times the game took on a rough character, when some of the inmate players started charging ball and man. But, thanks to the Ram superior ball control, there were only a few scratches.

Two of the inmate players were hurried off the playing field. One came back later on the field with a bandage around his forehead.

In all, the San Quentin team played a fair and square game, but the Rams' victory was never in doubt.

Diederichsen stated after the game, "Outside-left Carlos Cortez, who scored two goals, played his best game in two years, left full-back Andy Nabong was the outstanding defense man, and Hector Olaya was his usual best."

The next game scheduled is a league encounter with Diablo Valley College next Wednesday. Meanwhile Diederichsen is trying to arrange a practice game before then with the University of San Francisco.

An Old Sport But A New Craze

Surfing Enjoys Upsurge In Popularity

By Pete Franklin

Surfing is by no means a new sport to Americans. It has been practiced for many years by many people, but with the sudden and boisterous upsurge in its popularity, it has blossomed into the latest craze, a craze that goes beyond the limits of a pastime.

On the face of it, surfing appears to, be a wild perpetual orgy conducted by unruly multitudes of blond cannibals who drive '34 "woodys" just chock full of booze, speak a foreign tongue, and worship idols like Honolulu Lulu and Jan and Dean.

But there is much more to surfing than can be represented by these incompetent fadists. Surfing has, in the space of one year, taken on a whole new look. It is no longer a sport, but an image.

Came the ho dads (non-surfers), in droves to the beaches, parking their beat-up station wagons on lawns, their surfboards in the sand and demanding equal space. In a matter of a few days, they drove the real surfers out.

Said one surfer, "I came north from Huntington because I know they won't follow me. The water is colder and the surf may not be as high, but at least I don't have to put up with those drunken maniacs."

The overwhelming interest in surfing of late has classified it as either the thing to do—for those who are "with it" or, very plebian—for those who are not so "with it."

The woody, the hair, the surf-jargon are all part of the image.

"Everything about them is false," said one irate surfer. "Sure, surfers use expressions pertaining to their sport, but so do garbagemen; but at least one word in five is recognizable as English.

"We're not all uneducated bums. It has gotten so that some just sit down and try to out talk each other with expressions that nobody can understand. Ask one of them to get on a board and try some of the things he talks about? It's sickening."

Equally unpalatable is their music and dancing, inane babblings about various heroes of the surf—actually Surfer Joe is greener than his board and woody—accompanied by sensuous body movement.

The most disheartening truth about the whole thing is that there aren't two women for every man. The ratio is about seven to three in reverse, and 30 per cent of those are 13 year olds.

One surfer, an English major at University of Oregon, said, "I haven't surfed in about ten months, and if I had the chance, I probably wouldn't take it, because, with the magnitude of the prevailing craze, skepticism has arisen among those relatively few established riders toward the masses of pseudo-surfers who clutter the surf routes.

"As a result, anyone who is genuinely ignorant of surf-riding and yet is really interested in learning might be regarded as a member of this growing throng who look upon surfing as 'in'."

To them, surfing has replaced beatnikism, and in their blindness, they have brought disrepute to the pastime and to themselves in the eyes of more responsible and conservative individuals.

In time as did hula hoops and the Twist, surfing will pass on to at least a temporary resting place.

Then the beach cranks and charlatans of the surf world will take their unused boards and monotonous drivel called music and will seek out others ways to "slum it."

RAMBLINGS

By Fred Wales

FRIDAY, the 13 and October 31 are supposed to be Jinx Days, but neither has anything on September 28 for the Ram football team.

Last year on September 28, the joyous Rams with a week-old 22-6 fourth quarter win over Los Angeles Valley, traveled 700 miles to Phoenix, Arizona, to meet their doom.

Virtually unaware of the power of Phoenix and exhausted from the long trip down there and the heat, the team was ready for the Hex. It didn't come until the game had gone 26 minutes, but when it finally did come, it left the Rams on the wrong end of a 32-0 shutout.

Punt returns, injuries and miscues were the forms in which the powerful Jonah struck.

This year again the pattern was followed to the same end. Leaving the gymnasium at 12:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon the Rams were bounced from car to plane to bus for nearly six hours.

On the plane, after a luscious steak dinner over the Monterey Peninsula, the team ran into not-so-luscious air pockets over Santa Barbara, and over Long Beach were back on empty stomachs as little blue bags were filled following the roller-coaster dipping of the plane.

Back on the ground, the team emerged from the plane into Los Angeles, a steam bath in September.

Three hours later the Los Angeles Valley Monarchs came trotting onto the field with revenge in their eyes, followed by the already tired Rams hoping for another playday like Vacaville.

Naturally, Los Angeles won the toss and chose to receive.

Then the first phase of the Hex set in.

On the opening kick-off All-City tackle Rich Colombo from Mission High, left the field limping. Then Suaese Malae vacated the other starting tackle position after playing some good ball in the midst of a sloppily officiated game.

Usually over the ball, Laisene Malauulu, after one play was alongside the pigskin and limped off.

Then in came the defense and out limped Ed Johnson.

Craig Rodeick carried the ball for two yards before smashing his ankle, and then halfback Jim Carter joined him as a spectator.

As Part I of the Hex left six men on the bench, Part II appeared in the form of an 80-yard punt return.

Half time found the Rams down 7-0, the same score as that of a year ago.

Part III struck in the second half with a blocked punt and a bit of sorcery when another of Henry King's 9 punts was drawn straight up into the darkness and then bounced back seven yards. King previously had boots of 46 and 60 yards.

At game's end, the Voodoo had effectively presented the Rams with a 31-6 defeat and a list of eight casualties.

The Jinx officially ended at midnight when the defeated Rams climbed aboard Flight 1758. Proof of the lifted Hex came in the forms of "Stewardae" Carol and Jean who helped lift the spirits of the vanquished Rams.

* * *

Ben Brown, veteran safety of the Rams, warned the rookies, "Last year we took a four-engine plane to Phoenix. This year we took a two-engine plane to Los Angeles. Next year, if you're not careful, you might have to pedal to Monterey."

RA Sports Annual Set For October 26

The college's annual Recreation Association coed sports day will be held Saturday, October 26, on campus, RA adviser Frances Galloway announced today.

Sports day activities include archery, badminton, bowling, folk dancing, tennis and volleyball.

Archery will be held in the Junior Columbia Round with not more than four archers to compete from each college. Badminton play will include two women's singles, two men's singles and two women of mixed doubles, Miss Galloway said.

Bowling teams will include one team of four with at least two women. Tennis competition calls for one women's singles, one men's singles and one mixed doubles.

Wolohan's Band Plays For Freshman Ball On Friday At Fairmont Hotel

Cutest Couple Contest Sparks Semiannual Fling

Music by Maurice Wolohan and his orchestra will enliven the Freshman Ball, theme of which is "Mystic Magic," set for 9 p.m. to midnight this Friday in the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel, Freshman Class President Gary Ettin stated recently.

Highlight of the ball will be the announcement of the Cutest Couple. Couples have been selected this week by ballot, and five more couples will be chosen at the ball as candidates. Ettin emphasized that couples may still sign up this week at the Silver Pole to enter the contest.

Clubs and fraternities have donated prizes for the Cutest Couple and the runners-up. These include a crown, trophies, dinner reservations to a local hotel, free theater passes to the award-winning cinema, Lawrence of Arabia, and flowers.

Donors of the prizes for the contest include Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Sigma Delta, Phi Beta Delta, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Beta Tau, Newman Club and the Hawaiian Club.

Ettin announced that the finalists in the Cutest Couple-of-Mice Contest, which was held last week in conjunction with the ball, are Mike and Matilda, and Ralph and Zelda. The final winners have yet to be announced.

Other contestants were Hank and Henrietta, and Melvin and Penelope. The mice were on view last week in the display case on the first floor at the south end of Science Hall.

Today is the last day for freshmen priority for bids for the dance. Associated Student cards must be presented at the Silver Pole in order to secure the bids. After today, however, Ettin explained, upper classmen are eligible for the remaining bids.

Chief Cain Explains Delay Over Special Parking Permits

Delay in issuing special reserved-area parking permits to members of student government was explained last week by Campus Police Chief Tom Cain.

He revealed that an officer on duty in the parking area discovered and confiscated a special parking permit that had not been issued for the car in which it was found. The license number had been crossed out and replaced by another.

Investigating this, he learned that an elected student officer had obtained the permit last semester and given it to a friend.

Commenting on this discovery Cain said, "If we can't trust an important member of the student government to abide by simple unwritten rules of conduct, whom can we trust?"

He then stated that, "in the future, in fairness to all, student officers will be required to obtain parking permits by the same procedure that anyone else must use."

Additional factors which led to this decision, according to Cain, were several incidents which occurred last semester.

As illustration, he explained that he had received information, verbal and otherwise, to the effect that if permits were issued promptly to certain members of the council, their votes would be assured in approving the Pistol Team's requested funds.

When asked what he thought of this, Cain replied, "I'm getting tired of being intimidated by council members asking for special privileges."

College Hosts First Area Six Confab Of CJCSGA Oct. 26

By Bob Lutz

City College will host the first general assembly of the newly established Area Six Conference, representing the California Junior College Student Government Association, Saturday, October 26.

Main business at the convention is to consider the ratification of the new constitution of the association and to conduct a series of workshops throughout the day, Vince Contreras, Associated Student president here, announced today.

"The purpose of the conference is to promote intercollegiate cooperation and communication and to facilitate an exchange of ideas through discussion," Contreras emphasized.

More than 250 delegates representing the colleges of the local conference are expected to attend.

"Under the recently adopted system, the 70 two-year colleges of California are divided into eight areas, or conferences, all members of the CJCSGA. The area to which this college belongs has been designated as Area Six and the local conference consists of eight other colleges," Contreras explained.

Officers of the association representing this college include Contreras, president; John Thellen, vice president; Angela Soares, secretary; Robin Zimmer, treasurer; Kathy Carsner, assistant secretary; William May, parliamentarian; Phyllis Webb, conference arrangements, and Sherm Elworthy, adviser.

Each college will be represented by 30 delegates, and each delegation will be led by the Associated Student President from his institution.

Host president of the assembly will be Contreras.

Registration will be held in Smith Hall during the morning, and immediately following, the delegates will attend the general assembly in the theater, Contreras announced.

An opening address, the subject of which is student government, will be made by City College's President Louis Conlan.

Following the assembly, the delegates will join one of four special workshops which include Finance, Aspects of Politics, Public Relations and Entertainment.

The Public Relations workshop will feature guest speaker, Barbara Rosenthal, public relations instructor here. Lucille Lando, Journalist for the San Francisco Progress, will speak in the Entertainment workshop.

A fifth workshop will be held exclusively for the Associated Student Presidents from each college represented.

Workshop chairmen are to be selected from a list of individuals from each of the colleges who previously submitted an application to the officers of the association.

AGS Study Habit Clinic To Reopen After Midterms

By Patricia Dutter

Alpha Gamma Sigma's study habit clinic will reopen during College Hour in S-214 shortly after the end of the first midterm period, William Richardson, AGS adviser, announced last week.

Whether the clinic will be open every Thursday in the future depends upon the availability of AGS members and the interest shown by the students, Richardson said.

Students can check bulletin boards listing College Hour activities to determine when the clinic will meet, he added.

Richardson explained that all students who are having difficulties with their studies are invited to attend the clinic.

The meetings will be "strictly on an informal basis," and there will be no lectures or assignments.

Officers of AGS this semester are Dennis McCue, president; Sal Guardino, vice president; Betsy Erkkila, secretary, and John Hom, treasurer. Other members, however, Richardson said, will be present to talk with students and offer helpful hints on how to study, take notes and prepare for tests.

Students who need special help in a particular subject can consult Richardson in S-140 and arrange for a tutor.

Richardson stated that any student, either part time or full time, member or nonmember of AGS, who has been successful in his academic career is welcome at the clinic to aid students in scholastic difficulty.

He stated further that students who are interested in coaching other students for pay should so inform him in his office in S-140.

Richardson also mentioned that students who are either silver or gold seal members of the California Scholarship Federation in high school, are invited to join AGS, as associate members, with all rights and privileges.

Reconstruction Puts Stadium Out Of Grid Business

Uncompleted reconstruction of track facilities in the campus stadium closed the field for last Friday's City College football game against Chabot may call for a possible shift to another site for the San Francisco-Contra Costa game, Friday, October 25.

Site change of Friday's "Homecoming" game to Galileo High School field, plus the edict that work must be finished before any football game can be played on campus, are safety measures taken by Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management.

"The runways along the sides of the track are faulty, and if a football player were to run into one of them, he could be risking injury," Anderson explained.

Reconstruction work in the stadium, which has been in use for activities other than track since 1960, was necessary to provide better track facilities. When work was started, Anderson said, the intention was to make the track ready for next season, and it was not anticipated that there might be interference with use of the gridiron.

Danger to players, however, was foreseen when the irregularity of furrows, part of the track reconstruction, was observed.

The hazard, to which "football players cannot be exposed," will be removed as soon as possible, Anderson emphasized.

Reconstruction work, slated to start early last spring, was delayed until summer. "Had the contractor been able to start the work sooner, he would have discovered the fault sooner," Anderson commented.

He emphasized that the contractor is and was under no obligation to complete the reconstruction before the end of October, and the "furrow" development, an injury risk to football players, was entirely unforseen.

Completion of the present reconstruction, Anderson declared, means a stadium "complete in every aspect."

He termed the current closing of the stadium "inconvenient, but necessary for safety."

Rescheduled Concert Due Here Tomorrow

Frances Wiener, violinist, and her husband, concert pianist Lev Shorr, are featured in College Hour tomorrow in the theater, in a concert originally scheduled for last Thursday.

The couple is widely known for recordings, radio programs and concert appearances.

The concert here is scheduled to start at 10 a.m., series director Meyer Cahn said last week.

Wendie Williams Selected Fall Football Queen During Festival Rally, Car Parade

Wendie Williams, sponsored by the Associated Men Students, was elected Fall Football Queen in a close contest following a car parade past the Redwood Ram during College Hour last Thursday.

Seven other contestants were named and introduced by Buzz Kribs, president of the Council of Organizations.

Donna Mendia, sponsored by Alpha Kappa Rho, took second place with 168 points, two points behind Miss Williams' winning score of 170 points.

Patty Smith, sponsored by the Associated Women Students, placed third with 158 points.

Five other princesses and their sponsoring organizations included Cathy Bossert, representing Alpha Sigma Delta. Sharon Strauss was sponsored by Zeta Phi Sigma, Randee Herting by Phi Beta Rho, Lois Hague by Beta Tau, and Emma Salisbury by the A Capella Choir.

The Fall Football Queen and her entourage of seven Princesses were officially introduced during half-time ceremonies at the San Francisco-Chabot game last Friday.

Alpha Sigma Delta was the only organization that entered the car parade. The other organizations failed to come through.

The rally was sponsored jointly by the COO and the Rally Committee.

The Rally Committee meets as a class from 2 to 3 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays weekly. Gerald Mullin is the faculty sponsor for the organization. Kathy Carsner is the Rally Commissioner and eight song girls and four yell leaders complete the group.

The Rally Committee plans activities and rallies for football and other sports. It worked in cooperation with the COO in planning other Fall Festival events.

Another part of the Rally Committee's duties is to encourage interest for games and arrange buses to carry band and team members to the game location.

Alpha Sigma Delta Annual Book Drive To Start Monday

Alpha Sigma Delta will sponsor its annual "educational" book drive on campus beginning next Monday and continuing through November 8, Larry Maibaum, fraternity representative, stated this week.

All contributions will be forwarded to the local chapter of the Asian Students Foundation. From there, the books will be shipped to some 12 countries on the continent of Asia.

Only educational books "preferably those in the fields of English or mathematics," are wanted because, according to Maibaum, "the people first have to become familiar with English before they can appreciate novels and other material."

Issues of the National Geographic Magazine are also acceptable contributions in this drive.

Students may deposit contributions in receptacles placed in the arts building, in the faculty gallery in Cloud Hall, near the silver pole in Science Hall or in the Dean of Men's office, S-150.

The Asian Foundation, which is coordinating this project with the fraternity here, is a non-profit, non-political organization, established in California 12 years ago.

Burglars Hit College

Custodians arrived for work at the college a week ago last Monday to be greeted by a broken window and smashed vending machines, one dripping ice cream, in the basement of Science Hall.

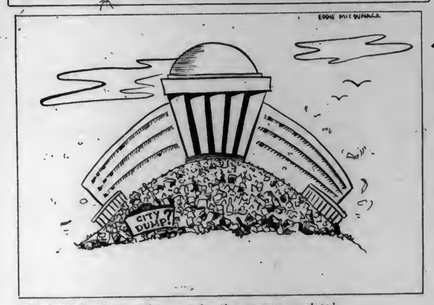
The incident had occurred over the previous weekend and had gone unnoticed until that morning. An undisclosed amount of money was taken from the vending machines.

All but one of the damaged machines were replaced by that afternoon.

Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management, called police, who investigated the matter but were unable to find any clues as to the identity of the burglars.

"This action," said Anderson, "is evidence of the selfish interests of some Individuals.

"The Associated Students are the losers in this matter," he added, "for not only will they lose their commission from the machines for that day, but in the future they will probably have to pay higher insurance premiums on the machines themselves."



Anderson attributed the robbery to the relative isolation of the college, which makes it a prime target for vandals and burglars. But he added that there was no damage to any of the other buildings or to any of the rooms in Science Hall.

"The only reason the burglar—or burglars—chose one particular building," Anderson stated, "was to get at the machines."

THIS JUST might be the name for the campus — unless!

Unofficial Cleanup Campaign Calls For Campuswide Assist

BACK IN 1950, an unofficial anti-litter campaign sprang up as a result of students' negligence and indifference toward their litter-strewn campus. Now in 1963, the same problem plagues our lawns, parking lots, the cafeteria and the area around the flag pole in particular.

An amalgam of discarded lunch-wrapping papers, newspapers and notebook-leaves continuously appear day after day on our campus. Cigarette butts are the worst detritus, flying by, expertly thrown by students who appear to have caught the habit while standing in front of pizza parlors.

Meanwhile, in the reservoir where the majority of automobiles are parked, one stumbles on empty cans and piles of recently-emptied ash trays.

Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman has undertaken an unofficial anti-litter campaign, which, he hopes, will help restore the campus' physical appearance. Dean Hillsman is expecting the Student Council to take necessary actions regarding the problem.

However, when a member recently introduced a motion to establish a committee to handle the campaign at a recent council meeting, the motion failed, apparently through complete unwillingness on the part of everyone present. Not a single member seconded the move. Since then a committee has been formed.

Evidently, this campus is doomed to retain its littered appearance UNLESS every student participates in this campaign. Sherm Elworthy, student activities adviser, summed it up last week when he declared that the college "resembles a junior high school," and that the students throwing litter about are "not animals, but people, and people pick up after themselves."

To alleviate the problem, posters are currently posted throughout the campus, reminding everyone of the proper places to dispose of their trash. Let us hope that these signs are not put up in vain.

Every one of us should be well aware of this situation and should try to contribute to keeping our campus clean of trash — unless we want to be called animals.

Less Play, More Leadership

FOR WEEKS NOW, The Guardsman has been emphasizing the importance for students to grow up and behave accordingly, as mature persons should — and do behave.

Therefore, student leadership is essential to every student here, and is necessary in order to assure homogeneity in campus politics. Furthermore, this leadership is of prime interest to the college's leaders, the students who comprise the Student Council.

However, this is only true in theory, not in the presently existing conditions.

Headed by Associated Student President Vince Contreras, the council has recently displayed whims and tantrums of a most elementary nature.

Council usually starts in a dignified atmosphere worthy of the Senate's procedures. But soon, a member proposes such childish and stupid motions such as S.O.S. (Stamp Out Snails) or to allocate special funds for the purchase of charcoal-colored blazers for council members, or to sing Happy Birthday to a cabinet member.

In the meantime, the Campus Police budget is cut to its barest minimum. Even more pressing is the current anti-litter campaign which Ralph Hillsman, dean of men, has undertaken.

A member moved that Contreras appoint a committee or an organization to support and participate in the campaign. The motion failed to pass because no one seconded it.

We hope our leaders will face their responsibilities as it is expected of them, and that the two weekly meetings turn out not to be another farce as they are now regarded.

Student Council is a serious matter. There are pressing problems and issues to be discussed. It is not a rehearsal for an opera recital or a gardener's proposition to decide on how to keep the campus free from snails.

A Roving On The Sadie

Messers Find Adventure In Off-Beat Sabbatical Voyage

To most instructors, a sabbatical means a chance to get away from the routine of the class room. It means a chance to travel, and stretch one's legs a bit.

This is also what it means to Sidney Messer, an engineering instructor at the college. But the similarity ends there.

Last year, when Messer took his sabbatical leave, he and his wife, Lyda, boarded their 35-foot schooner, the Sadie, in Halifax, Nova Scotia, and set sail on a trip which would bring them to San Diego, California, ten months and nineteen days later.

Messer and his wife sailed from Halifax on July 19, 1962, and spent the remainder of the summer leisurely sailing down the New England coast.

The trip down the coast produced the only two unusual incidents in an otherwise "uneventful" voyage. The first occurred at the outset of the trip upon leaving the Bay of Fundy. Because of the rapid changing of the tides, they had to sail at midnight.

The tides in the Bay of Fundy are known as the highest in the world and change with the sea coming across the bay in a huge breaker.

Midnight being high tide, the Sadie sailed in what the fathometer measured to be 27 feet of water both fore and aft. While moving out the channel, the Sadie struck an object which, according to Messer, "...felt like a rock."

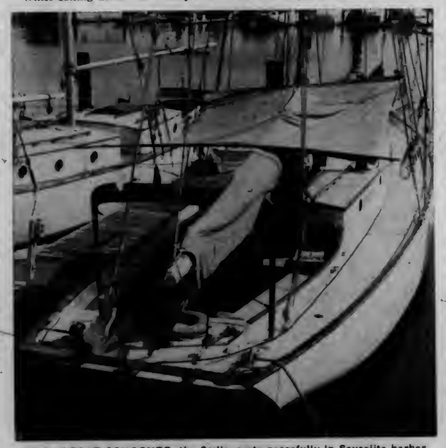
They continued out of the harbor under the Sadie's power and upon checking the hull the next day could find no damage.

The other incident could indeed be called a "close scrape."

While sailing down the Chesapeake Bay, Messer encountered a drawbridge and duly signaled to have it open.

The bridge opened all right. It opened about ten feet, which is exactly the width of the Sadie's beam. It was too late to turn back, so they had no alternative but to try to go through. They made it—luckily losing only a little paint on the side.

While sailing the Caribbean, Messer and his wife collected billfish for the University of Miami. These small fish hide in the seaweed and must be caught at night with the help of an electric light. The lamp is lowered into the water and attracts the fish. The fish are then scooped up with a net and preserved in formaldehyde.



On the last leg of the Caribbean cruise, an eight-day jaunt from Aruba to Panama, it became evident that the formaldehyde was eating its way through the container. In a position like this all one can do is wait and hope. Again luck was with the Sadie, and the Messers reached the Canal with both container and specimens intact.

From Panama north to San Diego proved to be the most arduous part of the journey. With a favorable sea, the best the small engine of the Sadie could manage was five knots.

And it was two months from the time the Sadie left the Canal before she made the breakwater in San Diego harbor.

In speaking of the voyage, Messer confided that he did most of the navigation, while his wife did most of the cooking because, "She is a much better cook than I am a navigator."

When queried as to when he plans to make another trip, Messer replied, "As soon as possible." —By D. B.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

• What Was That Date?

Editor, The Guardsman

These words will exemplify my thanks and appreciation, my congratulations and compliments on your most accurate editorial, Time and Place for Everything, which appeared in the October 2 issue of The Guardsman.

I was pleased to see that you reported, most precisely, all of what Mr. Besig of the American Civil Liberties Union said. I admire your insight on being able to see the issue of slacks rather than the principle.

It is also well that you know that the date Ameriea ceased to be a Colony of Great Britain was 1776. July 4th if I am correct. You please me very much on being able to see that the only way to show a school respect is to "sport a school uniform."

Because, of course, such minor things as keeping a good scholastic record, attention in class, and courtesy to the instructors, are completely irrelevant when one considers the vast importance of "sporting a school uniform."

Thank you also for exemplifying the true purpose of the male going to college. You expressed it quite well in your male-oriented formula, "wear those skirts and those dresses so that the Americah man can truly appreciate those ankles and legs . . . slacks . . . leave nothing to the eyesight and/or the imagination."

I am complimenting you again on your fine editorial which leaves nothing to my imagination either.

J. M. Churton

(Editor's Note: Merci beaucoup! But wasn't September 3, 1783 when the definitive treaty between this country and Great Britain was signed, the date when the United States ceased to be colonies?)

MOST STUDENTS are unde the impression that mos concerts are confined to the Col lege Hour series.

This is not the truth!

The fact is that we have a ver fine amateur group performing i bungalow 6 every Tuesday and Thur day from noon to 1 p.m.

This incognito group hides fror the glare of publicity under the nam of Student Council. These represent tives of student government may nc realize it, but they have a great futur in politics.

After all, Mayor Jimmy Walker ra on a platform of the Time Step an Yankee Doodle Dandy.

Even more recently, our solem solons on Capitol Hill cracked up ove some photographs in a national urba magazine.

And with the recent ties betwee national politics and show biz, wh can say that voice training may nc be an aid at the polls. With any luc at all, the phrase, "jump on the banc wagon," may not be as fictional as i seems.

We may soon see the day whe political candidates traipse aroun flipping quotes from Charlie Brow and Mort Sahl.

Of course, if a certain senator fror the southwest wins, the jokes ma come from Joe Miller's Joke Book.

The major questions in upcomin campaigns may not be the nuclea arms race or the farm problem, bu rather choral groups versus jazz, o situation comedy versus monologue The major parties may change thei names to the Broadways and th Hollywoods.

The next White House renovatio may include a supper club and a 30(foot, velvet runway. The name ma even be changed to the White Musi Hall.

And it may not be too far into th future that we see a two-hour colo spectacular of the Summit Conference complete with the Radio City Rock ettes and the Boston Pops. In ou estimation, Morey Amsterdam woul make a fine emcee. The hit of th night would be, of course, a K & soft shoe routine.

This would naturally necessitat hiring more script writers. After al the act that lays them in the aisles i the city, may bomb in the hinterland Hence, every candidate is going t have to have a half dozen acts at hi fingertips in order to go over big wit every audience.

Whether or not council realizes i the members are on the threshold c political greatness. Alas, these thinc do not come easily. The only way t get to the top is practice, baby, prac tice.

Drop political science, history an economics, and concentrate on musi and drama.

Forget about parliamentary pre cedure and start working on a goo opening number.

Use that twelve-to-one hour for coi structive work. Practice old script and invent new ones. Forget abou budgets, blood drives, book collection and litter drives. Ask not what you country can do for you, give 'em song and dance.

And by all means don't limit you selves to the talentless ones. Hol auditions! Remember, not many enter tainers can do a single, so back you self with as much talent as possibl

Come to think of it, Council o Organizations meets on the same stag from one to two. All we can say i that they have a tough act to follow

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

AND NOW, once again, it is time for another chapter of The Saga of Sammy The Ram, an American tragedy.

When last we met, Sammy's bosom friend and trusty companion, the Redwood Ram, had become disgusted with the Communist Party and had left its ranks, still owing $4.78 in back dues.

Plagued by guilt and hounded by G-Men, the Redwood Ram roamed the country looking for peace and solitude. His old card-carrying buddies tried to look him up once in a while, but he spurned them.

How he envied his cousins, the Sequoias, who had sunk roots in the high mountains and had flocks of little saplings about them in the evenings.

Our ram had nobody, because in the country today it is not healthy to be seen in the company with persons tainted "red."

Then, through his old friend Sammy, he heard that City College of San Francisco was looking for a mascot, someone who could be a symbol of fair play, mom's applie pie, and the American Way Of Life.

He applied for the job, listing his past associations as with the Boy Scouts and the Republican Party, and was immediately accepted by all the students.

He was adopted by the fraternities, and was put on a pedestal. Not even the Navy Ram had it so good.

But then one day it happened. Some fink squealed. The truth was out that he had been a Red redwood. All social organizations immediately dropped him from their registers.

But it was the fraternities, angry about being duped, that reaped vengeance on the Redwood Ram.

They picked a spot in front of the cafeteria when City College got another building, and there they sank him, imprisoned for the whole world to see and left to the mercy of the elements.

Ah, but they did not stop with just that. Twice a year they humiliated his body by splashing it with different colors of paint and allowing him to stand out in the open in shame for several days.

Then the fraternities would get their pledges to go out and give him a uniform paint job, to protect him against the wind and rain lest he might be put out of his misery. Also, they never bothered to chip off the old coats of paint.

So there he stands today, a spongy symbol of Man's inhumanity to Wood, wreathed in shame and yet not defeated. Each night, when the campus is deserted, he tries to break from the circle of earth that holds him.

Sometimes the pain is so great that he cries out, but nobody hears.

Meanwhile, back in Washington, Sammy The Ram is waiting outside the office of the Attorney General, and if he doesn't get in to see him soon, he will use his ultimate weapon. He will go limp!

He is trying to get a full pardon for his friend before it is too late. Soon the fraternities will again use their terrible form of torture, and the Redwood Ram will again resemble a Van Gogh. Sammy is afraid that the strain will even be too great for this stalwart piece of timber.

Will Sammy get to see the Attorney General in time? Will he have to go limp to achieve his purpose? Can the Redwood Ram take another coat of paint and retain his sanity?

That, friends, is something we may never know. But if, when you are working on the campus late at night, you should hear a strange cry of misery and agony, feel a little pity for a piece of wood.

'Nature Next Door' In C-Hour Showing

Nature Next Door is the title of the film to be shown during College Hour tomorrow in S-136, Madison Devlin, instructor of audio visual aids, announced last week.

Theme of the film as explained by Robert C. Stebbins in his notes on the film in the Sierra Club film catalogue, is planning can save some wilderness near home.

This film was obtained from the Sierra Club Film Library and was photographed at Tilden Park in Berkeley, California. The film will also help observers understand the creatures of the woods and ponds.

The movies shown during College Hour each Thursday are open to any students interested.

Ram Marching Band Sets Sights For Participation In Junior Rose Bowl Game

By Patty Smith

The Ram marching band stepped smartly onto the field last Friday at the college's first football game, but if it hadn't been for the efforts of John Dunn of the hotel and restaurant department, there might not have been a band—much less one bound for the Junior Rose Bowl in December.

Last fall, after a 14-year lapse during which the college had no official band, Dunn decided to reorganize the group. He started out with two students, and by the time the band went out on the field for the first time, it had 15 musicians.

This semester Dunn has 40 students in the band, only one left from last semester, and he hopes for still more.

"Everyone is welcome," he emphasized; "the primary requirements are enthusiasm, a desire to march, the time and willingness to wear a uniform."

About uniforms, the group is still wearing the ones left over from 1948, but Dunn does not mind. "The uniforms were chosen by someone with good taste, the style is good and the condition of the uniforms is good. I only wish that we could get a few more."

Practice time is a problem. "We have yet to practice all together," Dunn stated. "We practice from 2 to 4 p.m. every Friday in the stadium, but ten students have classes from 2 to 3 p.m. and when they arrive at 3 o'clock to practice, six more leave for their 3 to 4 o'clock classes."

This year the group has sheet music, which they will use when playing in the stands. Another new addition this fall is a six-man color guard. As yet Dunn has neither flags nor uniforms for these men, but he is hoping that he will receive them.

The band will play at all home games with Chabot, San Mateo, San Jose, and Foothill; and at all out-of-town games except that with Oakland. The band has also been invited to play in the Junior Rose Bowl in Pasadena on Saturday, December 14.

They will participate in the parade in the morning and the game in the afternoon, Dunn said.

He explained that all the band members are looking forward to the event, and he hopes that Student Council will allocate funds for the trip.

"We actually will have a dress rehearsal for the Junior Rose Bowl," Dunn said, "because the band is going to welcome Santa Claus on Irving Street in a parade from 4 to 6 p.m. Thursday, December 12."

Dunn is still hoping someday to have a 100-piece drum and bugle corps, and he explained that he even teaches drumming and baton twirling to those who wish to learn.

Drum major for the group is George Thompson, and Clemmie Thompson is baton twirler.

Merchants Club To Hold Annual Nautical Fling

The Merchandising Club will hold its annual boat dance from 9 p.m. to midnight, Friday, October 25, Norman Frisella, club president, announced last Thursday.

The boat, Harbor Princess, will leave pier 43½ at 9 p.m. and tour points of interest about the bay.

The theme of the dance is Harbor Lights, and, as it was last year, the affair will be held on one of the Harbor Fleet boats.

Cost of the dance is $5 per couple and a City College registration card will be required for admission.

Dress for the affair will be suits for the men and party dresses for the women, Frisella said, adding that 150 couples are expected to attend.

Refreshments will be served, and entertainment will be supplied by a five-piece orchestra, the Kens, who have appeared at the St. Francis and the Fairmont in San Francisco, and the Claremont in Oakland.

Concerning last year's boat dance, Frisella said, "A great many students complimented us on the dance we had; this time we expect an even bigger turnout over last year because of the success last year."

During the dance, the boat will tour the whole Bay Area.

Tickets for the dance will go on sale Friday at the Silver Pole in Science Hall, and will be sold until the day of the dance, Frisella said.

Fireworks Almost 'Raise Roof' At Council Meeting

By Lowell Mengel

Tempers were so hot toward the end of last Thursday's meeting of Student Council that council member Sandy Castelli remarked as she left, "The roof was ready to come off today."

The fireworks started fairly late in the meeting after Associated Student Card Sales Chairman Rich Thomas told council he had spent $36 for posters and banners, instead of the $3 alloted to him.

Thomas said that if he were to buy radios as prizes for the top card salesmen, he would need an additional $24.08. A motion was made by council, and the money was to be given him from that left over from "the retreat."

It was then that Associated Men Student President Bob Roddick objected, saying that he didn't care if Thomas had the money, but that when he had tried to switch budgeted money as Thomas had done, he (Roddick) had been stopped by the Council.

AS President Vince Contreras then interrupted, stating that Roddick was out of order. When Roddick objected again, he was told he could leave the council meeting.

Roddick then left in a huff for the second week in a row.

Another hot point developed when Mike Asher moved to allocate the Inter-Fraternity Council $10 to repaint the Redwood Ram. Contreras refused to accept the motion after Phyllis Webb, AS vice president, pointed out it was out of order since the IFC was not a budgeted organization.

Miss Castelli then made a new motion, this time asking council to give the ten dollars to the IFC. After long and bitter discussion, the money was voted, 6-3-0.

The question of litter on campus once more came up, with Miss Webb expressing her opinion that anti-litter signs "just go to waste" and that students don't read them.

Still, the demand for a committee to combat litter was so great that Contreras appointed Imogene Walker to head the new committee.

In other business, council heard a recommendation from AMS President Roddick that all the budgets be turned in and analyzed by the Finance Committee at one time.

In this way those heads of organizations which put a great deal of thought into their budgets, yet turn them in late, would not be penalized with cuts since at a late date, council realized they were spending too much and cut the nearest thing possible.

Finance Chairman Judi Beverly said she had already considered the budgets submitted in total and was making estimates for "late" budgets.

IRC Expects 500 At Annual Affair

A group of 500 foreign students from four Bay Area colleges is expected in Smith Hall Friday for the annual International Relation Clubs' tea-dance, starting at 4 p.m., according to Joseph Jacobsen, foreign student counselor here.

Faculty advisers of the local IRC's and their presidents helped The Rotary Club and the Red Cross, who initiated this affair, in setting up this year's tea-dance.

University of San Francisco, Golden Gate College and State College of San Francisco send their IRC members to mingle with City College's IRC members, and dance to the tunes of the famous Ray Hacket orchestra.

The IRC will sponsor its tenth annual fair Friday, November 8 in the Lowell High School auditorium.

More Construction

"THE OLD AND THE NEW are shown in the above photograph of the extension being added to Smith Hall. Dr. Louis Batmale, coordinator of technical-terminal education here, said recently that construction is progressing rapidly and dedication ceremonies are expected to take place May 28, 1964.

Not only the necessary "litter" of construction is shown in the foreground, but the new carillons can be seen in the high, far background.

The new extension will consist of two floors, the first being for food lecture-demonstration classrooms, plus a kitchen and library for the hotel and restaurant department.

Batmale said that the upper floor will include one large room that will be used to relieve noon-time pressure in Smith Hall and will be used in a secondary purpose for student activity functions.

Photo Department Receives Grant For More Lab Equipment

The photography department here recently received a grant of nearly $14,000 from the Federal Government and the San Francisco Unified School District for the purpose of purchasing laboratory equipment, Coordinator of Technical-Terminal Education Louis F. Batmale revealed last week.

The grant was obtained with the help and cooperation of Batmale, William Mails, consultant, and college President Louis Conlan, Charles Lamp, instructor of photography, declared.

There is presently a shortage of industrial photographers in defense-oriented industry, according to a recent survey, and federal financing is a solution to the problem of providing adequate equipment essential in encouraging and training students in photography.

The federal government provides a maximum of 50 per cent of the funds necessary to meet the total expenses, while the city or county school administration, as case may be, provides the balance of the total cost, Lamp explained.

"The matter was discussed with a committee of industrial representatives, and upon their recommendation the funds were granted to the college," Batmale emphasized.

The photography department purchased both still and motion picture cameras, a new refrigeration chamber, water chillers, studio accessories, and other essential laboratory equipment.

All negatives and prints belonging to the department are kept under mild refrigeration. "This is especially true for both color prints and their negatives which rapidly deteriorate at room temperature," Lamp said.

The photography program is one phase of this college's overall curriculum which is accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges, a nationally recognized accrediting group.

The college offers 39 units of college work in photography comprising a total of 14 different courses ranging from the fundamentals of photography through advanced techniques.

Students enrolled in the curriculum in photography, a two-year course of study, are trained in the major branches of photographic work.

Industrial, commercial, press, illustrative, advertising, portraiture, and motion-picture and television photography are but a few examples of branches available.

The Associate in Arts degree and a Certificate of Proficiency are awarded to the student majoring in photography who completes the prescribed curriculum with a satisfactory grade-point average.

Students have the opportunity to meet prospective employers through two avenues — interviews on business recruitment day and engineering recruitment day, which are held annually on campus; and enrollment in the work-experience courses, Lamp said.

Work experience training is available so that the student may obtain practical experience. The department makes a special effort to find positions for its graduates.

Lamp emphasized that facilities and equipment of the department are comparable to those used professionally. Now working in a better equipped laboratory, the photography student can obtain additional valuable experience by taking advantage of the program offered.

The program of study in photography is especially designed to help students keep abreast of advances in the photographic industry.

Coed Models To Try Out For AWS Fashion Show

Coeds interested in modeling in the Associated Women Student fashion show, can obtain an application form in S-150 before going to the model tryouts during College Hour tomorrow in bungalow 6, Dean of Women Mary Golding said today.

Applicants, Dean Golding said, should be slender, no smaller than size 8, no larger than size 12 and be dressed in heels and appropriate campus attire.

The AWS fashion show and tea will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. Wednesday, November 6, in Smith Hall. Fashions by Mr. G will be modeled to fit the Calendar Coeds theme of the show.

A contest will be held to choose a college representative for Glamour Magazine's Ten Best-Dressed College Girls in America competition.

The Bay Area's high school students will be the honored guests at the fashion show and tea which serves to introduce them to the college.

Gridders Take On Traditional Rival Oakland On Friday

Boasting a 215-pound plus offensive line, fast backs and speedy ends, the talented Oakland City College Thunderbirds host the local Ram eleven in a Golden Gate Conference clash Friday in Alameda.

Oakland apparently has intentions of bettering last year's 4-4 mark.

The Thunderbirds, believing that actions speak louder than words, have not greatly publicized their preseason victories, in which they massacred the Santa Clara Frosh, 54-6 and romped over Sierra, 25-0.

T-bird head coach John Anastasia has offered few comments concerning the club's strengths and weaknesses.

It's no secret, however, that the T-birds have the biggest line, weight-wise, in their college's history. The club also boasts ten returning veterans, six of whom were starters last year. Leading halfback, Carl Evan, has run the 100 in :9.7.

The only T-bird problem seems to be at quarterback. Ron Gosorth and Jim Sharpe have been assigned to the slot, but their ability has yet to be proved.

Oakland will work from a T with an unbalanced line and strength of this offense is attested to by Oakland's impressive preseason record.

Ram head coach Dutch Elston today commented, "Oakland appears to be a strong team and could be a rough contender."

In last year's encounter with the Thunderbirds at home the Rams emerged triumphant 12-0 in a game played in mud and rain.

The elements vented their spleen on the 22 valiants that day, contributing to six fumbles and a number of uncanny effects.

The Rams got the breaks, though, scoring twice out of six stands inside the Oakland 20-yard line. All-Conference back Ron Coleman ran for both TDs while gaining 120 yards.

All passing attempts were obliterated by the ruthless wind, which was responsible for Oakland's total punt distance of seven yards in two punts.

Ram punter Walter Williams also had difficulty with the gale, booting one kickoff 100 yards with a tail wind, while another, kicked into the wind, was blown dead on the 50.

By Fred Wales

Hard nosed defense coupled with a 93-yard kickoff return by Charlie Stewart enabled the Ram gridders to overcome offensive mistakes and score a 12-9 comeback over highly rated Chabot in their conference opener last Friday at Galileo Stadium.

For the second consecutive game, Stewart, the Rams' Abe Woodson, was determined not to be stopped. With Chabot leading 7-6 and 13:43 remaining in the fourth quarter the Gladiators kicked off.

Taking the ball on the seven, Stewart cut to the center and followed his blocking up to the 40. Then seemingly stopped by a headlock tackle, he backed out of the hold and headed toward the left sideline.

With a springing block at the 50 the speedster turned the corner and dashed the remaining yardage for the winning tally.

Defense was the key to the Ram victory. The Gladiators were held to 48 yards on the ground and had four passes stolen by the Ram defenders.

Last year's leading passer, Gerry Fisher only hit on 8 of 22 pass attempts for 84 yards as he was forced to hurry his throwing.

All of Chabot's scoring came on blocked punts. The first Chabot score came in the fourth quarter with the Rams leading 6-0. John Andrich knocked one of Henry King's punts in the air at the Ram 40, caught it at the 30 and ran it in. John Garcia on his second attempt, thanks to a penalty, booted the PAT for a brief 7-6 Chabot lead.

The Rams recovered the lead on the ensuing kickoff in the form of Stewart's runback.

Chabot's second score came as Jim Peters tackled Doug Smith attempting to pick up a low pass from center in the end zone for a safety and two more points.

The Rams first scoring drive came in the second period on a first and ten play at the Chabot 35. On the first play, Joe Sobeck blasted 29 yards up the middle before being knocked down at the six yard line. Pat Lewis then hit for three more before Sobeck crashed through the right side of the line for the final three yards.

Sobeck was the leading rusher of the Rams, as the 200-pounder hit for 61 yards on 16 carries. Lewis wasn't far behind him as he pounded for 52 yards on 15 plays.

The game started with an interception and ended with one for Chabot. On the first set of downs Oliver Mitchel picked off a Fisher toss and returned it 20 yards to the Ram 40.

Stewart absconded with the third theft prior to halftime. Dave Conway made a diving catch for the final interception with 10 seconds in the game.

The win left the Rams with a 1-0 conference mark but was costly as tackle Frank Smith was carried off the field with a badly damaged knee.

Booters Meet Diablo Valley In Ram's Conference Opener

Underdog Diablo Valley College's soccer team gets first league crack at the Rams at 2:30 p.m. today at Balboa stadium.

In their first league game, the Diablo Valley College men were beaten by College of San Mateo to the tune of 3-0, and prior to that, the San Quentin inmate team marked its season's first victory by edging Diablo, 4-3.

The Rams, meanwhile, in their second preseason game clobbered the San Quentin Pirates, 4-1, which score, considering all possible scoring chances, does not indicate the actual power Ram booters can claim.

Consequently, Diablo Valley College can expect an opponent more than worthy and capable of a pregame "scare threat." But there are eleven players to a team, and predictions do not always fulfill themselves, as experts can well assure.

Nevertheless, Ram coach Roy Diederichsen and his soccermen expect an easy win.

Team play of the Rams as indicated thus far, has shown vast improvement, and so has the condition of several players. "Everybody seems to be in sufficiently good shape to last the whole game," Diederichsen said.

There are also a sufficiently qualified number of substitutes to fill any possible weak spot on the team. Predictions are, then, that the Rams may well become the first champions of the new Northern California Junior College Soccer Conference.

Spikers Set Out To Dim Comets Today

The Ram harriers travel to Richmond today to meet the Contra Costa Comets in a Golden Gate Conference dual meet as the Rams attempt to improve on their 1-1 conference record.

Gunning for its first win, Contra Costa will be out to upset the slightly favored Rams.

Last season the Rams compiled a 3-2 conference record while Contra Costa was an unofficial entrant in the Golden Gate Conference. This season the Rams have a good chance of equaling last season's record despite the return of only two veterans, Gene Plotkin and Ozzie Norris.

Last year Plotkin and Norris paced the Rams to a fine showing in the Northern California championships. Plotkin placed sixth and Norris third in a classy field as the Rams were barely edged from the championship by San Jose, 44-50.

Ram mentor Lou Vasquez commented recently, "Despite the fact that we lost most of our team from last year, Norris and Plotkin were our number one and two men from that team."

Vasquez added, "With the help of new freshmen the team should be in good shape."

Midterms Force Rescheduling In Intramural League

Midterm examinations have necessitated postponement of the opening games of the Associated Men Student sponsored intramural basketball league, according to AMS President Bob Roddick.

The first contests were to have been yesterday for the fraternities and tonight for the independents; however, they have been rescheduled for next Tuesday and Wednesday, Roddick said.

Fraternity teams entered in this semester's league are Beta Tau, Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Phi Beta Delta and Zeta Phi Sigma.

Chartered Independents are Brothers Five, Mets, Newman Club, Lutheran Club, Guardsman, Divine Ones, Beavers, Hawaiians, Hotel and Restaurant, Steve's Fries—AC, and one unnamed club.

"Things should move along with great success, once we open up next week," Roddick said, adding, "we have a great deal more participation than last year, and moves have even been made to organize a faculty squad."

Block SF Holders Shun Meetings

There will be an "important" meeting of the Block SF Society during College Hour tomorrow in the conference room of the men's gymnasium because of lack of attendance at previous meetings, newly elected President Ben Brown announced today.

"We would like to have present at least the lettermen representing each sport so that an election of the remaining officers may be held," Brown said.

Preliminary plans were discussed, however, concerning the contest to be sponsored by the society. The largest organization represented at the San Mateo, home, football game Friday, November 1, will be awarded two cases of Coke. Further details will be revealed at a later date.

RAMBLINGS

Heavens, Man, No Pool, Track, News?

By Fred Wales

AS ONE two-year college football player ran along the beach one day recently getting in shape for the new season, another from Anklehill College pulled alongside.

The Anklehill gridder, Lance Huntington, greeted his fellow runner:

"I say, old chap, I haven't seen you in any of the local press releases. What's your name?"

The stranger responded, "Me? I'm Joe Player, and we don't have press releases."

Lance: "No press releases! Good Lord, why not?"

Joe: "I don't know. Something about nobody has time and the college can't supply anybody with the money or materials. The sports writers keep stats on the team and phone scores to the newspapers but they're too busy publishing their college paper to do anything else."

Lance: "Mice and Rats, boy, doesn't your coach have a migraine?"

Joe: "No, he's unhappy that we never get any recognition and tries hard to get somebody to print information on us, but nobody seems to care."

Lance: "Heavens, man. Why don't the crowds at the games put on some pressure?"

Joe: "We don't get very much of a turnout at home games. They're played on Fridays, and I guess it's too much trouble to come."

Lance: "Zounds, boy, why don't you and your fellows quit?"

Joe: "We don't like being 'unheard,' but we play hard anyway. We like our college."

Lance: "Why don't the other coaches help? What about the polo coach?"

Joe: "We don't have horses on the campus."

Lance: "Not that kind of polo, WATER polo, you dense peasant. The type you play in your pool."

Joe: "We don't have a pool of our own. Some swimmers wanted to start a team, but we don't have a coach or facilities."

Lance: "At least you have a track, don't you? How come you're not running on IT?

Joe: "Oh, our track wasn't constructed properly in the first place, and we can't use it because it's too hard."

Lance: "Then why don't you practice with the wrestling team to keep in shape?"

Joe: "We don't have a wrestling team, but we've started a wrestling class."

Lance: "Well, bully for your new little class. My dear fellow, every two-year COLLEGE on the peninsula has a news bureau, large football crowds, water polo, wrestling, a pool and a good track.

"What college do you go to anyway —Ebbtider?"

Joe: "No, I go to City College of San Francisco."

* * *

Lance stopped and stood aghast as Joe, proud of the name he had just uttered, continued trudging down the beach.

Domecus Joins Football Coaching Staff

By Pete Franklin

City College's latest addition to the men's physical education department, Ernie Domecus, is already enjoying the better things in life connected with higher education — physical, that is.

Recently acquired from George Washington High School, Domecus now has such benefits as the 10-hour day, coaching the football club's backfield, and games and travel on weekends. He also gets a lunch break—per day, and sees his wife and children occasionally.

"I love every minute of it," he said recently. "I'm glad to be here, and I'll enjoy my work, I'm sure."

Domecus was at Washington eight years as a coach, during which time he managed junior varsity football for six years, and varsity baseball, five years. Though he never became famous for any one coaching achievement, his steady, unfaltering dedication attest to his ability.

Domecus did accomplish one outstanding feat while he was coaching there. The baseball team of 1960 had a perfect record . . . 0-16. But Frank Bertania was pitching that year.

Domecus, upon his arrival here this semester, took charge of coaching the football squad's backfield. "We have good material there," he said, "if we just had the experience on the line. But with half of the line fighting each other for hospital beds . . ."

He has been named as next semester's baseball coach, and has already started work on the club. "I have some idea as to the solidity of the club, though nothing is definite yet," he stated.

He knows pretty well who will be returning, from information gathered from Larry Lawson and Sid Phelan, last years' coaches, and from some of the men who drop by to tell him they'll be trying out.

"I know for the most part who's coming up from the high schools, and I'm watching the Sunday leagues for the ability of some prospects," he said, adding, "I'm not sure who'll leave the college, or who will have grade point problems, but things will continue to take shape right up to February when workouts start.'

Domecus' competence in terms of baseball can be attested to partly by the fact that he has played a considerable amount of ball during his career.

A graduate of City College and of San Francisco State College, he was a member of this college's state championship squad of the 1947-'48 seasons.

He continued to play ball until his graduation from State, whereupon he was promoted to the higher echelons of baseball and assumed the heralded and rewarding job as a coach.

With his appointment to the staff here, Domecus has reached the zenith of his public school career, and he intends to stay here indefinitely.

"Any higher positioning would depend on what was needed at any given time. I'm certainly satisfied with this job," he said emphatically.

RAM BACK coach Ernie Domecus takes field view of handoff during a practice session. Domecus is here after coaching eight years at Washington High school.

Text, Lecture Recordings Supplement Education Of Blind Students On Campus

By Diane Gordon

Recording of educational material in all forms is a technical advance that has aided blind students in furthering their education.

Howard Schoon, counselor for blind students currently enrolled at the college, told how these students may request recordings of specific educational materials through various organizations that aid the blind student.

The largest of these organizations is Recordings for the Blind, New York. Other such organizations are Berkeley Aid to the Blind, the National Organization for Aid to the Handicapped, Volunteer Readers Group, Lighthouse for the Blind and American Foundation for the Blind.

These groups also specialize in literature printed in Braille and large-sized type for the near-blind.

"Blindness can act as a handicap, but for the blind students at City College it seems only to be an incentive," Schoon said recently, adding, "They want to get an education, and education has the duty to aid them in every way possible!"

Blind students are supplementing their education through texts in Braille, on tapes and on records. In the use of taped texts, students buy their own tapes or are supplied them by the state rehabilitation plan.

The students send these tapes to organizations that "talk the texts onto the tape." Said Jerry Sealund, one sightless student here, "Recordings for the Blind will record any text in any language and have the tape or record back to us in six weeks."

The records are thin vinyl discs spinning at 16 revolutions per minute.

"More than 150 persons have earned Ph.D. degrees through this service," Sealund added, "and many more through volunteer groups composed of Bay Area housewives who make records, tapes, and Braille texts."

Many of the recorded texts are made by prison inmates who voluntarily read for the tapes. A large number of these come from Soledad Prison.

Some of the students at City College are trying to tape lectures in class on their own portable recorders, but counselor Schoon warned that the instructor must give his permission or the tape will be confiscated.

Sealund takes Braille notes in his classes, using a tin slate and stylus.

Sealund commented, "Until a few years ago the blind received no education and had to make an education for themselves. Now," he said, "we have much more on our side, but the decision of whether to try is ours."

COO Warns Clubs Of Possible Loss Of On-Campus Rank

Council of Organizations is making a last plea to fraternity and sorority councils to send representatives to COO meetings or face the consequence of losing their on-campus status.

"If an organization misses four consecutive meetings," Buzz Kribs, COO president explained, "it is in jeopardy of losing its on-campus status."

Several organizations face this danger right now, Kribs commented, but COO is giving them one last opportunity to reestablish their standing in the college.

By sending COO members to heads of the delinquent organizations, Kribs hopes to obtain their representation in council thus boosting the effectiveness of the COO and maintaining the variety and number of clubs at the college.

After sponsoring its "Day," the dance, Summer's Gone, the rally, car parade and football queen contest, COO is "reeuperating" but will begin planning its Christmas rally and Christmas food drive.

Former Student Gets Engineering Award

Former student, Peter A. Krenkel, was awarded the Rudolph Hering Medal by the American Society of Civil Engineers at their annual meeting at the Fairmont Hotel.

Krenkel, now Associate Professor of Sanitary and Water Resources Engineering at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee, graduated from City College in 1950. He pursued his engineering studies at the University of California, receiving his B.S., M.S., and Ph.D.

At Vanderbilt he is now laying out a new type of engineering program.

Play Preview Of The Bald Soprano Slated For C-Hour

The Bald Soprano, one of three one-act plays which are scheduled to open in the theater Friday, November 1, for a run of six performances, will have its initial showing during College Hour tomorrow in the theater, Robert Lasley, drama production manager, stated recently.

Eugene Ionesco's play, The Bald Soprano, is an avant-garde production depicting the lack of communication between people speaking the same language.

"Inane chit-chat, where much is spoken and little is said, seems to be increasingly prevalent," Lasley commented.

Members of the cast include Bill Shattuck and Andrea Fulton portraying Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Mike Dobrinsky and Lynn Goodrich as Mr. and Mrs. Martin, Ken Bachtold in the role of fire chief and Cherry Mir as the maid.

Presented along with the Bald Soprano at the November 1 opening will be Antigone, by Jean Anouilh and The Ugly Duckling, by A. A. Milne.

Dates for the six weekend performances, slated for 7 p.m., are Fridays and Saturdays, November 1-2, November 8-9 and November 15-16. Tickets are available at the door free of charge to Associated Student cardholders. A charge of $1 will be made for those without cards.

Ralph Nelson, film director of Lilies of the Field, starring Sidney Poitier, spoke to drama students here Monday.

Mattos Awarded $100 Scholarship

Dennis Mattos, a sophomore majoring in the nursery practices of the ornamental horticulture department, was recently awarded a special $100 scholarship by the Central Chapter of the California Association of Nurserymen.

The presentation was made October 8 at the regular dinner-meeting of the chapter held in Oakland.

"I submitted Mattos' name for this award because he has great potential and should go far in his chosen field," Harry E. Nelson, head of the horticulture department, commented.

"The chapter just felt that he was deserving of something so they presented him with a $100 check to be used for whatever purpose he wants," Nelson added.

Merchandising Club Names Harbor Princess As Site For Second Annual Sea-Going Dance

The second annual Merchandising Club boat dance will be held aboard the deck of the scenic cruiser, Harbor Princess, from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday, Elizabeth Helseth, faculty adviser to the club said recently.

The price of admission is $5 per couple and one of the couple must have a City College registration card. Tickets for the dance are on sale at the Silver Pole in Science Hall, and will continue to be sold until Friday.

Miss Helseth said that she expects about 150 couples to attend the dance, which was "a great success last year." Dress for the affair will be suits and ties for the men and party dresses for the women.

The boat, the Harbor Princess, is part of a fleet of seenle cruisers which include the Harbor King and the Harbor Queen. The line is owned by the Red and White Fleet.

Entertainment for the dance will be supplied by a five-piece orchestra, The Kens, who have appeared at various night clubs throughout the Bay Area.

The boat will leave pier 43½ promptly at 9 p.m., Miss Helseth said, and will tour various points of interest during the three-hour cruise. Refreshments for the dance will be supplied by a local catering firm and will be available to the students at a slight extra charge.

The Merchandising Club is an organization made up of students interested in various areas of retail and wholesale merchandising. Although the dance is sponsored by this organization, Miss Helseth emphasized that all students are welcome to attend the dance.

THE HARBOR PRINCESS, daughtership of the Harbor Queen (above) will host the second annual Merchandising Club boat dance from 9 p.m. to midnight Friday.

Mancuso To Speak At Area Convention Here Saturday

By Bob Lutz

Edward Mancuso, San Francisco Public Defender, will be one of the guest speakers at the Area Conference assembly representing the California Junior College Student Government Association to be held here, Saturday.

A series of workshops will be held to discuss the main problems of student government, and ratification of the association's constitution will be considered, Vince Contreras, Associated Student president here, said last week.

Contreras also announced the student chairmen of the five different workshops. City College has one workshop head in this group, Steve Christ, sophomore class president, who will preside over the finance workshop.

Others are Alan Baumgartner of Foothill College in aspects of politics, John S. Vigil of Hartnell College in Entertainment, Ted Gallagher of Cabrillo College in Public Relations and Mike Pettis of College of San Mateo in the President's Workshop.

Pettis is student president of the college he represents.

Mancuso will moderate the Politics Workshop which will be concerned with the Aspects of Politics.

"The purpose of the conference is to promote intercollegiate cooperation and communication and to facilitate an exchange of ideas through discussion," Contreras emphasized.

Louis G. Conlan, president of City College, will deliver a keynote address, entitled The Road Ahead, in the theater, Contreras said.

Some 270 student government leaders from the nine two-year colleges of the area conference will assemble here, at Smith Hall, for morning registration, publicity spokesmen Nigel Brown and Patty Smith announced.

Each college of the conference will be represented by 30 delegates, and the delegations will be led by the Associated Student Presidents of the respective institutions.

These include Pettis, College of San Mateo; Gene Penn, Foothill College; Jack Horwitz, Hartnell College, and Tim O'Brien, Menlo College.

Others are Mike Smith, Monterey Peninsula College; Richard West, San Benito College; David Nephew, San Jose City College and Chris Yaeger of Cabrillo College in Santa Cruz.

Workshops will be conducted by local authorities in the field they represent, Contreras said.

Contreras will preside as chairman in the President's Workshop.

Public relations instructor here, Barbara Rosenthal, will moderate the Public Relations Workshop.

Moderating the Finance Workshop will be Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management here. Columnist and San Francisco journalist, Lucille Lando, will moderate the Entertainment Workshop.

State officers of the CJCSGA are Art Renny, student president of Hartnell College, and vice president Mike Smith of Monterey Peninsula College.

The CJCSGA organized its regional conference at its 1962 conference held at Asilomar. At that time, a division of eight regional conferences instead of the previous three was approved.

In passing this proposal, the Northern California Junior College Student Government Conference was made defunct.

IFC Starts Pledge Activities Monday; Service Days Set

Inter-Fraternity Council will officially start its semiannual Pledge Week at 7 a.m. next Monday and continue activities on Wednesday, October 30 and Friday, November 1.

According to Joel Cohen, IFC president, service days will be held on the off-days, Tuesday, October 29, and Thursday, October 31.

"Fraternities this semester have volunteered their services to the Student Council," Cohen said, "to help with the Area Six Conference which will meet here Saturday." Phi Beta Delta has volunteered to paint the Redwood Ram red and white for the occasion.

Beta Tau will hold its Pledge Week dance Friday, November 1, at California Hall on Clay street. The dance is open to the student body at a cost of $2.50 a couple, and theme for the dance is Moon River.

The dance marks the end of Pledge Week, and after painting and repainting the Ram, pledges will then be on an equal footing with their fraternity brothers.

Pledge Week games in keeping with past fraternity tradition will be held during College Hour tomorrow. Pledge activities throughout the week will be held in Smith Hall with pledges dressed in the colors of their fraternity.

"A great majority of the prizes and awards to be given to the 'Cutest Couple' at the Frosh Ball has been contributed by the fraternities," Cohen said, "and we expect a really good year."

ISC Sets Month-Long Program For Rushees

Inter-Sorority Council's final activities for this semester's rushing start today, include pledge days next week, and will be climaxed by Presents, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced last week.

Rushees who are enrolled in 12 or more units and have at least a C average in midterm grades will make three sorority preferences today. Tomorrow the sororities will match their preference with the rushee's preference.

The rushees will pick up their invitations at 7:30 a.m. Friday, and on Sunday they will meet with sorority members for pledge instructions.

The rushees will have pledge days next week, when they will report on campus at 7:30 a.m. each day wearing their sorority uniform.

Presents will take place November 22.

College Welcomes Delegates, Hopes For More Tightly Knit Two Year College Programs

SATURDAY, the first general assembly of the newly-formed Area Conference will meet here, with City College hosting the event.

Approximately 270 delegates from nine two-year colleges representing the California Junior College Student Government Association in this area are expected to be present.

Purpose of the conference is to serve as an information service to all two-year colleges represented at the convention. The main business is to consider the ratification of the new constitution of the association.

Associated Student President here, Vince Contreras, will be the convention host, and City College President Louis Conlan will deliver the keynote address, The Road Ahead.

Another purpose of the meeting, according to previous statements by Contreras, is to promote intercollegiate cooperation and communication and to facilitate an exchange of ideas.

Convention Vice President John Theilen also added that "we're planning to discuss particular problems that each college presently has and to seek possible solution(s). Perhaps an existing issue in our own college might have been already solved by another college."

Does this mean that current issues such as the cafeteria congestion and the anti-litter campaigns are to appear on Saturday's agenda? We certainly hope so.

Furthermore, it is hoped that this initial conference will bring favorable results for the welfare of all.

In behalf of all students here, The Guardsman welcomes all delegates and hopes they'll enjoy our hospitality and that the conference itself will prove to be a valuable medium for the colleges represented.

Fate, Elements Wreck COO Plans For Football Activities

ANOTHER RECORD was entered in the annals of the college Friday, October 11, when the annual Homecoming football game (between City College and Chabot) was held at . . . Galileo's instead of our very own stadium!

Because of "unfinished construction which endangers playing conditions on our own field," the game was scheduled at Balboa high school field. However, another decision switched the game to Galileo field — because Balboa's was rain-soaked.

In the first place, it was not even Homecoming as such: first, because our football team had to play elsewhere than on our own field; second, when only one car (Alpha Sigma Delta's) entered the car parade, it was naturally disqualified because all other organizations that had pledged to participate in the parade backed out and failed to come through.

Third, the football queen was selected at the rally during College Hour, but the winning coed was not announced until that afternoon at the game. In other words, if one wanted to know who the winner was, he had to travel to the other side of the city to learn who the lucky coed was.

Perhaps this move was anticipated and planned by the Council of Organizations in order to attract more students to the game. Only about 125 showed up. But fate, in the form of stadium reconstruction, and the elements, in the form of rain, kept students away.

Chabot College numbered 75 students — all the way from the East Bay — for a 200 total attendance.

Fourth, there hasn't been a Homecoming dance as such since 1962. This same October 11 night, COO offered a "special" dance in Smith Hall which 144 persons attended.

Lack of participation? . . . Apathy? . . . Or was it organization?

Alpha Sigma Delta Book Drive To Promote Education In Asia

AS IT DOES ANNUALLY, Alpha Sigma Delta sponsors its annual book drive on campus. This year, the drive started Monday and is to continue through November 8.

In the past, the drive has had a warm response from the majority of the students and instructors alike; last year's drive netted 1600 books, all of which were forwarded to the local chapter of the Asian Foundation, a non-profit, non-political organization established in California 12 years ago.

Illiteracy still exists even in this century and is one of the biggest problems that the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) faces. In Latin America, the Alliance for Progress is also trying to combat the problem.

An educational drive such as Alpha Sigma Delta's is not to be overlooked or to go unrewarded. We urge every one to do his best to aid this philanthropic move and to be thankful to the fraternity for its aid to the Asian Foundation.

Blonde Beauty Elected Queen

WENDIE WILLIAMS smiles radiantly after being crowned Fall Football Queen during half-time of City College's first home game with Chabot College.

The 17-year-old blonde beauty is a first semester student here, majoring in general education. Miss Williams' interests include all water sports, such as swimming, diving and water skiing, and writing to many friends whom she met this summer in Czechoslovakia, France, Austria, Belgium and Great Britain.

A graduate of Lincoln High School, she was active in many organizations there but this semester she says that she is concentrating on her studies before joining any activities.

Miss Williams was sponsored by the Associated Men Students.

Attractive brunette Donna Mendia, sponsored by Alpha Kappa Rho, placed second. A hazel-eyed blonde, Patty Smith, who was sponsored by the Associated Women Students, placed third.

The queen and the two princesses were formally presented at the football game and later that evening at "Summer's Gone," the dance given by the Council of Organizations.

Other contestants and their sponsoring organizations included Cathy Bossert, representing Alpha Sigma Delta, Sharon Strauss, representing Zeta Phi Sigma and Randee Herting, sponsored by Phi Beta Rho. Lois Hague was sponsored by Beta Tau and Emma Salisbury by the A Cappella Choir.

Future Policewoman

Valerie Hoeft Aspires To Law Enforcement

Valerie Hoeft is one of three women students currently enrolled in the college's criminology program.

The pretty 18-year-old, Lowell High School graduate has wanted to study criminology since her junior year in high school, but since the subject was not offered there, she majored in English and Journalism.

Her acquaintance with a policewoman convinced her that criminology is the field which she wishes to enter. "Genevieve Bayruther is a policewoman in the fraud division (Tenderloin) and we have been friends for many years," Miss Hoeft said; "I greatly admire her for her ability to do the job, and for showing that a woman can hold such a position."

Presently enrolled in criminology 57, identified as probation and parole, which is one of the basics for the criminology program, Miss Hoeft intends to complete the full four-year course, studying at City College first and then transferring to San Jose State College.

Although she is majoring in criminology, she will not become a member of the uniformed Campus Police force here.

"I will probably go into probation work, or juvenile control after graduation, in the hope of being capable of filling any woman's slot in the police system that might become vacant in the future," she said recently, adding, "perhaps more policewomen will be needed in the future."

"Policewomen in San Francisco do not start in the lower echelons of the department and work into non-uniformed administrative jobs as their male counterparts do," explained Larry Lawson, criminology instructor here.

"It works the other way around. Women usually work in the parole or fraud divisions, and very few of them ever become policewomen as such. Valerie is a good public relations person and enjoys the work here. I think she will do well in whatever branch of police work she enters," Lawson added.

Foresight

By Dick Bullard

GREETINGS, kind hearts! We enlist your attention as we once again kick a little dust on another clay-footed idol of Americana.

This week we turn a scrutinizing gaze on that furry little fellow of the forest greencry.

Now is the time to send all the little kiddies off to bed before another myth is exploded in their faces.

Yes, ladies and gentlemen, Smokey the Bear is a creep!

Ever since the Animal Decency League gave him a pair of jeans and an old Mountie hat he's been romping around the hills shaking his shovel at anyone trying to keep warm.

We think that it is time that someone put this omnivorous beast in his place. Are we to stay cooped up in our overcrowded cities just because one lousy bear wants to romp around in the woods? Are we going to hold up progress on account of one rather silly looking bear?

This was not the idea of our founding fathers. They envisioned a great nation, stretching from shore to shore, not a sanctuary for a neurotic, honey-crazed bruin.

In our country's great western expansion our ancestors met with many hardships such as starvation, bitterly cold winters and Smokey's ancestors.

The Indians also gave our heroes a spot of trouble from time to time, but Our Side soon straightened this out. Thanks to some very honorable treaties, we straightened the Indians just about out of existence.

With his great heritage as our guide, how can we be stymied by this insignificant quadrüped?

Let us build Mighty Suburbia right into the heart of Smokey's ill-gotten kingdom. Perhaps he will take the hint and join his relatives in the Zoological Gardens next to Fleishhacker pool. All he has to do there is sit back and pose for the tourists. For this he receives three squares and a place to flop.

If Smokey refuses to cooperate, the only conclusion we can draw is that something is afoot.

What with all the television appearances that old Smokey manages to get in on, we can draw the conclusion that he is pretty well organized.

All this backing is evidence that our friend is receiving financial aid from some place. If Smokey is a Democrat it is quite evident that he has some connection with President Kennedy's conservation program. And since next year is an election year — who knows?

But since Smokey has never proclaimed his politics, we must assume that something or someone else is behind his rapid rise to the prominence spot which he now occupies.

Could it be that the bear is his own public relations man?

Could Smokey be covering up something besides burnt out campfires?

In his fanatical efforts to stop happy campers from blazing up the forests, could Smokey be hiding his own hidden desires and transgressions?

Might it be possible that this docile bruin in long pants is actually a pyromaniac? Perhaps those pockets in his jeans are hiding the big fellow's Ronson.

After all, someone has to keep Smokey in a job. And who sparks a these fires that are attributed to lightning?

In closing, let us say that there is still hope we may be delivered from this forestry dictator. Remember, forest fires do wipe out bears!

IRC Programs Enable Foreign Students To Maintain Heritage

International clubs are nothing new on the American college scene, since there are quite a number of students from all parts of the globe who come to this vast country, either through student exchange programs, or to make it their second home.

These young people take advantage of the splendid educational opportunities here. While in the process of Americanizing themselves, they also seek to retain their heritage and so form these International Relations Clubs at the various colleges.

There is one thing foreign students have in common, namely that they have "traded" their respective countries for the United States of America and those who stay on have the common aim of becoming American citizens, even though they were molded in a different environment.

At City College there is such an International Relations Club, representative of more than 20 countries and composed of a diversified and active membership. And it does not only attract foreign-born students but American students as well.

"I would like to see more American-born students come to our meetings and discussions, so we can get some heated arguments going," IRC president Mohammed Kowsar said jokingly. "Also, all clubs are invited to participate in our bigger affairs as a part of student body activities," Kowsar emphasized further.

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

READER'S DIGEST has a section known as "Quotable Quotes" in which are delivered little quips of wisdom by notable world personalities.

We are not to be outdone by such a secondary literary organ, and therefore we plan to have our quotes too. However, we will not guarantee that the quotes offered will reek with wisdom.

Now take Yogi Berra, a ballplayer whose ability cannot be doubted.

A few of the New York Yankees were sitting around discussing how to increase the attendance at their games and Yogi summed everything up with one, masterful quote. "Well, if they don't wanna come, we can't stop 'em," Elementary, my dear Yogi, elementary.

Sonny Liston (what does he do?) was asked by a reporter when he returned from Britain how the people there treated him. "You should have seen the way they treated me," Sonny said angrily. "It made me ashamed to be an American." Uh, yeah.

Getting away from the sporting world and into the military, (there's a difference?) "Chesty" Puller, legendary excommandant of the Marine Corps, sent back this now-famous message when his battalion was surrounded in North Korea.

Said "Chesty," "They're on our right flank! They're in front of us and they're in back of us! By gawd, they won't get away this time."

"Chesty" had a lot of other things to say too, but this is a family newspaper and . . . well, you know.

On the political scene, most of the veterans of World The Duce thought they knew what they were fighting for. They thought it was To Keep America Free and for The Girl Next Door. They were wrong.

On May 8, 1942, Vice President of the United States Henry Wallace said, "The object of this war is to make sure that everybody in the world has the privilege of drinking a quart of milk a day." That, we are certain, cleared up any doubts our fighting men might have had.

No attempt will be made to quote President Kennedy. This is not because of lack of material. The President has made some memorable statements answering questions he did not want asked. We are just waiting for somebody to figure out what he said.

It is desirable that anything that is printed in The Guardsman be somehow related to the college. This is not a prime requisite, but we went out in search of some quotes on the campus anyway.

Now just where do you think a person would go to get some quotable quotes around here? To the faculty? Naw, they have been trained to watch their words. The custodians? Just ask 'em about the litter situation, Jack. Well, there are always the students.

We discovered a new collegiate exclamation. "Goshareotic!" It probably shouldn't even be mentioned here, and we are not too certain if it is even new. Sounds like something out of the 20's. Don't ask what century.

We decided to try the direct approach to get a quote out of a normal, blank-eyed, coed. We asked her what she thought about Charles De Gaulle.

"I think that Charles De Gaulle is just yummy," came our expected answer. No doubt Big Chuck will be glad to hear.

With that earth-shaking quote we decided to call it a day, and wait until tomorrow when somebody else in the globe will open his big, fat mouth.

Fraternity Sets 2500 Goal In Book Drive

With a goal of 2500 contributions set, Alpha Sigma Delta is now conducting its annual "educational" book drive on campus, fraternity representative Larry Maibaum stated yesterday.

All donations will be sent to the local chapter of the Asian Foundation. From there, they will be shipped overseas to help educate people on the Asian continent.

Maibaum emphasized that only educational books are acceptable in this campaign. Issues of National Geographic Magazine are also useful, he added.

Containers for student donations are placed near the Silver Pole in Science Hall, in the arts building, on faculty row in Cloud Hall and in Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S-150.

The drive will continue through Friday, November 8.

Percussion And Brass

Shiny, Sparkling, In Step — But Band Has Problems

Sparkling clean uniforms brighten the green field. Shiny brass instruments gaily play a tune. Forty pairs of white boots keep a marching time.

But hardly anyone, according to the college's marching band director John Dunn, realizes the problems confronting such a band when asked to be at a specific football game at a specific time.

Take the recent Chabot game, for instance. At 11 a.m., the trumpet music was lost. One of the members of the band had to rush downtown to buy another piece. The day before the game the clarinet player broke his wrist. Three coeds in the band (the only ones) did not bring white shirts or black ties.

However, by game time the coeds were properly attired.

Also, on the same fateful morning, a male member forgot his hat. Several members spent hours shining their instruments only to find out that they could not be used. At 1 p.m., Dunn learned that the game site had been changed (a second time) to Galileo Stadium, and it took him until 2 o'clock to arrange transportation for the band members.

After listing the difficulties that one would expect to find only in the old Keystone Kop movies, Dunn explained that most of the problems were solved with the help of his exceptionally efficient crew.

"Young men like Jerry Sealund are enough to make me keep the band together," Dunn said. "This sociology major is a tuba player who is blind. He is an accomplished musician and one of our hardest workers. Jerry does not march on the field but plays when the band is in the stands.

"Clemnie Thompson, a secretarial major," Dunn continued, "is the majorette. Last year she was in the stands and saw the band play. She came to me after the game and asked if she could help."

The group's drum major is Bob Moorefield and, according to Dunn, a top trumpet player. Since he was needed, he volunteered to play trumpet hoping to be drum major at the Junior Rose Bowl game.

George Thompson, a premedical student, is the working drum major.

"Our members come from all parts of the college," Dunn said. "About one third from the hotel and restaurant department, another third, music department, the last third psychology majors, real estate majors, mechanical engineering majors, or you name it."

This week at Contra Costa, the group will appear as usual — cool and unruffled on the field. The uniforms will all look the same, the music will be in tune. Only a few will be able to guess what difficulties had to be solved to achieve that appearance.

Police Pistol Team Boosts Chances Of Entering State Championships

Successful in efforts to qualify for the State Championship Pistol Matches, the college's Pistol Team has increased its chances of entering by winning several highly competitive matches in recent weeks.

In a match October 13, at the Richmond Police Range, the team scored first in overall points, and won first places in both .22 and .38 caliber shooting.

Instrumental in this accomplishment was expert team member Bill Wilson. In addition to adding to the team score, Wilson, a wizard with a .45 pistol, managed to place first in five individual events.

In another match on September 30 at the Coyote Point Pistol Range in San Mateo, the expert team men missed winning first place overall. They lost to the Treasure Island Navy team, according to City College coach Fred Fitzgerald, by a total of only seven points.

The team managed to defeat the Navy pistol experts in the .45 caliber contest. Considering the Navy's usual prowess with the .45, this was an accomplishment, Fitzgerald said. Close behind the Navy all the way, the college's expert team came on strong and placed second overall in the .22 and .38 classes.

Attempting to keep the scoring high, team Captain Al Palmer did a commendable job. In a type of firing called Grand Aggregate, Palmer won a third overall. The Grand Aggregate is a system of shooting involving 270 shots for a total of 2700 points.

Each shot counts ten points, and the entry fires 90 rounds each of .22, .38 and .45 caliber bullets.

Campus Police Crack Down On Jaywalking

Jaywalking laws, which have been ignored recently on Phelan avenue, will be enforced starting today, according to Campus Police Chief Tom Cain.

Students failing to obey the instructions of the traffic officer will be cited accordingly, Cain said, and citations issued are the same as those given out by the city police for jaywalking.

Cain also emphasized that students with cars should keep them locked at all times and put any personal belongings out of sight. In the past, several instances of petty theft from cars parked in student areas have been reported.

Deputy Police Chief Al Mendoza cautioned all students owning motorcycles to park them only in the area assigned to them in the lot next to Smith Hall and to keep them out of the area near the turn in the faculty parking lot.

He also stated that only the four stalls on the south side of the auto lot are marked off for motorcycle parking.

Council Approves Revised AS Constitution; Student Vote For Final Passage Set October 31

By Lowell Mengel

Student Council last week unanimously approved a revised constitution for the Associated Students of City College after a few minor changes were made in the document presented by Constitutional Revisions Chairman Bill May.

Election Commissioner Chris Small then announced that a constitution election will be held Thursday, October 31 for student approval. A two-third majority vote is needed for that approval.

Associated Student President Vince Contreras then brought up the California State Junior College Student Government Association area conference which will be held here Saturday.

He mentioned that the college should have 30 delegates there, but that only 20 students have shown an interest in attending so far.

Joel Cohen, Inter-Fraternity Council president, then pointed out that the IFC offer to assist in the conference was being ignored in that IFC had not been consulted.

Council also accepted a pair of nominations for the four vacant freshman seats on council, plus one for the vacant sophomore seat.

Nominations were then closed and KCSF President Jim Morgan told council he did not believe council members were getting too much done about filling the vacant seats since an election is not yet planned.

Phyllis Webb, AS vice president and chairman of the social committee, announced that COO had a $120 deficit on its "Homecoming" dance. She blamed poor advertising, and two dances a week before for the poor showing.

Finance Chairman Judi Beverly announced to council that organizations expect to spend $45,000 next semester, but the AS has only $40,000 coming in, so cuts of from five to ten per cent will have to be made in almost every budget.

In other business, anti-litter chairman Imogene Walker announced a need for volunteers for her committee, while a straw vote of council and cabinet members indicated they preferred a red on white color block on the charcoal blazers Council already approved.

IRC Stage Show To Feature World Cultures Nov. 8

Cultures of several world centers will be featured Friday, November 8, when the college's International Relations Club sponsors its tenth annual fair and stage show in the Lowell High School auditorium, IRC Publicity Chairman Herm Kligerman announced this week.

Once again this year, proceeds from the function will benefit the Colombian Unit of the Peace Corps where a former student, Jerry McMahon, is now establishing a cooperative for Colombian citizens.

Unlike previous years, the fair will be held at a site other than Marina Junior High School. "The new location was chosen by the club because of its broader facilities and more easily accessible site," Kligerman said.

The auditorium can accommodate approximately 1000 people.

Tickets, which will be available within the week, are priced at 75 cents for students and faculty members and $1.25 for the general public.

Among the attractions on the two-hour program are a Samoan fire-dancer, a Chilean dance group, a Latin American combo and a Korean folk dancer.

The college's concert band, under the direction of Meyer Cahn, is also scheduled to perform.

Public response to the fair has already been gratifying, since, according to Kligerman, the IRC has received invitations to appear on a television and radio show and has been visited by The Inquiring Photographer of the San Francisco Examiner.

Three acts will perform on the Saturday, November 2, telecast of the Ben Alexander Talent Show. In addition, IRC representatives will be interviewed by Lucille Lando on a KSAN radio show, Sunday, November 3.

The Ben Alexander Show is a local program which exposes amateur talent to viewers in the Bay Area. Winners are selected by the audience.

Career Day Set Here November 1

Representatives of 15 Federal agencies ranging from the United States Atomic Energy Commission to the Peace Corps will participate in a Federal Career Day, the first of its kind at the college, on Friday, November 1, Joseph A. Amori, director of placement, announced today.

Known as Federal Career Day, this event has often been held at four-year colleges and universities, but this is the first time that the event has been scheduled at a two-year college, Amori said.

This career day will have information centers set up in the court between Science and Cloud Halls.

Purpose of this day is less job recruitment, Amori said, and more help for the student to acquaint himself with the many opportunities afforded him in federal employment.

Assisting the various departments will be the placement office, counseling department and the instructional management department.

Representatives of some of the agencies that will be present on this day include the US Atomic Energy Commission, Peace Corps, Treasury Department, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the U.S. Civil Service Commission and the U.S. State Department.

Advertising Art Group Sponsors Lecture Friday

'Advertising Art Direction As A Profession' is the topic for a speech by Frederick Cole, vice president and art director for the national advertising agency of Foote, Cone and Belding, at 10 a.m. Friday, William Davis, art instructor here, said today.

Cole's speech is part of a series of talks to be given every Friday by leading members of the advertising art community. The series is sponsored by the Art 50, Visual Arts Survey Department and is open to students and faculty of the college.

Floristry Students Enter Christmas Contest Nov. 27

City College will be represented at the annual Christmas design show to be held on Sunday at the San Francisco Flower Market, according to Trudy Masterson, chairman for the college's part in the event.

During the annual show, floristry shops in the area will display student talent through floral displays.

The college will have a booth at the show in which flower designs for major ceremonial events will be displayed. Of 24 students enrolled in retail floristry, nine are advanced and will be the ones who will arrange the displays, Miss Masterson said.

The other 15 students will answer questions and distribute books on the floristry course offered here.

According to Miss Masterson, the purpose of the event is "to interest prospective students in the major of retail floristry at City College of San Francisco." At present, there are only approximately five such courses offered throughout the United States.

Students working for the event with Miss Masterson are Warren Hom, booth chairman, and Paul Masterson, set-up and clean-up chairman.

Miss Masterson emphasized that the affair will run one day only, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Sunday at Sixth and Brannan Streets in San Francisco.

Booters Play On Four Fields To Register 10-0 Blanking Of Underdog Diablo Valley

By Peter Huebner

Living up to expectations, the powerful Ram soccer team blanked the inexperienced Vikings of Diablo Valley College, 10-0, last Wednesday, in a game played on four fields.

The Rams dealt the Vikings their third straight loss, as they completely outclassed the newly formed Diablo Valley team in a show of Ram shooting ability.

In the first quarter, outside right Cocixto Cuevas started the scoring succession with a hard shot from the inside right position, before left halfback Hector Olaya added two goals to his account and outside Carlos Cortez outmaneuvered the Vikings' goalie to bring the score to 4-0.

Coach Roy Diederichsen said after the game, "I did not make any changes in the lineup in the second quarter, because the team play was very coordinated and any early changes might have thrown it off."

Inside left Art Vigil and Olaya added one more goal each, making the latter, with three goals, the top scorer of the day, before the game was shifted to Beach Chalet when rescheduling of high school games occupied both fields at Crocker Amazon.

The Viking bus took both teams to Beach Chalet to play the remaining third and fourth quarters of a game originally scheduled at Balboa Stadium.

Diederichsen changed the lineup experimentally, giving everybody a chance to participate in the Viking defeat and gain experience for future contests.

In the final half, Cortez, Vigil, Cuevas and Larry Katzeff scored to register a decisive 10-0 victory.

The Rams will face their strongest opponent, San Mateo, at 2:30 p.m. today at Balboa Stadium.

Depth Is Factor In Spikers' 27-30 Win Over Comets

By John Arberry

Using team depth to full advantage, the Ram harriers overcame an unexpected 1-2 place finish by Contra Costa to edge the surprisingly strong Comets 27-30, and post a 2-1 season record in a Golden Gate Conference meet, last Wednesday at Contra Costa.

Apparently underestimating Contra Costa, the Ram spikers, slowed by a wet and soggy course, had to settle for the next four places behind the two leading Cometa.

The Rams used team depth as Gene Plotkin finished third with a time of 16:41 followed by Rams Ozzie Norris —16:51, Rich Klemmer—16:52 and Dan Christian—17:37 for fourth, fifth and sixth places, respectively. Fifth man Mike Conroy rounded out the scoring for the Rams in ninth place.

Putting the Rams back on their heels were Comets Mark Morgan and Jim Terrazas, finishing 1-2 with times of 16:21 and 16:27 respectively.

Next encounter for the Rams will be against San Jose and Diablo Valley at Diablo Valley. San Jose's Jaguars presently sport a 3-0 conference record and will be out to keep that record unblemished.

Last season the Jaguars topped the Rams 22-30 and present a veteran team led by Ken Noel, Ron Penning-ton and Jim Sullivan. Last season the Jags had a sparkling 5-0 dual meet record.

Cross country mentor Lou Vasquez stated, "This will be an important meet for the team after being so disappointed at the Contra Costa results. We should do much better, and if we do, it will be a big lift for us."

Hosting Diablo Valley will have a good man in Mike Lamendola as the Vikings will attempt to avenge last season's 20-42 loss to the Rams.

Three More Sports To Bolster RA Agenda

Bowling, tennis and archery will soon be added to the Recreation Association agenda, according to RA Adviser Frances Galloway.

"All students interested in participating in any one of these activities are invited to sign up in the women's gymnasium now," Miss Galloway emphasized.

Postponement of the RA sports day, previously scheduled this Saturday, was also announced by Miss Galloway. Because of the student government area conference that day, the sports day has been rescheduled for Saturday, November 2.

Athletes, Eight Strong, 'Rush' Block SF Meet

By Fred Wales

TWO THURSDAYS past, an excited and optimistic Ben Brown, newly elected Block SF Society president, awaited the last minute rush of members entering Room 107 for the Block SF meeting. It was College Hour, and Brown felt confident the guys would be able to make it.

At 11:20 a.m. the meeting came to order with eight students in the room. The biggest organization on campus, with more than 100 members, managed to amass EIGHT representatives.

Brown began the meeting by presenting ideas on proposed Block SF rallies, dances, rooting sections, contests at football games and publicity moves for the teams. He ended by receiving ideas on how to make members attend the meetings.

Proposals suggested ranged from monetary fines to be assessed against each sport not represented at meetings to suspension of awards to those sports whose representatives miss three consecutive meetings.

Team members are the first to commence hour-long orations on the lack of college spirit.

Yet when the opportunity avails itself for these same athletes to do something about promoting spirit and making attendance more of an enjoyable activity and less of a chore, eight members are present.

Brown is about as boring as Jerry Lewis, and the meetings, if enough students attend, don't last more than 15 minutes. Anyone who has won a block letter is eligible to attend.

There will be another meeting of the Block SF during College Hour tomorrow in Room 107 of the men's gymnasium.

Need we say more?

• • •

CONGRATULATIONS are in order for booter Gary Delong, former Ram goalie. The United States Olympic Committee has selected Delong to guard the net in the interzone playoffs for the 1964 Olympics in Japan.

For two consecutive years Delong was chosen as an All-American after he led the Rams to two conference titles.

Delong's teammate in the 18-player delegation will be grad Al Korbus. As center forward here, Korbus was the Rams' great scoring hero in the championship 1960 and 1961 teams before transferring to San Jose State.

An interesting note is the fact that Delong was passed over in the selection of the 1962 All-Conference team. This, of course, occurred while the Rams were in the four-year college soccer league.

Needless to say, bias charges on the team selection are out of the question. However, it appears the Olympic Committee doesn't mind the fact that the blond wonder attends a two-year college.

• • •

LAST BUT not least, the San Francisco 49ers have put the college's 49er, Lloyd Winston, on waivers. Winston led the Western Division in rushing after the opening game against Minnesota and played only in three quarters.

After Tittle, Owens and Lockett, you'd think they would learn.

Defense Topples Vaunted Oakland For Second Win

By Fred Wales

Using determination in place of depth the Ram football team overcame all odds to shut out ninth ranking Oakland 12-0 last Friday at Frank Youell field.

The upset win over nationally ranked Oakland left the Rams undefeated in Conference play with a 2-0 mark and in a three-way tie for first place.

Again this week, the defense was the difference.

Thwarting the highly vaunted Oakland offense with three interceptions and holding fast on crucial plays, the overworked defense continually set the Rams up inside the Oakland 40.

The Rams first score came late in the second quarter on a drive that went 41 yards in six plays.

Del Bennett following an incomplete hit Frank Papia for ten yards to move the ball to the 16. On the following play Bennett found Henry King on the five yard line and King loped in for the score with seven seconds left in the half.

The defense set up the second score in the fourth period on an Oakland miscue.

Forced to punt after King shot the gap to nail Oakland quarterback Jim Sharpe for an 11 yard loss, John Guillory watched a high snap sail over his head.

From there Joe Sobeck blasted for six yards and on a fourth and four Scott hit Ed Parker for six more yards and a first down.

Pat Lewis then bolted for seven yards to the 12. Parker hit for three and Scott picked up five more on a keeper for a first and goal on the five.

Lewis hit the line twice and the ball was on the one. With a fourth and goal from the one Sobeck found a hole at right guard for a 12 to 0 bulge with 7:50 in the game.

Lewis was the offensive standout as he blasted through quick openings for 61 yards on nine carries to bring his two game total to 113 yards.

On the line everyone was a standout as Bruce Marovich, Percy Pittman and Terry Lofrano went both ways, occasionally relieving each other at tackle.

Guards Bob Hector, Joe Mellon, Levi Byrd and Bernard Mordret had more rest but still played tough football as did centers Louie Balzar and Rodney Someya.

Behind the line Rudy Lapera, shooting the gap to account for —23 Oakland yards, taking out interference to kill drives and returning an intercepction 34 yards to the Oakland 26, proved that last week's performance was no accident.

Lewis and King were as adept on offense as defense. Lewis was always in on tackles and tipped a ball basketball style to Parker who carried the intercepction from the Ram 20 to the Oakland 35.

Veterans Charlie Steward and Ben Brown did their usual bests throughout the contest. Oakland speedster Carl Evans on turning the corner would find either one or both veterans in front of him.

Rams Test Nationally Rated Contra Costa Eleven Friday

Nationally rated as fifth among two-year college football squads, and boasting all the necessary attributes to hold this rating, Contra Costa College hosts the improving San Francisco Rams Friday at Contra Costa.

Combining a spread T formation with brilliant passing and the fastest backfield in their history, the Comets pose a somewhat more than formidable threat to the Rams. Contra Costa is not a passing club unless it becomes neceessary, but its aerial offense is as deadly as its ground attack.

Second string Comet quarterback Bill Westerod has hit five for six shots for a total of 94 yards. Ends Jim Stewart and Mike Meyers, although not often called, are capable receivers if needed.

By way of running offense, Contra Costa has Travis Williams, 5-10, 180-pound halfback who turns 100 yards in 9.5 seconds.

He was instrumental in the recent 22-14 victory over Oakland City College (at that time rated third nationally), running two end sweep TD's for 63 and 37 yards, respectively.

In the process, Williams set a new Golden Gate Conference record of 202 yards in 12 carries.

Also in the Comet backfield is fullback Jim Bullock, 5-10, 210-pounds, who is remarkably fast for his proportions. He ran 57 yards for a TD in the Oakland tilt.

Contra Costa's defensive line average is between 215 and 220 pounds, and the size of the players alone makes the line practically impassable. Oakland was stopped in its tracks gaining only 35 yards net on the ground and found that the only possible way past was over the top.

Oakland's best move of the day was a 65-yard pass play good for six points. But even passing proved futile as Contra Costa's defense snagged four of Oakland's aerial attempts.

Top Comet linemen are Jim Nelson 6-10, 210-pound All-Conference guard; Dick Perata, 5-11, 215-pound tackle; Mike Mallory, 6-4, 260-pound tackle, and Phil Playle, 5-11, 240-pound guard.

Contra Costa head coach Vince Maiorana rates his team as not comparable in any way to last season's squad. He considers it faster, quicker and a better-rounded team, passing or running with equal competence.

Intra Hoopsters Open New Three League Action

Because of the large number of teams entered, competition in the Associated Men Student-sponsored intramural basketball tournament has been divided into three leagues, according to Bob Roddick, AMS president.

"There will still be a fraternity league and an independent league as in the past," Roddick said, "but the club teams will be put into their own league this time." These clubs, which formerly played as independents, will play on Tuesday nights in the women's gymnasium.

The teams involved in the change are Lutheran Club, Newman Club, Guardsman, Hotel and Restaurant, Hawaiian club and Filipino club.

The independent league kicks off its tournament tonight in the men's gymnasium at 7:30, with Brothers Five opposing Apaches in the first game followed by Mets against the Originals.

At the same time, in the women's gymnasium, Ravens meet the Independents for the first game, and Devine Ones, last semester's over-all champs, encounter the Independent Five.

Next Tuesday, Alpha Sigma Delta faces Phi Beta Delta in the first game, and Alpha Phi Epsilon meets Zeta Phi Sigma in the men's gymnasium.

Lutheran Club meets the H and R and The Guardsman faces Filipinos in the women's gymnasium.

"The formation of the "club" league will neeessitate a tri-league playoff and thus the double round robin may not be needed in any of the leagues," Roddick stated.

Veteran Schwartz Lost For Season

A definite loss to the Ram football team Friday will be the absence of quarterback Craig Schwartz and middle guard Charlie O'Brien.

Schwartz, who piloted the Rams to their 12-9 victory over Chabot, will be sidelined for the remainder of the season with torn ligaments in his ankle.

Possible replacements for the only veteran in the backfield (Schwartz) will be Henry Scott and Del Bennet.

O'Brien will miss at least two and possibly three games as he will be in Oregon because of the serious illness of his grandfather. The 350-pounder will be sorely missed on defense as he was one of the reasons the Chabot Gladiators managed only 48 yards on the ground.

Also lost for the season is tackle Frank Smith who was injured in the third quarter of the Chabot contest and is recuperating.

Phelan Lacking Vets; Cagers Look To Frosh

With only three returning lettermen from last year's squad, head basketball coach Sid Phelan will be counting heavily on current freshman tryouts for the 1963-64 season.

Returning from last year's team, which captured third place in the state basketball tournament, are lettermen Mac Smith, formerly of Polytechnic, Ken Scalmanini of Washington High and Art Adams, who averaged 13.1 points per game in the Golden Gate Conference last year.

"This year we have the smallest preseason turnout for practice that we have had in some time," Phelan commented. "All players who are not in the basketball class are invited to turn out for the after-class varsity practice.

"Those out for the other fall sports are welcome to try out for varsity basketball at the conclusion of that sport," Phelan emphasized.

Conlan Emphasizes Importance Of Student Government At CJCSGA Meet

By Charlotte Wong

The importance of a well designed student government program as an intrinsic part of the educational program was stressed by President Louis G. Conlan, keynote speaker of the Area Six Conference held in the theater Saturday.

"As long as students act with responsibility, they should be allowed to exercise as much self direction as the law allows. Students should make decisions, live by them and learn by them," Conlan emphasized.

"Well designed student government programs provide practical experiences which develop values by which one can nobly live," he added.

The first general assembly of representatives from the newly formed sixth sector of the California Junior College Student Government Association began at 9:30 a.m.

Opening speches were made by Host Assembly President Vince Contreras and Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman.

Some 220 student leaders from nine Northern California junior colleges exchanged ideas in five workshop discussions led by delegates of the different colleges.

Edward Mancuso, San Francisco Public Defender and Alan Baumgartner of Foothill College directed the Aspects of Politics Workshop and Mike Pettis, Associated Student President of the College of San Mateo, led the workshop held exclusively for AS Presidents.

Consultant and chairman, respectively, for the Finance Workshop were Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of educational management here and Steve Christ, college sophomore president; for the Public Relations Workshop were Barbara Rosenthal, public relations instructor here and Ted Gallagher of Cabrillo College; Lucille Lando, journalist for the San Francisco Progress and John S. Vigil of Hartnell College represented the Entertainment Workshop.

Three resolutions were suggested by members of the President's Workshop, the Public Relations Workshop and the Aspects of Politics Workshop. The resolutions resolved to unify the election codes of the member colleges of Area Six; to form a public relations board to meet at and be coordinated by San Jose City College and to recommend that the CJCSGA give consideration to the necessity of a mandatory health course.

In attendance were delegates from the College of San Mateo, Foothill College, Gavilan Joint Junior College, Hartnell College, Menlo College, Cabrillo College, Monterey Peninsula College and San Jose City College.

A cable car transported students from Smith Hall, where lunch was held, to the theater, where the general assembly was held.

Revision Of AS Constitution Faces Student Vote Today

Voting on the revised Associated Student constitution will take place from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. today and tomorrow, Chris Small, election commissioner, announced yesterday.

Vince Contreras, Associated Student president, stated that the reason the constitution was brought before a committee for revision was that in the past the document was "inflexible and too rigid."

Previously, the constitution included the AS By-Laws. Under the new document, the by-laws become a completely separate part of the constitution.

"Most of the changes are in construction," Cónfreras pointed out. "We have also brought the constitution up-to-date as we did when the Council of Organizations supplanted the Club Activities Board two years ago."

Other changes in the revised constitution ask that the post of Alumni Liaison Officer be deleted from the President's Cabinet and that first semester students may run for freshman seats on Student Council after the first midterm period.

The Constitutional Revisions' Committee, appointed by Contreras, was headed by parliamentarian Bill May with assistance from State Information Chairman John Theilen.

"Students intending to vote must present a registration card, which will be punched, and sign the register before casting a ballot," Miss Small stated.

Two balloting stations, one at the Silver Pole and the other in the cafeteria, will be set up to accommodate voters.

The constitution, unanimously ratified by Student Council, needs a two-third majority vote from the student body for final passage.

Last Thursday Student Council voted to fill the vacant sophomore seat in the Student Council. The candidates were John Conlon and Alan Williams. (For results, see page 3.)

Candidates for the four open freshman seats in Council have yet to be selected, pending the outcome of the constitution vote.

The constitution, which regulates college elections, must be passed before candidates may run for the vacant freshman seats on council.

Circle Now Open Only To Cars With Special Permits

Because of the increasing number of cars using Cloud Circle as a thoroughfare, it has been closed off to all traffic except cars with faculty stickers or special permits, according to Deputy Police Chief Mendoza.

A sign has been posted at the entrance to Cloud Circle plainly stating the new regulation. "Cars entering the circle without the proper permit will be given a citation immediately," Mendoza warned.

These and other citations given by the Campus Police for parking, jaywalking, and speeding on the campus, are the same as those given by the city police force. Therefore, fines accompanying the citations are mandatory and must be paid to the city, like any off-campus ticket.

Another reminder from Mendoza was that students obey officers of the morning traffic detail which directs pedestrians and vehicles on Ocean and Phelan avenues.

The detail which is normally on duty from 7:30 to 8 a.m., has been extended an extra half hour, until 8:30, to help control increased traffic.

Although delayed a week because of the heavy schedule of City Police Chief Thomas Cahill, the procedure of officially swearing in the 13 rookies of the Campus Police force was accomplished at the Hall of Justice on October 8.

Additions to the Campus Police will bring the total number up to 31 members, including officers.

AGS Study Habit Clinic Proves Success, To Continue Tomorrow

Student interest was the key factor in the successful reopening of Alpha Gamma Sigma's study habit clinic last Thursday.

Because of this interest, the clinic will be open tomorrow during College Hour in S-214, William Richardson, AGS adviser, announced last week.

"Continued student interest will determine whether the clinic will meet every Thursday," Richardson emphasized.

Members of the honor society were present at the clinic's reopening and spoke with students having scholastic difficulty. The honor students discussed various methods of studying and tried to help the others formulate good study habits.

Richardson made a special plea to students with special talent in mathematics, science, or English, to consult with him in his office in S-140, regarding tutoring students for pay. He emphasized "It is not necessary for student tutors to be members of the honor society."

He also mentioned that these students are "more than welcome" to attend the clinic and discuss problems of study with other students.

Richardson urged that students eligible for membership in the scholastic society "come to S-140 and sign up."

Today Last Day To Drop Classes Without Penalty

Last day to drop courses without penalty is today, Registrar Mary Jane Learnard announced this morning.

In order to withdraw from a class, students must consult their counselor, obtain the required forms and the necessary signatures, and file the completed form in the registrar's office, she said.

Beta Tau Sponsors IFC Pledge Week Dance This Friday

The climax to the Inter-Fraternity Council pledge week comes this Friday night when Beta Tau sponsors a semiformal dance at the California Club.

The dance is titled Moon River and is open to all student body members at a cost of $2.50 per couple, according to Dan Foley, dance chairman. Music will be by The Blue Diamonds.

In the meantime pledge week activities will continue.

Tomorrow the fraternities will have their pledge games during College Hour. Foley stated that contests will be held in pie-eating, balloon-blowing and egg-throwing games and in such common events as three-legged and 880-yard races.

On Friday all the fraternity pledges and active members will attend the football game in the college stadium when the Rams play the Bulldogs of College of San Mateo.

The week began early for the new pledges as they all gathered here at a bright and early 7 o'clock last Monday morning. After spending that day with the fraternity actives, the pledges went home late that night to rest before starting another long day on Tuesday.

Tuesday the fraternity pledges volunteered for service projects around the college. Again tomorrow the campus will be cleaned and weeded by the group, Foley said.

By the time the dance begins Friday night, all the new pledges who last through the week will be on an equal footing with the present active members.

Spirited Quintet

FIVE GHOSTS made a sneak preview last night in the courtyard in preparation for tomorrow's evening of Tricks and Treats. Representing the spirit of Tricks past, student Mike Del Prete "appears" five times, writhing to Camille Saint-Saens' La Danse Macabre. Only one photograph was taken during the ballet. The five members will be guests of the haunted house on the hill for the annual meet of the X-ray skull radiography tomorrow night. (See Foresight, page 2, for Treats.)

Antigone Is Curtain Raiser In Three-Week Drama Run

Antigone is slated to be the curtain-raiser Friday night as the first of three one-act plays scheduled for the campus theater here. The Ugly Duckling and The Bald Soprano will complete the program, Robert Lasley, drama production manager, stated today.

Performances will start at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday with the balance of the run scheduled for November 8-9 and 15-16. Tickets will be available at the door for $1 or free to those holding Associated Student cards.

Antigone, by Jean Anouilh, is the modern adaptation of a Greek tragedy in which Creon, the king, is caught in the mesh between moral and civic duty.

Sandy Lundwall is cast as Antigone; Larry O'Leno as Creon the king; Jeanne Chieffo as Iseme; Mike Corrigan, guard; Dale Altvater, messenger and John Gilman, chorus. Direction is by James Haran, drama and English instructor.

The Ugly Duckling, by A. A. Milne, considers the exaggeration of physical beauty over the more enduring qualities of human nature.

Credit for casting and direction of The Ugly Duckling goes to Delta Psi Omega, the National Honorary Dramatic Society, members of which include Ken Bachtold as the king who also assisted with the set designs.

Other members are Brenda Goldstein as the queen; Miss Lundwall as Princess Camilla; Leon Moniot, the Chancellor; Sandra Lee Turner as Dulcibella; Altvater as Carlo, and Alonso Gonzalez as Prince Simon.

Gonzalez was also in charge of costumes, with the assistance of the combined efforts of the cast. A painting portraying the ugly duckling which is used in the production, was created by the talented Gonzalez.

The final curtain is for The Bald Soprano, a whimsical take-off on small talk written by Eugene Ionesco, and directed by Lasley.

In the parts of Mr. and Mrs. Smith are Bill Shattuck and Andrea Fulton; Mike Dobrinsky and Lynne Goodrich play Mr. and Mrs. Martin, while Bachtold is the fire chief and Cherry Mir has the role of the maid.

"This has been a rather ambitious undertaking," Lasley remarked. With three diversified programs under production, he feels that it should create quite a drawing power in the theater audience. Something for everyone, "so to speak."

A second series of one-act plays is scheduled for December.

AWS Picks Coeds For Annual Fashion Show November 6

Associated Women Students chose 12 coeds to model at the annual Fashion Show next Wednesday, November 6, Rosie Fang, AWS president, announced yesterday.

Selected from 56 entrants, the models are Ellen Boyer, Mary Catterall, Domenica Flores, Dixine Gillespie, Gail Grothman, Imogene Haynes, Nina Jacobs, Judith Keegan, Ellen Lee, Yoko Murakita, Susan Schwampe and Frances Small.

Nancy Gaskin, Nancy Hughes and Theresa Santos will be alternates in the event that any coed models are unable to be present at the fashion show.

Five instructors judged the women on poise, walk, expression and appearance during tryouts on October 17.

Among the judges were Don Liles, English instructor; William Davis, Art instructor; Evelyn Kerkhof, Mathematics instructor; Lucille Mason, Business instructor, and Melia Furgis, Health and Physical Education instructor.

Each model will represent a month of the year in the Calendar Coed theme and one will be chosen as Coed of the Year of this fashion show tea to be held from 3 to 5 p.m. in Smith Hall, Miss Fang said.

Fashions by Mr. G will be shown at the annual event honoring the Bay Area's high school seniors.

Mai Tai Sing, internationally known beauty consultant and fashion expect, is scheduled to be the show's commentator.

Models, Dean of Women Mary Golding announced, will take part in a special course in modeling given by the House of Charm, a San Francisco model agency.

Courtless Queen, 12 Kings

By Patty Smith

Interesting names can always be found but really, where else but here can one find 16 Chins and only one Beard?

Among the usual high number of Smiths, Lees, Browns, Johnsons, Wongs, Williams and Jones enrolled here, there are many unusual, zany and delightful names which can easily be found if one cares to spend six or so hours perusing the college roster!

Although there is no Court present, there are 12 Kings, one Queen, three Knights, one Prince, one Squire, three Nobles, one Earl, three Pages, with only one Throne. For good measure, there are also two Sultans.

Bibliophiles might be interested in the fact that Ian Fleming's famous characters, James Bond and Goldfinger, are roaming the campus. There are also a few Biblical characters about, namely one Abel, five Cains, and one Moses. For interested philosophers, there are three Platos.

The political front is well represented with a sprinkling of Kennedys, Castros and Trujillos.

Occupations abound here with four Hunters, 30 Millers (one of them is Arthur), three Tanners, one Weaver, two Pipers, one Packer, two Miners, four Potters, five Barkers, eight Cooks, three Barbers, two Porters, two Singers one Carpenter, six Butlers, nine Bakers and a scattering of Artists, Butchers, Archers Carvers, Falconers and Brewers.

Speaking of Brewers, there are also four Gins, one Martini, two Cokes and one Champagne!

First Rate Plays At Bargain Prices Start Friday In Theater

ON THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3, the drama department presented its first production of the semester with a Tad Mosel play, entitled Impromptu, in the theater. The same evening, another play, The Ugly Duckling, by A. A. Milne was presented.

Friday night, The Ugly Duckling is to be presented again with two other productions, Eugene Ionesco's The Bald Soprano and Jean Anouilh's Antigone. All three are one-act plays and are offered in a "package" form.

These plays are the climax of hard work and cooperation. While most students were "enjoying" their summer vacation, the cast of The Ugly Duckling was busily preparing for the Fall semester presentation.

The diversification of the plays to be offered Friday also reflects the drama department's intense enthusiasm for creativity.

Furthermore, the quality of the department's productions is unquestionable and it is hoped that everyone is aware of the efforts being made by the department to participate in college life. By offering these first-rate performances, the department achieves a well-deserved recognition for their labor.

Another encouraging and stimulating motive is the fact that the department is also preparing another production, The Mad Woman of Chaillot, by Jean Giraudoux.

Attendance at plays previously presented is of main concern. Should the department continue to present plays when only 40 to 50 persons attend the performances? This is a question that was left to the department to answer by those who felt that plays shouldn't be presented unless the admission price paid for the performances.

King John, a presentation of the Spring semester was to draw over 100 persons or else the play faced the guillotine. Fortunately, the requirement was met.

The drama department is offering students splendid opportunities to enjoy themselves through well-acted productions as the plays are entirely free of charge . . . if one possesses an Associated Student card. Even though one doesn't have that magic Sesame, $1 is the top cost.

Isn't that quite a privilege — good plays for such a ridiculously low admission price?

People May Laugh At 'Put-Puts,' But Scooterists Get Last Snicker

By Pete Franklin

Inexpensive transportation seems to be a main objective of the approximately 200 students who commute to and from the college on various forms of motorized cycles.

Dozens of such vehicles, ranging from Vespa motor scooters to Harley-Davidson motorcycles, jam the allotted four-stall area near Smith Hall giving the appearance, according to some, of a can of sardines.

"The four stalls seem hardly adequate," said one scooterist, "because although parking is easy even in the smallest spaces, there are getting to be so many of us that we'll have to park on top of each other pretty soon."

Scooter owners, though still a minority group and supposedly hampered by the recent edict banning scooters from freeways, are staunchly loyal to "put-puts." Said one, "I never owned a scooter before, but now I've tried one and I'll drive it 'till the wheels come off, and then I'll buy another."

"I can get through any traffic jam made (legally usually), but then there's the advantage of getting lost in a crowd if someone does try to tag you."

Modern man's paramount problem of parking is practically nonexistent to the scooterist who finds, as one put it, "I can park anywhere (within reason), between cars, behind garbage cans, in alleyways."

Unfortunately, the college frowns on parking just anywhere on campus, since space has been provided without any strings, like special permits, attached.

"Scooters may never become a national institution," said one ardent Honda fan, "but they sure beat traffic, parking, and gas problems. Greatest invention since the bicycle."

There seem to be only two disadvantages to scooters — rainy days and motorcycle police.

Jules Verne World In Science Dome

Planetarium Projects Stars By Push-Button

The sight of the dome atop Science Hall arouses the curiosity of some students. Many make a regular climb up there. Others, who satisfy their curiosity by making a quiek elimb to the dome, find that it was worth every puff.

Situated on the top floor of Seience Hall is a small, scientifieally equipped planetarium, complete with an expensive year-old Spitz Planetarium Projeetor. The instrument cost the government and the college $18,000.

The sky dome, the room that houses the projector, seats a large class. It may be darkened, and the planets made to appear on its curved ceiling. Emphasis can be made on different planets by a flick of a button on the control panel.

The sky can be shown at different latitudes. Coordinated systems in the sky can be projected, with motions of the stars, sun, moon and other planets. The panel also includes a tape playback phonograph, often used in lectures.

No ordinary blackboard occupies the planetarium wall. The blaekboard in this theater has mounted to its sides special ultra violet lights which give off beautiful multi-eolored images on the surface. A special phosphoreseent chalk is used to make luminous illustrations on it.

The man who operates the complicated instrument panel is Louis Berman, dedicated astronomer, who has been with the faculty since 1935.

He teaches and clarifies the mumbo-jumbo of outer-space. He edits and writes an annually revised outline on spaee exploration, one of his subjects.

Because of rapid changes in the race for space, Berman is constantly occupied with making revisions, for there is no textbook for this class.

"Once this was a useless science. Now it's of the utmost importance, and it is dangerous to assume that we are ahead of Russia in the space race. They have a government training program for astronomers. We haven't," said Berman.

"The astronauts all must know astronomy. Let me point out that there aren't enough astronomers in the U.S. today. Many of them are lured into high-paying jobs from their teaching posts. A good astronomer can make from $30,000 to $40,000 a year in private industry," he added.

"People think it's easy to learn astronomy. On the contrary. It is interesting, but a person must have knowledge of both algebra and geometry. We have lots of dropouts because astronomy is closely related to physics," Berman noted.

He urged all college students, and especially those in liberal arts, to add the space sciences to their studies. He believes that many scientists have had their start at this college, where the small planetarium may have triggered their interest.

'Born An Enemy'

Freshman Starts Life As Japanese Prisoner

"Born an enemy to the Japanese Empire," are the words inscribed on the birth certificate of Arthur Joseph Balíantz.

A freshman here, he was born March 15, 1944, in a Japanese concentration camp in Tshing-Too, Manchuria, during the Japanese occupation of China.

Later on, when the Japanese occupation was lifted, the Chinese Communist Party took over and stripped all European settlers of their possessions.

"My parents had to abandon a prosperous business and several apartment buildings," Balíantz said, "and we had no choice but to let fate take care of our future.

"We intended to go to the United States but did not have sufficient means. On the other hand we had to leave China, and consequently we were shipped to an island in the Philippines where we lived in tents.

In 1951 Balíantz, now a citizen of the United States, was put on a military transport with his sister and parents and sent to this country.

Balíantz's father got a job in a bank because he spoke English, and his mother took a job as an interpreter.

Two years after their arrival, they had saved a little money, and Mrs. Balíantz sold the jewels she had managed somehow to smuggle out of China, to open the now famous Bali's Restaurant, 615 Sansome Street.

Balíantz himself has no interest in the restaurant business but is enrolled here as an English major because his ambition is to become an English teacher.

Foresight

By Dick Bullard

THAT MAGIC TIME is upo us once again. This is th week for old ghosts to be ex humed and walk about strikin fear into the hearts of otherwise r tional people.

This is a time for the senior spirit of a barely understood world to exac tribute and meet out trials to thei willing subjects.

As usual the costumes will be gro tesque and gaudy. The masks wi carry the look of the tormented an the damned.

Come to think of it, besides Pledg Week, this is also the week for Ha loween.

Herein lie some rather obviou comparisons.

First of all, neither of them is quit so fearsome as they once were.

The popularity of Halloween ha steadily declined ever since that d capitated jockey from upstate Ne York turned out to be a fraud.

It took the State Legislature on th other hand to take the fun away fro our fraternity friends.

Thanks to a law passed in 1961, th fellows with the Greek letters wer deprived of their favorite form c mental and physical destruction. Ha ing was outlawed.

Our representatives in Sacrament described hazing as "any practic which might result in bodily harm o in any way degrade or humiliate th recipient."

This last part pretty well take care of all loose ends.

In order for us to draw any colo ful comparisons, we must go back t the days when the Halloween nigh was filled with the wails of Banshee instead of the sirens of fire trucks o false alarms.

These were the times when th fraternities sponsored initiation which included more drastic thing than three-legged races and pie-eatin contests.

In the days when the good peop of the community were hanging u hex signs to keep away the goblin the fraternities were amusing them selves with jovial little pastimes wit good-natured pledges.

The Tar and Feather routine w considered quite chic for a while an leaving the poor souls stranded in th snow with little or no clothes neve failed to be a highspot of entertain ment.

As you can see, this harmless frol developed a fair mortality rate.

While the devotees of All Hallow Eve had their preternatural deities o worship, the fraternities had thei Greek letters for the same ends. N doubt they choose Greek to add splash of intelligentsia to their mor bizarre forms of entertainment.

In time the disciples of the Drui gave in, and Halloween was give over to the children, where it b longed.

Not so with the fraternities. The continued to hold on to their right t subject their fledglings to unhuma treatment.

True, the live worms were replace by solid spaghetti, and the tar p was forgotten. They even allowed th wanderers to take a coat with the but they refused to relinquish th idea that they had a justifiable excu for this maltreatment.

All this is past history.

The fraternities have reached position worthy of our admiration b concentrating their efforts on worth while community projects.

What do you say we all go jum in a telephone booth?

Shapely Animal Erasers Favorite Ramporium Items

Erasers shaped like animals continue to be in equal demand among the students and the faculty of the college.

This is not to imply that the faculty need the erasers — they are buying them to take home to their children, according to Dick Main, Ramporium manager.

Other items in recent demand are the packets of Compact Facts, the booklets on Basic Facts and Carter's Hi-Liter.

Compact Facts, in card form, cover a wide range of subjects such as history, physics, economics, algebra, accounting, insurance, parliamentary procedure and four languages.

Carter's Hi-Lighter is a yellow felt marking pen that is transparent and dries instantly. This is a real aid for students who underline in books since it does not decrease the value of the book as ordinary ink does.

Alan Williams Fills Vacant Soph Seat; Council Begins Passage Of Spring Budgets

By Lowell Mengel

Sophomore Art Gershman led Student Council action last Thursday by bringing the first three spring semester budgets up for approval and nominating Alan Williams to fill the vacant sophomore seat on council.

The three requests, totalling $3360, were passed, and Williams won the election to the vacant seat over his opponent John Conlon.

The approved budgets were $2410 to the controller, some $500 for the athletic injury fund, plus $450 to the administration.

The administration budget included funds to finance various student government expenses during the semester and was cut $50, from the original request of $500, after Associated Student President Vince Contreras warned council again about allocating money in excess of anticipated income.

He informed council that it had appropriated $44,000 for this semester's budgets with only $40,000 due to be realized by the AS. As a result, council was asked to approve no more than $40,000 for spring budgets so that the allocations will balance with the intended revenues for the year.

John Dunn, director of the Ram marching band, was a guest at last week's meeting of council speaking on proposed expenses of his group for the rest of this semester.

He requested $56.50 for each of the two remaining football games scheduled away from the campus in order to transport the Ram band. Janet Sisk then moved that council allocate a total of $113 to cover these expenses; the motion was passed 5-0-1.

Dunn also mentioned that he would like to purchase six additional uniforms for the band and informed council that he is in need of an appropriation so that the Ram band can attend the Junior Rose Bowl in December.

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

FOR THE past two weeks, San Francisco has been wrapped up in an hysteria that is known as the Festival of France.

Activities included a wine tasting festival, a bicycle race, a soccer game, an Eiffel Tower and mesdemoiselles. The city was flooded with more phony Frenchmen than one could have believed possible.

All of the sudden everybody was a long-lost relative of De Gaulle, and even the panhandlers on Third street were bumming their dimes in French.

From what can be ascertained from the latest reports, it would seem that the festival was a rip-roaring success and it will no doubt be repeated in the future.

But why have a festival of "France?"

Why couldn't we alternate the countries we wish to pay homage to? True, France has played an important roie in our history, but so have a lot of other nations.

Take Greenland for instance. Now there's a country we could really throw a blast with, and with no reservations.

A sealing expedition to Alcatraz would naturally be first on the list of activities, with parka-clad debutantes of San Francisco's society in the lead kayaks and their harpoons held at ready.

Down at Civic Center we could stage a blubber-chewing contest, and we could turn the polar bears loose from the zoo to roam around and give the city a real authentic atmosphere.

The rickshaws of Chinatown would have to be hidden from view for a week and replaced with dog sleds, but this shouldn't prove to be too much of a problem for our ready and able city planners.

The following year we could stage the Festival Of Monaco. This would be the big one.

We are certain that, because of the size and signifieance of this event, the State of Caiifornia would look the other way when we erected a giant casino at Union Square.

In the center of the casino we would have to set up a well-banked game of Baccarat. This would be to attract such famous persons as James Bond to the festival.

Maybe we could even induce our old gal Gracie to come back and open up the celebration.

But, with yearly festivals of this sort, there would of eourse be a lot of difficulties and problems.

Quite naturally, the festivals would become known internationally, and immediately all countries would wish to be honored, Unbelievable pressures from foreign powers would be put on the mayor of San Francisco and many a crisis would evolve.

Many a jealousy would spring up overseas concerning the wealth of the respective nations. France was able to send a warship into the harbor to, we hope, help celebrate.

Greenland could not even conjure up an iron-clad kayak. Monaco would not be able to send a warship, but with the famous yachts that dot her harbor, we're sure she could send something.

One solution to this problem would be to honor only little countries like Andorra. This tiny nation had a total military budget for the fiscal year of 4962 of $4.38. This was to buy blank ammunition for their four-man army, to be used in regal ceremonies.

But if, when we have these festivals, we are doomed to have a city full of phonies, pseudo-Frenchmen are the best. Can you imagine some poor slob trying to impress somebody by mixing phrases of Greenlandic into his vocabulary?

Eichelbaum Speaks Of Rising Interest In Foreign Films

By Bea Takeuchi

A candid criticism of foreign and domestic films was given by Stanley Eichelbaum, drama critic for the San Francisco Examiner, during College Hour last Thursday at an International Relations Club meeting.

He emphasized the rise in interest of foreign films and the development of a new type of small drama house. "These small cinema houses will make a profit on foreign films because curiosity about foreign movie makers has brought it about," he said.

"This year's San Francisco Film Festival has no significant directors, except the Japanese directors," he added. He recommended Ichikawa's film, My Enemy The Sea. He also recommends the movie, Weekend, by Danish Film producers.

Eichelbaum spoke of low budget pictures being made in Hollywood today, and said, "Even if the film is brilliant, you can't walk out on the streets to pull people in to see it.

"What is the purpose of art, if you can't be selective or put on screen a tasteful combination of ideas? I do not believe that nudity and sex and subjects like that have a purpose in a movie, nor that they add anything to art," he declared.

The movie, Lilies Of The Field, with actor Sidney Poitier which opened here last week, is highly recommended by Eichelbaum.

"Before a title was selected for this movie, they considered the titles, Piety In The Sky, Amen Man, Black Lilies, and The Black Baptist and Mother Shapiro," he added.

When questioned about the hazards of being a drama critic, Eichelbaum said that he has been physically and literally bombarded by his readers. He further emphasized that "there is no such thing as payola for critics and there exists a degree of intellectual snobbism among critics."

Choir Considering New Robe Colors

New robes for the A Cappella Choir are currently under consideration with the selection narrowed down to four colors, Galen Marshall, choir director, said yesterday.

The colors are green, black, maroon or navy blue.

The choir expects to have the robes for its first evening concert on Tuesday, December 10. A second concert is scheduled during College Hour on December 12. The Men's Glee and the Women's Choir will also participate in these programs.

Both Marshall and Richard Fenner, director of the Women's Choir, predict that the concerts will be a high point in music activities here. Fenner said, "I am pleased with the quality of voices in the Women's Choir this semester."

The Concert Band and Orchestra are also scheduled for concerts during College Hour on November 21 and again on January 7.

A Cappella Choir officers for the semester are President Leon Moniot, Vice President Imogene Walker and Secretary Elizabeth Harris.

Anti-Litter Committee In First Meeting As Clean-Up Gets Underway

A newly formed anti-litter committee will hold its first meeting at noon today in the Associated Student office, S-134, Dean Ralph Hillsman announced last Friday.

"City College is faced with a litter problem because of thoughtlessness and inconsiderate neglect of which students do not seem to be aware," Dean Hillsman said, "but I trust that students will become conscious of this situation. We have an excellent student body," he added, "which, when confronted with the need for assistance, has not failed to cooperate."

Imogene Walker, anti-litter committee chairman, is also confident that the litter situation will be solved in due time without employing drastic measures.

Carol Wong, sophomore member of Student Council, last week offered to work with the committee, but more volunteers are needed to solve the problem as soon as possible, Miss Walker emphasized.

Cutest Couple Wins Ribbons, Roses At Ball

John Kennelly and Dixine Gillespie were chosen the Cutest Couple at the Freshman Ball, held two weeks ago in the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel.

The winning couple was selected because of their dancing ability and neat appearance. They were chosen by a panel of judges composed of Vince Contreras, Associated Student president; Thomas Humiston and Nancy Humiston, class sponsors, and Dean Mary Golding.

Various clubs and fraternities donated prizes for the contest winners and the runners-up. The prizes for the winning couple were dinner for two at a restaurant of their choice, a crown and roses for Miss Gillespie, and blue ribbons and trophies for her and Kennelly.

Runners-up were Terry Lofrano and Cathy O'Leary who placed second, and Bill Stephens and Marilyn Hammer, who placed third.

The announcement of Mike and Matilda as the winners of the Cutest Couple of Mice Contest was made after the selection of the Cutest Couple of people.

The two mice couple finalists were Mike and Matilda, and Ralph and Zelda. The winning couple received 250 votes, while the runners-up received 174 votes.

Spring Semester Counseling Starts

Counselors have started preprogramming for next semester, and all students who have filed free-hour forms will be notified about a week in advance of their appointments, Walter E. McCloud, of the counseling department, announced last week.

He warned students unable to keep an appointment at the time specified, to inform their counselors, semiprofessional advisers or the counseling office, within two days following receipt of the appointment card.

Failure to make proper notification will result in the forfeiture of the assigned registration number, McCloud said.

"Those who did not make out a free-hour form and who plan to attend the college next semester must consult their counselors or counseling office immediately."

Spring semester registration is scheduled February 3 and 4. Students can find their registration time by checking their registration numbers, stamped on the upper left corner of their trial programs, and the schedule for registration which is expected to be posted near the end of November.

Alpha Sigma Delta Book Drive Off To Faltering Start

First-week contributions to Alpha Sigma Delta's "educational" book drive numbered slightly more than 200, but fraternity representative Larry Maibaum expects an influx of books during the next week and is confident that the goal of 2500 will be reached.

"Last year, the drive began slowly also," Maibaum declared, "but increased steadily until the final day of the campaign. I expect the same thing to happen this year."

Maibaum added that all the campus fraternities are supporting the drive.

He also emphasized again that only educational books, preferably those concerned with English or mathematics, and issues of National Geographic magazine are acceptable contributions.

Federal Career Day To Be Held Here Friday; Agencies To Discuss Job Opportunities

Final plans have been made for the first annual Federal Government Career Information Day which will be held here Friday starting at 8 a.m., Joseph A. Amori, placement director, stated recently.

The affair will be held in the campus courtyard, where 21 federal agencies will be represented by a team of specialists and occupational resource persons who will distribute information in various areas of Federal employment, Amori said.

The program, brought here for the first time in the history of the college, is offered in conjunction with the United States Civil Service Commission, which will bring to the campus 30 federal government specialist teams to talk with students about Federal job opportunities.

The purpose of the program is to acquaint students with the availability of jobs that are open in federal offices and is not intended as a recruitment day. Amori emphasized that only information will be given during this program, and no attempt at hiring students will be made by any of the organizations present.

Amori pointed out that already hundreds of graduates of the college are employed by the Federal government in a wide variety of jobs in many different locations throughout the world. They have been placed in many countries, for example, Spain, Italy, Japan, Mexico, Arabia, Guam and England.

Many others are employed by the government in the 50 states and make up only a portion of those students who are successfully placed by government agencies throughout the nation.

Opportunities for employment exist in occupational classifications, Amori declared, such as accounting, medicine, international relations, forestry, the peace corps and personnel administration and management.

During the program, descriptive brochures will be distributed by the various agencies to students interested. Representatives will answer questions pertaining to the various jobs available, but, Amori emphasized, will not do any recruiting at this time.

Conlan Proclaims Friday As Federal Career Day

Friday, November 1, is hereby officially proclaimed Federal Career Day at City College of San Francisco, in appreciation of the fact that representatives of 17 federal agencies will be on campus this day to counsel studenta regarding careers with the United States Government.

100 To Perform In Annual IRC Stage Program

More than 100 students will perform Friday, November 8, when the college's International Club sponsors its annual fair and stage show at the Lowell High School auditorium.

The stage show will have a two-hour program with eight major acts including a Samoan fire-dance, a Chilean dance group, a Latin American combo and a Korean folk dancer, Herman Kligerman, IRC publicity chairman, said.

Tickets, priced at 75 cents for students and faculty members, and $1.25 general admission, will go on sale this week.

The only American act will be the college concert band, under the direction of Meyer Cahn, music instructor here, Kligerman said.

Following the stage show, there will be lobby displays of food characteristic of each country represented. The public will be invited to sample the delicacies and purchase portions of them if so desired.

The fair, which was instituted in 1954, is designed as a means of bringing many nationalities together in a common venture as well as to develop a feeling of unity through appreciation of entertainment with the common factors of music and dancing.

The fair and stage show is a benefit, with proceeds from the function going to the Colombian Unit of the Peace Corps.

Foundation To Manage Gifts To Retail Floristry

Administration of gifts presented to the retail floristry department here will be managed by a foundation recently set up by the retail floristry advisory committee.

The foundation is expected to operate along lines similar to the hotel and restaurant department foundation.

The committee set up the Articles of Incorporation and its purpose, Maryhope C. Jacks, retail floristry instructor here, said, "is to enable students to obtain scholarships and supply money for educational equipment."

At the present time, one member of the committee is also a member of the board but the other members, Mrs. Jacks added, are persons in the floristry industry.

The purpose of the board, Mrs. Jacks also added, "is to invest and disperse monies in the foundation."

Some of its members include Louis F. Batmale, coordinator of Technical-Terminal Education at the college, Mrs. Jacks, floristry instructor, T. W. Yatabe, secretary to the California Flower Market and secretary of the California State Florists Association.

Other members include Victor Stein, owner of Albert O. Stein, Florists, and Louis Paolini and Victor Bona, long established San Francisco florists.

Local Eleven Underdogs In Clash With San Mateo Friday

By Pete Franklin

Ram head coach Dutch Elston pits his "disabled" veterans against a capable San Mateo squad in the college's second home football clash this Friday in the Ram stadium.

The Rams, whose casualty list is now almost as long as its roster and still recovering from the Contra Costa contest, will post a team well balanced with wounded and third-string players: "I've lost track of what the line weighs," Elston said, "and we're running out of quarterbacks."

San Mateo has not played consistently this season. The Bulldogs barely squeaked past lowly Diablo Valley 22-20, showing a good offensive bid, but not an outstanding defensive effort.

The 205-pound San Mateo line showed weaknesses, while quarterback Gene Seattini and running back Greg O'Neill established themselves as brilliant.

O'Neill ran two TD's, one from 71 yards out, and both conversions. Scattini hit Bill Poulos for the other TD.

It was the other way around in the Contra Costa encounter.

Against the nation's ninth ranked two-year college club, the Bulldog offense passed up two chances for field goals in the first quarter with fourth down passes, while the defense held back a crushing Comet offense until late in the third quarter.

The Bulldogs got through the 215-pound Comet line twice with only ten seconds left on the clock, a TD and the two-point conversion. The Comets won, 14-8.

Block SF Initiates Club Spirit Award

Block SF Society is setting a new precedent this semester by establishing a perpetual trophy to be awarded to the group or organization on campus displaying the most spirit at athletic events, according to society President Ben Brown.

This award, which will be presented Friday at the San Mateo-San Francisco game, has been initiated to increase student participation and attendance at football games, Brown said.

Selection of the fraternity, group or club having the largest number present and showing the best spirit, will be made by Block SF judges Mac Smith, Bob Zanassi, Ron Williams, Jose Valie and Joe Giacomini.

Actual operation of the contest will be carried out by the College's cheerleaders. The award will be presented during half time by Fall Football Queen Wendie Williams.

Odds Run True As Rams Fall Into Second Place Tie

By Fred Wales

Living up to their heavily favored role, the nationally ranked Contra Costa Comets handed the Rams a 23-0 dumping last Friday night at Richmond High School.

The loss dropped the Rams into a tie for second place with a 2-1 record and left the Comets in sole possession of first with a perfect 3-0 mark.

Passing was the key to the favorites' victory as quarterbacks Randy Ketlinski and Bill Westernoff completed 13 out of 23 passes for 132 yards.

Contra Costa's first score came early in the second quarter as they went 88 yards in nine plays with Jim Bullock scoring from the one.

A Ketlinski to Mike Myers pass accounted for 42 of the last 43 yards.

The next time the Comets got their hands on the ball they drove 68 yards in 13 plays.

With the Comets apparently stopped on the 20 on a third and six play, Ketlinski hit Jim Stewart for 16 yards and a first down on the Ram 11.

With a fourth and three at the 4 yard line, Ketlinski hit Bill Weisand very close to the sidelines for a disputed 6 points and a 14-0 halftime lead.

Attesting to their all-around scoring punch, the Comets drove 50 yards to the Ram 13 and on fourth down Jim Nelson kicked a field goal for a 17-0 bulge with 7:30 remaining in the third quarter.

The Comets' final score went 38 yards, mostly on the ground, in six plays with Whitney Dotson going the last three yards for 23-0 final.

Despite the shutout the Rams drove inside the Comets 20 yard line three time but could never come up with a score.

Ben Brown raced a punt return 64 yards as he dodged and weaved through Comet tacklers and then tightroped down the sideline for the score.

A costly 15 yard penalty nullified the broken field exhibition and set the Rams up on the Contra Costa 30 from where the drive fell short on the 17.

The Ram offense was led by Pat Lewis, Joe Sobeck and Charlie Stewart as the Big Three rambled for 111 of the Rams' 137 net yards and nine of the 10 Ram first downs.

Individually Lewis hit for 44 yards on nine carries, Sobeck 34 yards on seven carries and Stewart 33 yards on eight carries.

In the air, the Rams completed two out of 11 for 12 yards.

The Ram defense had their hands full throughout the contest, but as one coach noted, "there is no defense for good passes to fine ends."

Tom-Tom At Stake

By John Arberry

Every year about this time the soft beating of a drum is heard in the distance, indicating that the annual Bulldog-Ram football game is getting near and that the traditional Tom-tom will again go to the winner of this gridiron rivalry.

A symbol of football supremacy between the two colleges, the Tom-tom first became the game trophy in 1946 when Sonny Lewis, a San Mateo yell leader, donated the drum, a type which originated in Hawaii and had been used by marching bands here in California.

Colors of each college cover the Tom-tom, blue and white for the Bulldogs and red and white for the Rams. As each college decides how the Tom-tom will be decorated, the drum sometimes shows the heads of both the Bulldog and Ram.

The Rams had the honor of being the first team to possess the coveted Tom-tom as a result of a 35-18 victory over the Bulldogs.

The Tom-tom must have taken a liking to San Francisco surroundings as, in the period from 1946 to 1957, the Tom-tom decorated the Ram trophy case ten out of the eleven years in which games were played as the Bulldogs could only claim the Tom-tom once during this period.

Last time the Rams were able to retain the Tom-tom was in 1957 when they defeated the Bulldogs, 25-7, to keep the trophy in the halls of the Ram for the seventh consecutive year.

Possibly wanting a change of scenery, the Tom-tom left the Ram campus in 1958 when the Bulldogs won possession by virtue of a 20-12 victory over the Rams. It has yet to return to the Ram campus.

Closest the Rams have come to regaining it was in 1960 as the Bulldogs barely retained the Tom-tom with a 14-14 tie. Last year the Rams lost to the Bulldogs, 14-6, and San Mateo retained the trophy for another year.

There have been many exciting exploits concerning the Tom-tom. One time the Tom-tom mysteriously disappeared from the Ram trophy case and it was soon discovered that some San Mateo students had "raided" the campus and "borrowed" the Tom-tom. Just as mysteriously the drum returned in time for the next Bulldog-Ram game.

Once again the mighty Tom-tom, a symbol of sportsmanship and team spirit existing between the two colleges, will be up for grabs when the Rams and Bulldogs clash this Friday, with the Bulldogs fighting to retain the Tom-tom and the Rams attempting to regain the elusive drum.

Booters Edge Bulldogs, 6-4; Undefeated In Five Starts

By Peter Huebner

Reaching the halfway mark last week in the Northern California Junior College Conference, the Ram booters remained undefeated by downing Menlo College, 7-2, and battling for a 6-4 victory over San Mateo.

This win puts the local soccermen in sole possession of first place in the NCJCC with a 3-0 record and an overall 5-0 record.

Last Wednesday's game against San Mateo saw a fast action game, as San Mateo tied the score three times and kept the game alive until the final seconds of play.

After five minutes of play, Art Vigil, the day's scoring king, came through for the first time with a well-placed boot following a beautiful pass from Waldon Hom.

Soon after the Rams themselves tied the game for San Mateo on a mixup as goalie Ruben Hernandez dropped the ball and fullback Tony Losada tried to clear it but accidentally hit one of his own players as the ball went into the net.

In the second quarter Vigil again connected with a good kick to bring the score to 2-1, only to have San Mateo tie it once again.

Third quarter play saw Alex Volikovsky relay a high pass with a head shot and put the ball into the net past the surprised goalie.

A penalty shot for San Mateo deadlocked the game again at 3-3.

Vigil, showing good hustle, kicked his third goal before Calixto Cuevas added one to his account with a high fly-ball to bring the score to 5-3.

In the fourth quarter, San Mateo again moved up with one goal, despite steady playing by Mike Beltran and Andy Nabong's outstanding defensive plays. In the final minutes Carlos Cortez broke through to assure the 6-4 victory.

Intramural Cagers Start Competition

The Associated Men Students intramural basketball league kicked off this semester's play in perfect order last week.

Club action Tuesday found Hotel and Restaurant over the Filipino club, 40-26, as John Wallace hit 21 points for H&R and Larry Managian accounted for ten.

Steve Hart, from Sacred Heart, was responsible for 18 points in the Newman Club's 24-18 routing of the Lutherans.

Beta Tau was outshot by Phi Beta Delta 28-22, with Keith Robinson good for 13 Beta Tau points and Frank Wessel nailing 15 for Phi Beta Delta.

Alpha Kappa Rho won in overtime with a free throw over Alpha Sigma Delta, 28-27.

The Guardsman was out-fouled by the Hawaiian Club in a 35-19 fiasco. Dave Mesa hit 12 for the losers.

In Wednesday's independent league action, the Apaches downed Brothers Five, 40-31; Originals trounced the Mets, 60-33, the Divine Ones rolled over The Five, 46-12, Beavers beat the Panthers, 45-25, and the Ravens massacred the Independents, 71-15.

Spikers Miss Meet But Still Win

Despite running two different races, the long striding Ram spiker squad ran to a hard-earned split in a Golden Gate Conference meet with San Jose City College and hosting Diablo Valley last Thursday.

Final dual scores found the Rams losing to San Jose's Jaguars 15-48 but bouncing back to whip the hosting Diablo Valley Vikings 25-34 while the Jags tripped the Vikings 18-43. Triangular scores read San Jose 19, CCSF 53 and Diablo Valley 71 as the Rams improved their conference record to 3-2.

Due to an auto break down four of the Ram harriers missed the scheduled meet which had started just before they arrived so only three Rams ran the regulation race. After the race, the missing harriers were allowed to run the course and their times were added to the official score sheet.

The Rams were led by Ozzie Norris and Gene Plotkin as they jogged to times of 17:03 and 17:04 respectively. Rich Klemmer was third man for the Rams with a time of 17:20 followed by fourth man Dan Christian in 17:43.

Dan Murphy and Mike Conroy were the fifth Ram finishers with identical times of 18:14, but Murphy got the nod because he ran the official first race. The Rams next encounter will be against Oakland and Foothill tomorrow at Golden Gate Park.

Odds These Days Are With The Underdogs

RAMBLINGS

By Fred Wales

Limping Squad May Still Have A Chance

THE Odds have become a definite part of the sports world. Not only in the sport of Kings where they originated but in all other sports as well. No boxing match is ever held without the fighter with the longest reach and hardest punch being chosen a 7-5 favorite.

Tennis uses the odds as an integral part of its tournaments. The most experienced player with the best service and longest list of victories is seeded first and as such enjoys the benefits of playing the weakest opponents in the first and second round.

Basketball, baseball, football, track and golf all have been involved with the term Odds.

Recently, however, the representatives of the Odds, the favorite, has found himself on the bottom and the condemned, or underdog, has come out on top.

In the World Series, the New York Yankees, with their great hitting power and string of pennant victories, were 8-5 favorites to take the series in five games. BUT the forgotten element, pitching, dealt the "no-chance" Dodgers the championship in four straight games.

Two Sundays back the undefeated Chicago Bears were picked by 17 points over the disorganized San Francisco 49ers. BUT the uncalculated in the form of Lamar McHan piloted the team to a 20-14 victory over a stunned Chicago team.

The Ram gridders, after their 31-6 loss to Los Angeles Valley, were selected for the "also ran" category and assigned the perpetual underdog role. BUT the uncalculated, represented by three words, desire, defense and drill, enabled the "pea green" gridders to roll over Chabot, 12-9, and Oakland, 12-0.

Chabot boasted a perfect preseason record and league leading passer Gerry Fisher. Although giving Chabot nine points, the Rams managed to hold for a 12-9 score.

Oakland was ranked ninth in the nation and picked as a heavy favorite over the now termed "improving" Rams. Completely stifling the Oakland offense, the Rams scored an impressive 12-0 upset victory.

The statistics reveal the reason for the wins.

The Ram defense works as a team, and results prove it. On the ground, Chabot and Oakland, combined, managed only 155 yards.

In the air the opponents haven't fared much better. The defensive backfield, composed of Rudy Lapera, Henry King, Ben Brown, Charlie Stewart, Ed Parker and Oliver Mitchel, have allowed only 13 out of 35 passes to be completed and intercepted 7.

Offensively the Rams have formed a competent running attack behind Pat Lewis, Joe Sobeck and Stewart.

Virtually unheard of, Lewis in his first two games, scrambled for 113 yards in 24 carries and one TD. Sobeck has hit for 70 yards on 24 carries and one TD. Stewart is best known for his kickoff returns of 105, and 93 yards but has also contributed 33 yards in the backfield.

In toto the Rams have a creditable 257 yards on the ground in their first two upsets.

The "pea green" team has come a long way, and despite Contra Costa, one of the strongest teams in the United States, could still go farther.

This week, luckily, the Rams will resume the underdog role again. The Odds will favor "unknowing" San Mateo.

Too bad this Friday isn't the 13th.

International Fair To Open Friday At Lowell Auditorium

Featuring a cast of more than 100 foreign students, the college's tenth annual International Relations Club fair and stage show will be held Friday in the Lowell High School auditorium, Eucalyptus drive at 26th avenue, according to Herm Kligerman, IRC publicity chairman.

Curtain for the two-hour stage program is 8:15 p.m.

"Eight major acts, and several smaller ones, will make up the show," Kligerman remarked. Performers will represent more than ten countries and will appear in representative attire.

"However," Kligerman added, "there will also be at least two American acts in the show. The college's concert band under the direction of music instructor Meyer Cahn will make its first public appearance of the semester at this year's fair."

Also included in the program will be a Samoan fire dancer, a Korean folk dancer, a Chilean dance group and a Latin American combo. A highlight will be the Chinese act which features an international beauty contest and fashion show.

Kathleen Jacobsen, daughter of Joseph Jacobsen, faculty sponsor of the IRC, rounds out the program by singing Irish folk songs.

Following the show, displays of art goods and foods will be set up in the auditorium lobby. The public will be invited to sample the delicacies and purchase portions of them.

The Latin American combo is expected to supply music for social dancing until midnight, with the stage utilized as a dance floor.

"For the second year in a row, the Colombian unit of the Peace Corps will reap the profits from this fair, where Jerry McMahon, a former City College student, has established a cooperative for Colombian citizens," Kligerman stated.

Admission is 75 cents for students and faculty members and $1.25 for others. Tickets are available this week at the information booth in Science Hall. They may also be bought at the door Friday night.

SCHEDULED TO appear Friday night in a dance act at the annual International Relations Club fair and stage show is Korean-born Min Ja Lee, a student here. —Guardsman photo by Jim Catania.

Students Okay Revised Form Of AS Constitution

Two separate tallies of ballots were counted and together resulted in the passage of the revised Associated Student Constitution last week, Election Commissioner Chris Small announced Thursday after conferring with Associated Student President Vince Contreras.

A comedy of errors preceded, starting at 1 p.m. when the cafeteria polls closed and the polls in Science Building at 1:55, instead of 2 p.m. According to reports, Miss Small then collected the ballots alone and went home with them, intending to count them during the evening and announce the results sometime Friday.

The register of voters wound up in the hands of Contreras. When informed that Miss Small had gone home with the ballots, he immediately telephoned her to try to rectify the situation.

Arrangements were made between the two to check the ballots with the voting rosters over the phone as to numbers and any possible repetition in names of voters.

Two counts were made; two different tallies were reached.

After their conversation it was decided unanimously that the revised constitution had been passed and that a total of 188 votes was cast, with 164 for ratification and only 24 opposed.

As a result, the college's AS is now under a revised constitution. Contreras expressed happiness on the passage since he considered the old document "too rigid and inflexible."

Minor changes are noted in the new constitution. The office of Alumni Liaison has been deleted and low freshmen may run for council.

Top H&R Students Share $6100 In Scholarship Funds

Scholarships totaling $6100 were presented to 20 students of the hotel and restaurant department at the beginning of this semester.

Harvey M. Toy scholarships of $500 each were awarded to the three outstanding students, Merlyn H. Gill, chef, Robert E. Barney, a second semester student and Richard Heins, a third semester student.

Other $500 scholarships were given by E. B. De Golia, George D. Smith, Accent International, Minerals and Chemicals Corporation, and Food Service Executives Association to Stanley Gershenson, Roland Street, Mark White and Arpad Mihaly, respectively.

Seven $250 scholarships were presented to William Koon, Eluwine Visser, James Miraglia, Jr., John Christian, Edward Campbell, Douglas Walker and Orval Miller.

Other students who won H&R scholarships are Frederick Guibara, $150; Michael Foley, $200; John Battistone, $100, and Calvin Mark, $100.

Western Hotels $300 Dupar scholarship was presented to Kay Sera, and a cutlery set for an outstanding student from International Edge Company, was presented to Glenn Saiki.

Kind Vandals Put Sparkle In Edison, DaVinci Eyes

A startling sight greeted students here last Wednesday when they discovered that the statues of Thomas Edison and Leonardo da Vinci were sporting blue eyes.

The statues, Edison north and da Vinci south, in the courtyard facing Cloud Hall, were placed there shortly after the college moved to its present location.

The blue-eyed statues were discovered by custodians, who at first expected that they had a cleaning job ahead of them.

But the thoughtful vandals, reputedly from College of San Mateo, had pasted blue pieces of paper on the eyes. The paper was removed quickly and did no damage to the statues.

Contreras Picks Delegation For State Conference

Delegates from the college who will attend this semester's statewide California Junior College Student Government Association meeting to be held in Asilomar November 21 through 23 were named yesterday by Associated Student President Vince Contreras.

Delegates listed are John Theilen, State Information chairman; Lynn Goodrich, Campus Affairs coordinator; Rich Thomas, AS Card Sales chairman; Kathy Carsner, Rally Commissioner; Al Poletti, sophomore member of Student Council and Contreras.

Alternates Gary Ettin, Steve Christ, Sandy Costelli and Jan Sisk have been chosen in case any of the appointed delegates are unable to attend.

Contreras explained that representatives who attend the semesterly convention are chosen on the basis of outstanding contribution to the college while in office. "For example," he said, "Al Poletti did an excellent job selling AS cards."

Delegates must not only have contributed service to the college, but must also hold student office at the time of the conference to be eligible for appointment. Members of the delegation are chosen from members of the President's Cabinet and Student Council.

"This college carries the permanent office of State Information Chairman, whose duty it is to gather all the available information pertinent to the California two-year colleges and arrange it in booklet form," Contreras said, "and these booklets are used as programs for the conference."

Calendar Coeds Serve As Theme Of Annual Associated Women Student Fashion Show Today

By Charlotte Wong

Evidence that "good grooming and good taste can make any woman a Calendar Coed" will be shown from 3 to 5 p.m. today at the semiannual Associated Women Student fashion show and tea, AWS President Rosie Fang stated this week.

Twelve coeds, each representing a month of the year, will model fashions by Mr. G of Stonestown at the show to be held in Smith Hall.

The models are Ellen Boyer, Domenica Flores, Nancy Gaskin, Dixine Gillespie, Gail Grothman, Imogene Haynes, Nina Jacobs, Judith Keegan, Ellen Lee, Yoko Murakita, Susan Schwampe and Frances Small.

Nancy Hughes and Theresa Santos will be alternates in the event that any coed models are unable to be present at the fashion show.

Associated Men Student officers will escort the coeds as they model formals.

The women were selected during model tryouts on October 17 by judges Don Liles, English instructor; William Davis, art instructor; Evelyn Kerkhof, mathematics instructor; Lucille Mason, business instructor, and Melia Furgis, health and physical education instructor.

The cafeteria will close at 1 p.m., and students are expected to enter through the east or bookstore side of Smith Hall.

Calendar decorations and sandwiches, cut in the shape of horoscope figures, will accent the AWS fashion forecast. Sorority pledges and four

KCSF To Continue Broadcasts Daily To Smith Hall Cafe

The daily radio broadcasts to Smith Hall are here to stay, Jim Morgan, president of KCSF Broadcasters who operate the college's closed circuit radio station, announced last week.

The daily programs, which run from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m., are broadcast directly from the arts building radio center to Smith Hall. This system, which is essentially a public address system, is the same used by the Campus Carrier broadcasts.

The project is run entirely by students, Morgan emphasized, and the morning broadcasts are composed of music and talking using the ad lib approach.

These broadcasts provide the same type entertainment found on regular AM or FM radio stations, though occasionally, the program is interrupted to give news of importance as it develops around the campus.

During these broadcasts, Morgan explained, one man is stationed in Smith Hall to monitor. He tells the broadcasters how to regulate the volume of the program.

To keep one individual from talking too long, one man is usually on the air from 8:30 to 9 a.m. and is then replaced by another from 9 to 9:30 a.m., Morgan added.

Morgan also stated that KCSF is for student use. Anyone may make an announcement on the air by submitting his announcement to Dean of Men Ralph Hillsman for signature.

Morgan also disclosed a change in the program for KCSF broadcasts. Broadcasts previously were made every Monday, Wednesday and Friday, but this year Morgan has changed them to Monday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Veterans Day To Be Observed On Monday

Classes will be suspended next Monday, November 11, in observance of Veterans Day.

The holiday originated as a result of the cessation of hostilities in the First World War. The day was celebrated as Armistice Day until 1954 when it was changed to the present name, Veterans Day.

Classes are scheduled to resume Tuesday, November 12. The next holiday of the semester will be Thanksgiving Day, November 28.

Cloud Hall Gallery Displays Romaine Photo Exhibition

A one-man show of photographic portraits by Karl Romaine, member of the advisory board of the photography curriculum at City College, opened last Wednesday in the Cloud Hall Gallery and will continue through Friday, November 15, Emmett Smith, photography instructor, announced recently.

The display covers a wide range of subjects from posed shots of white persian cats resting on velvet pillows to colorful action shots of sailboats on the bay.

Most of the pictures are in black and white with portraits dominating the display. One of these, depicting an elderly woman holding a lorgnette, won an Award of Merit.

Romaine, who spoke to students here recently on Photography As A Career, began his own professional career 30 years ago in San Francisco and since that time has received many awards and honors for his photographic work.

He is a past president of the Northern California Photographers Association and the Professional Photographers Association of California.

From 1953-1958 he was a member of the council of Professional Photographers of America and in 1957 he received the earned degree of Master of Photography from the same organization.

In addition to his photography, Romaine is interested in sailing, weight lifting, fencing, Spanish and graphology.

This is the first in a series of exhibits planned for the semester.

Eugene Jones In C-Hour Performance

Oakland Fireman Pursues Bass Singing During Off-Duty Hours

Eugene Jones, an Oakland fireman who pursues a singing career during his off-duty hours, will present a recital during College Hour tomorrow in the theater.

Meyer Cahn, music instructor here, announced that Jones, a bass singer, will be the third guest performer in this semester's artists series.

Jones, who is originally from the East Coast, began his music career by singing in churches. Since then he has performed in the San Francisco Opera House, with the Oakland Symphony and in opera productions at the University of California in Berkeley.

During his off-duty hours, he directs the Echoes from Jordan choir, gives solo recitals and does a bit of acting. He is able to pursue his singing career because he is on duty for 24 hours and off duty for 24 hours.

Pagliacci, a favorite of music lovers, will be included in his musical selections. He will also sing Handel's Why do the nations so furiously rage together, and songs from Verdi, Purcell, Dr. Arne, Hall Johnson, W. L. Dawson and L. Brown.

Edwin McDonell will accompany Jones at the piano.

First College Hour concert in the student series will feature the college orchestra and concert band on November 21. The annual choral concert will be presented December 10 with the Christmas concert due on December 12.

Let's Have No More Paint Jobs For The Redwood Ram

THE REDWOOD RAM is in trouble again. It is fed up. It has had it.

This time, it's because it wants to return to its original wooden color. The Redwood Ram does not like to be painted over and over every semester as Pledge Week approaches. One week it is gray, the following one, it is red, all because of a few who feel that it is a tradition to renew the Ram's clothing.

Webster's dictionary defines tradition as "a long-established custom or practice that has the effect of an unwritten law." Also, tradition is "the handing down orally of stories, beliefs, customs from generation to generation."

Are we to understand that ever since the Redwood Ram has been on its pedestal—since 1956—a tradition has been established? Why, it's only seven years ago that the mascot was placed in front of Smith Hall. This is tradition?

Emmett Smith, a photography instructor here, has come up with another interesting recommendation against the pseudo-vandalism of the fraternities: restore the Redwood Ram to its original color and then leave it alone.

To Mr. Smith's suggestion, The Guardsman would like to add: a committee should be formed to back him up in his proposal and in addition, if necessary, a new mascot might be obtained, unpainted and in redwood, with defacing absolutely prohibited.

Worthy Cause Flavors Fair

FOR THE tenth consecutive year, the International Relations Club will present its annual fair and stage show, this year on Friday night at the Lowell High School auditorium. The proceeds of the fair will benefit the Colombian unit of the Peace Corps, where Jerry McMahon, a City College graduate, has successfully organized a cooperative for the Colombians.

The affair is the result of intensive and devoted work of Dr. Joseph Jacobsen, sponsor of the club, and the students themselves, numbering 150.

In the past, City College cooperated with San Francisco State College in producing the fair, but this year the club members are strictly on their own. The fair has been well received in the past and results gratifying; last year's fair brought $300, sent to aid McMahon in his cooperative work.

This year's fair is expected to draw a much larger crowd than in the past as a greater variety of attractions will be offered than in previous years.

The Guardsman sincerely hopes the IRC fair will be a success and that the evening will be a well-rewarding one. The dedication and the enthusiasm of the members are portraying the spirit of the club. The members and Dr. Jacobsen are to be commended for bringing an excellent educational opportunity for American students to view and appreciate foreign cultures.

Recent Contributions To Asian Book Drive Dwarf Petite Coed

Gazing intently at one of the many books "dominating" her is petite coed Bertha Chew.

The books are not required reading for her courses, but rather, contributions to the annual Alpha Sigma Delta educational book drive, which ends Friday.

All books collected by the fraternity will be forwarded to the local chapter of the Asian Students Foundation, and from there, will be shipped to some 12 countries on the Asian continent.

Although the book drive got off to a slow start, fraternity representative Larry Maibaum is confident that contributions will reach the expected goal of 2500 by Friday.

"The books usually come in a flurry during the last days of the drive," Maibaum commented, "and the most generous contributors are faculty members and the Ramporium. Students are a little more reluctant to part with their hard-earned books."

Maibaum reminded students that only educational books are wanted and that they may be deposited in receptacles near the silver pole in Science Hall, in the arts building, in the faculty gallery in Cloud Hall, or in the Dean of Men's office, S-150.

The Birth Of The IRC

Fiji Islander An Aid To Formation Of Foreign Club

A Fiji Islands student here in 1953 helped develop what is today the college's International Relations Club fair.

It all began when the club's faculty sponsor, Joseph Jacobsen, returned to the college from a military leave and took over the job of foreign student adviser from Walter McCloud.

He became acquainted with several students from foreign countries during registration—including the Fiji Islander. Once the semester got underway, the Fiji Islands student came into Jacobsen's office for consultation.

In an effort to make the foreign student feel more at ease, Jacobsen first asked him if he had attended the college's orientation dance. He had.

"Did you have fun there?" Jacobsen queried.

"Oh, yes!" the student replied.

"I bet you danced with all the girls, huh?" Jacobsen jokingly continued.

"No, sir," was the student's unexpected reply. "I was too short for them."

At this point, Jacobsen realized the need for a social outlet for foreign college students. He gathered names of several dozen registered at the college and sent them invitations to attend a foreign student meeting.

The response was tremendous. Students came wearing costumes characteristic of their countries and with items—including musical instruments—from their homelands. Now that there was a definite interest established, Jacobsen desired to start on a full-scale project with the students.

The International Relations Club was organized at this time. Since the University of California holds an international fair semiannually, Jacobsen decided that his newly-formed club would sponsor a similar activity.

In November, the first fair was held on the college's west campus in a room "not much larger than my office," according to Jacobsen.

The theme of this first show was Italian since the master of ceremonies was Italian.

This Friday night in Lowell High School's auditorium, the IRC is staging its tenth annual fair and stage show. For the first time, it will have the use of a Scrim, a transparent 18-foot screen which enables pictures to be shown on a screen from behind, rather than from a projection booth in front.

The major problem encountered in the production of these fairs has been the lack of experience on the part of the students participating. "It's difficult at first to delegate authority," Jacobsen stated.

"But once students realize what is expected of them they really go all out for the show. Their efforts have always resulted in a successful fair and this year should be no different," he added.

Study Clinic

AGS Gives Aid To Sufferers Of Grade-itis

Helpful hints toward improved study habits were freely exchanged at Alpha Gamma Sigma's clinic, begun two weeks ago with the scholastic honor society's members on the helping side.

The clinic takes a problem-solution approach on a question-answer basis. John de Meo, an engineering major in his fourth semester here and member of the honor society, cited past problems in his academic career.

Officers and members of the AGS generally agreed that "consistent study habits and determination are the keys to success."

The clinic is open to all college students here, although, with the exception of Betsy Erkkila, secretary of the AGS, only two coeds were present at the first meeting.

Possibly, the modern coed does not need help, or possibly she is too proud to admit that she needs it.

AGS members offered informal advice to those who might fall victim to that ageless college disease known as grade-itis:

"Don't despair, don't panic, don't swallow pills. Just swallow your pride and come to one of our meetings during College Hour in S-214.

"The clinic will not get you a job or a raise, or make your hair curly on a foggy day, but it will prescribe a cure."

It is the AGS adaptation of the old adage, an apple a day keeps bad grades away.

Actress Doubles As Antigone, Ugly Duckling

Diminutive Sandy Lundwall packs a dramatic wallop in her portrayal of the title role of Antigone, the ill-fated heroine in Jean Anouilh's modern version of the famous Greek tragedy.

Antigone, currently staged in the little theater here, on the same bill with The Ugly Duckling and The Bald Soprano, will run for four more performances, at 8 p.m. this Friday and Saturday, and finally on November 15-16. Admission is $1 or free to Associated Student cardholders.

Miss Lundwall proves her acting ability by appearing as the stark, strong Antigone, in the first of the three one-act plays, and follows that performance with a light and gay portrayal of a tomboy princess in The Ugly Duckling.

Miss Lundwall made a name for herself last semester in her portrayal of two other equally versatile roles. In Bus Stop she was a naive young waitress and in King John she gave a fine interpretation of Constance in her mad scene.

Enrolled as a history major here, not until her second semester was she encouraged to try out for the Potting Shed, which needed a "little old lady" in a character role.

In Antigone, Miss Lundwall's off-white gown was designed especially for her by Robert Johnson, a music major, with a minor in theater costuming.

During the first curtain, Miss Lundwall has to make a quick change for The Ugly Duckling, into a pale blue satin costume.

Concerning The Ugly Duckling, Miss Lundwall stated that she and Ken Bachtold were recruited for their respective roles, during the summer session here. The purpose was to assemble a cast before the start of the fall semester so that the play could be presented during the first College Hour.

Foresight

By Dick Bullard

THIS WEEK we intend to depart from our usual whimsical look at current events and turn instead to a matter of serious concern to all of us.

Last week we were privileged to attend a press conference given by the Explorers Club of San Francisco. The purpose of the conference was to give us an opportunity to talk with an American news correspondent, Robert Cohen.

Cohen has just returned from a six-week tour of Cuba, where he was allowed to shoot the first and only feature-length film of the island since Castro rose to power.

With a passport issued by the State Department and permission from the Treasury Department to spend money in connection with his films, Cohen managed to make an objective, uncensored film study of life as it is today in Castro's Cuba.

During his stay, Cohen met with and talked to a great many Cubans, both in the streets and on the farms. Many of these Cubans were outspoken either in support or denouncement of the Castro regime.

Aside from their political differences, they had one thing in common: Cuban sovereignty.

This concept of pride in the homeland may allow the Cuban government to circumvent the pressures of the United States economic embargo in a most unique way.

There is a program currently underway to establish Cuba as the cultural center of Latin America. Toward this end, Castro's government has invited artists and scholars from Central and South America to come to Ilavana. There they are provided with housing and the means with which to practice their art.

While in Ilavana, Cohen saw an international meeting of architects. At this meeting architects from all over the world, with the exception of the United States, had gathered.

In our efforts to isolate Cuba from the rest of Latin America, we may well be isolating ourselves also.

Cuba, by reason of its geography and history, is heir to the cultures of North and South America, Africa and Spain. Therefore its claim to the cultural throne of Latin America may possibly become a reality.

If this comes to pass, the United States could become, in Latin American eyes, merely a neighbor from the North with plenty of money to spend but little else.

To ignore this possibility would be as foolish as ignoring the presence of Castro's regime entirely.

Cohen's film, Inside Castro's Cuba was made partly with an armed guard escort and partly while the photographer toured the country alone.

Among other scenes, the film depicts such episodes as the world's only socialized Coca-Cola plant and scenes of Cuban soldiers manning Russian guns in defensive positions around shipyards.

The film also shows a young Cuban mother holding her young child. The woman is clad in militia dress and is wearing a .32 caliber revolver on her hip.

World premiere of the film is scheduled for 8:30 p.m., Friday at Nourse Auditorium.

The film will be projected and narrated by Cohen and should provide an educational and informative evening for all.

We'll see you there.

Hindsight

By Boyd Burtnett

THE TIME of the private detective in Anglo-Saxon fiction is ending and this once-famous hero is spending his nights at home now, without the company of a blonde, bottle or gun at his side.

A new type of hero has evolved, the secret agent, and he is out roaming the streets in search of crime, violence, sex and humor, leaving the private eye with nothing but his memories.

The man who is probably most responsible for the sounding of the death knell of the private detective is Ian Fleming. He, with his trusty companion, James Bond, has captured the imagination of the people of both Europe and the United States, sweeping aside all comers.

They even hooked President Kennedy on intellectual sadism.

Bond, armed with his Beretta and an extensive knowledge of continental cuisine, set out in search of the members of SMERSH and SPECTRE, ignoring completely the old American standbys of the Mafia, the Organization and the Syndicate.

What with the cold war and the world situation as it is today, nobody cares anything about a little ol' murder in the alleys of New York that used to send Mike Hammer out on a mission of vengeance. There are bigger things to look after these days.

For a while, Fleming held a virtual monopoly on this field that revolutionized the mystery and adventure stories, but there are others who are moving in to reap the profits of this newly-found outlet.

Ladies and gentlemen, presenting Matt Helm, American secret agent, code name Eric.

Helm is vulgar, out of shape, a poor shot, balding and sneaky. In other words, he's all-American.

The thing that made James Bond interesting was the fact that he was a double-oh agent, he had a license to kill when and where he thought it necessary.

Helm has no choice like his comrade-in-arms Bond. He cannot kill when and where he wants to because it is his job to kill—on command.

His boss is code-named Mac, the counterpart of that bloody M, and Mac has lost count of how many men he has ordered to be "touched." He's just as cagey as M, but much less of a mother-complex.

It seems as though Helm is a man who learned his trade during World War II, but immediately after hostilities ceased, he married and settled down. It lasted 15 years but, as author Donald Hamilton says, "he could never get the smell of gunsmoke washed off him."

His wife finds out about this objectional past, leaves him, and Helm returns to his first love. Mac couldn't be happier because there's this girl who worked with Helm during the war but who went over to the "other side" and Mac wants him to make the "touch," for old times sake.

So now that Matt Helm is back in circulation and making frequent trips to Europe, it should be only a matter of time before he runs into James Bond. They should be able to do a lot of good for each other.

Helm doesn't know Brut Blanc de Blanc 1943 from Gallo 1963, but he's a better judge of women. As you know, Bond is always picking the wrong women. Either they die or they turn out to be communists.

So, as these two agents of allied powers strike out at evil in the world, Sam Spade, Nick Carter, Mike Hammer and Shell Scott should be at home in their death beds waiting to find out what happens next.

History Instructor Gains New Position

History instructor Claude Silva was recently appointed acting Assistant Dean of Instruction, Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator of instruction, announced last week.

Former Assistant Dean of Instruction John F. Gerstung, now on sabbatical leave, had asked to return to teaching.

"Gerstung felt his best talents could be better devoted to the classroom. He was happy to have had the opportunity to explore the administrative field, but, being able to make the comparison between roles, he felt his place in education was as lecturer, where he could be closer to the students," Luckmann said.

Council Meets In Closed Session To Discuss 'Policy'

By Lowell Mengel

So that council might avoid what Associated Student President Vince Contreras describes as "emotional" discussions by cabinet members, Student Council last week spent 20 minutes behind closed doors in a "policy meeting" about the spring AS budget.

After opening the meeting and inviting cabinet members in, council members made little comment about the closed door section, continuing to pass the parcels for next spring's AS budget in quick order.

In addition to the $3473 passed last week by council, the members added another $7197.50 to the budget with approval of allotments of $500 to Forum, $1950 to send the Pep Band to the Junior Rose Bowl Game $2975 for Contreras' executive budget, an "even" $732.50 for the Freshman Class, $440 for the men's physical education department to handle Block SF affairs, and $600 for the AS insurance policies.

Council came near an exciting argument when Student Council member Lambert Din moved to approve the $500 for Forum Magazine.

Constitution Revisions Chairman Bill May then said he thought that before council voted the money to Forum, it should look into the possibility of keeping Forum from selling advertising space to the California Book Store, since that store takes business away from the AS Ramporium.

In the interest of "free enterprise" the council voted down the suggestion, 1-6-2, then by a vote of 9-0-0 allotted Forum the $500.

All other budgets presented were passed easily, but when the Freshman Class budget was introduced by Sophomore councilman Mike Asher, cabinet members asked him to explain a request for a miscellaneous item of $20.10.

He explained that the "difference" was to make the budget an "even" $732.50 instead of an "uneven" $732.40.

Parks vs. Litter Is C-Hour Film

Heritage of Splendor is the film scheduled to be shown during College Hour tomorrow in S-136, according to Madison Devlin, audio visual aid instructor.

Scenes of National parks such as Yellowstone, Glacier, Yosemite and other areas of the Western United States are depicted in color.

The theme of the film in concerned with the constant battle against the litter problem. Examples are shown in the film of how carelessness can ruin the natural beauty of parks. Suggestions are also given on how to wipe out litter problems.

A similar campaign is underway on the college's campus to eliminate the carelessness by reminding students to deposit litter in receptacles.

The film was obtained from the Richfield Oil Company, Devlin said.

It is the fifth film to be shown in the College Film Series. Seven more are scheduled.

Interested students were invited by Devlin to view the film.

Coed Models Find Reward In Agency's Special Course

By Bea Takeuchi

A dozen excited coeds, representing a great deal of pulchritude from this college, reported last week to a local model agency.

They had been previously chosen to participate in today's Associated Women Student fashion show-tea, to be held from 3 to 5 p.m., in Smith Hall.

The coeds were given a quick lesson on poise, posture routine and makeup. Most important, they were taught how to handle and hang the fashions each will personally model.

Some of the coeds who have had no modeling experience felt that attending this course was ample reward for being chosen from among 56 contestants.

They may continue a modeling course at the agency for a specially priced nominal fee of $2.00 per lesson.

One criterion for selection was midterm grades. "Their midterm grades must not show Ds or Fs," said Dean Mary Golding.

Gail Grothman, blonde, green-eyed, 5-2, size 8, has modeled for I. Magnin's in other fashion shows. She is a merchandising major who hopes to become a ready-to-wear dress buyer.

Dixine Gillespie, brunette, 5-5, size 12, is a pre-med major, who is interested in pediatrics. She was recently awarded a $500 scholarship for nurses training by the March of Dimes.

She has modeled for Simplicity patterns, and is a commercial photographer's model. Miss Gillespie is part of a modern dance team which recently performed before 600 persons at the University of California's Reereation Medical Center.

A commercial art major from Kyoto, Japan, is Yoko Murakita, size 8, whose artistic talent has won her many prizes. She was a popular song leader in high school, and has modeled for Capwells, Oakland.

Size 9, 5-4, brunette, describes Nina Jacobs, a legal secretary major. She has modeled for the White House, Emporium, Joseph Magnin and Mr. G's in Stonestown. She sings first soprano in a sister duet, and performs for church socials.

Domenica Flores, brunette, 5-4, size 9, is a nurse training major, who sews for a hobby. She has modeled for the White House, and in high school fashion shows.

Red-headed, blue-eyed Elley Boyers stands 5-7 in a size 10 dress. The only titian-haired model in the group, she "recommends lots of dancing for a good figure." Miss Boyers was voted "girl with the best figure" in high school.

Nancy Gaskin, brunette, 5-2, size 8, is "completely surprised at being selected." Miss Gaskin is a liberal arts major.

A future private secretary, Judy Keegan, brunette, 5-3, size 9, has modeled for the House of Charm.

Although her talents have interested several Hollywood directors, Susan Schwampe plans to become a college dance instructor. She is blonde, green-eyed, 5-7, size 9. Miss Schwampe has danced with the San Francisco Ballet Company.

At Pasadena Playhouse she was given the leading part in two plays, where several talent scouts recognized her skill, and tried to lure her to work in movies.

Imogene Haynes, 5-3, size 11, is a major in X-ray technology.

Other models are Frances Small and Ellen Lee. Alternates are Nancy Hughes and Theresa Santos.

Sylvia Leff To Be Fashion Commentator

faculty women will serve at the tea; 60 hostesses will also be present to greet guests.

A highlight of the show will be the presentation of the Inter-Sorority Council plaque to the freshman woman with the highest grade point average in the first midterm period.

Sylvia Leff is scheduled to be commentator at the annual event honoring the Bay Area's high school senior women. Some 225 senior students and advisers are expected to attend the function.

Entertainment will be provided by the Windyhill Singers and State Champion Bagpiper Gerald Keil.

Entertainment chairman for the event is Lynn Goodrich; decoration chairman is Fay Yee; hostess chairman is Jenny Tom; publicity chairman is Carol Parnow; Wardene Oliver is in charge of food preparations.

Dean of Women Mary Golding is sponsor for the affair.

NASA Man Speaks Of Techniques Of Space Exploration

A comparison of present developments in space research with plans for the exploration of space in the future was presented by George A. Hall during College Hour last Thursday.

Hall, presently employed with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration at the Ames Research Center at Moffett Field near Sunnyvale, presented the second faculty-student lecture of the series.

Having obtained his master's degree from Manchester College in Minnesota, Hall became the senior educational service officer of NASA and served with NASA's mobile lecture series.

A foremost authority in his field, Hall explained that the present fiscal year has been most challenging in the United States' space effort, for 'the plans made at present will determine what is to take place in the next 10 years.

In illustrating the rapid progress being made in basic research, Hall said that three-quarters of the students in elementary grades today will work with entirely new products by the time they reach college age.

"A two-year research program is scheduled to begin this January concerned with the study of earth-sun relationships," he said.

"Within the next five years, orbiting solar observatories, orbiting astronomical observatories, and other space probes will be launched in addition to the ones already in operation," Hall predicted; "and as we look into the future it only appears to be magnificent. Let us hasten to open the doors and discover the secrets of our universe."

Unhazed But Dazed Pledges Eat, Shout, Throw Eggs

By Bob Lutz

Cries of "Louder, I can't hear you!," echoed through the cavernous chambers of the cafeteria early one morning during pledge days last week.

A large gathering of pledges had assembled with their fraternity brothers and sorority sisters for the final stages of the pledging activities.

Fraternity pledges were uttering traditional speeches and oaths at a rapid clip while sorority pledges danced short skits and sang songs and chants handed down by former colleagues.

All this was part of the traditional initiation and indoctrination necessary to become a fraternity brother or sorority sister.

Other indescribable antics are designed to embarrass the pledges temporarily but reveal their true loyalty to their organization in a testimonial manner.

"Many outsiders do not understand the purpose for pledging but it is meant to create loyalty and respect among fraternity brothers and sorority sisters," explained Bruce Thomas, president of Beta Tau.

The six fraternities, Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Beta Tau, Alpha Sigma Delta, Phi Beta Delta and Zeta Phi Sigma, put the 30 to 40 new pledges through their paces last week while the two remaining sororities, Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau, initiated 18 pledge sisters, according to Thomas.

"Pledges must work around the campus and run errands for both deans during pledge week as well as make demanding and embarrassing speeches in front of dubious audiences," Joel Cohen, Inter Fraternity Council president explained.

Hazing has been abolished for quite some time and since then, constructive activities have been devised. Of these are the service projects required of all pledges by their fraternity or sorority.

Projects have ranged from sorority girls pulling weeds in the vicinity of the gymnasiums to painting the Redwood Ram in front of Smith Hall, according to Thomas.

Amid the cries and screams of sorority pledges demonstrating nearby, Bea Malone, president of Phi Beta Rho, said that sorority pledges are permitted time to study in the library and are "never kept out late at night," during Pledge Week.

Each sorority pledge is required to compose a short song of her own as well as memorize other well known tunes traditional to her sorority.

The pledges must then sound off, each one in some conspicuous location while their performance is judged by the constant glare and critical eye of Big Sister, the sorority president.

"Pledge Week is quite an ordeal, and it's hard as well, but it can be fun at times too," squeaked pledge Carol Harover, having just completed her yells.

"Pledging is true to its name and even though the demands made by our sorority sisters are quite trying at times, each of us will always have many happy memories," Yvonne Itodoni said emphatically.

"When you start out as a pledge, many of the things demanded of you seem hard, but when you've finally become a fraternity brother and view the new pledges, it seems they are having an easier time than you did," Thomas declared. Several bystanders agreed heartily.

Climaxing the Pledge Week activities, a variety of games was held in the stadium during College Hour last Thursday.

Games included pie-eating, egg-throwing, balloon blowing, three-legged races and several 880-yard relay races.

"A stipulation was made that pledges participating in the pie-eating event would not be required to run in the relays," Thomas said.

Pledge Week activities for sororities also drew to a close last Friday.

RAMBLINGS

By Fred Wales

STILL IN THE MIDST of the football season, foreign sounds are beginning to be heard around town such as thumps and swishes.

The waylaid Prospectors are waging another Indian war with the Warriors for front page stories in the sports pages as basketball season looms on the horizon.

On campus the rustling is much softer as the Ram football team is still in a tight race for the football crown or at least the runner-up position.

Basketball coach Sid Phelan surely must be a bit apprehensive. In 1961-62 he piloted his five to the State title, and last year his sleepers stunned the league by tieing Oakland for the title and losing to San Diego in the semis of the State tourney.

This year again Phelan might have a sleeper. The high school league was strong last season, and the college has bagged a few of last year's remnants.

Joining veterans Art Adams, Mac Smith and Ken Scalmanini, are 6-5 Henry King from Polytechnic and just perhaps a couple of Sacred Heart guards named Rich Braun and Jim Henderson.

The Rams have a few other frosh up their sleeves but genie can't tell all.

Rival Oakland won't be worried about basketball players either because, as one clever observer noted, "What McClymonds does one year, Oakland City College does the next."

TO THE TOPIC of basketball, Guardsman reporter Pete Franklin adds this famous incident.

"During the summer after joining a game on the Presidio Courts and losing to a group of 5-6 high school eagers, I turned to one of my new team mates and asked, 'I see you have an Oregon State sweatshirt, yor ever get into sports up there?'"

"Yeh, a little," and Franklin asked, "What's your name?"

A calm reply, "Terry, Terry Baker."

Some days you just can't win, no matter who's on your team, huh Franklin!

Spikers Split As Plotkin Records New Ram Mark

By John Arberry

A new Ram harrier record for the three mile Golden Gate Park course by Gene Plotkin enabled the local spiker squad to gain a split in a Golden Gate Conference triangular meet with Oakland and Foothill as the Rams completed the dual meet conference season with a fourth place 4-3 record.

Dual meet scores found the Rams losing to powerful Oakland 21-35 then bouncing back to trip Foothill 22-34. Oakland in turn topped the Owls 18-40. Triangular scores read Oakland 24, CCSF 42 and Foothill 60.

Despite Plotkin clocking a 15:05.5 for the three mile course to break his old standard of 15:17 set last year, the Rams were unable to overcome a 1-2 finish by Oakland's Thunderbirds as Plotkin had to settle for a third place finish.

Following Plotkin, in fifth place was Ozzie Norris with a time of 15:32, Rich Klemmer eighth in 15:56; Dan Christian 12th in 16:28 as fifth man Mike Conroy finished 14th in 16:43. Dan Murphy and Harry McCoy placed 16th and 20th respectively with times of 16:53 and 17:27.

Pacing the Thunderbirds was John Lodin, one of Northern California's top runners, who ran a swift 14:55.7 to break the old course record of 15:09. His running mate Bob DeCelle, who faded near the end and collapsed at the finish, clocked 15:05 to barely hold off the fast closing Plotkin, who missed second place by inches.

Next encounter for the Rams will be the Golden Gate Conference championship meet at Stanford Golf Course this Friday. As to this meet coach Lou Vasquez stated, "The team favorites will be San Mateo and San Jose with Oakland and ourselves not far behind."

As for individual honors Vasquez quipped, "Gene Plotkin and Ozzie Norris will be our best bets for placing high in the individual standings." He added, "Most of our freshmen did much better in the Oakland meet and if we can come through this Friday, we could do extremely well in the team placings."

Last year the Rams placed fourth in the conference meet with 78 points. San Mateo's Jim Huff won individual honors but will have a difficult time defending that championship this year.

RAM MENTOR Art Dutch Elston gets field view of a play during practice session. His eleven meets San Jose Friday.

Three Independent Teams Undefeated In Mural Action

After two weeks of intramural basketball action, three teams remain undefeated in the Independent League.

The Divine Ones, last semester's champions, downed the Beavers 44-36, keeping them in the undefeated race with The Ravens, after their trouncing of the Panthers, 61-13, and the Mets with a close victory over the Five, 29-28.

In other action the Apaches downed the Independents, 42-33, while the Originals out-shot the Brothers Five, 42-36.

Tuesday night found Alpha Sigma Delta topping Phi Beta Delta, 28-12.

Tom London hit 14 points to help Alpha Kappa Rho overcome Beta Tau, 33-23. Sharing the title of high point man for Alpha Kappa Rho was Ray Chezik, who accounted for 12 of the 33 points.

In the women's gymnasium the Filipino Club slaughtered The Guardsman, 55-16, with the help of Bernard Piper's 17 points. Bob Siegan was responsible for 12 Guardsman points.

Hotel and Restaurant raced past Hawaiian Club, 43-27, as high scorer John Wallace mounted 17 points.

Tonight in the men's gymnasium, the Independent League's Brothers Five will meet the Independents, the Originals play against the Five, and the Apaches match shots with the Panthers.

Mitchel's 62-Yarder Keeps Rams In Second-Place Tie

By Fred Wales

With hurdles champ Oliver Mitchel coming off the bench to lead the offense, the Ram football team recorded their third upset in four starts by downing San Mateo, 14-8 last Friday at the College's Stadium.

By felling San Mateo, the Rams remain in a second place tie with Foothill as both clubs boast 3-1 records.

The old adage that the game is either won or lost on the line proved true in this contest as the men up front were responsible for the gains or losses of the Rams.

After the offense had failed 5 times on scoring drives, the defense came up with the first Ram score.

When a 40 yard drive fell short on the bulldog six yard line, the defense nailed fullback Lee Wilson for a yard loss on the 5.

On second down a San Francisco red dog found San Mateo quarterback Chuck Hunt losing the ball and guard Dave Conway falling on the loose ball in the end zone.

Conway's recovery, the first of his two, ended the Rams scoring drought and with the PAT gave the home team a 7-0 lead with 3:44 left in half.

The Rams' second score came early in the third quarter after an exchange of fumbles.

Attempting to circle end, Charlie Stewart was hit hard and fumbled. Frank Dunbar recovered for San Mateo on the SF 36 yard line.

Two plays later, Greg O'Niel had the elusive pigskin squirt from his hands with Conway and Bernie Mordret recovering for the Rams on their own 31 yard line.

After Pat Lewis hit for three yards and Joe Sobeck cracked for four more, Mitchel, who had previously swept the ends for gains of 9 and 17 yards, blasted through a big hole at right guard and outran the Bulldog secondary for the score.

The run was good for 62 yards and put the Rams in front of San Mateo 14-0 with 9:32 left in the third quarter.

San Mateo's lone tally came late in the game when the contest had already been determined.

The drive went 80 yards, mostly in the air, in 12 plays as penalties kept the drive alive on two occasions.

Chuck Hunt tossed to Tony McKinnon from four yards out for the TD and repeated the play for the two point conversion and a 14-8 score with 11 seconds remaining.

The final score was no indication of the numerous scoring opportunities the Rams lost due to penalties and fumbles.

In the opening minutes of the first quarter, San Mateo was forced to kick the first time they got their hands on the ball.

Ben Brown took the ball on the 46 yard line and sidestepping tacklers, he proceeded down the sidelines, cut to the center at the 15 and went in to score.

For the second week in a row Brown was robbed of a score. This week his run was ruled dead on the 17 yard line as he supposedly stepped out of bounds.

In the second quarter Mitchel recovered Wilson's fumble in mid-air and, after running over the referee, circled end for 53 yards to the San Mateo 27 before being tripped up.

Were it not for the official this could have been another Ram score.

The final call back came in the third quarter as Vern Bradford duplicated his former Mission teammate Mitchel's gallop by racing 44 yards straight up the field for a touchdown only to have a backfield in motion call nullify the run.

Dunn's Musicians First Recipients Of Spirit Award

John Dunn's marching band was the first recipient of the Block SF spirit award trophy last Friday, during halftime of the San Mateo-San Francisco game.

The selection of the band was unanimous, as the five judges had no trouble deciding on the 34 member group.

Dunn led the band in a series of yells throughout the contest and took time to play pep songs for the pompom girls.

During halftime the band performed their usual marching numbers and returned to the stands in time to be awarded the trophy.

George Thompson accepted the trophy, in behalf of the band, from Fall Football Queen, Wendie Williams.

Alpha Kappa Rho placed second in the contest with a spunky group of 11 rooters led by their own two cheer leaders.
